Wear & Tear Sisters Find Legit Gold In Coast Valley Fruit-Grove Circuit

By NED ARMSTRONG

San Francisco, April 1.

Meet Carolyn Ware and Mabel Hazelton, affectionately known to several hundred thousand devoted inland California theatregoers, and many an advance agent and road manager, as the Wear & Tear Sisters.

They are the queens of an empire of one-night stands, a network of California split-time which is 650 miles from north to south, crossing two mountain ranges and three major rivers and embracing the wealthiest farmland in America. They gave the Lunts the second biggest touring week of their lives and Tallulah Bankhead some of her fondest memories of the road.

They have cultivated among the prune and lemon groves, the eucalyptus and almond trees, a faithful following of rural theatregoers of such devotion that many of their subscribers simply order tickets and wait to be told what they will see. The touring attractions which reach the San Joaquin and San Bernardino valleys these days are so few and far between that it has taken two years to fulfill a one-year play subscription series, and yet, in their 17 years of operation, refunds have been made but once.

Recently, during the great California rains, when bridges were

Fans Don't Like Johnnie Satirizing Self But Buy 250,000 Disks in 1 Week

Riding on four clicks in a row, Johnnie Ray has broken away with his latest release for Columbia, "What's the Use?" with a 250,000 sale in one week. Unusual aspect of this platter is that Ray is kidding his own style and some of his fans have been squawking at the parody.

Ray's initial album for Columbia is also winging away with an initial order from retailers for 75,000.

MPIC Maps War Against Hollywood's Attackers

Hollywood, April 1.

Motion Picture Industry Council voted unanimously to declare war on various groups which have been attacking Hollywood because of alleged Commie influence on the film lots.

A committee, headed by Y. Frank Freeman, was appointed to handle local arrangements for another roundtable meeting with representatives of COMPO, to be held in Hollywood July 28-31. Other committee members are Marvin Faris, Ronald Reagan, Jesse Lasky, Bill Thomas, Edmund Hartmann, Steve Broidy, Adrian McCalman, Paul Gross, John Lehner, James Dewey Starkey and Ed Ralph.

Danny Kaye's Vidpic Accent in NBC Dicker

The Danny Kaye-NBC negotiations hinge a lot on the comedian's insistence to do 75% of his TV programs on film, with only a few live shows per season.

There are, of course, the usual complications over guarantees, time slot and the like, but on a broad basis it would call for a 5-year termer. NBC prexy Joe McConnell and Abe Lastfogel (William Morris) are handling the negotiations in N. Y., with everything hush-hush about it.

ASCAP to Divvy Out $3,000,000 For Quarterly Record

The quarterly dividend of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, due to be mailed out early next week, is expected to top the $3,000,000 marker for the all-time record melon for the Society. ASCAP's quarterly dividends have been rising steadily over the years, and the $3,000,000 figure will continue the trend set by last year's record distribution of $11,640,000 to publishers and writers.

More revenues are coming in from television, while radio, paradoxically, is also shelling out more to ASCAP, although the radio rate of acceleration is slowing down. ASCAP figures to get at least $6,000,000 from TV this year, representing about a 20% gain from the same source last year.

An additional important source of income this year will be from the major film producers. Deals covering performance rights for the past two years have already been wrapped up with Paramount, Metro and 20th-Fox, the others being expected to follow the general pattern.

New Radio Co-op To 'Sell' World War 2½

Washington, April 1.

The Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines have informally approved in principle the concept of institutional sponsorship of an Armed Forces radio show. New philosophy is geared to the new economy in AM, which differs from the days of 1942 when the NBC network would shell out $500,000 out-of-pocket every year for the "Army Hour."

Program vehicle would be tagged "America's Hour," as an updated "Army Hour," and would include

B'CASTERS CHART INDUSTRY FUTURE

By GEORGE ROSEN

Chicago, April 1.

Chicago this week held the key to careers and bankrolls, the fate of an abused radio industry and the future economic pattern of television.

As America's pent-up broadcasters turned out in record force for the 30th annual convention of the National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcasters at the Hilton Hotel here, uppermost in their minds was the question, "Where do we go from here?," as they convened in a determined effort to lift the haze of uncertainty and confusion that clouds the industry.

If, as evidenced by the record attendance, interest in this year's NARTB convention was running at a fever pitch, it's primarily because of the following reasons:

1. With the imminent lifting of the TV freeze and assignment of channel allocations, which is tantamount to passing out gilt-edged $1,000,000 certificates, everybody wants to be in for the kill.

2. With growing evidence that "everybody wants to get into the TV act," radio broadcasters feel that the new medium is their rightful heritage, rather than that of theatre men, et al., and they're ready to fight for it.

3. With the advent of TV, broadcasting has become big business. The days are over when the whole broadcasting economy made but a dent when stacked up against, say, the General Motors annual billings. With this has come an awareness on the part of broadcasters that they've got to measure up to this

TV Webs Still Optimistic Despite 'Soft' Market, Feel Corner's Turned

While the major television networks admittedly are a shade more cautious on commitments, due to the current "soft" market, there is considerable optimism that the corner has been turned. They figure that the upcoming Presidential election may be causing some confusion in big business planning but that things will return to normal in the near future.

In all events, an NBC spokesman cites that company's commitments as being no worse, comparably, than Hollywood with its costly talent stable and the hit-and-miss boxoffice returns of even the biggest stars. "They're as good as their scripts, whether in Hollywood or Radio City," states RCA veepee Manie Sacks, for instance, who doesn't look upon NBC's $45,000,000 yearly talent bill (rough estimate) as disproportionate to the volume of billings.

However, talent agents admit greater resistance on those fancy guarantees for future talent, unless it's something extra special.

TV May Become Greatest Ballyhoo For Films, Theatre Exec Tells D.C.

Washington, April 1.

Theatre business may not come back to the peak of 1946, when war restrictions on travel abnormally boosted the boxoffice figures, but it's picking up all the time despite TV. With better pictures coming out of Hollywood there's every reason to believe that people will attend films as they have been accustomed to. That's the opinion of Leonard Goldenson, prexy of United Paramount Theatres.

Testifying before the Federal Communications Commission last week on the proposed merger of UPT with ABC, Goldenson said the UPT board of directors feels the theatre business is a sound one and will continue to be such. Merger with ABC, he said, offers opportunity for diversification and additional profits from radio and TV. He added that he subscribes to the idea that TV may become the greatest medium to advertise motion pictures.

Goldenson said it has been UPT's experience that theatre attendance has fallen off in the "novelty" period of TV but has picked up. Company records, he said, indicate that the b.o. has dropped off a little more in TV areas than in non-TV areas but this may be accounted for by "marginal" houses which have been affected by other factors.

He pointed to studies showing that the "swing" is up at better theatres. He said that business has spread more among "A" houses because more of them are now running first-run pix. The "A" theatres, he said, "have maintained themselves rather well."

Goldenson said it's difficult to determine whether TV has been the only factor affecting theatre business. Boxoffice receipts, he said, have dropped off in Maine,

George Raft's 1st Brit. Personals in 26 Years

Hollywood, April 1.

George Raft is set for his first personals in England in 26 years with a stand at the Prince of Wales Theatre, London, climaxing a six-week tour of the provinces. Pic star will start in July after winding a film commitment with Eros Films. He will play Edinburgh, Glasgow, Leeds, Dublin and Manchester, and may also work Scandinavian dates, possibly Helsinki, in connection with entertainment splurge at the Olympic Games. Raft is working up a short sketch in addition to dancing.

Benny to Stick On Sunday Radio For Next Season

Radio got one of its heftiest shots in the arm in recent months this week with the decision of Jack Benny and his sponsor, American Tobacco, to continue the comic's Sunday night radio show on CBS with no changes for another season.

Decision is expected not only to bulwark the rest of CBS' Sunday night lineup, which would have been shaky if Benny had exited AM in favor of TV, but also to influence other major radio bankrollers, such as Chesterfield and Procter & Gamble, to think twice before deciding to curtail their radio activities. While an official announcement of Benny's decision hasn't yet been issued, its understood that he'll continue his Sunday night at 7 show on a weekly basis and also do a half-hour video show about once a month.

Benny reportedly agreed, after

Albany, April 1.

Approval by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of the Hatfield-Strong bill prohibiting aerial performances at heights greater than 20 feet without a safety belt or other protective devices to minimize risk of injury, is being followed by a study of such mechanisms. It is reported that the State Board of Standards and Appeals already has consulted persons familiar with such devices, preparatory to drafting standards for acceptable ones. The measure will take effect July 1.

Some problems in enforcing the new law may be encountered. One

Margaret's Seattle Date SRO, But Invites Some Of Harry's Correspondence

Seattle, April 1.

Margaret Truman, in song recital at the Metropolitan Theatre last Thursday night (27), did right well at the boxoffice, drawing a capacity gross of $3,400. Her charm and personality won plaudits, but she didn't win the music critics.

Both dailies lowered the boom as to her singing status. Opined Maxine Cushing Gray in the Post Intelligencer: "At this stage in her career we presume to tell Margaret Truman that she's in the wrong business . . . in our 25 years listening to singers she's unique in her ability to go off pitch at any point in her range. . . ."

Louis R. Guzzo, in the Times, said: "Let's face it. . . . Margaret Truman has poise, charm, attractiveness, stage presence, ambition—but she doesn't sing very well."

Col Story Ed Tells of Early Red Days, Denies Ever Favoring George Willner

Washington, April 1.

Eve Ettinger, story editor for Columbia Pictures, and three other radio-film people told the House Un-American Activities Committee in executive session at L. A. last September that they had once been members of the Communist Party, but had long since severed their connections. The testimony of Miss Ettinger, Eugene Fleury, Anne Ray Frank and Robert Shayne, was released Sunday (30) by the committee. Committee also released the testimony of four other persons — Arthur Strawn, Prokop Jack Prokop, Helen Schwartz Donath and Bella Lewitsky Reynolds—who refused to answer questions on Communist affiliations on the ground of possible self-incrimination.

Strawn was accused by the committee of having worked on screen stories with Lester Cole, after Cole was convicted of contempt of Congress; Cole allegedly used the name of J. Redmond Prior on these scripts. Miss Ettinger told the committee she has been with Co-

Probe of Yankwich Asked by Rep. Vail In Lester Cole Verdict

Washington, April 1.

A Congressional investigation of Federal Judge Leon R. Yankwich, who first ordered the film industry to rehire one of the Hollywood 10 and to pay him damages, was demanded last week by Rep. Richard P. Vail, of Chicago.

Vail, a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee when the "unfriendly 10" refused to testify at the October, 1947, hearings, pointed out that the industry has been caught between the upper and nether millstones because of the Yankwich verdict.

The legislator bluntly charged Yankwich with lending "his influence and exalted position" to aid this country's "enemies" in the two trials which gave Lester Cole damages and restored him to a job at Metro. Vail has already talked informally with some members of the House Judiciary Committee to determine whether he should introduce a resolution or whether a friendly member of the committee should do so. Nothing has been decided yet.

It was the Yankwich rulings, said Vail in a House speech, which set the pattern that caused other stu-

Robt. Montgomery Must Explain Charges to D.C.

Washington, April 1.

Actor Robert Montgomery will appear before House Agriculture Committee April 9 to explain charges he made in a series of broadcasts that the U. S. Government is squandering money in efforts to stop hoof and mouth disease in Mexico. He was requested to testify tomorrow (Wed.) but was given a week's postponement.

Committee Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D-N. C.) said he was not impressed with statements by Montgomery that the Agriculture Department's campaign to prevent the disease from spreading to this country is a "boondoggle."

Setting Berle Fete

Harry E. Gould, chairman of the Jewish Theatrical Guild dinner committee which is feteing Milton Berle at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y., May 3, left last week for the Coast to line up dais guests for the affair.

Gould will be on the Coast until April 9.

Feb. Amus. Stocks Off But Not as Severe As Rest of the Market

Amusement stocks listed on the N. Y. Stock Exchange dropped slightly during the month of February, but their decline wasn't nearly as severe as the slump experienced by the market in general. Figures released by the Big Board last week revealed that the total market value of amusement shares in the 29-day period came to $1,233,781,140 with an average per-share of $20.28.

Aggregate value of amusement issues at the month-end was only $4,501,333 off from January's and the per-share average dipped only 8c. In contrast, the average market price of all stock issues listed on the exchange was $41.18 at the end of February. This compared with $42.48 at the close of January and was the lowest registered since last November, when the average price was $40.83.

Amusement bonds' loss in February was also comparatively little. Total value of all issues at the month's end was $6,829,024 as against $6,873,893 for the preceding month. Average price per bond dropped only 62c from January's $95.75.

Most market observers attributed the February recession to fears that first-quarter earnings in many lines would be off as indicated by higher grosses but lower net income. Threat of a steel strike was another factor. Amusement industry issues, which include radio-TV fields, tended to maintain dividends and were already at fairly low levels. Hence their ease-off failed to follow the market trend.

N.Y. 'Abuses' of Negro Told in Soviet Film

London, April 1.

A Kremlin eyeview of how New York City handles its Negro population is confronting Londoners in a new Soviet-made film titled "Harlem, U. S. A." English-dialog picture has been screened here for the past two months before small groups. Prints are 16m gauge to evade censorship, for only 35m pix are required to be examined under law.

Harlem, according to the film, is a Negro ghetto guarded by white police. The unfortunate residents are beaten and not permitted to leave the area. Rents are prohibitive, white merchants own all retail establishments and all food sold has been condemned elsewhere. Documentary touch is provided at the end when several Negroes attest to the accuracy of the picture's contents.

MUSICAL DIRECTOR
"YOUR SHOW OF SHOWS"
WNBT

N.Y. State Okays Sunday Show Biz

Albany, April 1.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey on Sunday (30) signed an Assembly Rules Committee bill amending sections of the penal law to end a more than century-old ban on Sabbath participation sports and granting communities power to permit circuses, stock car races and other spectator sports and entertainment. Enforcement of a blue law which halted two benefit performances scheduled by Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey Circus in Poughkeepsie last August, under American Legion auspices, brought the Sabbath observance issue to a head.

The measure, effective immediately, amends Section 2145 to cover "public sports and exercises on Sunday," repeals several other sections, and inserts a new one on "public entertainment on Sunday." Participation sports, now legalized, must not "constitute a serious interruption of the repose of religious liberty of the community." Municipalities are authorized to permit, after 2 p.m., by ordinance or other local law, the spectator sports—those staged for an audience.

Present provisions permitting baseball, football, hockey, bowling, basketball and motion pictures after 2 p.m. on Sunday are not changed. However, the effect will be to permit films and stage shows, now starting before 2 o'clock, to continue.

$10,600,000 Request For Films Gets House OK

Washington, April 1.

House Appropriations Committee has okayed the full $10,600,000 State Department's motion picture unit has requested for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Committee report, released past weekend, disclosed that the committee recommended $27,500,000 for the "Voice of America" international broadcasting division, for operating expenses. "Voice" asked $30,000,000. In addition, Appropriations Committee favors $20,500,000 more for the acquisition and construction of new broadcasting facilities. This is part of a continuing program which has extended over the past few years. State Department asked $36,727,000 for the work during the next fiscal year.

"It will be noted," said the report, "that the largest increase allowed is for radio broadcasting. This committee has consistently approved appropriation requests for this media, which is our most effective way of reaching the people behind the Iron Curtain."

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1952, State Department is spending a little less than $20,000,000 on broadcasting operations. Report did not comment on the slight increase provided in motion picture funds.

Kornblum's Auto Crackup

TWO HOROWITZ SEASONS BOOKED AT $4,000 FEE

Vladimir Horowitz has already been booked by his manager, David Libidins, for 37 concerts next season, the limit the pianist wants to do in 1952-53. All are in the northern part of the U. S., and at a $4,000 straight fee.

Libidins also has booked Horowitz for 33 concerts in the '53-'54 season, with about a half-dozen more dates still to fill. Eight concerts already are booked for the '54-'55 stretch.

Dewey Signs 'Tougher' N.Y. Law K.O.ing Nitery Theatre Discrimination

Albany, April 1.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey Saturday (29) signed the Roman bill extending jurisdiction of the State Commission Against Discrimination to restaurants, hotels, resorts and other places of public accommodation or amusement, with a message declaring the measure "should take its place as one of the significant accomplishments of the 1952 Legislature." The governor also approved a supplementary Rules Committee bill which provides that such prohibition shall not bar religious or denominational organizations from limiting admission or giving preference to persons of the same religion or denomination, or from making a selection to promote religious principles.

The new statute, which becomes effective July 1, was advocated by the governor because sections of the Civil Right law, on the books since 1881 for the purpose of giving equal accessibility in places of public accommodation, resort and amusement to all persons, had not proved enforcible. Dewey told the Legislature that "the criminal penalties provision simply does not work."

The five-member Commission Against Discrimination, created in the executive department under the Ives-Quinn Act of 1945, has a record of success in 90% of compaints filed with it involving bias in employment. It has rarely been forced to invoke the punitive provisions of the law and its authority has never been challenged in the courts.

Motion picture theatres will not be affected, since they do not discriminate in this state. Legit houses, nightclubs, hotels, restaurants and other places will be affected, observers believe.

Students Drop Case

Houston, April 1.

A $600,000 damage set for filing against the Mocambo cocktail lounge by a group of 12 Latin-American students from the Univ. of Houston, who said they were discriminated against, has been dropped.

Willard Hadjes and Jimmy Menutes, owners of the club, who were not present, said the incident was due to "inexperienced" help. Following their public apology, the proposed suit was shelved.

YES WE HAVE NO McCOY BELL-RINGERS IN SWITZ

By Lt. Col. BARNEY OLDFIELD

Berne, March 25.

Somewhat in the vein of Milton Berle's perennial quest for the whereabouts of Fink's Mules, I came here looking for a Swiss Bell-Ringer.

This being the capital of the country, from which at least 25 of vaudeville's yesteryear cowbell caroleers were reputed to have come and the country itself being a small one, it should be simple.

But there doesn't seem to be anybody around who recalls this particular kind of export to what was once America's little-big, middle, and big-smalltime.

Home of precision workmanship, as Switzerland is, which produces townhall clocks in which 4,389 separate things happen when the hour is struck, it is sort of pooh-pooh department to call up any pride of origin for such a simple gimmick as to have three or four people belly up to trays laden with 20 or so varying sized bells grabbing hither and yon to shake out a reasonable replica of a tune.

One of the local burghers further

Big Tune Payoff Cues Binge For M-G on Musicals

Metro is going on a musical binge. Having racked up grosses of well over $4,000,000 each last year with "The Great Caruso," "Show Boat" and "American in Paris," and having raked in the Academy Award for "American" as well, the outfit apparently feels the melody pix are about as close as Hollywood can get to the formula for turning out sure profitable product.

In any event, M-G has a plenty jazzed-up lineup. "Singin' in the Rain" swings into key dates across the country within the next few days. "Skirts Ahoy" goes out in May. "Lovely to Look At," from the legiter, "Roberta," is completed, and "One-Piece Bathing Suit" finishes lensing shortly.

"I Love Louisa," based on the Broadway hit, "Band Wagon," goes before the cameras in July. Others on the slate include "Student Prince," "Invitation to the Dance," "Brigadoon," a tuned-up version of "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Everything I Have Is Yours" and "Because You're Mine." Last named will be M-G's fourth Mario Lanza starrer.

M-G's fondness for musicals is not new, of course, but the company clearly is stepping up the number. Comment by a company exec was that the outfit over the years has really lost money on only one song and dance pic. That was, surprisingly enough, "The Great Ziegfeld."

MAXIM'S (PARIS) PLAN FOR N.Y. SITE UP AGAIN

The idea of a Chez Maxim's for New York is up again with the arrival in the U. S. of Maggie and Louis Vaudable, who own the famed Maxim's in Paris, and Maurice Carrere. Latter operates a boite bearing his name, in the French capital, as well as a roadhouse (during the summer season) some 20 miles outside of Paris. Idea would be for Carrere to operate the N. Y. Maxim's, when and if.

They are currently in Gotham along with many other personalities including Arletty, Greco, Ann Vernon, Claude Dauphin, Tino Rossi, Les Freres Jacques (latter opening at the Blue Angel, N. Y., this week, all of whom will participate in the "April In Paris" soiree at the Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y. Claude C. Philippe, of that hostelry is sparking the latter, along with Bernard Gimbel, as treasurer, Elsa Maxwell, as entertainment chairman, plus others. Benefit is for the French Hospital in N. Y. The visiting French personalities are part of the Franco-American rapport for the hospital and general international amity. From the French viewpoint it's another natural tourist pitch, since the French Tourism Bureau has extended the 2,000th anniversary celebration another year.

Once before the Maxim's-Carrere idea cropped up but, because of building conditions, was tabled, but now it is figured the restrictions will be eased.

Still another idea for a class N. Y eatery that is still very much in the discussion stage is an eastern branch of Romanoff's, Beverly Hills, on the site of the now vacated Duveen Bros. art gallery on 5th Ave. and 56th St. Idea would be for Mike Romanoff to commute between both coasts attendant to this venture, with Harry Crocker chiefly in charge in BH.

Groom Merrill Almost Couldn't Get to Wedding

Roberta Peters was left anxiously waiting at the temple for more than half an hour Sunday (30) afternoon before Robert Merrill could reach the Park Ave. Synagog, N. Y., in time to solemnize their marital vows. An announcement to the crowded temple stated that the delay was caused by the opera star's difficulty in crashing past a Fifth Ave. parade celebrating Greek Independence Day.

The ceremony and reception drew more than 1,200 friends of the couple, both stars of the Metropolitan Opera.

Film Industry Mapping Strategy For New Onslaught Vs. 20% Fed. Tax

Organized film industry likely will map strategy for its fight against the 20% Federal admission tax sometime this month. Specific date will tie in with the all-trade meeting on proposals to set up an arbitration system. This takes place within the next three weeks.

It's figured that since reps of the five prominent exhibitor organizations will be in N. Y. for the arbitration conclave, it would be a relatively simple matter to get them all together to work out the tax plan around the same time.

It's stressed on all sides that whichever ideas prevail on ways and means of combatting the boxoffice levy, the project will be a joint industry undertaking carrying the banner of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations.

COMPO's original campaign in 1950 had reached the point where a halving of the 20% bite appeared a virtual certainty on the basis of pledges made by Congressmen and the general success in winning official Washington sympathy for the industry's financial problems. Outbreak of the Korean conflict, of course, killed all chances for the tax slicing at that time.

Distributor committee members assigned to arbitration, headed by Metro's William F. Rodgers, now are at work on drafting film company proposals for a plan. They'll call the all-trade meeting on the subject shortly, it's expected.

Nick Schenck to Emcee Reagan's 1st Meeting With M-G Studio Brass

Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's-Metro president, and Charles M. Reagan, M-G distribution v.p., will trek from N. Y. to the Coast the latter part of this month, at which time Schenck will personally emcee Reagan's meeting with the Culver City studio brass. Reagan hasn't been on the M-G lot since his appointment to the top sales spot last Jan. 1.

They'll probably stay about a week at the studio, viewing recently completed pix and huddling with production boss Dore Schary and studio execs, including E. J. Mannix, Ben Thau, Louis K. Sidney and J. J. Cohn.

Following the studio confabs, Reagan is expected to call a series of five or six divisional sales meetings, starting with a session in San Francisco early in May. He'll attend the entire series of meets, it's reported, to give his views on the new product and talk selling campaigns.

N. J. Ops Slap Distribs With $1,800,000 Suit

The eight majors yesterday (Tues.) were named defendants in a $1,800,000 triple-damage antitrust suit brought in N. Y. Federal Court by the Leonia (N. J.) Amus. Corp., headed by Julius, Max L. and Louis A. Charnow.

Distribs were charged with "conspiracy and discrimination" in allegedly refusing to give the Leonia firm a better break on product.

Trans-Lux Proxy Row Aims to Oust Brandt

Group of Trans-Lux Corp. minority stockholders, headed by George G. Mason, a director of the Tuxedo (N. Y.) National Bank, this week instituted a proxy fight seeking to oust the eastern circuit's present management, Harry Brandt, Milton C. Weisman and all other board members. The dissidents assert that the chain's management is guilty of "waste of assets."

Mason has himself and six associates as nominees to replace the present board. Group includes Norman W. Elson, Walter Siemers and Jerome B. Ross, all former Trans-Lux officials.

'Singin' ' Is 65th M-G Film at Radio City Hall

Booking of "Singin' in the Rain," Arthur Freed production current at N.Y.'s Radio City Music Hall, represents the 65th Metro film to play the big showcase in the past 14 years, outdistancing all other distribs.

It's also Freed's 10th film to make its debut at Hall in 10 years. His first was "Babes on Broadway" in 1942.

Pixites Stay Clear Of Myers' Blast At Telecasters, FCC

Allied States Assn. board chairman Abram F. Myers' publicly-stated blast at telecasters and the Federal Communications Commission has some film toppers in N. Y. seething. In addition, toppers of the National Assn. of Radio & Television Broadcasters are riled over Myers' comments on TV-ers' "influence" on Government agencies. The Allied chief's intimation that home viewing of TV programs might produce eye strain also had film men and video execs wincing.

Industryites are refraining from taking direct issue with Myers. But they want it clear, they said, that they don't share any of his views.

Film execs in Gotham held out the hope that the pic trade and the telecasters would work together in the further advancement of the new medium to the advantage of each and the public. They have no quarrel with the NARTB, it was said. The objective, to the contrary, is one of cooperation and mutual assistance so that film men,

5-Year Deal by Loew's Nixed by Bill Rodgers In Agreeing to Short Term

Past week's disclosure that William F. Rodgers will receive $1,300 weekly under his new employment contract with Loew's was accompanied by a report that the former sales chief had been asked to sign a five-year deal as v.p. and consultant but nixed it. Rodgers insisted on holding the employment commitment to two years, from next July, so that following this period he'll be free to chart his future course on the basis of conditions at that time.

Rodgers' chief concern is said to be his health. He's feeling well but decided to relinquish the top sales post to ease the pressure. For this reason he limited the contract to two years.

New deal gives him $1,100 weekly as salary and $200 per week in expenses. It supersedes an agreement which gave him over $200,000 annually in salary and other benefits.

Rodgers is to give his services to Loew's exclusively, it's stressed in the pact.

Walsh, Local 150 In Pre-Circuit Huddles

Hollywood, April 1.

IATSE prexy Richard Walsh huddled with reps of local 150 projectionists, yesterday (Mon.) as a prelude to sitting in on negotiations with circuits.

Talks bogged down some weeks ago, although there has been no discussion on money yet, despite union's preliminary request for a 10% hike. Dickering thus far has been on contract clauses and interpretations.

INDUSTRY FIGHTS TO ERASE STIGMA

By GENE ARNEEL

The threat of further assaults upon certain pix on "un-American" grounds by dissident groups such as the American Legion and Catholic, Protestant and Jewish organizations is shaping up as one of the most critical problems facing the film industry today. The great importance with which the matter is regarded was partially pointed up by Monday's (31) meeting of the trade's top brass with American Legion officials in Washington. Similar sessions will be held in the future, all aiming to stave off what filmsters believe are unjustified attacks upon pic product.

Basically, the cause for the alarm, say the execs, is double-pronged: (1) Responsible film men, collectively and individually, have well demonstrated strong anti-Communist sentiments and have taken thorough-going measures to disassociate politically objectionable persons from Hollywood; (2) regardless of the lack of validity in their protests against any given film, the mere appearance of pickets outside a theatre is murder on business in many areas. In Washington, for example, it's pointed out that placard-bearing members of the Legion demonstrating

DE SICA DEAL WITH RKO IN H'WOOD FALLS THRU

RKO homeoffice reps this week indicated that the projected deal for Italian film-maker Vittorio De Sica to lens one or more films at the outfit's Hollywood studios has collapsed. De Sica said in N. Y. last month he had come to the U. S. at RKO's invitation and a contract was in the offing.

Now, without any official reasons given, h.o. department heads are refraining from any comments on the link with the Italo director. De Sica is now on the Coast and is known to be discussing a pact with other studios.

'Miracle' Goes to Supreme Court; Ruling Could Set Censor Precedent

Washington, April 1.

Double-barreled onslaught upon state censorship of films—first as a restraining freedom of expression and communication, and, secondly, as inhibiting the free exercise of religion—was presented to the U. S. Supreme Court today (Tues.). A ruling by the top tribunal could settle the legality of censorship once and for all.

Action was taken in behalf of Joseph Burstyn as distributor of "The Miracle," ban of which by the N. Y. State Board of Regents was upheld by the state's Court of Appeals. Brief asking a reversal of the court's decision was filed by Ephraim S. London, Burstyn's N. Y. attorney. Supreme Court hearing is set for the week of April 21.

(Censorship activity was popping on two other fronts in the past week. "Latuko," a documentary made by a member of the American Museum of Natural History was refused an okay by the N. Y. Regents Board. In the case of "Pinky" (20th), Attorney General Price Daniel of Texas asked the U.S. Supreme Court to refuse to hear arguments of Motion Picture Assn. of America, which is appealing the film's nix in Texas.).

One angle which London takes is that the Constitution prevents the imposition of any restraints on the Top Execs, Legion Huddle in Wash. On Pic Picketing

Washington, April 1.

In an effort to stave off any more American Legion picketing of films, the Motion Picture Assn. of America and company toppers huddled for more than six hours yesterday (Mon.) with top Legion spokesmen.

No promises or deals were made. There were indications that a second meeting will be held after Donald Wilson, national commander of the Legion, and James O'Neill, ex-national commander and now editor of the "American Legion Magazine, have a chance to discuss the situation with the Legion's executive committee.

One report was that Wilson and O'Neill hit hard at pictures in which Communists or members of Commie fronts have had a part and even stated that picketing might eventually be put on a national basis unless Hollywood cleaned house.

Industry spokesmen objected to an article which appeared in the American Legion Magazine of last December. J. B. Matthews, the author, listed films in which he said Commies and fellow travellers had a hand. On the basis of this list, the D. C. Department of the Legion recently picketed the first run

United Artists president Arthur B. Krim wings out of N. Y. for the Coast tonight (Wed.), with conversations with Samuel Goldwyn added to his agenda. National Boxoffice Survey

Exhibs Mark Time Until Easter; 'Show' First For 6th Week in Row, 'Queen' 2d, 'Streetcar' 3d

Although most exhibitors are juggling their playdates or holding over product rather than bring in new, stronger films, current session is giving a good account of itself. Many keys covered by VARIETY this week noted that the first springlike weather hurt trade. Both "African Queen" (UA) and "Streetcar" (WB) continue to cash in on Oscar awards to stand high in ratings.

For the sixth straight week, "Greatest Show on Earth" (Par) is leading the boxoffice parade, turning in nearly $230,000 gross in representative keys despite the influence of Lent. Circus opus is credited with good to terrific sessions.

"African Queen" is climbing to second position, after being third for a number of stanzas. The Academy award to Humphrey Bogart is proving a real stimulus to its big to smash dates. "Streetcar" is finishing third, also getting a hypo for several Oscars handed the pic. It is now around in key cities for a second time, this swing being at pop scale.

"Quo Vadis" (M-G) is a close fourth while "Viva Zapata!" (20th) slipped to fifth. Sixth money is going to "Meet Danny Wilson" (U), with Frank Sinatra, star of pic, heading stageshow at N. Y. Paramount, helping to its higher rating. "Snow White" (RKO) (reissue) will grab off seventh spot.

"5 Fingers" (20th) captured eighth position, with "Bugles in Afternoon" (WB), ninth. "Flesh and Fury" (U), "Retreat, Hell!" (WB) and "Sailor Beware" (Par) round out the Golden Dozen. "Salesman" (Col) and "Steel Town" (U) are runner-up pix in the sequence.

"My Six Convicts" (Col) shapes as a potential big winner, being fine in Buffalo, great in N.Y. and good in Pittsburgh. "Singin' in Rain" (M-G) is great on first N.Y. Music Hall week. "Sniper" (Col), while only so-so in Washington, is rated sharp in Philly. "Wild North" (M-G) still shapes not so good. "Aaron Slick" (Par), also new, looms good in Omaha but fair in St. Louis and sad in Pitt.

"Sword's Point" (RKO) looks okay in Providence. "Ft. Osage" (Mono) is mild in Detroit and moderate in Providence. "Marrying Kind" (Col) continues great in N. Y. in third round.

"Hoodlum Empire" (Rep) shapes big in Cincinnati and good in Philly. "Green Glove" (UA) looks firm in Washington. "I Want You" is fair in Indianapolis.

"The River" (UA) looks fast in Buffalo and big in N.Y. "Tembo" (RKO) is rated fine in Detroit. "Something To Live For" (Par), mild in N.Y. and thin in L.A. is lively in Boston.

"Girl in Every Port" (RKO) shapes fine in Portland but sluggish in Minneapolis. "David and Bathsheba" (20th) is doing okay in Cincy at pop prices. "Deadline-U.S.A." (20th) is barely passable in third N.Y. week.

"Bright Victory" (U) looms fair in Omaha. "Big Trees" (WB) continues to limp this stanza.

'Greatest Show' Tops B.O. for March; 'Vadis,' 'Queen,' 'Bend,' 'Zapata' Follow

Despite having to contend with Federal income tax deadline, Lent and unfavorable weather, the nation's first-run theatre business held up fairly well in March. Full effect of the Lenten season was felt —the final two weeks of the month. The income tax bugaboo obviously soured the public at least for the first two weeks of the month against attending the theatre often. Also, the upped taxation cut into the general public's pocketbook, already crimped by the high cost of living.

"Greatest Show on Earth" (Par) was the greatest grosser at the wickets in March, according to reports from VARIETY correspondents in 25 key cities. In the face of all the adverse factors, the Cecil B. DeMille film grossed an estimated $1,500,000 for the four weeks in keys covered by VARIETY. The Circus opus took over first place at the start of the month and never relinquished it.

"Quo Vadis" (M-G) slipped to second spot, giving up No. 1 position after being first three months in a row. The Italian-made film continued to pile up big money, although mainly on extended-run the final weeks of the month.

"African Queen" (UA) was a close third, although not getting the upped scales the two forerunners obtained, and having no major circuit outlets. "Queen" cashed in heavily on the Oscar awarded to Humphrey Bogart, co-star of film, as the best actor of year. Spurt in the final 10 days of the month likely will enable the picture to top $650,000 in gross returns from main key spots. The Bogart-Hepburn jungle production captured third position three times in the weekly surveys for March, fourth spot being the lowest for March.

"Bend of River" (U), fourth in February, attested to its championship qualities by copping fourth money again. James Stewart starrer finished third one week and fifth another. "Viva Zapata!" (20th) was fifth, despite a slow start early in the past month. Pic was coming up fast as March ended.

Academy laurels heaped on "Streetcar Named Desire" (WB) was the fillip needed to generate its return engagements into high at pop scale. Just previously the film had been lagging almost as much as the other hit films returning at regular prices. With Warner Bros. getting a flock of bookings because of the Oscars, the film zoomed to second spot for final week of the month.

'Sailor' Still Wrong

"Sailor, Beware" (Par) a smash third in February, still showed enough to land seventh spot last month. "5 Fingers" (20th) finished eighth, while "Belle of N. Y." (M-G), a bit spotty, was ninth.

"Retreat, Hell!" (WB) wound up 10th, with "Snow White" (RKO), back again on reissue, in 11th slot. "Bugles in Afternoon"

6 PIX FROM MAJORS RULED 'B' BY LEGION

Some six films from the majors were rated as Class "B" (Morally Objectionable in Part for All) by the National Legion of Decency last week. Both "Carrie" (Par) and "Deadline—U.S.A." (20th) were criticized for "reflecting the acceptability of divorce." The Par entry was also said to "tend to arouse sympathy for immoral actions."

"Down Among the Sheltering Palms" (20th) contains "suggestive situations" while "Macao" (RKO) was rapped for its "suggestive costuming, dialog, situations and low moral tone." United Artists' "Saturday Island" "tends to condone immoral actions." Metro's "Singin' in the Rain" drew censure for a "suggestive dance."

Placed in the Legion's "Condemned" categor, was "The Thrill That Kills (Cocaine)" which Distinguished Films, Inc., is distributing. "This film, in the story it tells," the Catholic reviewing group charged, "condones and glorifies illicit actions. Moreover, it contains material morally unsuitable for entertainment motion picture theatres."

New Set Designers' Union Battles IATSE

Hollywood, April 1.

New independent union, the Society of Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Set Model Builders, filed a petition with the National Labor Relations Board for an election to determine a bargaining agency.

Petition, if granted, will mean a battle with the IATSE.

See $15 Price For WB Block Up for Sale

Entire block of about 200,000 shares of Warner Bros. common stock being offered for sale back to the corporation by Harry, Albert and Jack Warner likely will be purchased at $15 per share, according to Wall St. sources. This obviously would mean the brothers would collect about $3,000,000 for their relinquished holdings.

N. Y. financial observers relate they haven't seen too much inclination by other investors to part with their shares at the maximum $15 price as established by the WB board in the current stock tender operation.

It's believed that few, if any, stockholders would want to sell at less than that price. Consequently, there's the strong chance that the full offering of the three brothers will be taken since the board allocated $10,000,000 for the overall purchase, and there has been no apparent rush by other stockholders to sell.

Feeling among Wall Streeters is that the buy-up could reach the full amount of $10,000,000 but to accomplish the full block of the three brothers must be taken. This, incidentally, wouldn't affect their working control of the outfit. They have well over 1,000,000 of the total outstanding issue of about 5,620,000 shares.

VARIETY CLUB ENCORE FOR BRITISH CHARITY

A tipoff on Queen Elizabeth II's coronation date lies in the Duke of Edinburgh's reprise of the Variety Club's benefit for his pet charity, the National Playing Fields Assn., on June 10, 1953. This is spotlighted as "probably coming a month after the Coronation." There has been some question whether it would be next fall, or later, because of an expected birth in the royal family.

The international Variety Clubs cooperated with the Duke of Edinburgh last summer when a big show, comprising Ava Gardner, Frank Sinatra, among others, netted $60,000 for the charity. The impact was so good that the State Dept. may tie into the 1953 shindig on a quasi-official basis, especially if a Paris and possibly a Rome tent of the Variety Clubs is established, so that international talent in several languages would visit London for the shindig.

Ewing Lloyd, ex-J. Arthur Rank and now a London personal manager, and TWA's John Haskell tied in on ballyhoo and transportation, and will again on the future flying trip over of Hollywood and Broadway personalities.

L.A. Leaders to Honor Pix 50th Anni on Coast

Los Angeles, April 1.

Los Angeles civic and business leaders will celebrate the 50th anniversary of the motion picture industry in this town at a dinner to be staged by the Chamber of Commerce on April 15.

On that date, half a century ago, Talley's Electric Theatre opened as the first L. A. playhouse devoted exclusively to pictures.

16m Use in TV Key To Eastman's Hike In Pro Sales Last Yr.

Professional motion picture sales of Eastman Kodak increased substantially during 1951, according to the firm's annual stockholders' report released last week. Much of the boost, it was said, stemmed from expanding uses of 16m film in television. Sale of 35m film for theatre exhibition likewise increased in the same 12-month period.

But despite greater consumption of professional film last year this product only accounted for 9c of Kodak's 1951 sales dollar. Professional and commercial photographic products contributed a fourth of the company's business while almost another fourth came from amateur photographic products.

In the professional film field, the report noted, the company introduced several new films for use in making color release prints. It was pointed out that these special films, combined with the new Eastman color negative and color print films, provide a complete new group of color products for the professional 35m field.

On the legal front, the report recalled that three of four actions against Kodak arising out of the Keller-Dorian color film licenses were settled out of court last year. An appeal from a decision in the company's favor in the fourth case is pending in a French court.

A civil suit of the Revere Camera Co. against Kodak is continuing, stockholders were told, with the taking of depositions of execs of both companies. Revere claims that Kodak's methods of supplying amateur motion picture films have interfered with the sale of Revere cameras. "We have denied the charge," the report added.

As previously reported 1951 net earnings were $49,025,906, or $3.23 per share on 15,030,675 common share outstanding. This compares to a 1950 net of $61,858,957, or $4.50 per share on 13,664,350 shares outstanding.

ARGUE NEW TRIAL OF SCOTT, LARDNER SUITS

Los Angeles, April 1.

Arguments on a motion for a new trial of the joint breach-of-contract suit recently won by Adrian Scott and Ring Lardner, Jr., against RKO and 20th-Fox will be heard. April 7 by Judge Ben Harrison in Federal Court.

Briefs were filed yesterday (Mon.) by defendants in the case in which the plaintiffs were awarded a judgment amounting to about $130,000, with interest.

Nate Golden to Open Photo Expo in Cologne

Washington, April 1.

Nathan Golden, film boss for National Production Authority and Department of Commerce, will open the International Cinema-photography Exhibit in Cologne, Germany, on April 26. Golden, who will be official U. S. rep at the exhibit, is going at the invitation of the German photographic industry, sponsors of the show. Invitation was submitted via General McCloy, U. S. High Commissioner in Germany, to Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, who last week okayed the Golden stint.

The Cologne exhibit, which features equipment of both still and motion picture manufacturers, is a cooperative effort of about 70 companies from all over the world, including U. S. film outfits. Golden will make opening speech, and remain as observer. He also plans to take a look-see at the Cannes Film Festival and to combine his trip with other official chores in Europe.

UPT-ABC—So Simple!

Washington, April 1.

The way Leonard Goldenson, prexy of United Paramount Theatres, went about to make a deal for the ABC network seemed quite simple.

Telling about it last week before the Federal Communications Commission, he said his first interest was in setting a price for the stock. He offered ABC board chairman Edward Noble $12 a share for his majority holdings (in the spring of 1950, when the stock was selling for $10 on the market). Noble wanted $15. They bargained for a year and settled on $14.70. (Stock sold for 11⅜ last week.)

Once the price was set, Goldenson said, he was prepared to negotiate an agreement. "I was willing to pay cash for an outright purchase," he said, "but Noble said he wanted to stay with the enterprise. So the merger deal was arranged."

Time was on Noble's side during the bargaining period. The year 1950 was the biggest for TV set sales and impact on theatre business. The cable was brought to new TV cities, bringing network programs to large audiences. Nearly half the nation's 108 stations got into the black.

New Hampshire and Vermont, where there is no TV, and it may be that migration of factories from this area may be the cause. On the other hand, he said, business in Chicago and Boston is running ahead of last year although it's too soon to say whether the upward trend will continue.

TV Serves Two-thirds of Nation

Goldenson said establishment of new TV stations after the lifting of the freeze may not have the same impact on theatre attendance as the first 108 stations. He pointed out that nearly two-thirds of the nation is already served by TV.

He said theatre TV seemed a good idea when UPT got into it. Originally, the company thought the medium would be good for 12 to 18 events a year but it appears now that not more than five or six events justify showings in theatres.

Elaborating on previous testimony about plans to use large-screen TV equipment in off hours of the theatre, Goldenson said UPT has been approached by large corporations interested in using theatre TV for intercity conferences. He also pointed to experiments in using the medium for training workers for Civil Defense.

Goldenson added that "pay-TV" would demand a costly superstructure for equipment, bookkeeping, etc., which would not be justified by the limited events available. He said UPT does not plan to go into it.

He thought the gap between cost of producing motion picture features and TV programs is too great to make use of first-run product on TV feasible. He added he knew of no other major producer besides Paramount that is planning to produce special film for TV.

Questioned by Commission counsel Frederick Ford, Goldenson expressed the opinion that TV is still to be perfected technically and that the "real vitality" of TV is in live programming. He said he paid ABC board chairman Edward Noble considerably more than the market price of his stock because of the potentialities of the network.

Asked why he preferred to buy rather than build stations, he said that there's a big advantage in getting into the field now in view of the freeze, and since Noble "had come to me with a proposition" he felt it advisable to purchase. He said it will take time to build up ABC as a television network.

Forecast Longer Hearings on Par After FCC Respite

Washington, April 1.

After 10 weeks of hearings on Paramount antitrust issues, the FCC yesterday (31) recessed proceedings until April 14 for further questioning on Par's eligibility to hold TV licenses and to hear testimony in opposition to the merger of ABC and United Paramount Theatres.

It's expected that when hearings resume, they will continue for several weeks, but there were indications they might run longer. Testimony to be developed in this next and supposedly concluding phase of the proceedings, it's be-

U.S. SEES FURTHER DROP ABROAD

COMPO Resumes Intensive Scouting For Prez Post; Mayer Exits May 4

The Council of Motion Picture Organizations this week resumed its scouting for an industry exec to fill the president's chair as all hope was abandoned on having Loew's v.p. William F. Rodgers take the job. Rodgers felt he simply wasn't physically up to picking up the COMPO reins, and Loew's prexy Nicholas M. Schenck agreed.

Also this week, Arthur L. Mayer, who has been staying on as exec v.p. of COMPO, is now determined to bow out shortly. He leaves N. Y. May 4 for a long-desired European vacation and "this time," he declares, "it's absolutely and positively."

Two or three well placed film men now are being sounded out on their views anent acceptance of the top COMPO spot, and some insiders feel confident a unanimously agreed-upon candidate will be decided upon shortly. One difficulty, however, is that the presidential search, and refusals by those offered the post, have been so widely publicized that each new nominee has the feeling he's a subsequent and belated choice.

Actually, only three persons were sought previously, and each had valid reasons for nixing the offers. Both Rodgers and Robert J. O'Donnell, Texas circuit op, were forced to answer negatively due to reasons of health. O'Donnell returns to N.Y. tomorrow after a rest cruise of close to two months in the Mediterranean.

Spyros P. Skouras, president of 20th-Fox, couldn't accept because of an unusually heavy work sked. In addition to manning the helm

Ferrer to Play Himself In Cowan's 'Main St.'

Jose Ferrer will play himself in "Main Street to Broadway," the Robert Sherwood-Samson Raphaelson screenplay being produced in New York for the Council of Living Theatre by Lester Cowan.

Ferrer will appear as the producer-director of the play written by the playwright-hero of the film.

New Assessments Plan Would Snare 300G for COMPO

Council of Motion Picture Organizations officials this week estimated that the outfit's new assessment plan, which is based on theatres' seating capacity, will bring a minimum of $300,000 annually in exhib collections. The sum will be matched by the distributors dollar for dollar, bringing the total to a minimum of $600,000.

Some COMPO insiders originally had it figured that the old dues system, under which theatremen contributed one-tenth of 1% of their film rentals, likewise would have brought about $300,000 from theatres. However, this plan failed to work out. In many cases it proved somewhat confusing or the payments amounted to so little that exhibs didn't bother to send them in. New dues payments system, which was unanimously adopted by board members, requires virtually no bookkeeping at all, simply providing for theatremen to pay the flat sum, probably monthly, quarterly or semi-annually.

Rates under the new formula are $10 per year for every theatre seating up to 500, $15 up to 750, $25 up to 1,000, $50 to 2,500 and $100 for over 2,500 seats. Drive-ins are set at $10 up to 300-car capacity, $15 to 500, $25 to 600 and $50 for over 600-car capacity.

Trueman Rembusch, chairman of COMPO's finance committee, was in N. Y. last week for a headquarters meeting on establishing machinery for the new monetary program. The group was undecided on some details but probably will put the final touches on the overall plan at another session to be held shortly.

It's likely that an exhib committee will be named in each exchange area to supervise the collections.

'Jenny Kissed Me,' '49 Legiter, Eyed By RKO for $20,000

RKO this week was contemplating buying screen rights to "Jenny Kissed Me," legit comedy which had a brief, unsuccessful run at the Hudson Theatre, N. Y., early in 1949. James Russo, Michael Ellis and Alexander Cohen offered the play in association with Clarence M. Shapiro. It was written by Jean Kerr, wife of N. Y. Herald Tribune drama critic Walter Kerr.

Deal with RKO is said to revolve around a purchase price of $20,000.

Louise Rousseau Wins 1st Rd. in 150G Suit Vs. U-I

Hollywood, April 1.

Screenwriter Louise Rousseau won the first round in her $150,000 plagiarism suit against U-I when Superior Court Judge Ellsworth Meter threw out a studio demurrer which claimed there is no similarity between her "Haunted Heart" script and studio's film, "One-Way Street." She contended she submitted the script before film was made.

Judge read the script, saw the film and declared that the "similarity is striking, there are few features of any importance where there is any dissimilarity. The similarity to the court, as a casual observer, extends beyond the stock phrases . . ."

$4,556,000 Net For Gen'l Aniline in '51

General Aniline & Film Corp. last week reported net income of $4,556,000 after taxes in 1951, compared to $7,000,000 in 1950. Last year's net sales set a new high of $99,538,000, according to prexy Jack Frye.

Said to be the oldest U. S. maker of film, cameras and photographic supplies, the company exceeded its 1950 sales volume substantially during the past year. Contributing to its Ansco division sales potential was the firm's new color process which Metro is using in "The Wild North."

ENGINEERS' CONVENTION TO UNDERSCORE VIDEO

Underscoring the growing importance of television to the picture industry, the Society of Motion Picture and TV Engineers will devote the major part of its upcoming convention in Chicago to talks on the newer medium. Conclave, the SMPTE's 71st semi-annual meet, is scheduled for Chi's Drake Hotel April 21-25.

According to prexy Peter Moke, the entire opening day and evening sessions will be given over to video. Program chairman George W. Colburn to date has line up TV talks by Robert E. Lewis of Chi's Armour Research Foundation; S. H. Fowler, TV consultant; A. D. Fowler and H. N. Christopher, of Bell Telephone Labs.; Fred Barton and H. J. Schlafly, of Teleprompter Corp.; A. E. Martin and R. Q. Vogel, Sylvania Electric; M. C. Banca, RCA Victor; Victor Trad, of Trad TV, and John M. Sims, of General Precision Labs.

Darnell Pic's Title Switch

"Island of Desire" is the new title of the David E. Rose production starring Linda Darnell for United Artists release.

It had been "Saturday Island."

YANK FILMS FACE MORE COIN CURBS

Faced with additional restrictions by foreign governments, American film companies are expecting a further drop in income from abroad. Although U. S. pix are as popular as ever throughout the world and are hefty b.o. successes, it is becoming more and more difficult to get dollars out of foreign countries. International department execs of the U. S. film companies, although not completely pessimistic, are definitely concerned and keeping a watchful eye on international conditions and on forthcoming talks between industry reps and several foreign governments.

Cause for the tightening on dollar withdrawal from abroad is twofold. Hefty coin is being poured into huge foreign rearmanent programs, leaving fewer dollars for the film companies to take out. In addition, a surge of nationalism throughout the world has resulted in film quotas and restrictions on playing time for American and other foreign films. This has been especially true of countries which have important film industries.

Restrictions vary from country to country. They take the form of taxes, limitation on playing time, number of films that may be imported, amount of coin that may be withdrawn, etc. There is barely a handful of countries in Latin America which may be considered free markets for American pix. Otherwise there has been a general tightening of the film import provisions throughout the world.

Of immediate concern to the American film industry are the situations in Germany and England. Latter, America's best film customer, has requested a reopening of talks on its film agreement with the U. S. Pact, a two-year deal, allowed either Britain or the U. S. to request a revision at the end of one year. Year expires in

23 Releases For Par During '52

Paramount's feature releases for calendar 1952 probably will total about 23, six less than last year. This represents the first such substantial reduction in releases by a major outfit in the past several years.

Par's aim is to give each new pic on the lineup long-range campaigns and individualized selling treatment. With more time consequently required for each film, it was decided to cut the overall sked.

Also, handling the lesser number of films as they swing into distribution will give the ad-pub department additional time in which to work on pix in production, long before their release.

Among the upcoming releases which Par has set for fullscale buildups are "Greatest Show on Earth," on the regular run in August; "Carrie," "Anything Can Happen," "Son of Paleface," "Somebody Loves Me" and "Savage." Earmarked for special attention, too, is "The Atomic City," Joseph Sistrom production.

In the releasing sked for the balance of the year, as disclosed by distribution topper A. W. Schwal-

Coyne Off on Lectures For Film Industry

Robert W. Coyne, special counsel for the Counsel of Motion Picture Organizations, will be off on a week's lecture tour of Virginia in behalf of the industry next month. Fourteen dates have so far been set up for him.

He'll address Kiwanis, Rotary and community groups. Universal exec Maurice Bergman will make a similar tour in Ohio.

Kipnis Arrives in N.Y. With 'Da Vinci' Pic

Leonid Kipnis, co-producer of "Leonardo Da Vinci," arrives in N. Y. on the Queen Elizabeth Saturday (5) with a print of the film, which was lensed in Italy and France. Film will be edited in Gotham.

Kipnis also co-produced "Pictura," which opens at the Little Carnegie Theatre, N. Y., Monday (7). Herman Starr was associated with Kipnis in the two productions.

Majors Again Ask High Ct. to Act On Par Case 'Wedge'

Washington, April 1.

Once again the majors have asked the Supreme Court to do something about indiscriminate use of the Paramount, et al., antitrust case as a club to win all kinds of treble-damage suits against the big companies.

Just 10 days after their appeal from the Boulevard Drive-in theatre case, the big companies asked the High Court to reverse the $1,125,000 antitrust verdict won by the Brookside Theatre Corp. of Kansas City.

The majors said in effect that the big Paramount case is being twisted and warped by independents to win totally unjustified verdicts and that Federal judges are permitting this abuse to go unchallenged.

The defendant companies—20th, Paramount, Loew's, RKO, Warners, Columbia, Universal and United Artists—pointed out that about 150 more treble-damage suits are now pending in the lower courts "based in part on the conspiracy found in the Paramount case. If the decision in the instant case is not reviewed . . . it will be urged in these other cases that attorneys are entitled to usurp the functions of the court and inform juries in any manner they desire of the determinations of that case."

Brookside Theatre Corp. was formed in July, 1936. In September of that year it obtained a 15-year lease on the Brookside Theatre, a Kansas City nabe house. On Nov. 22, 1937, the lease and equipment were assigned, for $43,300, to a corporation in which Fox had an interest. On June 27, 1949, almost 12 years later, Brookside filed suit for treble damages, claiming the majors forced it to sell out by refusing it pictures. The $1,125,000 verdict, according to the brief of the majors, is based on testimony by Brookside witnesses that theatre profits for all the years the house was in the hands of Fox and its partners came to about $375,000.

42-FILM CAMPAIGN MAPPED AT UA MEET

Sales and ad-pub campaigns for a total of 42 films were taken up by United Artists homeoffice execs and N. Y., Philadelphia and Washington exchange men at the outfits two-lay conclave in N. Y. last week. Lineup consisted of pix now in release, those set for the balance of this year and others in 1953's sked.

Spotlighted at the conclave, over which v.p.'s William Heineman and Max Youngstein presided, was the playoff on "African Queen" and plans for "High Noon." Latter, which Stanley Kramer produced with Gary Cooper in the lead, has an approved ad-pub budget of $300,000, Youngstein said. Same amount was allocated for the "Queen" buildup.

Business policies of Republic Pictures were strenuously attacked by dissidents at the company's annual stockholders meeting held yesterday (Tues.) at the New York homeoffice. High salaries of two of the firm's officers drew shareholder ire as did actress Vera Ralston's association with the studio.

In light of Rep's poor earning record, declared one shareholder, president Herbert J. Yates should cut his annual compensation from $175,000 to $75,000 and general sales manager James R. Grainger voluntarily reduce his $75,000 to $25,000. Grainger immediately retorted that he had been offered more coin elsewhere but the company board had prevailed upon him to remain.

Walter H. Schulman, who represented the brokerage firm of H. Hentz & Co., holders of 200 shares of Rep common, fired a variety of queries at the management in regard to Miss Ralston in an attempt to learn whether her pictures resulted in a profit or loss to the company. Miss Ralston and Yates were married last week.

Schulman specifically asked for an earnings breakdown on each of some 10 films in which he said Miss Ralston appeared since 1945. To this question, Rep accountant Louis Atz replied that it is contrary to the company's policy to disclose income of any one film. Earnings, he added, are all consolidated.

Grainger, who is also executive veepee, presided at the meet in the absence of Yates, who is "unavoidably delayed in California." At this point Schulman asked, "Could it be

Up to 100 Employees Laid Off by Cinecolor; Gets 400G Refinancing

Hollywood, April 1.

Layoff of between 80-100 employees in all departments during the past week was announced by Cinecolor prexy Karl Herzog because of slack period which will prevail in next few months.

Majority of those laid off are expected to be rehired when firm resumes volume printing. Layoffs total some 40% of the entire personnel. Herzog said there had been a letup in commitments, with some producers reluctant to schedule films in Cinecolor during the company's refinancing.

The situation was cleared up by stockholders approving a financing plan which will result in Cinecolor securing at least $400,000 new capital, underwritten by the Donner corp. Herzog stated that Cinecolor's British lab, which had been slowed due to weak financial condition and fact that the three-color operation was delayed due to material shortages, is now in full operation.

Vanguard Ordered To Show Records in Valli Suit

Vanguard Films this week was ordered by N. Y. Federal Judge Samuel H. Kaufman to produce books and records in connection with a breach-of-contract suit brought against it in Federal Court by Savoia Films. Action arises out of an arrangement whereby Savoia relinquished an exclusive management contract with Alida Valli in return for distribution rights in Italy to the first two pictures in which she starred.

Agreement assertedly gave Savoia distrib rights to "The Paradine Case" and "The Miracle of the Bells." But, Savoia claims, Vanguard violated its rights by turning over the Italian territory release to the Selznick Releasing Organization. SRO has been named a party defendant in the suit. Judge Kaufman's order requires Vanguard to permit Savoia's inspection of all papers relating to the 1946 deal.

Mara Maru

Errol Flynn top-lining to give lift and some b.o. possibilities to formula action - adventure melodrama.

Hollywood, April 1.

Warner Bros. release of David Weisbart production. Stars Errol Flynn, Ruth Roman; features Raymond Burr, Paul Picerni, Richard Webb, Dan Seymour, George Renavent, Robert Cabal, Henry Marco. Directed by Gordon Douglas. Screenplay, N. Richard Nash; from story by Philip Yordan, Sidney Harmon, Hollister Noble; camera, Robert Burks; editor, Robert Swanson; music, Max Steiner. Previewed March 25, '52. Running time, 98 MINS.

Mason	Errol Flynn
Stella	Ruth Roman
Benedict	Raymond Burr
Steve Ranier	Paul Picerni
Andy Callahan	Richard Webb
Lt. Zuenon	Dan Seymour
Ortega	George Renavent
Manuelo	Robert Cabal
Perol	Henry Marco
Capt. Van Hoten	Nestor Paiva
Fortuno	Howard Chuman

A deep-sea treasure hunt, with whodunit overtones, has been presented in formula melodrama style. Picture has the Errol Flynn action name to help it through the general market. However, there's nothing in it to impress the more discriminating filmgoer, and it's considerably overlong at 98 minutes.

Footage manages to shake up the required amount of suspense action under Gordon Douglas' direction, but the whole effect of the David Weisbart production is too obviously manufactured to hit any degree of plausibility. It's an outdoor yarn with a feeling of having been lensed indoors on the sound stages; an impression that doesn't help the type story offered.

N. Richard Nash furnished a very talky, involved script to the story by Philip Yordan, Sidney Harmon and Hollister Noble, itself a complicated affair cluttered with shadowy characters and stock situations. Setting is postwar Manila, where Flynn and Richard Webb, the latter unhappily married to Ruth Roman, operate a marine salvage business.

Plot gets underway with Flynn called back from a diving job to get involved in a quarrel with Webb. Later, the latter is found murdered. Flynn is accused but beats the rap and is then approached by Raymond Burr to dive for a $1,000,000 diamond treasure. Flynn, Burr, Miss Roman, Paul Picerni, a slinky private detective, and a couple of other characters take off for the treasure site, Flynn knowing the location because he skippered the PT boat bearing Manila refugees when it was sunk during the war.

Flynn recoups the treasure, diving during a typhoon, finds it is a church cross set with precious jewels. Deciding to keep to all for himself, he wrecks the ship, escapes Burr and flees with Miss Roman through the jungle. Good versus evil gets in its licks when the girl and Flynn's Filipino boat boy try to persuade him to restore the cross to the cathedral from which it was taken. After sufficent battling with himself, the hero does just that.

Flynn wins the most honors among the players, doing the familiar hero character excellently. Miss Roman's character motivations are vague but she's easy to look at. Burr, Picerni and others are stock heavies and Webb has almost no footage. Filipino characters are played by George Renavent, Robert Cabal, Henry Marco and Howard Chuman.

Technical credits on the picture, particularly the photography, don't impress as being up to the highly expert standards found in the usual major production. Brog.

A Yank in Indo-China

Formula war-action melodrama for program houses.

Hollywood, March 28.

Columbia release of Sam Katzman production. Stars John Archer, Douglas Dick; features Jean Willes, Maura Murphy, Hayward Soo Hoo, Don Harvey, Harold Fong, Rory Mallinson, Leonard Penn. Directed by Wallace A. Grissell. Screenplay, Samuel Newman; camera, William Whitley; editor, Aaron Stell. Previewed March 27, '52. Running time, 67 MINS.

Mulvaney	John Archer
Clint Marshall	Douglas Dick
Cleo	Jean Willes
Ellen Philips	Maura Murphy
Jake	Hayward Soo Hoo
Swede Philips	Don Harvey
Captain Sung	Harold Fong
Professor Johnson	Rory Mallinson
Colonel Sabon	Leonard Penn
Major Lao Kay	Kamtsing
Kingston	Pierre Watkin
General Wang	Peter Chang

This Columbia release is developed along formula lines to fill supporting spots in the program situations. It's a war-action melodrama that manufactures a number of synthetic thrills in a routine, not particularly believeable plot, including considerable real combat footage to fill out the 67 minutes.

The Sam Katzman production, scripted by Samuel Newman, is involved with a group of Yanks operating an air freight line in Indo-China. Heroes are John Archer and Douglas Dick, who, after defying a gang of Red Chinese guerrillas led by Harold Fong by blowing up their plane loaded with Red supplies, attempt to lead the two girls involved in the plot, Jean Willes and Maura Murphy, through the jungles to safety.

Story boils along at a fairly satisfactory pace under Wallace A. Grissell's direction, showing the small group captured, escaping, the jungle birth of Miss Murphy's baby, the death of a small Chinese boy, Hayward Soo Hoo, on the trek and then the patriotic, flagswaving return of United Nations forces to wipe out the guerrillas' jungle headquarters. It all falls into the easily recognizable pattern of most such budget productions.

Archer and Dick are properly heroic in the male leads. Neither femme is called upon for much, although Miss Murphy's pregnancy adds an unusual touch to the arduous jungle flight. Others in the cast do what is asked of them with fair results.

Technical support given the production is standard. Prints are in sepia, which helps outdoor footage. Brog.

Encore

"Encore," a British-made film scheduled to open today (Wed.) at the Normandie Theatre, N. Y., was reviewed from London by VARIETY in the issue of Nov. 21, 1951. A trilogy, the picture is based on three Somerset Maugham short stories. Nigel Patrick and Roland Culver, Kay Walsh and Roland Squire, and Glynis Johns are starred in separate episodes.

The J. Arthur Rank-Paramount co-production "should stack up tidy grosses," wrote Myro, "not only in U. S. art houses, but also at popular theatres, providing the booking is made with discrimination." Critic accoladed the acting, direction and scripting of each piece. Paramount, of course, is distributing in the U. S.

Battle at Apache Pass
(COLOR)

Interesting outdoor actioner okay for double bills.

Universal-International release of Leonard Goldstein production. Stars John Lund, Jeff Chandler, Susan Cabot. Directed by George Sherman. Story and screenplay, Gerald Drayson Adams; camera (Technicolor), Charles Boyle; editor, Ted J. Kent; music, Hans J. Salter. Tradeshown in N. Y. March 28, '52. Running time, 85 MINS.

Major Jim Colton	John Lund
Cochise	Jeff Chandler
Mary Kearny	Beverly Tyler
Neil Baylor	Bruce Cowling
Nona	Susan Cabot
Lt. George Bascom	John Hudson
Corp. Hassett	Jimmy Best
Dr. Carter	Regis Toomey
Sgt. Bernard	Richard Egan
Lt. Harley	Hugh O'Brian
Joe Bent	Palmer Lee
Lem Bent	William Reynolds
Geronimo	Jay Silverwheels
Little Elk	Tommy Cook
Mescal Jack	Jack Elam
Culver	Richard Garland
Johnny Ward	Jack Ingraham
Pvt. Bolin	John Baer
Ross	Paul Smith

With more imagination in its theme "The Battle of Apache Pass" could have been turned into a creditable outdoors epic. As it stands, it's a worthwhile companion for dualers, with good draw on the John Lund and Jeff Chandler names.

Film is an interesting exposition of the U. S. Army in New Mexico territory at the start of the Civil War, concerning two factions of the Apaches. There is a sort of peace pact between the troops at Fort Buchanan, commanded by honorable Major Jim Colton (Lund), and Cochise (Chandler), chief of the Chiricahua tribe, a forthright, peace-loving family man. The status quo is upset via the entry upon the scene of an ambitious Indian Affairs advisor who is sent to the territory by the Government and who is in cahoots with Geronimo, wild leader of the Mogollon Apaches. Treachery, murders and irresponsible military orders turn the erstwhile peaceful area into a battleground, but tranquility is restored when the advisor is killed and Geronimo is made an outcast after losing a climactic hand-to-hand fight with Cochise.

"Apache Pass" rates a large "A" for its handling of Indian character and customs. The redmen emerge as human beings instead of in the caricaturistic rigging to which they are usually fated. For instance, Cochise is held up as a splendid model of kindness and tenderness, and the romantic scenes with his pregnant wife, Nona (Susan Cabot), are high points in the unfolding without being excessively sentimental. The hand-to-hand battling for supremacy between the tribes shapes up as authentic Indian-style wrestling and knife-jousts, photographed against sweeping dimensions. Some of the other al fresco scenes are dazzling, all appropriately punctuated by the fine musical score of Hans J. Salter.

Lund turns into a sincere and capable portrayal of the harried commander, but Chandler will rate most of the palms for his Cochise. There is orthodox support by the others, including Miss Cabot, Bruce Cowling, Jay Silverheels, John Hudson, Regis Toomey, Richard Egan, Jack Elam and Beverly Tyler, the latter being dragged in to supply the love interest for Lund.

The technical credits are first-rate, and fine attention has been paid to costume detail. Particularly effective is the gunfire and artillery display in the end-up battle scene. Trau.

Without Warning

Case history of sex-killer; okay for exploitation, otherwise grim supporting pic.

Hollywood, March 28.

United Artists release of Arthur Gardner-Jules Levy production, presented by Sol Lesser. Features Adam Williams, Meg Randall. Directed by Arnold Laven. Story and screenplay, Bill Raynor; camera, Joseph F. Biroc; editor, Arthur H. Nadel; music, Herschel Burke Gilbert. Previewed March 26, '52. Running time, 76 MINS.

Carl Martin	Adam Williams
Jane	Meg Randall
Pete	Edward Binns
Don	Harlan Warde
Fred Saunders	John Maxwell
Blonde	Angela Stevens
Charlie	Byron Kane
Wolf	Charles Tannen
Virginia	Marilee Phelps
Wilson	Robert Foulk
Carmelita	Connie Vera
Psychiatrist	Robert Shayne

The independently-made "Without Warning" gives United Artists a feature that can be ballyhooed to okay grosses in some exploitation houses. Outside this type of booking it is a rather grim supporting feature about sex-killers that can't be recommended for family trade playdates but it will serve fairly satisfactorily for lowercasing in other dual bill spots.

Production was a very modestly-budgeted venture by Arthur Gardner, Jules Levy and Arnold Laven. After filming, Sol Lesser acquired an interest and arranged the UA distribution, giving film a chance at returns it might not have had otherwise. First-venture ingenuity supplies production touches that belie the budget, with Los Angeles street scenes, Hollywood Freeway backgrounds and local law enforcement cooperation helping greatly.

A cast of virtual unknowns goes through the good paces to be found in Bill Raynor's screenplay under Laven's directorial guidance. Some of the action resorts to the obvious on occasion but still remains acceptable enough to get by.

There's a case-history feel to the plot, dealing with a killer who likes to plunge his gardener's shears into comely blondes because his wife, herself a blonde, had left him for another man. When the second blonde victim meets her end in a cheap motel, police begin to suspect they are dealing with a paranoiac, but have no idea of motive or the murder weapon.

Pattern is established when Adam Williams picks up his third victim, Angela Stevens, in a bar, kills her under a freeway bridge and manages to elude two patrolmen. Hard-working cops Edward Binns and Harlan Warde stake out blonde policewomen in bars around town. Trap fails, however, and the killer is finally gunned down just before he can claim Meg Randall as a victim when methodical police work finally identifies Williams as the man sought.

Underplaying makes the work of Williams, Miss Randall, Binns, Warde and others come off satisfactorily, and Joseph F. Biroc has used his cameras effectively. Editing is tight and music score good. Brog.

The Narrow Margin

Cops-and-robbers melodrama for programmer dates. Some excitement but implausible.

Hollywood, April 1.

Walter Brown	Charles McGraw
Mrs. Neil	Marie Windsor
Ann Sinclair	Jacqueline White
Tommy Sinclair	Gordon Gebert
Mrs. Troll	Queenie Leonard
Leonard	David Clarke
Densel	Peter Virgo
Gus Forbes	Don Beddoe
Jennings	Paul Maxey
Train conductor	Harry Harvey

A standard amount of cops-and-robbers melodramatics are stirred up most of the time in "The Narrow Margin" to make it passable for lowercase bookings in the general dual-bill houses. Plot falls apart at the climax, but regulation thriller tricks, tersely played, carry the story along sufficiently for release aims.

Two Los Angeles detectives, Charles McGraw and Don Beddoe, are sent to Chicago to escort the widow of a racketeer to the Coast for testimony before the grand jury. Beddoe is killed and McGraw starts back with Marie Windsor, closely pursued by gangsters who want to obtain a payoff list and keep the widow from testifying. Chase makes for some excitement aboard the train as McGraw keeps outwitting the crooks.

Richard Fleischer's direction realizes on meller aims up to the point it is revealed, after Miss Windsor is killed by the gangsters, that she was a policewoman acting as decoy to test the honesty of McGraw, while Jacqueline White, traveling with her young son and his nursemaid, was the widow being sought. Switch is completely implausible as screened and lessens whatever okay effect the melodramatics had had up to this point.

Trouping is competent, with McGraw showing up excellently in his tight-lipped, terse cop portrayal. Miss Windsor impresses the most among the femmes. Gangster types of David Clarke, Peter Virgo and others are stock.

The Man in the White Suit

"The Man in the White Suit," British import tradeshown in New York last week, was reviewed from London by VARIETY in the issue of Aug. 22, 1951. Myro opined that the Ealing Studios and Alec Guinness have "clicked again."

Reviewer rated the film as a "new comedy winner" which "may make an impression in the U. S. market." Story revolves around a research worker (Guinness), who invents a fabric impervious to wear. Textile industry tries to suppress it but is foiled. Alexander Mackendrick's direction was praised as was the casts's performances. Universal-International is distributing in the U. S.

Hold That Line

So-so entry in Bowery Boys series.

Monogram release of Jerry Thomas production. Stars Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall; features Gil Stratton, Jr., David Gorcey, Bernard Gorcey. Directed by William Beaudine. Screenplay, Charles Marion, Tim Ryan; additional dialog, Bert Lawrence; camera, Marcel Le Picard. At New York Theatre, N. Y., week of March 25, '52. Running time, 67 MINS.

Slip	Leo Gorcey
Sach	Huntz Hall
Whitey	Gil Stratton, Jr.
Chuck	David Gorcey
Butch	Bennie Bartlett
Louie	Bernard Gorcey
Dean	Taylor Holmes
Billingsley	Francis Pierlot
Stanhope	Pierre Watkin
Biff	John Bromfield
Harold	Bob Nichols
Katie	Mona Knox
Penny	Gloria Winters
Candy Calin	Veda Ann Borg
Big Dave	Al Eben

Slapstick and unhibited comedy, which have marked Monogram's Bowery Boys series since its inception, again get a workover in "Hold That Line." Humor is of the obvious type. However, this entry will qualify as supporting fare for the duals where exhibs are seeking something with a light touch to balance off heavy drama.

At the behest of two alumni, the Bowery Boys (Leo, Gorcey, Huntz Hall et al.) enroll as students in an Ivy League college. Old grads are testing a theory that they can transform uncouth boys into shining examples of culture.

Their registration results in a flock of awkward incidents, most of which aren't too rib-tickling. For a finale, scripters Charles Marion and Tim Ryan have the lads outfox the gambling element in a football game. In fact, the football sequences get such a buildup in the latter half of the film that it would seem that release of the picture would have been more timely in the fall than in the early spring. Title, too, has more of an autumn aroma than a spring connotation.

Monogram has a good series in the Bowery Boys. However, each entry is only as good as its material, and future releases will have to come up with fresher situations and funmaking if they're to retain their following. Leo Gorcey, Hall and their cohorts do the best they can for fair results.

Direction of William Beaudine was adequate on the action scenes but slow on the comedy portions. Marcel Le Picard's lensing is competent, and other technical credits are okay, along with Jerry Thomas' production values. Gilb.

Stage to Blue River

Routine western in Whip Wilson series.

Monogram release of Vincent M. Fennelly production. Stars Whip Wilson; features Fuzzy Knight. Directed by Lewis Collins. Screenplay, Joseph F. Poland; camera, Ernest Miller; editor, Sam Fields; musical director, Raoul Kraushaar. At New York Theatre, N. Y., week of March 25, '52. Running time, 56 MINS.

Whip	Whip Wilson
Texas	Fuzzy Knight
Ted	Lee Roberts
Joyce	Phyllis Coates
Kingsley	John Hart
Reardon	Lane Bradford
Preston	Pierce Lyden
Yarrow	Terry Frost
Westbrook	Stanford Jolley
Perkins	William Fawcett
Martin	Stanley Price
Clark	Steve Clark

"Stage to Blue River," latest Whip Wilson starrer for Monogram release, adds up to a routine western for the action market. Story is trite, acting is so-so but there are enough fisticuffs and hard riding to satisfy the average oater devotee.

Screenplayed by Joseph F. Poland, yarn is a variation of the old formula where the villain poses as a law-abiding citizen. In this version sheriff Pierce Lyden is the outlaws' chief. He's the "mysterious" boss who plots to take over Phyllis Coates' stageline. Fortunately for her, Wilson, a U.S. marshal, comes to her aid with the help of Fuzzy Knight and Lee Roberts.

Wilson is his usual sterling self, whether he's leading with a hard right or cracking his blacksnake whip. Knight and Roberts are sufficiently stalwart in routing the badmen, while Miss Coates lends a bit of pulchritude. Other players contrib standard support.

Ernest Miller's camerawork is okay in this Vincent M. Fennelly production. Mantling and backgrounds are in keeping with its modest budget. Gilb.

Faithful City
(ISRAELI—IN ENGLISH)

Dramatic story of rehabilitation of war-orphaned children. English-language film from Israel has b.o. potential.

RKO release of Moledeth (M. Yona Friedman) presentation. Features Jamie Smith, Didi Ramati, Dina Peskin, Ben Josef, John Slater, Rachel Markus. Directed by Josef Leytes. Camera, G. Gibbs; editor, J. D. Guthridge; music, Eduard Ben Michael. Previewed in New York, March 14, '52. Running time, 86 MINS.

Anna	Dina Peskin
Tamar	Didi Ramati
Max	Israel Hanin
Joan	Juda Levi
Willy	Amnon Lifshitz

The attempt to rehabilitate a group of orphans from war-ravaged Europe at a children's center in Israel is dramatically and feelingly portrayed in this English-language import. Because of the pic's locale, it will have great appeal for the Jewish market, but the film also can be sold to other groups, since the theme is universal. Pic has no religious aspects, but concentrates on the tremendous task and responsibility of a group of adults to accustom the children to a mode of normal living which they have never experienced.

Job of adjusting these frightened, emotionally-disturbed youngsters is further complicated by another war—the Arab-Israel conflict. Kids, whose childhood consisted of concentration camps, bombings, war and occupation by various armies, arrive in Israel as the height of the Arab-Israel bitterness prior to the outbreak of the war.

First and most difficult job of those charged with the care of the kids is to remove the feeling of fear and distrust of all grownups, a problem that causes a serious difference of opinion among the "counselors."

There's Ezra, a Viennese refugee who has experienced the horrors of concentration camps. He will not permit sternness or threats, and insists on letting the youngsters do whatever they please. This technique is at variance with the views of Sam, an American whose only former contact with children was as a counselor at an upper New York State camp. Sam believes a degree of discipline is necessary in order to avoid complete chaos. Tamar, a femme helper-teacher, sides with Ezra.

Kids, whose ages are from about nine to 14, are a conglomerate group, stemming from different war-torn countries and different backgrounds. The only thing they have in common is their relig-

British Pic Producers Get New Snag As Govt. Orders Higher Loan Rates

London, March 25.

Finance has always been a difficult problem for British film producers, and now, as a result of the government decision to raise the bank rate, those who have borrowing facilities will have to pay substantially more in interest. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, R. A. Butler, underlined his decision in a House of Commons speech in which he dilated on the "evils of cheap money."

To British producers, however, who for many years have been struggling to survive in a shrinking market, cheap money has been a must factor in keeping production costs down. Excessive interest rates must be reflected in the overall budget and with the general rise in overhead and labor costs, every penny counts. This was recognized when the Film Finance Corp. was set up to provide film makers with coin at economic rates. Normal interest charges varied between 4% and 4½%, depending on the nature of the risk and the collateral offered.

The success which has met the industry's efforts to keep production costs down to economic standards rated applause from the Board of Trade prez, Peter Thorneycroft, when speaking in a recent Commons debate on the film industry. But at the same time the government, in making available extra reserves for the NFFC, has decreed that these should be obtained from normal financial circles and redistributed to needy producers.

At that time, banks normally charged 5%, and if the NFFC borrowed at that rate, they would have to charge producers 5½% to meet overhead and administrative costs. Banks are now expected to charge

'Lavender' in Middle

Bids from circuits for "Lavender Hill Mob," the J. Arthur Rank production, is causing concern among second-run art house exhibs who usually get Rank product following the preem runs. Exhibs feel that they were always courted to take Rank product, and now when an unusual b.o. click is available, there's a chance that it might be sold away.

Universal, distrib of Rank's films, is in a tough spot and trying to work out deals to satisfy all concerned.

Low-Priced Pix Paying Off In U.S. for Rank

With the J. Arthur Rank Organization stepping up its production activity, the British film company has apparently come close to a formula that is rolling up comfortable if not sensational profits both in the English and U. S. markets.

Rank had virtually ceased production after substantial financial setbacks on a large number of heavily budgeted pix. New formula calls for low-priced product, mainly well under $500,000 per film, which can at least reach the break-even level in British market returns alone. Income from the world market goes on the slate as net profit.

By playing almost the total number of U. S. art houses, a Rank picture can gross between $600,000 and $700,000. Opening wedge in the new pattern was made by "Tight Little Island" and followed by such pix as "Passport to Pimlico" and "Kind Hearts and Coronets."

Although the "modest" pix have achieved hit status among specialized audiences, Rank has not completely abandoned the "biggies," but may turn out one every two or three years. In production at the Rank studio is "The Importance of Being Earnest," Technicolor version of the Oscar Wilde classic. Latter may be accorded the same treatment as "Hamlet," being distributed initially on a roadshow basis. Recently completed is "Ivory Hunter," known in England as "Where No Vultures Fly."

More in keeping with the so-called formula are five new pix which will be ready for American distribution shortly. These include "The Card," based on Arnold Bennett's story and starring Alec Guinness; "I Believe in You," starring Cecil Parker and Celia Johnson; "His Excellency," starring Eric Portman, Cecil Parker and Helen Cherry; "Secret People," with Valentina Cortesa and Serge Reggiani and featuring Audrey Hepburn, and "Wanted," suspense yarn by British screenwriter Jack Whittingham.

Chicago Foldos Did Badly 'Long Before TV Supplied Crusher'

Widely publicized closing of theatres in Chicago, with television prominently regarded as the heavy, is given a new twist in a survey conducted by Sindlinger & Co., market analysis outfit of Ridley Park, Pa. Company offers an assortment of facts and figures purporting to show that the houses which folded were for the most part doubtful financial operations since 1948, and "TV was only the straw that broke their backs."

Last month, various newspapers across the country quoted Chi City Tax Collector William T. Prendergast as saying 91 houses in the area went out of business in 1951, representing 25% of the total. TV was blamed by his agents, who had surveyed the field, said Prendergast. Earlier closings were 25 in 1950, 51 in 1949 and six in 1948, he added.

Sindlinger, in examining the inside on Chi theatre operations, relates that 103 houses in 1948 were averaging about $700 weekly gross. In the same year only 298 of the then 410 theatres in Chi had a drawing potential wide enough to warrant advertising in local papers. In view of the low grossing power, states Sindlinger, "there was little (revenue) to provide service, surroundings and product to even meet the competition of other theatres, let alone the convenience of TV."

Analysis further showed, it was reported, that "actually 103 Chicago theatres were really "out of business in '48, before TV." Conclusions were accompanied by graphs showing the rise of TV receiver ownership in relationship to b.o. decline over the 1948-'51 period.

Sindlinger's topper is that "our analysis of the Chicago closed theatres is that most of them either wore out, decayed, were improperly managed, were located in changing neighborhoods, or economically had no right to operate for many years.

Plans to Make Spy Yarn in Stockholm

Alexander Klein, a short subject producer who turned out a number of films for the U. S. Army and Air Force, has acquired the rights to an espionage yarn and plans to roll the venture in Stockholm this summer. Picture would be his first full-length feature.

Financing is already pledged. Klein declared in New York last week, although investors' final approval depends upon their acceptance of stars and director. No talent as yet has been set. Script reportedly is the "true story" of an American oil salesman who helped pinpoint Allied bombing of Germany in World War II.

NABE CHANGES CAUSE OF MOST

Sampling of various exchange territories by VARIETY indicates that bad biz, per se, has been responsible for very few of the theatre shutterings of the past five years. Most frequent reason for darkenings appears to be a basic change in the economic and social aspects of the neighborhoods in which the closed theatres are located.

That ties up with the general trend to the suburbs in American cities. And it makes clear how overdone is the lay press' oft-painted picture of myriads of houses closing. For while a flock have doused their glims for good, the suburbs have seen the building of plenty of new conventional and drive-in theatres.

The VARIETY survey as yet hasn't covered a sufficient number of exchanges to indicate whether the net number of theatres is up or down from five years ago. There are undoubtedly fewer indoor houses operating fulltime than there were, particularly since building restrictions have prevented erection of new ones since the Korean war started. Big question, however, is whether the ozoners opened since 1947 outweigh the number of roofed-over houses that have given up.

No Authoritative Check

Peculiarly, no one knows the answer. There has been no recent authoritative national survey. The Council of Motion Picture Organizations has been publicizing that there are 23,000 houses now as

Mono's 235G Net For Last Half '51

Hollywood, April 1.

Monogram this week reported net profit of $235,582 for the 26 weeks ended last Dec. 29. This compares with earnings of $163,312 for the corresponding period in the previous year.

Gross income amounted to $4,330,861, up from $3,937,810 in the 1950 period.

Monogram prez Steve Broidy, paying tribute to the nation's exhibs, urged this week that a format developed through years of fair dealing with both exhibs and distribs be continued. "It has taken years to establish the fine friendship now existing between exhibitors and Monogram," he said, "and without their help we wouldn't be in business today."

Broidy disavowed recent press reports that he was considering an appeal to the Department of Justice to stave off a threatened boycott of company product. "Statement attributed to me," he declared, "was utterly erroneous." Exec added that he always felt that Mono was an "exhibitors' company" and opined that problems could be adjusted "without recourse to litigation."

'5,000 Fingers' Tinkle 24 Tunes for Kramer

Hollywood, April 1.

Stanley Kramer's "The 5,000 Fingers of Dr. T," a film wrapped around a piano, will be enlivened by 24 tunes, both vocal and instrumental, by Frederick Hollander and Ted Geisel.

Vocal numbers are "The Money Song," "I Will Not Get Involved," "Grindstone," "Freckles on a Pigmy," "Many Questions Have No Answers," "You Opened My Eyes," "Get Together Weather," "Dream Stuff," "The Dressing Song," "Do Re Me," "Hypnotic Chant," "Massage Opera," "The Hypnotic Duel," "Ten Happy Fingers," "The Happy Fingers Fugue," "Roller Skating Waltz," "Victory Procession," "Dungeon Elevator" and "Chopsticks Fantasy."

Irony

Hollywood, April 1.

Last month, radio producer-director Hal Gerard packaged three one-acters and presented them at Las Palmas Theatre as a showcase for the acting talents of his wife, GeGe Pearson. The venture cost him around $13,000.

To date, three members of the supporting cast have won film roles and Gerard won a test at Warners. And although Miss Pearson has had no offers, even Wilson Millar—who took the publicity stills for the legit production—has been set for a film role.

SWG Ignores Hughes Dare To Call Strike

Hollywood, April 1.

Screen Writers Guild declined Howard Hughes' invitation to call a strike against RKO in the studio's screen credit dispute with Paul Jarrico, at the same time accusing Hughes of violating his signed contract with the Guild. Row stems from RKO's removal of his writing credit from "Las Vegas Story."

Meanwhile, Jarrico filed a $350,000 damage suit against RKO and disputed the studio's right to use the "morals clause" in discharging him after he refused to answer questions asked by the House un-American Activities Committee about his Communist connections.

He declared that Hughes himself showed "defiance" and that he uttered "sharp and severe criticism during the hearings before a special U. S. Senate committee investigating the national defense program in 1947."

Jarrico's suit asks $100,000, plus $250,000 punitive damages, and petitions the court to decree that he "has not violated the morals clause" of his contract with RKO. It also states that RKO did not ap-

See Leisen Replacing Negulesco for 'Tonight'

Hollywood, April 1.

Jean Negulesco was withdrawn as director of "Tonight We Sing" at 20th-Fox to prepare another picture for early lensing. Understood he will be replaced by Mitchell Leisen.

David Wayne was picked to play the role of Sol Hurok in the George Jessel production. Previously signed were Ezio Pinza, Roberta Peters and Tamara Toumanova.

Art Director Jobs Up

Hollywood, April 1.

Average number of art directors on active assignments has been upped in the last nine months the Society of Motion Picture Art Directors' Robert M. Haas has reported.

Television, plus demand for higher-quality production in regular film field, are sharing credit. Currently there are 144 art directors on active assignment, 94 with majors, 29 in indies, 18 in live television.

TOA Names Starr

Alfred Starr, Nashville circuit operator, has been named chairman of the tax committee appointed by Theatre Owners of America, succeeding Morton Thalhimer, Richmond exhib.

Thalhimer bowed out as committee head. He's on a tour of Europe, and will be away from his office for several months.

Action-type pix, westerns and corny comedies are paying off handsomely at the b.o. for Universal. Company has completed the first quarter of its new fiscal year with hefty gross business of $13,427,000, a gain of about $700,000 over the corresponding period of 1951.

U, which had been in a serious financial rut in mid-1948, is now well underway with an impressive comeback via its down-to-earth product, as against costly heavyweight dramatics or other serious fare. Company paid a common stock dividend of 60c last year, its first to stockholders since '48, and some Wall St. observers anticipate a divvy of up to $1 in the current year. This reflects the upbeat nature of U's finances.

Company's product consists of what domestic sales chief Charles Feldman and other execs term "Boxoffice A's." The films mainly are medium-budgeters but a number of them are drawing "A" money at the b.o. "Ma and Pa Kettle at the Fair," which is the fourth in the series, is expected to do about $2,000,000 in domestic distribution revenue. "Comanche Territory" and "Tomahawk" both are close to the same figure. "Apache Drums" will bring about $1,000,000. U's ambitious outdoor epic, "Bend of the River," is seen snaring $3,000,000.

When on the brink of financial collapse, U cut its lensing budgets drastically. Its only solution for the problems inherent in the changed market condition was inexpensive product that promised a fair return at the boxoffice. This gave birth to the "Kettle" and "Francis" se-

Avge. $1,260,000 Cost For 33 20th-Fox Pix During Current Yr.

Twentieth-Fox's studio-produced films in 1952 will be brought in at an average negative cost of $1,260,000. Total of 33 productions are on the sked at a combined cost of $41,580,000.

Reflecting the studio economies affected over the past few years, the figures compare with an average per-pic budget of $1,370,000 in 1951 and $1,634,000 in 1950. Total of 33 also was on the sked for last year and 28 were listed for '50.

In a quarterly letter sent to stockholders this week, Spyros P. Skouras, president, disclosed that 20th's film operations accounted for a net profit of $2,123,000 last year and theatres brought earnings of $2,180,000 for the previously reported total of $4,308,431. Net in 1950 was $9,553,260.

Film rentals for the new year amounted to $60,318,000 in the U. S. and Canada and $32,171,000 in foreign territories for a total of $92,489,000. Total was up from the previous year's $90,841,764.

In the breakdown for 1950, domestic rentals reached $59,450,000 and foreign amounted to $31,392,000.

Corporation's '51 profit equalled $1.47 per common share, compared with $3.26 in '50. The '50 profit of $9,553,260 included $2,262,988 as income for prior years from countries with currency restrictions and a net gain of $1,183,985 in theatre sales under 20th's divestiture program.

National's Ad Campaign

Los Angeles, April 1.

Divorcement of National Theatres from 20th-Fox, effective June 29, will be accompanied by a nation-wide advertising campaign under supervision of Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., prexy of Fox Intermountain.

Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox chief, in his farewell address to the circuit's directors, recalled the days when he and his brother joined National Theatres. At that time, he said, the chain was bankrupt and losing $150,000 a week.

Los Angeles, April 1.

Holdovers are dominating the city this week, with overall biz mild. "Greatest Show on Earth" is grabbing the best total with solid $22,500 in sixth week in two theatres.

Of the three new entries, "Scandal Sheet" and "First Time," loom best with modest $21,000 in two houses. But "Snow White," back on reissue, shapes hefty $18,000 in two spots.

"African Queen" is holding with another smart $11,200 for 14th session at the Wilshire.

Strand (Silverman) (2,200; 90-$1.25)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (3d wk). Began Monday (31). Second round was socko $10,000.

'Want You' Fair 10G, Indpls.; 'Queen' 11G, 2d

Indianapolis, April 1.

The first touch of spring plus opening of drive-ins has slowed biz to a walk at most first-runs here this stanza. "African Queen," in second week at Loew's, still looks like lader, at stout figure. "I Want You," at Circle, and "Bugles in Afternoon" at Indiana, are so-so.

Estimates for This Week

Circle (Cockrill-Dolle) (2,800; 50-76)—"I Want You" (RKO) and "Pace That Thrills" (RKO). Fair $10,000. Last week, "Streetcar" (WB) and "Wings of Danger" (Lip). Modest $9,000 at popscale.

Indiana (C-D) (3,200; 50-76)—"Bugles in Afternoon" (WB) and "Jim in Forbidden Land" (Col). Mild $9,500. Last week, "Aaron Slick From Punkin Creek" (Par) and "Smith Meets Scotland Yard" (RKO), $10,000.

Loew's (Loew's) (2,427; 50-76)—"African Queen" (UA) and "Magic Carpet" (Col) (2d wk). Stout $11,000 on top of extra good $13,500 opener.

Lyric (C-D) (1,600; 50-76)—"Aladdin and Lamp" (Mono) and "Konga, Wild Stallion" (Col). Dull $3,000. Last week, "Return of Texan" (20th) and "Last Musketeer" (Rep), $4,000.

'TEMBO' LUSH $15,000, DET.; 'BUGLES' DIM 10G

Detroit, April 1.

The tempo is down this week with only one newcomer, "Tembo" at Palms, doing well. "Bugles in Afternoon" shapes very flat at the Michigan. "Something to Live For" is disappointing at United Artists. "Greatest Show" at Madison and "Quo Vadis" at the Adams continue strong in sixth and fifth weeks respectively.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Fox-Detroit) (5,000; 70-95)—"5 Fingers" (20th) and "St. Benny the Dip" (UA) (2d wk). Weak $14,000. Last week, $22,000.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,000; 70-95)—"Bugles in Afternoon" (WB) and "Mr. Lord Says 'No'" (Lip). Poor $10,000. Last week, "Bend of River" (U) and "Hong Kong" (Par), nice $14,000 in second week.

Palms (UD) (2,900; 70-95)—"Tembo" (RKO) and "Pace Thrills" (Mono). Fine $15,000. Last week, "Scandal Sheet" (Col) and "Yank in Indo-China" (RKO), $12,000.

Madison (UD) (1,900; 90-$1.25)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (6th wk). Strong $14,000. Last week, $15,000.

United Artists (UA (1,900; 70-95)—"Something To Live For" (Par) and "Fort Osage" (Mono). Unexciting $10,000. Last week, "Danny Wilson" (U) and "Kettles at Fair" (U), $7,500.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 90-$1.25)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (5th wk). Stout $15,000. Last week, $16,000.

'Show' Standout In Pitt., Wow 30G

Pittsburgh, April 1.

"Greatest Show on Earth" is hogging almost everything in town at the Penn this week although couple of nearby pix, "Five Fingers" at Fulton and "My Six Convicts" at Harris, are getting an assist from the overflow. However, "Aaron Slick of Punkin Crick" is getting no place at the Stanley.

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Shea) (1,700; 50-85) — "5 Fingers" (20th). Weekend was very good, and notices and word-of-mouth should land a nice $8,000. May hold. Last week, "Bend of River" (U) (2d wk-10 days), fast $8,500.

Harris (Harris) (2,200; 50-85) — "My Six Convicts" (Col). Like the Fulton, Harris, too, is getting weekend break on overflow from nearby Penn. Good $7,500. Last week, "Steel Town" (U), helped by good campaign and auto giveaway to same figure.

Penn (Loew's) (3,300; 50-$1.25)—"Greatest Show" (Par). Terrific $30,000 or over. It has all of the earmarks of a run. Last week, "Love Is Better Than Ever" (M-G), $8,000 in 6 days.

Squirrel Hill (WB) (900; 50-85)—"Mr. Lord Says No" (Indie). First time since nabe house went to art policy more than three months ago that house has gone into red. Lean $1,700 looms. Last week, "So Long At Fair" (UA) (3d wk-5 days), $1,800.

Stanley (WB) (3,800; 50-85) — "Aaron Slick From Punkin Crick" (Par). Title is figured as against this one. Looks mighty grim at $7,500 or near. Last week, "Streetcar" (WB), at popular prices was disappointing at $8,500.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 50-85) — "Flaming Feather" (Par). Western action pic shapes okay at $7,500. Last week, "Snow White" (RKO) (reissue) (3d wk), $5,600.

L'ville Loaded Up With H.O.s; 'Show' Solid 13G, 3d, 'Queen' Big 12G, 2d

Louisville, April 1.

Four of town's five first-runs are in holdover this week. Rialto moving into third stanza with "Greatest Show" and State is holding "African Queen" for second week, both big-seaters doing smash trade. "Ma, Pa Kettle at Fair," also in second at Strand, looks sturdy. "Red Skies of Montana," lone newcomer, shapes mild at the Kentucky.

Estimates for This Week

Kentucky (Switow) (1,100; 54-75)—"Red Skies Montana" (20th) and "First Legion" (UA). Mild $4,000 likely. Last week, "Viva Zapata!" (20th), $6,500.

Mary Anderson (People's) (1,200; 54-75) — "Streetcar" (WB) (11 days). Good $9,000 for popscale engagement.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (1,200; 75-99) — "Greatest Show" (Par) (3d wk). Still doing biz with solid $13,000 after last week's sturdy $18,000.

State (Loew's) (3,000; 45-65) — "African Queen" (UA) and "Man With Cloak" (M-G) (2d wk). One of the front runners. Socko $12,000. Last week, $14,000.

Strand (FA) (1,200; 54-75)—"Ma, Pa Kettle at Fair" (U) and "Hold Line" (U) (2d wk). Still okay at $4,000 after last week's big $6,000.

Cincy Strong; 'Snow White' Fancy $13,000, 'Hoodlum' Hep 8G, 'David' 7G

Cincinnati, April 1.

All major stands are sporting sturdy product currently. Perennial "Snow White" at Palace is brightest coiner among new pix. "Hoodlum Empire," the only new bill, is solid at Grand. "Quo Vadis," topping town for fourth straight week, is doing a smart swan song at big Albee. "David and Bathsheba," back at popscale, has the Capitol in winning stride. "Viva Zapata!" looks fancy on holdover at Keith's.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; 90-$1.25)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (4th wk). Nine days. Smart $15,000 to finish engagement following sturdy $18,000 last week.

Capitol (Mid-States) (2,000; 55-75)—"David and Bathsheba" (20th). Okay $7,000 on popscale date. Last week, "Something to Live For" (Par), about same.

Grand (RKO) (1,400; 55-75)—"Hoodlum Empire" (Rep) and "Young Scarface" (Indie). Lofty $8,000. Last week, "Streetcar" (WB), fast $10,000.

Keith's (Mid-States) (1,542; 55-75)—"Viva Zapata!" (20th) (2d wk). All right $7,000 trailing big $10,000 preem.

Lyric (RKO) (1,400; 55-75)—"Okinawa" (Col), 2 days, and "Streetcar" (WB), 5 days (m.o.s). Oke $4,500. Last week, "American in Paris" (M-G, $4,000.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 55-75)—"Snow White" (RKO) (reissue). Rousing $13,000. Last week, "Okinawa" (Col), $9,500.

Basketball Title Tilt Bops K.C. Biz; 'Streetcar' $8,000, 'Queen' Hot 10G, 2d

Kansas City, April 1.

Town is about average with screens divided between newcomers and holdovers. "Viva Zapata!" in four first-runs is doing average trade. Paramount is only fairly good with "Streetcar Named Desire." "African Queen" is holding nifty in second Midland week. Olympic basketball with Kansas University in key game at the Municipal Auditorium was powerful competition Saturday night since the ball was sold out and WDAF-TV also picked up game. Weather is seasonally favorable for theatres.

Estimates for This Week

Esquire (Fox Midwest) (820; 50-75)—"Lost Continent" (Lip) and "Unknown World" (Lip) (2d wk). So-so, $1,000 in 4 days. Last week, $2,500.

Kimo (Dickinson) (504; 75-99) — "La Marie Du Port" (Indie). Medium $1,500. Last week, "Eye Witness" (Indie) and "Kind Hearts, Coronets" (Indie) (2d wk), $1,200.

Midland (Loew's) (3,500; 50-69)—"African Queen" (UA) and "Big Night" (UA) (2d wk). Nifty $10,000. Last week, fat $17,000, opening being day after Academy Awards.

Missouri (RKO) (2,650; 50-75)—"Big Trees" (WB) and "Pardon My French" (UA). Fair $6,000. Last week, "Snow White" (RKO) (reissue), satisfactory $6,500 for third time at first-run in town.

Paramount (Tri-States) (1,900; 50-69)—"Streetcar" (WB) first time at regular prices, topping average at $8,000. Last week "Greatest Show" (Par) (4th wk), with $1.24 got hefty $13,000 in 10 days.

Tower, Uptown, Fairway, Granada (Fox Midwest) (2,100, 2,043, 700, 1,217; 50-75)—"Viva Zapata!" (20th). Moderate $13,000. Last week, "Red Skies Montana" (20th) and "Never Forget You" (20th), same.

Vogue (Golden) (550; 75-85) — "The Titan" (Indie) (2d wk). Oke $1,500. Last week, $1,700.

'Show' Sockeroo $22,000, St. Loo

St. Louis, April 1.

Even with an upped scale "Greatest Show on Earth" is proving a smash boxoffice draw here over the weekend when the first spring temperatures melted biz considerably. It will be way ahead of field at the Missouri for greatest trade there in months. "Aaron Slick" is rated only fair at the Ambassador. "Death of Salesman" looms fairly good at Loew's.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (F&M) (3,000; 60-75)—"Aaron Slick from Punkin Crick" (Par) and "Flaming Feather" (Par). Fair $12,000. Last week, "David and Bathsheba" (Par) and "Phone Call" (20th) (2d wk). $9,000.

Pageant (St. L. Amus.) (1,000; 75-90)—"Rashomon" (RKO) (3d wk). Good $3,000 after $4,000 second session.

Shady Oak (St. L. Amus.) (800; 75-90)—"Rashomon) (RKO) (3d wk). Nice $4,000 following $4,500 second stanza.

Spring Sloughing Frisco; 'Kettles' Rugged $12,000, 'Queen' Torrid 15G, 4th

San Francisco, April 1.

Spring weather is lowering the film theatre grosses here this session. Best showing is being made by "African Queen" although in the fourth week at the United Artists. It continues sock, very close to third week's figure. Of newcomers, "Ma, Pa Kettle at Fair" is doing fairly well at Orpheum while "Sellout" looms okay at Paramount.

Estimates for This Week

Golden Gate (RKO) (2,850; 65-95)—"The Mummy" (Indie) and "Mummy's Curse" (Indie) (reissues). Oke $9,500 in 5 days. Last week. "Rancho Notorious" (RKO), $8,500.

Fox (FWC) (4,651; 65-95)—"Viva Zapata!" (20th) and "Hold Line" (Mono) (2d wk). Way off to $10,500. Last week, strong $22,000.

Johnnie Ray Teenagers Lift 'Bride,' Wham 35G, D.C.; 'Show' $17,000, 3d

Washington, April 1.

The shrieks of teenagers jamming Loew's Capitol to hear their latest singing fave, Johnnie Ray, are creating by far the biggest excitement along the main stem this session. Other than this big Loew house, where the film, "Japanese War Bride" is of secondary importance, it is a quiet week, with holdovers predominant. However, "Greatest Show on Earth," in third stanza at Warner, is holding well. "African Queen" in second movover week at Loew's Columbia, is still enjoying spurt given it by the Bogart Oscar. "Green Glove," at Ontario, is solid.

Estimates for This Week

Capitol (Loew's) (3,434; 55-95)—"Japanese War Bride" (20th) plus vaude headed by Johnnie Ray. Sensational $35,000, best since summer stint of Les Paul & Mary Ford. Last week, "Love Better Than Ever" (M-G) plus vaude, $16,000.

Columbia (Loew's) (1,174; 50-80)—"African Queen" (UA) (m.o.) (2d wk. Sock $7,500 in a house generally averaging $5,000. Last week, wow $12,000, way above hopes.

Dupont (Lopert) (372; 50-85)—"Rashomon" (RKO) (2d run). So-so $3,500. Last wek. "Simple Case of Money" (Indie, $2,500.

Keith's (RKO) (1,939; 50-85)—"Rancho Notorious" (RKO). Fair $9,000. Last week, "Flesh and Fury" (U), $10,000.

Metropolitan (Warner) (1,200; 50-80)—"Sea Hornet" (Rep). Slow $4,000. Last week, "Tembo" (RKO), $5,000.

Ontario (K-B) (1,404; 44-74)—"Green Gloves" (UA). Firm $7,500, and holds. Last week, "Salesman" (Col) (3d wk), $3,000.

Palace (Loew's) (2,370; 50-80)—"Sailor Beware" (Par) (2d wk). Pleasant $16,000 after solid $22,000 opener.

Playhouse (Lopert (485; 55-$1)—"Five Fingers" (20th) (5th wk). Steady $5,500 after $6,500 last week. Holds.

Warner (WB) (2,174; 90-$1.25)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (3d wk). Holding its own with $17,000 after $21,000 last week.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (654; 50-85)—"The Sniper" (Col) (3d wk). So-so $4,000 after $5,000 last week. Holds again.

H.O.s Help Dull Chi; 'Trees' Light $11,000, 'Model' Lively 13G, 'Queen' Sock at 20G, 6th, 'Vadis' 27G, 7th

Chicago, April 1.

There is nothing much on Loop horizon that is going to overcome the Lenten doldrums currently. Best grosser looks to be sockeroo holdover of "African Queen" at Woods, now in sixth week, with $20,000. Also holding well is "Quo Vadis" at Oriental, in seventh frame, with smash $27,000.

All the new pix are on minor side with "Model and Marriage Broker" at Grand appearing the best with $13,000. "Big Trees" at United Artists is light $11,000. "Hong Kong" and "On Dangerous Ground" at Roosevelt seems safe, looks like $12,000. Chicago with "Wild North" and stageshow might eke out light $35,000.

State-Lake with "Girl in Every Port" and "Sword's Point" looms murky in second frame. "Rashomon" at Ziegfeld, now in fourth stint, is sliding.

Estimates for This Week

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 55-98)—"Wild North" (M-G) with vaude. Looks very light $35,000. Last week, "Woman is Dangerous" (WB) and stageshow, $26,000.

Grand (RKO) (1,500; 55-98)—"Model and Marriage Broker" (20th). Fairly good $13,000. Last week, "Phone Call Stranger" (20th) (2d wk), $7,800.

Oriental (Indie) (3,400; 98-$1.25)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (7th wk). Doing remarkably big at $27,000. Last week, $28,000.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 55-98)—"Hong Kong" (Par) and "Dangerous Ground" (RKO). Oke $12,000 or less. Last week, "Bugles in Afternoon" (WB) and "Sellout" (M-G) (2d wk), $9,000.

State-Lake (B&K) (2,700; 55-98)—"Girl in Every Port" (RKO) and "Sword's Point" (RKO) (2d wk). Minor $8,000. Last week, $15,000.

United Artists (B&K) (1,700; 55-98)—"Big Trees" (WB) and "Captain Blood" (WB) (reissue). NSG $11,000. Last week, "Streetcar" (WB), $12,000 for popscale run.

Woods (Essaness) (1,073; 98)—"African Queen" (UA) (6th wk). Staunch $20,000 for Bogart starrer. Last week, $21,000.

World (Indie) (587; 80)—"St. Matthew Passion" (Indie) (2d wk). Likely to hold to first week's fine $4,000.

Ziegfeld (Lopert) (480; 98)—"Rashomon" (RKO) (4th wk). Falling off to mere $2,800. Last week, $4,000.

Toronto, April 1.

"Retreat, Hell!" and "High Treason" are leading newcomers here this week but "Greatest Show on Earth" is still topping the field with record-breaking returns. "5 Fingers" and "Room for One More" also are rated big. "Streetcar Named Desire" looms nice on second frame at popscale.

Estimates for This Week

Crest, Downtown, Glendale, Mayfair, Scarboro, State (Taylor) (863; 1,059; 955; 470; 698; 694; 35-60)—"Retreat, Hell!" (WB) and "Lady Says No" (UA). Very big $16,500. Last week, "Here Come Nelsons" (U) and "Pygmy Island" (Col), $10,000.

Imperial (FP) (3,373; 75-$1.15)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (3d wk). Smash $30,000. Last week, $32,500.

Loew's (Loew) (2,743; 90-$1.50)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (7th wk). Holding nicely at $12,000. Last week, $13,500.

Nortown, University (FP) (959; 1,558; 40-80)—"Room for One More" (WB) (3d wk). Fine $15,000. Last week, $16,000.

Odeon (Rank) (2,390; 50-90)—"High Treason" (U). Neat $12,000. Last week, "Flesh and Fury" (U), $8,000.

Shea's (FP) (2,386; 40-80)—"Streetcar" (WB) (2d wk). At popscale, good $13,000. Last week, $15,000.

Uptown (Loew) (2,743; 40-80)—"Steel Town" (U). Sad $5,000. Last week, "Invitation" (M-G), $5,500.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i. e., without the 20% tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include the U. S. amusement tax.

'Retreat' Socko $27,000, Denver

Denver, April 1.

"Retreat, Hell!" is copping the high money here this round playing at Denver and Esquire. "Greatest Show on Earth" is doing so well in fifth stanza that it will go a sixth at Denham. Nice weather does not appear to be hurting biz. "Streetcar" is holding well in three locations.

Estimates for This Week

Aladdin (Fox) (1,400; 40-85)—"Streetcar" (WB) and "In a Padded Cell" (Indie) (2d wk), day-date with Tabor, Webber. Fine $9,000. Last week, fine $10,000.

'AARON' NSG $9,000 IN OMAHA; 'DAVID' 8½G

Omaha, April 1.

Downbeat is not so pronounced this week with better film fare on hand. "Aaron Slick" at Orpheum opened with Alan Young and Joan Taylor in person to help biz. It shapes good. "Bright Victory" at Omaha fell short of its ballyhoo but looms fair. "David and Bathsheba," back at Paramount on popscale, looks fairish. "Quo Vadis" is still rambling on in its third week at State. "I Want You" is only so-so at the Brandeis.

Estimates for This Week

Omaha (Tristates) (2,100; 16-70)—"Bright Victory" (U) and "Her Panelled Door" (Indie). Fair $7,000. Last week, "Meet Danny Wilson" (U) and "Korea Patrol" (U), okay $8,000.

Brandeis (RKO) (1,500; 16-70)—"I Want You" (RKO). So-so $5,000. Last week, "Streetcar" (WB), $5,500.

Orpheum (Tristates) (3,000; 16-70)—"Aaron Slick From Punkin Crick" (Par) and "Hold Line" (Mono). Good $9,000. Last week, "Invitation" (M-G) and "Sellout" (M-G), $9,000.

State (Goldberg) (865; 35-$1.25)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (3d wk). Still showing strength at $5,000. Last week, extra good $8,000.

Mpls. Laggard; 'Glove' Oke $6,000, 'Port' NG 7G

Minneapolis, April 1.

There is sunshine here for a change but it is not reflected at the wickets. Fresh entries include "Bugles in Afternoon," "Rancho Notorious," "Girl in Every Port" and "Green Glove." Only the last is doing okay. Holdovers continue to hold their own.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Par) (1,600; 85-$1.25)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (5th wk). Fine $7,000. Last week, $10,000.

State (Par) (2,300; 40-76)—"Girl in Every Port" (RKO). Light $7,000. Last week, "5 Fingers" (20th), $9,500.

World (Mann) (400; 85-$1.20)—"Salesman" (Col) (4th wk). Loud $3,500. Last week, $3,100.

'Sniper' Sharp In Philly, $16,000

Philadelphia, April 1.

Rain last Saturday night plus springlike weather Sunday (30) sloughed biz generally here. Surplus of holdovers and some reissues also are no help. At that many of the holdovers and extended-runs are faring better than the newcomers. "Sniper" is rated sharp at $16,000 at the Goldman but "Big Trees" shapes dull $10,000. "Snow White" is holding up briskly in second round at the Randolph.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (WB) (1,303; 50-99)—"Streetcar" (WB) (2d wk). Nice $7,000. Last week, $9,000.

Boyd (WB) (2,360; 50-$1.50)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (6th wk). Off to $8,500. Last week, big $9,500.

Earle (WB) (2,700; 50-99)—"Wild North" (M-G). Frigid $10,000. Last week, "Big Night" (UA) plus Johnnie Ray onstage, terrific $38,000.

Fox (20th) (2,250; 50-99)—"Five Fingers" (20th) (2d wk). Off to $13,000. Last week, mighty $26,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,200; 50-99)—"Sniper" (Col). Sharp $16,000. Last week, "Sword's Point" (RKO) (2d wk), $8,500.

Mastbaum (WB) (4,360; 90-$1.50)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (8th wk). Held at $9,500. Last week, steady $12,000.

Midtown (Goldman) (1,200; 50-99)—"Meet in St. Louis (M-G) and "Babes in Arms" (M-G) (reissues). Fair $6,000. Last week, "Flesh and Fury" (U), smash $12,000.

Randolph (Goldman) (2,500; 50-99)—"Snow White" (RKO) (reissue) (2d wk). Bright $15,000. Last week, $20,000.

World (G&S) (500; 50-99)—"Hotel Sahara" (UA). So-so $3,000. Last week, "Navajo" (Lip), $2,500.

Andrews Sis Tilt 'Time' To Big $15,000, Seattle

Seattle, April 1.

The Palomar shapes standout here this session the Andrews Sisters onstage boosting "First Time" to big total. Biz generally is off, with too many holdovers combining with weak newcomers to make a rather disappointing business picture. "Greatest Show on Earth" still is sturdy in second Paramount round. "Rancho Notorious" looks best newcomer but it is only mild at Liberty.

Estimates for This Week

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,829; 65-90)—"Rodeo" (Mono) and "Jet Job" (Mono). Mild $7,000. Last week, "Return of Texan" (20th)

Five new bills, including some very strong product, are enabling Broadway first-run theatres to hold business on an even keel this week despite Lent. The springlike atmosphere, contrary to usual experience, helped trade Saturday-Sunday because it brought many out-of-towners into the city over the weekend.

Outstanding is "Singin' In Rain" with annual Easter stageshow, which looks a sock $146,000 at the Music Hall. Very strong reviews for the pic helped, with the Hall getting lines Saturday and Sunday. Show was running ahead of last year's Easter bill over the weekend. Combo is due to stay past Easter.

"My Six Convicts" is heading for great $28,000 or close in first week at the Astor to pace the straight-films. "Captive City" shapes only mild $11,000 at the Criterion.

Frank Sinatra topping stage bill is boosting "Meet Danny Wilson," in which he's starred, to a good $64,000 at the Paramount, rated nice for this time of year. Buddy Rich band, Frank Fontaine and June Hutton are on same stageshow.

"Flesh and Fury" shapes fine $18,000 at the State, one of stronger opening weeks at this house in some time.

"African Queen" continues to travel its amazing pace at the Capitol with $40,000 probable for sixth week. Probably could have held through Easter, with the impetus given to film by Oscaring of Humphrey Bogart, costar of pic, but "My Son, John" comes in April 9.

"Marrying Kind" still is going great at the Victoria, with socko $23,000 due for third round ending today. Two previews are helping "Deadline-U.S.A." and stage bill topped by Gloria De Haven to wind up the third session at the Roxy with $52,000, barely okay.

"Young and Damned" shapes up as strongest new entry for the arty theatres with nice $7,500 for initial week at the Trans-Lux 52d Street.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,300; $1.25-$1.80)—"My Six Convicts" (Col). First week ending today (Wed.) looks to hit great $28,000 or near. Holding, of course. Pic got fine reviews and had a big weekend. Last week, "Quo Vadis" (M-G) (20th wk-9 days), $17,000.

Baronet (Reade) (430; 74-$1.20)—"Pardon My French" (UA). Opened Saturday (29) with fairly good week in prospect. In ahead, "Navajo" (Lip) (5th wk-8 days), $2,300 but film got nice run. Fourth week was $3,000.

Capitol (Loew's) (4,820; 70-$1.80)—"African Queen" (UA) (7th wk). The sixth round ended yesterday (Tues.) held at smash $40,000 after $44,000 for fifth week, over hopes. "My Son, John" (Par) now due in April 9.

Criterion (Moss) (1,700; 50-$1.80)—"Captive City" (UA) (2d wk). Initial session ended last night (Tues.) was disappointing with mild $11,000. In ahead, "Snow White" (RKO) (reissue) (5th wk-6 days), $9,000 but finishing off sock run. "Sword's Point" (RKO) due in April 9.

Guild (Guild) (565; 74-$1.50)—"Royal Journey" (UA) (5th wk). Current frame shapes up at around $5,200, solid, after $4,800 for fourth week. Overflow from Music Hall is credited with helping this to perk up at this stage of run.

Globe (Brandt) (1,500; 50-$1.80)—"Red Skies of Montana" (20th) (2d wk). Off to $6,500 after just okay $11,000 for first week. "Hong Kong" (Par) opens April 4.

Fine Arts (Davis) (468; 90-$1.80)—"Lavender Hill Mob" (U) (25th wk). The 24th round ended Monday (31) continued improving for fourth week in succession with $5,700 total after $5,600 for 23d round.

Holiday (Zatkin) (950; 50-$1.80)—"Lili Marlene" (RKO). First week ending tomorrow (Thurs.) likely will not top $5,000 and stays only one week. "Outlaw Women" (Lip) comes in next. In ahead, "Fighting Rats of Tobruk" (Indie) (2d wk), fine $5,200.

Mayfair (Brandt) (1,736; 50-$1.80)—"Sailor Beware" (Par) (9th-final wk). Final round ending today (Wed.) is surprisingly good at $13,000, but won't hold again. Last week, $18,000. "Anything Can Happen" (Par) opens tomorrow (Thurs.).

Normandie (Normandie Theatres) (592; 95-$1.80)—"Encore" (Par). Opens today (Wed.). Last week, "Something To Live For" (Par) (4th wk-5 days), mild $3,500 after $5,000 for third week.

Paramount (Par) (3,664; 80-$1.80)—"Meet Danny Wilson" (U) with Frank Sinatra, Buddy Rich orch heading stage bill (2d wk). First stanza ended last night (Tues.) landed good $64,000, rated very okay for this time of year. In ahead, "Boots Malone" (Col) with Ella Fitzgerald, Al Donahue orch onstage (2d wk), mild $47,000.

Park Ave. (Reade) (583; 90-$1.50)—"Just This Once" (M-G) (3d wk). Second round ended Sunday (30) held at $4,200 after okay $5,600 for opener.

Paris (Indie) (568; $1.25-$1.80)—"The River" (UA) (30th wk). The 29th round (third on continuous-run, lower scale) ended Sunday (30) was $7,000, after fine $7,800 for 28th week.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (5,945; 90-$2.40)—"Singin' In Rain" (M-G) and annual Easter stageshow. First week winding up today (Wed.) looks to hit excellent $146,000. Holding indef. Last week, "Greatest Show on Earth" (Par), with stageshow (11th wk), wound up very long engagement with $103,000, the run equalling the longest at the Hall and totalling $1,372,000.

Rivoli (UAT-Par) (2,092; 90-$1.80)—"Viva Zapata!" (20th) (8th wk). Holding near $9,000 in current week after okay $11,000 for seventh round. Will wind up run before Easter.

Roxy (20th) (5,886; 80-$2.20)—"Deadline—U.S.A." (20th) with Gloria De Haven, Noonan & Marshall heading stage bill (3d-final wk). Off to around $52,000, with boost from two preview days after okay $60,000 for second week. "With Song in Heart" (20th) and Easter stage bill open Friday (4).

State (Loew's) (3,450; 55-$1.80)—"Flesh and Fury" (U). Initial week ending today (Wed.) shapes as fine $18,000, with personal by Tony Curtis, film's star, opening day helping. Holding. In ahead, "Belle of N.Y." (M-G) (3d wk-8 days), with big assist from preview of "Flesh," held to $14,000.

Warner (WB) (2,756; 85-$2)—Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet on stage for special two-week run. Got $80,200 in nine performances with $6 top. House returns to stagefilm policy April 7 with "Jack and Beanstalk" (WB) and stageshow headed by Gene Nelson and Louis Jordan Tympany Five topping stage bill.

Nix Longer Quota Life of Prestige British Pix Asked by Producers

London, April 1.

A plea by British producers for a more lenient attitude by the Government in extending the quota life of prestige British pix, has been rejected by the Films Council. At its meeting last Tuesday (25) requests for extended quota tickets were nixed on five applications. The importance of a prolonged quota life for British films is of major concern to producers since the introduction of the Eady fund. The pool is only opened to pictures that qualify for quota and British films whose quota life expired cannot share in the subsidy.

Producers, therefore, are hit two ways. First, the reissue of a British oldie has a particular appeal to exhibs if it can qualify for quota and thus help to meet the current 30% obligation. Without this aid, the selling power of the picture is seriously affected. Second, the fact that it cannot get an additional 40% of its gross from the Eady fund, has a serious adverse effect on its earning potential.

The producers' request to the Board of Trade was made after last month's executive council meeting, at which it was urged that such a policy would be of inestimable value to the industry as a whole. It would help producers to receive additional coin on some of the top flight British films that were distributed before the advent of the Eady fund and would also help exhibitors in hard pressed situations to fulfil their quota commitments.

The original request to the Board of Trade was coupled with another suggestion that a lenient view should be taken towards indie theatres who had difficulty in fulfilling their quota.

Union of Journalists In Britain to Probe 'Intimidation' of Crix

London, March 25.

Allegations of attempts to intimidate film and drama critics are made in a resolution which will be considered by British journalists at their annual Easter conference in Edinburgh. A motion tabled by a London suburban branch of the National Union of Journalists claims that it is disturbed by the determined efforts made by commercial interests to prevent honest criticism from reaching the public, particularly through columns of weekly newspapers.

The resolution urges launching a public campaign to convince the public that freedom of criticism outside of national newspapers and periodicals is "largely illusory."

Attention is also drawn to the intimidation of crix by threats of lost jobs or withdrawal of viewing facilities.

METRO MAY DO 7 PIX IN BRITAIN THIS YEAR

London, April 1.

Plans for an extended British production program by Metro, referred to by Sam Eckman, Jr., on his arrival in N. Y. last month, are now being completed at the company's Elstree studios. Eckman indicated that possibly five to seven pictures would be lensed during the current year.

Already in production is "Time Bomb," with Glenn Ford due in soon to take up the starring role. A location unit is now filming at Portsmouth (big naval base) and studio work will follow shortly. Also set in the schedule is the first Boulting Bros. picture under a new long-termer with Metro. This will be the Van Johnson starrer, "Crest of the Waves," on which studio work is expected to begin late this spring. A number of others are being considered, including a film version of "Brigadoon."

Aussie Location Shots

Sydney, March 25.

Harold Hech, Warner Bros. producer, together with Norman Demning, will visit the pic, "His Majesty O'Keefe."

There is no talk of the film being in Aussie; only location shots being probable.

NFFC Partly Blamed For Oldway Pix Woes

London, March 25.

Refusal of the National Film Finance Corp. to grant financial assistance, is one of three reasons advanced by Oldway Studios for a deficiency of $218,000. The company, which is now being wound up, was formed about three years ago to operate studios in Paignton, Devon. Other reasons advanced for the company losses were the failure of an Anglo-American vidpix production deal to mature and attempts at over-ambitious production.

The deputy Official Receiver considered the main cause of failure was due to the directors undue optimism which resulted in "unwarranted and exorbitant expenditure."

Sketch Films Attract French Prods. Despite Not Being B.O. Tested

Paris, March 25.

Sketch films are becoming a part of the production setup here. Just finished is the ambitious Franco-Italian coproduction, "Seven Capital Sins." Seven sketches were turned out in France and utilized the biggest name directors, stars and technicians.

"Luxury" was directed by Yves and Viviane Romance. It probes the problem of love vs. materialism. Roberto Rossellini handled the reins on "Envy" with Andree Debar one sketch. "Gluttony," written and directed by Carlo Rim, has Henri Vidal and Claudine Dupuis in top roles, while "Pride," directed by Claude Autant-Lara, has Michele Morgan in the lead. "Greed and Anger" is the work of Italo writer-director Eduardo de Filippo, who also costars in it with Isa Miranda. "Indolence," directed by Jean Dreville, stars Jacqueline Plessis and Noel-Noel. The seventh sketch, with Gerard Philippe, will be used to animate the others and serve as a connecting link.

Just going into production is a three-sketch detective film based on the exploits of George Simonen's Inspector Maigret, S. A. Steeman's Inspector Wens and Peter Cheney's Lemmy Caution. Picture is called "Three Aces" with the first sketch, "The Choir Boys' Evidence," to be made here, with Michael Simon as Maigret. The second, "Death in the Elevator," goes before the cameras in Belgium with Raymond Rouleau as Wens, and the third, "I'm An Easy Guy," has Dutch actor John Van Dreelen in the lead. It will be made in Hamburg. Henry Verneuil is to direct.

Opening here recently were two pix based on a trilogy of short stories by Guy de Maupassant called "Le Plaisir." It was directed by Max Ophuls and sets up pleasure vs. age, pleasure vs. purity and pleasure vs. death. "Three Women," directed by Andre Michel, also was released in the last few weeks.

Others done here were "Under the Paris Sky," directed by Julien Duvivier, a slice of life in a Paris day. It is to follow "The River" into the Paris Theatre in N. Y.; "Lost Souvenirs," directed by Christian-Jaque, about four articles lost and found; "Paris Still Sings," a film stringing the top Gallic singers together in their standard hits, and a trilogy by Paul Paviot in a series of parodies on Hollywood westerns, gangster films and horror pix.

Crown Film Stays Dead

London, March 25.

The government has refused a reprieve for the Crown Film Unit. John Boyd-Carpenter, financial secretary to the Treasury, gave the last word on the subject to a trade union deputation which urged reconsideration of the earlier economy decision.

The deputation was told that the decision was final and the matter could not be reopened. The entire studio staff is being dismissed and the Beaconsfield plant is to go dark.

Equity Asks Brit. Actors To Retain TV Rights

London, March 25.

Film artists, who are asked to relinquish all TV rights when signing production contracts, have been urged to refuse by British Actors Equity. In a statement headed "Important warning to members and their agents," it is asserted that "it's vital that the profession takes a firm and united stand on this question."

Basis of Equity claim is that the normal contract between actor and film producer relates to services in the making of a film for exhibition in cinemas. What is happening now, they allege, is that producers are attempting, without consultation or negotiation, to impose on actors a clause which allows the producer to exploit the artist's performance "in a second vast and profitable medium." This, it urges, must be resisted.

Equity have also instructed their members not to sign contracts containing an obligation to participate in TV relays of performances in theatres where the audience has paid for admission. Similar instructions are being sent out to members of the Musicians' Union and the Variety Artists' Federation.

British Strive to Keep 100% Of Rental Coin Despite 'Aussie Curbs

Sydney, March 25.

No official decision has yet been announced by the Robert Menzies government regarding any curb on rental coin takeaway by British distributors operating in Aussie. Currently, British distribs are allowed 100% coin takeaway but U. S. companies can only remit 75% of rental earnings.

Reported that British distrib chiefs are taking their case for continuance of the 100% takeaway to the British High Commissioner in Canberra for presentation to the government. There are some industry insiders who believe that governmental treasury officials may suggest that a percentage (not as high as that covering U. S. distribs) of British earnings from films remain frozen in Aussie in keeping with the government's new financial policy.

Carbons, Projectors Cut Down

Industry leaders will confer immediately with governmental officials in connection with the import cut on carbons (vital to Aussie theatre operation), rawstock for local film processing, projectors, technical equipment, publicity material and other material necessary to the successful operation of Down Under cinemas. As one circuit executive stated: "What's the use of having pix if you haven't the equipment to put them on the screen?"

Industry leaders are concerned over the fact that the government is cutting imports of commercial goods from as high as 80% to 40%, using the 1950-51 period as a basis. Industry men say that this particular span was a bad one from the importers' viewpoint because there was a major lack of shipping between England and Australia and many importers had to live on stocks on hand, including all those organizations handling cinema carbons, projectors, etc.

While there has been no governmental edict on any product cut on pix either from England or the U. S., film leaders believe there will be no curb on screen fare this year, major factor in this direction being that it is a practical impossibility to produce a sufficient number of pix Down Under to keep cinemas in full operation. Right now there is not one studio where a film is before the cameras.

Understood, however, that the government may decide to curb 16m product for private use. But this wouldn't be a bad edict for regular exhibitors; rather it would be helpful.

Pres. Aleman Honored For Helping Mex Films

Mexico City, March 25.

President Miguel Aleman won the film players annual award as the most distinguished person in Mexico during 1951 for his stimulation of the film industry. Decorations were bestowed at a special ceremony in the president's official residence here by Jorge Megrete, actor-singer, in his capacity as secretary general of the Picture Production Workers Union.

Negrete told President Aleman that the decorations were "an expression of gratitude of motion picture players."

French Legit Authors Going Stale, Say Most Paris Stage-Pix Scouts

Paris, March 18.

Consensus of opinion by legit and picture scouts here is that local playwrights are going stale generally and that Paris no longer is the fertile ground from which material can be obtained by the U. S. Except for such people as Jacques Deval, Roger Ferdinand and a few more like Marcel Ayme or Jean Paul Sartre, the writing here suffers from isolation because of the war years which shut off writers here from the world for a long period. It is believed that this has slanted their minds on matters so they write plays that have no general appeal.

They also appear to be callous about what may prove a local draw, including offensive material, but which does not create stories worth exporting. Such names as Marcel Achard, Jean Anouilh and Andre Roussin lately have not come up to expectations, and their appeal is strictly limited to local audiences.

Evidencing this is the quick succession of flops experienced on Broadway by French plays, while material from other countries has shown better results.

Theatre Biz in Hands of Few

Locally, the real theatre business is concentrated in a few hands, like Maurice Lehmann, Leon Benoit Deutsch, Jean de Letraz, Mitty Goldin, Henri Bernstein. In the lighter fields there are Paul Derval and Henri Varna and more recently Pierre Louis-Guerin, who may become the leader. Most other theatre men are speculators trying to find angels to back their shoestringing productions. As in the picture field, here, most producers are merely promoters.

Even people, who, like Simonne Berriau, are supposed to do big business, operate on a system that involves plenty of strange deals.

The same applies to choreographers Serge Lifar is now considered passe and were it not for Boris Kniazeff and some other foreigners, ballet here would soon die.

Another reason for the legit theatre slumping considerably here, apart from pictures (radio doesn't mean much, television nothing), is the fact that the insiders have killed the golden goose. The red-inspired unions have made so many demands that it is often unprofitable to put on a show that otherwise might have provided employment for many people.

However, localities, who apparently with no worldwide point of view, do not realize how much this center has dropped behind the times and how far it will have to go in order to regain its old position in the theatre world.

Edinburgh 6th Film Fete

Edinburgh, March 25.

Sixth annual International Film Festival will run here Aug. 17 to Sept. 7, concurrently with the Edinburgh Festival of Music and Drama. Films are expected from Australia, Canada, U. S. and India. Inquiries have been received from many of the 28 countries represented at last year's junket.

Organized by the Edinburgh Film Guild, with the collaboration of the British Film Institute, the fete has the support and cooperation of the governments and film organizations in several countries.

PAR GETS 290-SEATER IN SYDNEY FOR FILMS

Sydney, April 1.

Paramount has set a three-year deal to play first-release product at the 290-seat Variety bandbox house here. The independent Sydney Theatres Ltd., arranged deal. House has been playing reissues for long time with an occasional foreign pic. Par starts using house July 1. Uderstood that this minor seater still has about nine oldie pix under contract. These will be spotted in between the Paramount films until contract expires.

Paramount's major showcase here is the 1390-seat Prince Edward, operated by Carroll-Musgrave Theatres Ltd. Deal with the Variety will give Paramount an additional outlet for piled-up product. The former house has been playing between 10 and 12 top Paramount films a year, not figured sufficient to cover yearly lineup.

Some time ago, when product outlets in Melbourne tightened up, Paramount clinched a deal with Galety Theatres, Ltd. to take over the 1350-seat Kings as a first-release showcase, and set another deal with Celebrity Theatres for the 1025-seat Majestic, in Adelaide.

Scot TV Site Juiceless

London, March 25.

None of the villagers in Kirk O'Shotts, where Scotland's only TV transmitter is situated, is able to view television programs. There is no electricity in the village.

The population has refused to become excited about tele, claiming to be much more interested in the installation of an electrical generating plant.

New Approach to French Film Prod., On Dorfman Case, May Help All Biz

Paris, March 25.

While controversy rages among studio workers and in the newspapers regarding what should be done to remedy sick film production here, industry heads are quietly taking steps to work out their own salvation. Action of Robert Dorfman, with the Silver Films as his production company and Corona as his distribution unit, in halting production and stopping all payments, was the most disturbing development, because liabilities ran to about $1,000,000.

First step taken was to handle the Dorfman headache, with pix specialist Pierre Cheret called in to frame an adjustment. Already scheduled productions (of the Dorfman lineup) went to other producers for handling. Additionally, it was discovered that the films, then distributed by Corona, would pay enough to get the organization out of the red, if given time.

Next step was to get financial support from banks, in order to provide the long-term refunding. W. Baumgartner, Bank of France head, once did a stint as head of Credit National, the government's financial branch which looks after financing of films. Naturally, he's familiar with the picture industry. He saw no point in having the banks throw the film biz into bankruptcy because of the financial straits of two companies.

Ray Ventura, a comparative newcomer, but now head of Hoche Productions, was accepted by Baumgartner to head a committee to handle the Corona properties. Dorfman, who has recovered from a nervous breakdown, will be placed in charge, under supervision of this committee. It now looks possible for distribution of product, which went through Corona, to pay off the indebtedness in about 18 months.

Salvage Operations

Ventura is also heading salvage operations on production, permitting resumption of some Silver Films projects. One such project is to be handled by a company, yet to be organized, with American participation via Benagoss Productions, which already has made "The Green Glove" here. Other Silver Films products would be similarly divided between responsible producers, thus evening up risks and financial details.

Plan of coping with the industry situation by the film biz itself, instead of running to the government for relief in the form of a subsidy, is a departure from usual local procedure. In some circles, it's regarded a step forward in placing the industry on a sounder basis and making for stronger boxoffice pictures. If the same formula of getting local financing for worthwhile production ventures can be applied to other firms, many in the trade feel that the whole production setup may be revitalized. The old routine of making a picture and getting enough rental coin from it to insure a further government grant for the next film has worked for mediocrity, and explains why so few French pix get American playdates or obtain substantial revenue from the U. S. market.

Better French producers are chary of making blanket financing against distribution deals. This type feels that his pic, if it is good, will garner 50% more than if handled by an American major company in French speaking territories.

RANK SEES FILMS AS ABLE TO BATTLE TV

Leeds, March 25.

J. Arthur Rank, British film industry leader, said while here that he believes the cinema industry would be able to compete with television.

"Provided we make entertaining pictures, we shall hold our own and still be going as long as TV," he said.

When national events were taking place and could be televised on the spot, film theatres would be affected, he explained.

British pix, said Rank, could do much in the world today to prove that this country is not finished. Although the written word might be powerful, it is not nearly as powerful as the motion picture.

'Tight Island' Producer Forming Scot Film Unit

London, March 25.

If author Compton Mackenzie can obtain treasury permission to float a public company, he will launch a Scottish film production unit in association with James Robertson Justice, Moray Maclaren and Eric Linklater.

Mackenzie became interested in the idea of a Scottish production company after the success of "Whisky Galore" ("Tight Little Island"). If the project goes through he is planning a light comedy as his first venture with a modern Scottish drama or Sir Walter Scott piece to follow.

Company is aiming at a capital of $560,000, most of coin to be subscribed by Scottish investors.

Retain Royal Fete Hall Despite Loss

London, March 25.

For the sake of providing concert entertainments which commercial managements could not afford to stage, the London County Council is reconciled to operating the Royal Festival Hall at a loss. In its first year of operation the LCC wound up with a deficit of more than $250,000.

Concert promotion at the Festival Hall only means operating in the red when the events are staged by the LCC. For commercial entrepreneurs, however, it can be quite a profitable business. For example, a recent Saturday night concert, with Eileen Joyce featured as soloist, played to absolute capacity with a gross of $2,788, which left the promoter with a clear profit of around $800 for this one-night stand.

But while there is no criticism of the musical standard offered by the regular managements, LCC believe its own more adventurous policy justifies the risk involved. In recent months it has been plugging little known works which can only attract the extreme longhair enthusiasts among the concert going public.

Among the shows lined up for the Royal Festival Hall are one-night stands by Burl Ives and George Sanders and a series of concerts to be given by the Boston Symphony Orch.

Aussie's HCL Blamed For Recent Slump In Pix Theatre Attendance

Sydney, March 25.

Australia showed a trade deficit of 53,436,000 pounds (about $120,232,000) for last January, second highest monthly reverse ever recorded, according to the Aussie statistician, S. R. Carver. Although Australians are getting the highest basic wage in the country's history, the added coinage is of little value because of the terrific cost of living. This is one of the major reasons why there has been a decline in cinema attendances recently. It is a case of bread before pix.

Majority of Aussie families now are going to cinemas only once weekly instead of two or three times. They just have not the necessary coin to spend on entertainment.

Unlerstood that the Robert Menzies Liberal government will issue an edict curtailing imports from dollar areas to improve the trade balance. Sir Arthur Fadden, Aussie treasurer, has just returned from financial talks in London. He is expected to make a statement on the financial position shortly.

In the meantime, commercial biz is hard hit because of government's edict restricting bank credit. Many industries are reducing their staffs drastically. The film industry is waiting to see whether there will be any curb on product importation from Hollywood and also whether there will be any tightening on dollar remittances from this zone.

Jack Waller Buys 'Relations' for Screen

London, March 25.

Film rights to Jean Cocteau's "Intimate Relations," which was staged at the Strand Theatre by Jack Waller last year, have been acquired by Adelphi Films for production later this year.

Arthur Dent, the Adelphi chief, is currently lining up a cast and crew and intends to sign an American star for the role of Madeleine, which was played on the stage by Sarah Lawson. Fay Compton starred in the London legit version.

ABPC Lines Up Joint WB, Mono Prod. for Brit.

London, April 1.

A program of joint production with Warner Bros. and Monogram is being lined up by Associated British Picture Corp. as a result of the recent American trip of Sir Philip Warter, the corporation's chairman. Filming will be at ABPC's Elstree studios, and wherever warranted U. S. stars and directors will be used.

Announcing this new policy on his return, Sir Philip explained that for both sides there were substantial advantages in collaboration. The division of production costs gave the British company star values above the average and made it possible for the films to have widespread appeal in the American market. He also felt it would play an important part in paving the way for a reasonable outcome of the forthcoming talks on the renewal of the Anglo-American agreement.

On its own behalf, WB is proceeding in the summer with the production of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Master of Ballantrae," and to follow, on a joint basis, would be a new Audrey Hepburn starring vehicle, probably with a Hollywood male star and director.

Impressed by the first results of Warnercolor, which he had seen in Hollywood, Sir Philip has arranged for a team of technical experts, headed by Cyril J. Phillips, chief of Pathe Labs, to visit Hollywood in April and to submit a comprehensive report on the problems involved in equipping the British unit for handling the processing and release prints in the new medium. One of the main problems, he considered, would be to resolve the stock situation. If the stock was available it was likely that some of the collaborative efforts would be in Warnercolor.

Sir Philip was also impressed with the development of magnetic recording, which provided better quality sound with a saving of raw stock. Arrangements had been made for its introduction at the ABPC studios as well as their newsreels in June.

Warns Vs. Sponsored TV

An up-to-date analysis on the TV situation is to be made by Sir Philip at the next ABPC board meeting, but he expressed the view that his U. S. trip had warned him that the biggest menace to British theatres would be the development of sponsored television. This attracted the biggest names and hurt the boxoffice. The lesson for the British film industry, he said, would be to oppose sponsorship in any shape or form. If the industry intended to flirt with bigscreen TV, he felt they should insist on private channels through a closed line and not contemplate sharing public programs with the British Broadcasting Corp.

London, March 25.

Newsreel shots of the late King opening the Festival of Britain last year, which were included in Sidney Box's production of "The Happy Family," (known in the U.S. as "Mr. Lord Says No") have been deleted as a result of protests following the London tradeshow.

A number of national press crix contended their inclusion was in bad taste, particularly in view of the farcial nature of the subject. Within 48 hours of the tradeshowing, the scenes were scissored.

London First-Runs Topped by 3 New British Pix; 'Angels' Lively $11,800, 'Robin Hood' 9G, 'Island' Opens Well

London, March 25.

A trio of British entries dominates the West End scene, but biz during this last stanza has been below average. The dip in grosses appears to have affected all current offerings, although big productions like "Quo Vadis" and "Streetcar" are attracting a fair proportion of available coin.

At Metro's Empire, "Angels One Five," a new AB-Pathe offering, has opened with a nice $11,800 in its first five days, having been helped by good notices. "Robin Hood," Disney's live action British feature, took a pleasing $9,000 in its first frame at the Leicester Square Theatre and held up to $4,200 for its second weekend. "Saturday Island," the Coronado Technicolor production starring Linda Darnell, took an unprecedented beating from the crix, but its first weekend gross of $3,400 was well above hopes.

At the Carlton and the Ritz, "Quo Vadis" finished its eighth week with $8,700 and $4,500 respectively. "Greatest Show on Earth" at the Plaza dipped to around $7,000 in its fifth week. "Where River Bends" is nice in second Gaumont week.

Estimates for Last Week

Carlton (Par) (1,128; 70-$2.15)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (8th wk). Holding up well at $8,700, very good for length of run. Continues.

Empire (M-G) (3,099; 55-$1.70)—"Angels One Five" (AB-Pathe). Starting off in encouraging style with $11,800 in first five days. In ahead, "Belle of N. Y." (M-G) (2d wk), moderate $9,500.

Gaumont (CMA) (1,500; 50-$1.70) "Where River Bends" (GFD) (2d wk). Shaping good $6,700 this stanza after bright $9,200 opener. Stays another session with "Tall Headlines" (GN) and "Chicago Calling" (UA) to follow.

Leicester Square Theatre (CMA) (1,753; 50-$1.70)—"Robin Hood" (RKO) (2d wk). Steady $4,200 for second weekend after pleasing $9,000 initial week. Stays third round with "5 Fingers" (20th) in next.

London Pavilion (UA) (50-$1.70)—"Ten Tall Men" (Col). Shaping to useful $6,800 in first round. Continues.

Odeon, Leicester Square (CMA) (2,200; 50-$1.70) — "Saturday Island" (RKO). Above hopes at $3,400 in first three days after being roundly panned by crix. In for usual three weeks.

Odeon, Marble Arch (CMA) (2,200; 50-$1.70)—"I Believe In You" (GFD) (3d wk). Moderate $5,000. "Viva Zapata!" (20th) opens March 27.

Plaza (Par) (1,902; 70-$1.70)—"Greatest Show on Earth" (Par) (5th wk). Off to around $7,000 but very strong in prior rounds. "Hoodlum Empire" (Rep) opens March 28.

Rialto (LFP) (592; 50-$1.30)—"Rashomon" (BL). This Japanese Oscar winner drawing big crowds nightly since its opening, powerful $5,400 in first week. Stays.

Ritz (M-G) (432; 90-$2.15)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (8th wk). Still drawing crowds at steady $4,500. Stays indef.

Warner (WB) (1,735; (50-$1.70)—"Streetcar" (WB) (4th wk). Fair $4,200 in final weekend after average $7,900 in third frame. "Distant Drums" (WB) comes in March 27.

66 New Theatres Now Being Built in Canada

Washington, April 1.

Canada now has upwards of 1,850 regular theatres and about 80 drive-ins in operation, latter during the season, according to U. S. Commerce Department. In addition, Nathan D. Golden, chief of the Commerce film division, reports that a trade survey there shows 66 additional theatres under construction, of which 11 are drive-ins.

Average weekly attendance during 1951 was about 4,536,000. Total boxoffice receipts for that year, exclusive of tax, came to $86,713,357.

No Aussie Cut In U.S. Film Imports

Sydney, March 25.

The Minister in charge of Australian Customs has announced that American films would not come under his government's ruling that drastically cut imports from the dollar zone. Minister pointed out that U. S. distributors operating Down Under left a big proportion of their earnings in frozen funds under an agreement made in 1947. U. S. distribs are currently permitted to remit 75% of rentals.

The government has decided to recall all import licenses covering commercial imports from the dollar zone immediately. Government is planning to cut dollar expenditure to the limit. Prime Minister Robert Menzies has issued an edict that this country must live within its earnings. Last week the Menzies' government created a stir in the world of commerce by cutting imports from the sterling area, the first time this has ever taken in England.

Although happy over the fact that American films will not be slashed on the current import schedule, insiders point out that should the dollar situation become more tense here, the government may consider freezing more Yank rental revenue. However, more conservative opinion is that because U. S. distributors have played ball with the government for a number of years, there probably will be no further coin freezing.

Apart from the U. S. and Canada, the dollar edict also applies in the Philippines and Latin-American countries, thus making it impossible for importers to ship goods through these countries instead of the U. S. and Canada in an endeavor to beat the dollar rap.

Of 51 Foreign Stars Imported for Brit. Pix Last Yr., 40 Were Yanks

London, March 25.

Of a total of 51 foreign stars imported for British films last year, 40 came from Hollywood. The remainder were brought over from France, Switzerland, Italy, Sweden and Austria. These figures are given in a survey on foreign artists compiled by British Actors Equity.

The Equity list is complete for all branches of entertainment with the exception of revue, cabaret and vaudeville. The majority of performers in these categories normally would come under the jurisdiction of the Variety Artist Federation, which has no figures readily available showing the 1951 importations.

The legit theatre last year attracted 85 foreigners, 62 being French and 20 American. Musicals accounted for an additional 27, of which 26 came from the U. S. Opera accounted for 23 (16 American) and ballet 191 (29 American). TV and vidpix earned two labor permits, one for an American and the other for a Swedish artist.

ARGENTINA SOCKO IN MEX CITY ON 2-A-DAY

Mexico City, March 25.

Imperio Argentina, Spanish comedienne and singer-dancer, is boffo on two-a-day at the Teatro Lirico here. She is supported by the Los Churumbeles de Espana, 10 Spanish male folk singers. They are doubling twice weekly on radio at Station XEW, Ron Potrero, rum manufacturer, sponsoring.

The powerful leftist Confederation of Mexican Labor, which blocked Argentina's entry to Mexico five years ago, made no objection this time to her and isn't interfering in any way with her performing here.

Wear & Tear Sisters

being washed out, "Mr. Roberts" did a $6,200 one-night stand in Richmond and several playgoers came at least part of the way in a rowboat.

Literally flung down the hundreds of miles of fertile California farm valleys like a handful of scattered stage diamonds, the Hazelton & Ware time is truly unique.

They book high school auditoriums, civic centers and film houses, which range in seating capacities from 666 in Santa Barbara to 3,597 in Berkeley, and they can offer a $3 top attraction an eight-performance potential of $40,000. Out of 12 cities which now comprise their domain, Hazelton & Ware give a touring attraction subscription in seven.

Not long ago, Lawrence Langner, who had been hearing reports of this fruit-grove theatrical empire for years, and whose "Oklahoma" broke records all over the place, made a personal tour of inspection.

He learned, among other things, that the two ladies who operate their citrus circuit were former social workers from the middle west, induced in 1935 by Pete Ermatinger to take a try at theatre management, and that no show has ever left Los Angeles or San Francisco to take their ranch route without one or both of the ladies in personal escort.

In addition, the director of the Theatre Guild discovered the tremendous theatre-awareness which exists in such Hazelton & Ware outposts as Marysville, Stockton, Fresno and Riverhead. Everytime the L. A. or San Francisco papers carry a paragraph concerning some Broadway hit which is routing its tour to the Coast, Hazelton & Ware receive a deluge of mail demanding to know when this attraction will play their local high school auditorium.

Carolyn Ware insists that her problem is not audience, but show.

"We start every fall with promising bookings and spend the rest of the winter juggling time and making cancellations. Often, the inland-city newspapers and radio stations are so eager to help that they go to the public with prospective plays and we have to explain why they fail to make our time. Sometimes shows fall on tour and never reach the Coast; others go to Chicago and stay for a run. The worst is when they actually reach Los Angeles and San Francisco, and then bypass the valley towns. Many stars refuse to play one-night stands. Some managers in New York do not yet understand the tremendous potential we offer. And still other managers think of California as having but two eastern-type cities, and they are unable to understand the potential of the circuit we offer."

Hazelton & Ware offer these vital statistics:

City	Capacity	Gross	Top	Theatre
San Diego	2,401	$5,189	$3.00	Russ Auditorium
San Bernardino	1,780	5,249	3.50	Fox
Pasadena	2,968	6,815	3.00	Civic Auditorium
Berkeley	3,597	7,162	3.00	Berkeley High School

The other towns include Richmond, where a slightly larger gross than Berkeley can be realized, and Fresno, recently become a two-night stand, and Sacramento, Stockton, Riverside and Redlands.

Help Inlanders

Hazelton & Ware have representatives in each community, mostly women-managers, who are resident and more or less maintain a year-round contact with the newspapers and public through releases and mailings. Most of the inland cities have now cultivated fairly valuable mailing lists, ranging in size from three to 4,000 for each date. Press relations are quite excellent, and such important publishers as Eleanor McClatchy, owner of the big Sacramento and Fresno dailies, is a personal friend and ardent theatre fan.

The big hits such as "Kiss Me, Kate," "Mr. Roberts" and "Oklahoma" have begun playing the Wear & Tear time for more than a week. "Oklahoma" stayed for six profitable weeks, so far the record. "South Pacific" is now penciled in for four weeks. "Mr. Roberts" did two, and "Kate" three weeks. Naturally, nothing makes a one-night stand operator happier than a split or full-week date, and Hazelton & Ware dwell fondly on these "runs."

In the last few years, the production efforts of Russel Lewis and Howard Young out of Los Angeles have stirred hope in the valley towns that they may eventually see more than the few shows a year which reach their grassland cities.

Both Carolyn Ware and Mabel Hazelton wish that more such production activity would begin on the Coast. But both ladies are confirmed in their belief in one thing: any production undertaken of this sort must be first-class. They insist their farm land audiences are discriminating and well-informed. In fact, both are so alert to the taste and attitudes of their inland California audiences, that they are forced to reject inferior productions or plays of questionable content.

Former Exhib Sues Over 'Osage' Script

Los Angeles, April 1.

Breach-of-contract suit for $25,000 was filed here by Ted Wynn, former Missouri exhib, against Monogram and James S. Burkett, producer of "Fort Osage."

Wynn charges he suggested the story to Burkett in 1949 and wrote a 10-page manuscript containing the fort's historical background. Although promised compensation, he declares, he has not collected a cent.

Si Seadler's Nifty

Metro's ad in VARIETY last week on the Academy winners struck a nerve with newspaper people, many of whom quoted the copy verbatim, as it showed Leo the Lion soliloquizing, "Honestly, I was only Standing in the Sun waiting for a Streetcar." This referred, of course, to Metro's "American in Paris", nosing out "Place in the Sun" and "Streetcar Named Desire" for the top Oscar.

PS—Leo's ad copy Boswell travels under the initials of Silas F. Seadler, advertising manager of Loew's, Inc.

RKO PREPS 7 SCRIPTS FOR EARLY LENSING

Hollywood, April 1.

RKO's writing mill is busy with seven scripters working on that number of screenplays for early filming. Alan LeMay is toiling on "Blackbeard the Pirate"; Irving Wallace on "Split Second"; Frank Cavett on "The Cook Story"; Michael Fessier on "The Girls Have Landed"; Stephen Longstreet on "All the Beautiful Girls," and Walter Newman and Horace McCoy on properties still untitled.

Clare Boothe Luce wound up her scripting chore last week on the Biblical story, "Pilate's Wife."

COMPO Maps Shorts In Defense Co-op

Council of Motion Picture Organizations has completed plans for production of a 10-minute short and a two-minute musical trailer in its role of coordinator of the industry's cooperation with the Defense Department in its recruitment of women for the armed services. Script material has been submitted to Defense authorities for approval, which will be followed by production in N. Y.

Short was written under the direction of Jay Bonafield of RKO. Two-minute clip will feature a song composed by Jules Styne with lyrics by Betty Comden and Adolph Green. Likelihood is that it will be added to newsreels.

U's Big Payoff

ries and other lightweight pix of the type.

'Bright Victory' Deviated

Only deviation from the policy in the past few years was "Bright Victory," which focused on a war veteran who had been blinded in combat. Reason for undertaking this was that U had held the story property and the public had accepted a similar subject on two previous occasions. "Best Years of Our Lives" and "The Men" both concerned handicapped veterans and were commercially successful. "Victory" is now being played off slowly.

Otherwise, the film outfit is staying with the earthy product, stressing action in diversified story material, and sometimes spending more production money. "Flesh and Fury," costarring Tony Curtis and Mona Freeman, and "Steel Town," Ann Sheridan and John Lund, each carries a negative price tag at about $1,000,000.

Regarding all pix on the U sked, Feldman insists that neither the public nor the exhibitors have any interest in the amount of production money invested. A film is an "A" if it can draw good coin at the b.o., and the budget, even though in the medium or less bracket, doesn't matter at all, Feldman states.

Meanwhile, offered as a possible clue to audience tastes today is U's experience with the new "Kettles at the Fair" pic. Earlier films of the series had been big money-makers in the hinterlands and all but died at key runs in big cities. "Back on the Farm," for example, was tried at the Capitol, N. Y., and failed to draw. "At the Fair," however, is scoring in some important first-runs. At the United Artists Theatre, Detroit, it was especially impressive, Feldman reported. He believes a substantial part of the public which hadn't been reached before was introduced to the "Kettles" in a Collier's article and turned out for the newest episode.

Easter Dates for Broadway 1st-Runs Set After Considerable Jockeying

After considerable jockeying for choice Easter dates, attractions for the many Broadway first-run houses have been set. Paramount will be represented by four pix, with "Encore" opening today (Wed.) at the Normandie; "Anything Can Happen" tomorrow (Thurs.) at the Mayfair, "Hong Kong," Friday (4), at the Globe, and "My Son, John" on Tuesday (8) at the Capitol.

Columbia follows with three Easter offerings "The Marrying Kind" is currently in its third week at the Victoria, "My Six Convicts" bowed Thursday (27) at the Astor, and "Okinawa" is set for the Rialto either April 4 or 9.

Universal has two entries. "The Man in the White Suit" opened yesterday (Tues.) at the Sutton and "Bend of the River" is set for the Paramount, April 9.

Metro, Warners, 20th-Fox and RKO will have one pic each for Easter viewers. M-G's "Singin" in the Rain" teed off Thursday (27) at the Radio City Music Hall, 20th's "With a Song in My Heart" debuts at the Roxy, Friday (4), Warner's "Jack and the Beanstalk" opens at the Warner on the same day, and RKO's "At Sword's Point" is set for the Criterion, April 9.

Most unusual of the Easter openings is the Italian-Languager set for Loew's State on April 12. Pic is "Tomorrow is Too Late."

Formerly, most of the Broadway houses had a set day of the week for the opening of a new picture. However, at present only the Music Hall, Roxy and the Paramount continue to cling to definite teeoff times. Hall opens all its pix on Thursdays and the Paramount on Wednesdays. Roxy starts now shows on Fridays with very rare exceptions. However, selection of a specific day of the week is not governed by any hard or fast rules.

Seeking Clear Day

If an exhib has booked what he considers an important big picture, he seeks an absolutely clear day to assure that he'll get the first-string N. Y. film critics as well as the greatest potential audience. Although the exhib may consider his new film as the most important, a critic might think otherwise and there is a degree of chance involved if the exhib decides to open in opposition to another picture. Although Monday is generally looked upon as a poor opening day, it has been frequently selected by those seeking clear days. Art houses, which depend on the critics' acceptance of a film, particularly favor a Monday opener since it assures them of a review by the first-string crix.

Similarly, films which are deemed critics' pix are skedded for Tuesday or Wednesday airings. Thusly, the theatres, with the cooperation of their ad agencies, can get review ads in the daily papers on Thursday and Friday to drum up weekend biz.

Honor 4 in Philly

Philadelphia, April 1.

Four top industry figures will be honored next Monday (7) for outstanding work on behalf of the philanthropic services of the Jewish community at a testimonial dinner sponsored by the theatrical division of the United Jewish Appeal.

Guests of honor will be Frank L. McNamee, indie circuit owner, former president of United Artists and fire commissioner of Philadelphia; James P. Clark, president of Highway Express (film delivery service), and president of the Philadelphia Eagles pro grid club; Councilman Victor H. Blanc, Chief Barker of Variety Club, Tent 13, and Fredric H. Mann, the city's recreation commissioner and president of Robin Hood Dell, al fresco concert association.

Dinner will be held at the Variety Club, in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Day-Date Dual Bills From Same Distrib Get Wash. Boxoffice Test

Washington, April 1.

A new package deal, which may result in higher grosses from "B" pictures, and also hypo business for double-feature nabe houses in various situations, gets a fullscale test here commencing May 1. It will be tried three days each month.

Proposition calls for day-and-date first-runs of double feature programs in key nabe houses which customarily offer dual features. Both features will come from the same distributor, so that there'll never be any question about whose picture gets top money.

Columbia, Monogram and United Artists have gone into the distribution end of the experiment. The Kogod-Burka and Sidney B. Lust indie circuits are each putting three theatres into the arrangement, with Anacostia Amus. Co. providing two and the Bernheimer group here one more.

However, more than these nine theatres are needed to make the deal worthwhile for the distributors. Warner Bros., which has a large chain of nabe houses, some playing two features, may add at least three theatres to give the minimum of a dozen wanted by the distribs.

Plan is an expansion of a successful experiment tried earlier in Pittsburgh and originated by Sam Galanty, Columbia eastern division manager, with headquarters in Washington. First package lined up consists of two Columbia pix, "Family Secret" and "Barefoot Mailman." They will play a three-day run during the first week in May. In June, Monogram will put up "Fort Osage" and "Flight to Mars" for the test. United Artists' turn is in July. It has already selected "Lady Says No," with a second film still to be named.

Promotion will be on a high-power co-op basis, with all the theatres and the distributors working on it. Pictures will generally play Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Efforts are being made to get still other distribs interested.

Rogers Repeats

Hollywood, April 1.

Will Rogers, Jr., currently playing his father in "The Story of Will Rogers" at Warners, will repeat the impersonation in "The Eddie Cantor Story" on the same lot.

Cantor recently played himself in "The Will Rogers Story." They were Ziegfeld stars together.

Goldstone's 'Perfect'

Hollywood, April 1.

Richard Goldstone was handed production reins on Metro's "Too Perfect," making a total of three pictures on his overseas program. Others are "The Devil Makes Three," currently shooting in Munich, and "Time Bomb," to be filmed in London.

somewhere around 6% for loans and the Film Finance Corp. will have to add on their ½% for protection. Consequently, producers who have been borrowing over the years from the NFFC may be paying an additional 2% on their loans. For films in the higher budget brackets, this will have a serious effect.

In an attempt to ease the lot of independent producers, the Eady fund directorate is introducing a scheme to speed up payments from that pool. In the future, advances will be on bolder lines, with the object of freeing as much capital for production as possible. Hitherto, Eady fund payments have been cautiously estimated with the object of playing safe and having a grand settlement at the end of each financial year.

ion. However, this is not enough to make them a cohesive group. In addition to the usual bickering of children, there's bitter discrimination because of the different national origins. Epitaphs such as "Nazi" and "dirty Morrocan" are flung in their attempts to gain a moment of superiority.

Story deals mainly with the problem of four kids. Max, the most irascible of the quartet, is an arrogant youngster who has learned to shift for himself. In Europe, he had been an experienced blackmarket operator, knows the value of trade in cigarettes, and refuses to adhere to any adult guidance. Willy is a frightened follower whose mother had been an Aryan and in moments of terror and forgetfulness shouts, "I am an Aryan." Jean is a Morrocan lad who served as a procurer. Anna is an attractive wide-eyed lass, cynically willing to comply with any demand.

Kids are eventually adjusted to their new environment, and at pic's close the group is working harmoniously together as a well-integrated community, despite the gunfire and the shellings of the new war.

Kids, all amateurs, turn in first-rate performances, although Max, played by Israel Hanin, never arouses a degree of sympathy despite his eventual rehabilitation. Jamie Smith, as the American counselor, is handsome and rugged-looking and turns in a completely believable portrayal. (An American, now in New York, working in TV).

A good picture bet for Hollywood is Dina Peskin, a native of Israel (also now in New York) who plays Anna. Although an 18-year-old, she plays a younger lass with spirit and charm. She has a delightful accent and knows how to make with the eyes. John Slater is effective as the Viennese refugee and Didi Ramati scores as a teacher-helper. Juda Levi and Amnon Lifshitz as the Moroccan and German lads, respectively, also rate nods. Ben Josef and Rachel Markus are the other principals in the fine cast.

Although it is occasionally slow-moving, Josef Leytes' direction is on the whole creditable. G. Gibbs' lensing is on the plus side, as are the other technical credits. Holl.

Murder in the Cathedral

(BRITISH)

Classic Pictures release of George Hoellering production. Stars Father John Groser; features Mark Dignam, Michael Aldridge, Leo McKern, Paul Rogers. Directed by Hoellering. Screenplay, T. S. Eliot, based on his play; camera, David Kosky; editor, Anne Allnatt; music, Laszlo Lajtha; music recorded by London Philharmonic orch, with the Renaissance Singers. At Trans-Lux 60th St., N. Y., starting March 25, '52. Running time 140 MINS.

Thomas Becket	Father John Groser
King Henry II	Alexander Gauge
First Tempter	David Ward
Second Tempter	George Woodbridge
Third Tempter	Basil Burton
Fourth Tempter	T. S. Eliot
First Priest	Donald Bisset
Second Priest	Clement McCallin
Third Priest	Michael Groser
First Knight	Mark Dignam
Second Knight	Michael Aldridge
Third Knight	Leo McKern
Fourth Knight	Paul Rogers
Bishop Foliot	Alan Blakelock

T. S. Eliot's legit play, "Murder in the Cathedral," has been turned into a moving but very ponderous film. With a cast unknown to most U. S. patrons, pic will do most of its business in arty sure-seaters in this country, but even in this limited field the boxoffice should be only fairish.

Story of the life of Thomas Becket, the martyred Archbishop of Canterbury, unfolds too statically in the picture form. Eliot scripted this from his own play, but failed to add sufficient movement. Plot details how the Archbishop courageously returns to England after seven years of voluntary exile rather than submit to the king's ambition to dominate the church. Much is devoted to his temptation to return as a favorite of the king. But choosing to stay and defy him, he is slain and achieves sainthood.

There is no question about the well-chosen cast as the spiritual and human side of the archbishop is unfolded against the stately, picturesque background, including many cathedral interiors. Nor can fault be found with the musical background furnished by the London Philharmonic. But the failure of Eliot and producer-director George Hoellering to develop the stage play for the medium of the screen results only in a slow-moving, unimaginative pic.

Father John Groser, as Archbishop Becket, is impressive amidst the welter of wordage. Mark Dignam, Michael Aldridge, Leo McKern and Paul Rogers, as the four knights sent to destroy Becket, measure up to the high standard of the Old Vic, from which they were borrowed for this film. Eliot also gets into the piece as the Fourth Tempter.

David Kosky's photography is adequate excepting when dragging in countless, often meaningless closeups. Film also runs too long. Wear.

Angels One Five

(British)

British war pic won't rate high in the U.S.

London, March 25.

AB-Pathe release of Templar-Associated British production. Stars Jack Hawkins, Michael Denison, Dulcie Gray. Directed by George More O'Ferrall. Screenplay, Derek Twist; camera, Christopher Challis; editor, Daniel Birt; music, John Wood[illegible]. At Empire, London. Running ti[illegible]7 MINS.

"Tiger" Small	Jack Hawkins
Peter Moon	Michael Denison
Bill Ponsford	Andrew Osborn
Barry Clinton	Cyril Raymond
"Batchy" Salter	Humphrey Lestocq
"Septic" Baird	John Gregson
Group Controller	Ronald Adam
Nadine Clinton	Dulcie Gray
Betty Carfax	Veronica Hurst
Aunt Tabitha	Amy Veness
Police Constable	Philip Stainton

Action of "Angels One Five" takes place during the period described by Winston Churchill as "Britain's finest hour," when a handful of fighter pilots (the few against the many) stemmed the air invasion by Nazi war planes. Film brings back proud memories of the early wartime struggle and should have strong sentimental and emotional appeal for local audiences, although subject hardly justifies high b.o. rating for the American market.

Breaking away from the more conventional treatment, the script watches the progress of the battle, not from the actual combats, but from the messages received by and emanating from the operational control room. The fight against overwhelming odds as plotted on maps and control board comes through with graphic realism, with sufficient lighter asides to provide typical touches of humor.

Competent standard of acting set by the principals is followed by the whole cast. Jack Hawkins and Michael Denison are the two big shots of the base and their sharp discipline is tempered by a generous measure of understanding. Dulcie Gray has little more to do than appear sympathetic as the wife of the harassed control room chief. John Gregson makes a good showing as the impetous young pilot and Veronica Hurst adequately provides the one hint of romance. Cyril Raymond, Andrew Osborn, Humphrey Lestocq and Ronald Adam are among the prominent characters at the air base and play their roles with skill.

George More O'Ferrall has directed efficiently and Christopher Challis handles the cameras nicely. Daniel Birt has done a neat editing job. Myro.

Pictura

Feature-length film showing art works of six masters. Narration by names. Topnotch for sureseaters.

Pictura Films release of Leonid Kipnis-Herman Starr production. Features Vincent Price. Comprises six connecting episodes: The Lost Paradise, Hieronymous Bosch, directed by Luciano Emmer and Enrico Gras, commentary from the King James version of the Bible, narrated by Vincent Price, music by Roman Vlad; The Legend of St. Ursula, Vittore Carpaccio, directed by Luciano Emmer, coproduced by Sergio Amidei, commentary by Richard Nickson, narrated by Gregory Peck, music by Roman Vlad; Francisco Goya, produced and directed by Luciano Emmer and Lauro Ventura, narrated by Harry Marble, music by Isaac Albeniz, played by Andres Segovia; Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, directed by Robert Hessens and Olga Lipska, produced by Pierre Braunberger, commentary adapted from the French by Herman Starr, narrated by Lilli Palmer, music by Guy Bernard; Paul Gauguin, directed by Alain Resnais, produced by Pierre Braunberger, commentary from the letters and journals of Gauguin, research by Gaston Diehl, narrated by Martin Gabel, music by Darius Milhaud; Grant Wood, directed By Mark Sorkin, produced by Leonid Kipnis, photographed by John Lewis, research by Jules Schwerin, narrated by Henry Fonda, music by Lan Adomian. Introductory sequences directed by E. A. Dupont, photographed by Ernest Haller. Previewed in N. Y. March 26, '52. Running time, 82 MINS.

"Pictura," first feature-length film on the subject of art, is a unique experience in art appreciation. This is no ordinary trip through museums to view static paintings, but a fascinating, entertaining introduction to the lives and works of six great painters. Pic is a natural for the art house trade, and added revenue can be obtained via tieups with local schools and museums.

An unusual camera technique which almost brings the paintings to life, a skillful use of music and a beautifully written and narrated commentary combine to make "Pictura" an exciting film experience. Use of such names as Lilli Palmer, Gregory Peck, Henry Fonda, Vincent Price, Martin Gabel and TV announcer Harry Marble for the narrations is not only effective but sure to serve as a b.o. draw. Only Price is seen on the screen as he introduces the six episodes and serves as a "guide" to a group of university students "on an exciting voyage into the far reaches of human imagination."

The six artists whose works and lives are presented are Hieronymous Bosch, Vittore Carpaccio, Francisco Goya, Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, Paul Gauguin and America's own Grant Wood. Either specific works of the painters are used to tell a story or a legend, or the canvasses are employed to reflect the life and times of the specific painter. Latter technique is used for Goya, Toulouse-Lautrec, Gauguin and Wood.

Not the least of the film's effectiveness are the musical scores for each episode. For example, the Goya episode is enriched by the music from the guitar of Andres Segovia. Composed by Isaac Albeniz, the music blends perfectly with the "animated" presentation of the Goya paintings. Music by Roman Vlad, Guy Barnard, Darius Milhaud and Lan Adomian is also outstanding.

Although different directors, producers, writers and technicians worked on the separate episodes, each group in its own way has succeeded in completely capturing the spirit and intention of the individual artists. Only thing that could have possibly enhanced this excellent production would have been the use of color. This is only a minor criticism, for those connected with the film have succeeded in endowing the black-and-white production with unusual vividness. Holl.

Domenica

(FRENCH)

Paris, Feb. 27.

AGCD release of Maurice Cloche production. Features Odile Versois, Dinan; J. P. Kerien, Alain Quercy. Directed by Maurice Cloche. Screenplay, Jacques Deval; camera, Nicolas Hayer; editor, Renee Gary. At Le Raimu, Paris. Running time, 87 MINS.

Domenica	Odile Versois
Carlo	Dinan
Giuseppe	J. P. Kerien
Patrice	Alain Quercy

This is a weak attempt at a tempestuous, involved love idyll that falls short because of contrived plotting, wooden acting and lacklustre direction. For the U. S., it has exploitation pegs on its theme for special slotting or possibly some dualers.

Shot entirely on location in Corsica, it concerns a strange girl who feels she does not belong to this barren isle and tries to get away by finding a lover to carry her off. Main story is her love affair with a young student from Paris. Love scenes are handled unimaginatively. Various breast shots of Odile Versois may make for scissoring.

Film's main flaw is the rambling, undeveloped plot and flagrant casting of Odile Versois as the supposedly sensuous, half-mad Domenica. She is much too girlish for the role. Alain Quercy as her vis-a-vis is stilted and unconvincing. J. P. Xerien in a small role as the husband gives the film its only touch of authenticity.

Lensed in Corsica, the Nicolas Hayer camerawork does not take advantage of the local color and mood. Daytime stuff is good but interiors are murky. Mosk.

I Believe in You

(BRITISH)

British-made documentary-type meller; looks like fair boxoffice in U.S. market.

London, March 5.

GFD release of Michael Balcon-Ealing Studios production. Stars Cella Johnson, Cecil Parker, Godfrey Tearle. Produced and directed by Michael Relph, Basil Dearden. Screenplay, Jack Whittingham, Michael Relph, Basil Dearden; camera, Gordon Dines; editor, Peter Tanner; music, Ernest Irving. At Odeon, Leicester Square, London, March 5, '52. Running time, 95 MINS.

Phipps	Cecil Parker
Matty	Cella Johnson
Hooker	Harry Fowler
Norma	Joan Collins
Mr. Dove	George Relph
Pr. Pyke	Godfrey Tearle
Mr. Quayle	Ernest Jay
Jordie	Laurence Harvey
Buck	Stanley Escane
Del	Cyril Waits
Mrs. Ursula	Ursula Howells
Sergt. Body	Sidney James
Miss Macklin	Katie Johnson
Mrs. Crockett	Ada Reeve

A documentary-like treatment spotlighting the work of probation officers provides a neat peg on which to hang a story of youths from the slums mixed up with criminal gangs. In a modest sort of way, it is engrossing material and should get fair boxoffice returns on either side of the Atlantic.

The script focuses on two probation officers, one male and one female, and also on two young people who are put in their charge. Gradual influence on the minds and behavior of these near-criminal youngsters who react to the after-care work is told with compelling sincerity and against a background of typical incident and characters.

Courtroom scenes, interviews with prisoners in their cells while awaiting trial, remarks by the cranks and cronies who haunt the courts, are among the features which widen the scope of the plot. They also increase the entertainment appeal by the inevitable drama and relief.

Cecil Parker and Celia Johnson play the two main roles in contrasting style, Parker being at first self-consciously superior until brought down to earth by the understanding Miss Johnson. The two principal juvenile delinquents give Harry Fowler and Joan Collins firstclass opportunities, and both turn in strong dramatic performances. Subsidiary roles have been filled carefully with artists of the calibre of Godfrey Tearle, George Relph and Ernest Jay leading an accomplished team.

Direction by Michael Relph is straightforward. Maurice Carter's settings are convincing and editing by Peter Tanner is competent. Myro.

La Table Aux-Creves

(The Hunting Ground)

(FRENCH)

Paris, Feb. 27.

Marceau production and release. Stars Fernandel. Directed by Henri Verneuil. Screenplay, Verneuil, Andre Tabet; camera, Andre Germain; editor, J. Rongier. At Normandie, Paris. Running time, 90 MINS.

Arbain	Fernandel
Jeanne	Maria Mauban
Victor	Henri Vilbert
Depenoel	Delmont
Fernande	Andrex
Priest	Rene Genin

This is a peasant drama of southern France dealing with the rugged practical farmers and their moral and spiritual troubles. Film lacks the deep humor and character of its predecessors such as "The Baker's Wife." It is a cross between a macabre comedy of manners and a serio-comic love affair. The Fernandel name should give this a boost for special situations and the theme offers exploitation pegs. This lacks the stature for arty spots.

Film starts out by showing a farmer who returns home one day to find his wife has hanged herself. Then story goes into the village reactions to his possible guilt.

Fernandel's playing is hampered by the split atmosphere of the film, and he slips into mugging and straight playing for a loss of balance in the role. The usual rustic types from talkative women, to the cuckolds and the tormented priest are all well-filled. Maria Mauban is decorative as the girl in question. Henri Verneuil has followed the Marcel Ayme book quite literally leading to many talky spots. Lensing is crisp and takes fine advantage of the location scenery for good production values. Editing is smooth. Mosk.

Ragazze di Piazza di Spagna

(Girls of Piazza di Spagna)

(ITALIAN)

Rome, March 4.

A.D.C.N. release of Astoria Film (Rudy Solsen) production. Directed by Luciano Emmer. Original story and screenplay, Sergio Amidei; camera, Rudolfo Lombardi; editor, Vittorio Trentino; music, Mario Ruccione. Tradeshown in Rome. Running time, 96 MINS.

Marisa	Lucia Bose
Elena	Ulosetta Greco
Lucia	Liliana Bonfatti
Marisa's mother	Ave Ninchi
Elena's mother	Leda Gloria
Augusto	Renato Salvatori
Marcello	Marcello Mastroianni
Alberto	Mario Silvani
Vittorio	Eduardo De Filippo

(In Italian; No English Titles)

This latest picture of Rudy Solmsen's Astoria Films is an original story of family life in modern Rome. Plot takes the principal characters to the beautiful Piazza di Spagna and into apartments of middle-class working people, which seems a welcome change from the sordid sidestreets and alleys used so often in Italian pix. A good cast, headed by three new Italian lookers, a generous share of humor and a lively pace should make this okay for good returns in U. S. foreign-language theatres. The three comely newcomers may add additional exploitation value.

Yarn picks up Lucia Bose, Cosetta Greco and Liliana Bonfatti in the shop of a Rome fashion house and follows them up, developing the love story of each. Miss Bose has Renato Salvatori as her sweetheart but when she becomes a top model, he is temporarily cast aside as she goes in for nightlife. There is the familiar reconciliation, when she realizes she actually does not crave nightclubbing as a habit.

Miss Greco becomes embittered when she finds out that her lover, a bookkeeper, has been two-timing her. All of her friends have sweethearts and she is further annoyed by her widowed mother trying to make a good match for her. She attempts suicide but later falls for an honest taxicab driver. The third femme, Bonfatti, is shown as a natural flirt who always is surrounded by admirers. Ultimately, a long-time admirer, a race horse jockey, wins.

Film is nicely paced, with Luciano Emmer's direction obtaining good performances, and the three attractive girls handling their roles adequately. Ave Ninchi, as Miss Bose's mother, turns in her usual good acting job. Salvatori, Mario Silvani and Marcello Mastroianni are believable as young Romans of today. Eduardo De Filippo is wasted in the minor role of Vittorio. Sergio Amidei's scripting holds charm and interest and sometimes is humorous. Tubb.

L'Amour, Madame

(Love, Madame)

(FRENCH)

Paris, March 4.

Sirius release of Sirius-Raoul Ploquin production. Stars Arletty, Francois Perier. Directed by Gilles Grangier. Screenplay, Francois Giraud; camera, Jean Isnardi; editor, Madeleine Gug. At Marignan and Marivaux, Paris. Running time, 87 MINS.

Arletty	Arletty
Francois	Francois Perier
Diane	Marie Daems
Mother	Mireille Perry
Wardrobe	Jeanne Fusier-Gil

Film is a lightweight comedy of an awkward young playwright who gets entangled with a big star and how she helps him see the light. It is played to the hilt by Arletty and Francois Perier, but never gets away from the play original. Situations are talky and humor is strictly local, depending upon the audiences being hep to Gallic personalities and show biz allusions. Film is limited in this respect for U.S. slotting. Might do for special spots on the Arletty name.

Arletty, playing herself, has to share a sleeper with an unknown young man. The boy, Francois Perier, is tongue-tied by her presence and they part amicably. This simple incident is built up by his ambitious mother into a liaison to give him prestige. His flighty girl now begins to go for him but into this comes Arletty. Then pic goes through some well-done situation gags as he tries to keep up the pretense with Arletty helping him along. He finally tells his girl, who drops him. From all of this he writes a play which is a big success.

Arletty is dynamic and appealing in a roisterous takeoff on herself. Perier is perfect in timing and reaction as the young artist who manages to bungle through his first big affair. Marie Daems stands out as the dimwitted, stagestruck girl whose snobbishness and naive romanticism keep the boy on edge throughout. Gilles Grangier has kept these slim proceedings moving at a good clip. Story would be a good bet for a Hollywood rewrite. Mosk.

Tanz ins Gluck

(AUSTRIAN)

(Color-Songs)

Vienna, March 4.

Sachafilm release of Weiner Mundus production. Stars Johannes Heesters. Directed by Alfred Stoeger. Screenplay, Fritz Koselka and Lilian Belmont; camera, Herbert Geier and Kurt Schultz; music, Robert Stolz. Color by AGFA. At Apollo, Vienna. Running time, 95 MINS.

Pedro Damin	Johannes Heesters
Rose v.Feuerkogel	Lucie Englisch
Rosemarie Reisdorfer	Waltraut Haas
Ines Cavalcante	Ursula Linzen
Lola Quandtner	Ami Maier
Mira Cavalcante	Grethe Weiser
Pablo Ferrelra	Ulrich Bettac
Porter	Beppo Brehm
Heinz Falkenheyan	Josef Egger
Hyazinth Quandtner	Fritz Imhoff
Antonio Vicente	Hans Richter

The names of Johannes Heesters, as star, and composer Robert Stolz alone guarantee a good draw from the outset. This should build via word-of-mouth because it is an excellent production. It is one of the better Austrian pix for the U. S. market.

A lot of natural comedy is developed by the scripters, which used the original operetta libretto only as a frame. Story tells of intrigues of a danseuse, with her exlover led to believe many outrageous things.

Heesters turns in a competent job as the lover and singer while Waltraut Haas scores handily with a fine characterization as a stage deb. Fritz Imhoff and Joseph Egger are not as funny as usual. Others are okay. Heesters sings most of the hit tunes plus the added songs, "Primavera," "Red Lips" and "Fiddler," to which Bruno Hardt Warden and Ludwig H. Ulrich added nice lyrics. "Red Lips" has a true Stolz melody. His musical direction is flawless.

Pace is brisk enough but the pic appears to need cutting. Camera work is good. Color is not so strong. A remake in English might be successful. Maas.

October, 1952, and British Board of Trade in a letter to Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Assn. of America prexy, has asked for a new confab. Talks will probably get under way in either June or July, and it is feared that Britain will ask for a cutdown on the amount of coin going to the U. S. Recent remittances from England have been between $23,000,000 and $24,000,000, the result of additional concessions obtained from the British last year. Pact calls for a basic $17,000,000 remittance, and industryites are hoping that this amount will be able to be maintained.

Western German Curbs

Up to recently there have been no restrictions on remittances or limitation on playing time in Western Germany. However, with the rebuilding of the German film industry, some playing time has been taken away from American pix and there have been some indications of added taxes to subsidize German films. MPAA's Berlin rep recently returned to the States and outlined to film execs the situation in that country.

In Belgium, the industry still doesn't know where it stands. At one time Belgium was the classic example of the free market. Situation changed at the end of last year, and filmites in the U. S. still don't know the amount of coin they'll be able to withdraw from there. France took stock of its balance sheet at the beginning of this year and clamped down on remittances. Nothing has come out of Argentina for quite a while, and the situation there is said to be due for review shortly. Brazil recently added additional restrictions.

The industry has been in the fortunate position that when one market closed down another opened up, but no one knows how long this will continue. For example, when the English and French markets tightened, Western Germany became a good customer. The Japanese market became available a short time ago, but it is far from a free market. An agreement was recently concluded with Spain.

American outfits have tried many methods to make use of the frozen coin. They've invested in local businesses and real estate, and have arranged exchange deals with American importers. Latter arrangement brings some coin back, while the local investments accumulate more coin which companies hope to eventually withdraw. Making pix in foreign countries is another gimmick to use up coin. But, as one exec pointed out, "How many pix can you make abroad? The production of pictures in all countries is not practicable."

Execs of all film companies agree that there is no ready solution, and the settlement of the money question depends largely on the world situation. All they can do, they noted, is hope for the best and work for the best possible deals in the negotiations with the foreign governments.

Problems faced by the industry, such as the California law, and the Federal Court decision which have forced payoffs to members of the "Unfriendly 10," were pointed out to the legionnaires.

Present for MPAA were Eric Johnston, Joyce O'Hara, Kenneth Clark and Sidney Schreiber. Company toppers attending included Nicholas M. Schenck, Barney Balaban, Y. Frank Freeman, Nate Spingold, William H. Clark, John O'Connor, Theodore Black, Spyros Skouras and Sam Schneider, plus Maurice Benjamin for the Assn. of Motion Picture Producers. Meeting took place following the two-day session of the MPAA executive committee, which was moved to Washington.

Goldwyn - Krim agreement reached at their last session was to the effect that the film-maker would not renew with RKO until UA is given an opportunity to offer its proposed releasing pact terms.

Krim additionally is slated to resume negotiations with Lew Wasserman, Music Corp. of America prez, on a projected deal for a number of MCA clients to do indie pix for UA release on an ownership-participation basis.

berg, five pic will go out in July and August, and eight additional are tentatively listed for September through December.

In other activity on the releasing front this week, 20th-Fox distribution director Al Lichtman announced that 20th's slate for May 15 through the end of the year will include six reissues, all of which will have new ad material and press books. These are "Leave Her to Heaven," "Crash Dive," "To the Shores of Tripoli," "Home in Indiana," all in color, and "Laura" and "This Above All."

(WB), a newcomer, rounded out the Golden Dozen.

"Phone Call From Stranger" (20th), "Hoodlum Empire" (Rep), comparatively new the past month; "Death of Salesman" (Col) and "Lone Star" (M-G), fifth in February, are the runnerup films in that sequence.

"Singin' in Rain" (M-G) looms potentially socko on the basis of its initial week at the N. Y. Music Hall, where it is the Easter-season picture. "Mutiny" (UA), which also got under way last month, came through with some fine to strong sessions. In Seattle, it was the top new pic the week it opened. "Rancho Notorious" (RKO) ranged from good to mild last month.

"Flesh and Fury" (U), a newcomer as the month ended, chipped in with solid to smash returns prior to coming into the N. Y. Loew's State. "Deadline—U.S.A." (20th), which drew very favorable reviews, was rated good on preem week at the N. Y. Roxy, but dipped sharply in its holdover session. "Something to Live For" (M-G) varied from mild to okay. "Tembo" (RKO), also new, was inclined to be uneven.

"Waco" (Mono) came through with several okay sessions in March. "Invitation" (M-G), also just getting under way, was spotty. "Steel Town" (U), which got a batch of new bookings last month, pushed up solidly as March ended.

"Marrying Kind" (Col), new Judy Holliday starrer, started out like it was picking up where "Born Yesterday" (Col) left off, with a sock preem week at the N. Y. Victoria. "Sword's Point" (RKO) began to show more promise as the month closed. "Green Glove" (UA), likewise new, came through with some fine to okay weeks.

"David and Bathsheba" (20th) was highly disappointing when routed around again at pop scale. "Woman Is Dangerous" (WB), not up to par for a Joan Crawford starrer, managed to cop a 10th place one week in March. "Las Vegas Story" (RKO) wound up ninth another week last month.

"Meet Danny Wilson" (U), currently at the N. Y. Paramount, where Frank Sinatra, star of pic, is appearing as star of the stage bill, collected some sizeable coin on scattered datings in March. "Pandora" (M-G) displayed enough one week to land ninth position for that week. "Girl in Every Port" (RKO), which was 10th in February, fared very well on several playdates.

"Room for One More" (WB), sixth in February, managed to land 11th one week. "Cimarron Kid" (U) continued showing marked stamina for a western. "Detective Story" (Par), which finished its main dates early this year, collected some additional coin via a few strong dates. "Red Skies of Montana" (20th) continued spotty. "Ma, Pa Kettle at Fair" (U) was big in Louisville and okay in Detroit, its initial playdates.

Myers' Blast

via large-screen tele, and the regular telecasters can travel parallel paths of progress.

In Washington last week, Myers issued a press statement which, among other things, charged the telecasters with putting the pressure on film companies to release standard theatrical pix to TV. The TV outfits were doing this, he said, to bolster their own "unsatisfactory programs."

He also accused the Department of Justice and the FCC, under the "influence" of the telecasters, of "bulldozing" the film companies into releasing product to TV.

N. Y. execs commented that to seek to gain advantages for one industry, such as films, by downbeating another in an allied field is an impossibility within the framework of free enterprise. The idea of blasting TV is in violation of this principle, according to some observers. They added that harmonious relationship between tele and the film industry could hardly be achieved where one undertakes to make an enemy of the other.

Film men also remarked that Myers' expressed views on the FCC could even impair the trade's chances of success when hearings are held for special channels on large-screen theatre tele.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

United Paramount Theatres veep Bob Weitman and RCA v.p. Manie Sacks, both close friends of Frank Sinatra, have been guiding him in his campaign to win friends and influence people (especially of the press and photog corps) that he's a "new" Sinatra. The crooner, currently at the Broadway Paramount, N.Y., and doing well, has been intent on "mending some fences," referring to his poor press relations of the past. Kidding-on-the-square he sent the Press Photographers Assn. of N.Y. a note, "I'll always be made up and ready in case you ever want to shoot any pictures of me."

Sinatra shares Sacks' apartment when in N.Y. and it is generally believed that he can swing over from CBS to RCA at will. Meantime Sinatra has been huddling with Abe Lastfogel, g.m. of the William Morris agency, since leaving the MCA bailiwick.

Reported, also, that Universal will make another picture with him—Sinatra is currently personaling with his U pic, "Meet Danny Wilson," at the N.Y. Par. Report the producer lapsing its option on a second film is awry.

Universal short subject, "Danger Under the Sea," released without fanfare in December, 1951, is receiving an unusual hypo as a result of unsolicited national magazine breaks. Pic, viewed by editors in theatres, brought forth requests for stills which U had to make up in a hurry and resulted in a full-page layout in U. S. Camera and a forthcoming two-pager in Coronet. Interest caused U to hold a special screening for mag editors, an unusual procedure for a two-reeler.

Footage, uncovered by Thomas Mead, U's shorts topper, shows divers working underwater without the typical cumbersome apparatus. Pic was made off the coast of France with the aid of a special underwater camera and depicts divers exploring shipwrecks. Interest in "Danger" has prompted U to examine additional footage which it'll release shortly as "Rhythm on the Reef," a one-reeler.

20th-Fox will come in for some indirect plugging tomorrow (Thursday) when the Armed Forces, Red Cross, USO-Camp Shows and other groups jointly sponsor a huge blood donor rally in Times Square, N.Y., at noon. Slogan will be "Give Blood to Our Armed Forces With a Song In Your Heart." Songstress Jane Froman, upon whose career 20th's "With a Song In My Heart" is based, will present a special citation to Army vet Simon Schneider for donating his eighth gallon of blood. Comedian Jack Carter will emcee.

Alan Ladd will start his first starrer for Warners, "The Iron Mistress," on April 15, and the chances are that it will be released ahead of three pictures he made at Paramount. Trio in the Paramount consists of "Thunder in the East," completed nearly a year ago; "Shane," finished last October, and "Botany Bay," which wound up in February. None of them will be released before 1953. Meanwhile "Red Mountain," Ladd starrer produced by Hal Wallis, goes out in May.

Two-hour pictures are on the increase in Hollywood, with seven longies slated for 1952 release as compared with five in 1951. Paramount has three: Leo McCarey's "My Son John," 121 minutes; "Carrie," 137, and Cecil B. DeMille's "The Greatest Show on Earth," 151. Two at RKO are "Jet Pilot," 152 minutes, and "The Big Sky," 148. Metro's "Scaramouche" runs 124 minutes and 20th-Fox's "What Price Glory" was recently clocked at two hours and 18 minutes.

Paul E. Glasse, manager of Fabian's Embassy Theatre, Reading, Pa., has been issuing a booklet for the past 15 years to troupers, managers, execs, libraries, newspapers and friends which he calls "Lest We Forget." Booklet includes list of show people who died during the year with brief biographical sketches appended.

Minimum of 1,000 prints are being made of "Front Line '52," a 10-minute short produced by Paramount for the United Jewish Appeal. Starring Eddie Cantor, the one-reeler deals with economic problems facing Israel and asks funds to assist in solving them. UJA national goal, incidentally, is $151,500,000. Cantor short will be made available to communities throughout the country in 16m prints.

WarnerColor, a new tint process which Warners unveiled last week in Hollywood, stems from studio experimentation that began almost five years ago in association with Eastman Kodak scientists.

Vail Seeks Yankwich Probe

dios to make settlements with the ousted members of the "10."

Vail read from the transcript of the 1947 hearing at which Cole never answered whether he was a member of the Communist Party and even ducked telling the committee whether he belonged to the Screen Writers Guild. Yet Cole kept insisting that he was answering the questions. On the basis of this testimony, a Federal Court found Cole guilty of contempt, fined him $1,000 and sent him to Federal jail for a year.

"Inherent in that finding and sentence," said the Congressman, "was shock and offense to the community and public hatred, scorn and contempt within the meaning of the good conduct clause, a fact that Judge Yankwich chose to ignore.

"The Congress has an interest in this case that cannot be overlooked or evaded. Therefore, to fulfill the obligation of the Congress, I ask a Congressional investigation to determine the fitness of Judge Leon Yankwich to retain a seat on the Federal bench."

Reviewing Yankwich's background, Vail said that, in 1945, Yankwich was a guest lecturer at the People's Education Center of L. A., which, in 1948, was cited as Communist and subversive by the Attorney General.

"It is highly significant," said Vail, "that associated with Judge Yankwich as lecturers before the People's Education Center were John Howard Lawson, Herbert Biberman and Edward Dmytryk, three individuals included in the membership of the 'Hollywood 10.' Another lecturer was Ben Margolis.

"It provides added interest to note that he (Margolis) was one of the three attorneys representing Lester Cole in the case presided over by Judge Yankwich." The Congressman continued that "according to affidavit submitted by Loew attorneys several weeks prior to the Cole-Loew trial, Judge Yankwich confided to a friend at a party that he hoped the case would not come before him because he would have no alternate but to rule in favor of the plaintiff, Cole."

Metro asked Yankwich to disqualify himself on the ground of pre-trial prejudice, but the judge refused to do so.

because of his honeymoon?" It was generally agreed by both management reps and stockholders that this was a legitimate reason for non-attendance.

Conclave also saw four directors re-elected to the board by overwhelming pluralities. They are William M. Saal, exec assistant to prexy Yates; John Petrauskas, Jr., treasurer; Edwin Van Pelt, a Chemical Bank & Trust Co. veepee, and Douglas T. Yates, a Rep exec.

A stockholder's suggestion that some of the company's 4% debentures, which mature in 1965, be retired to save interest was rejected by the management as an unwise move. He was told that such a step could not be made since the firm is attempting to conserve its cash assets.

$2,304,531 Asked By Dore Schary in New Suit Vs. Wage Earners Group

Hollywood, April 1.

Charging continued picketing against him, Dave Schary, Metro studio head, has filed a new $2,304,531 libel suit against the Wage Earners Committee and 12 individuals in Superior Court. He dismissed his original suit against the group Feb. 8, in which he asked $1,250,000.

More individuals were named in the new complaint, which charged the group with picketing theatres showing Metro product, impugning Schary's loyalty and linking him to Communist groups. He asks that the defendants be enjoined from directly or indirectly identifying him as a Communist, fellow-traveller, sympathizer, or past or present member of any group listed as subversive by State or Federal Un-American Committees.

New damages are sought because picketing continued after filing of the original suit, allegedly further damaging Metro production topper's reputation. Schary asks general damages of $2,000,000, punitive damages of $300,000 plus $4,531.65 representing cost of advertisements he was forced to take to counteract the attack against him.

Pix Slew

against a film likely would deter Government employees from buying tickets. Under such circumstances any film would be fated for a quick commercial demise. It's observed in exec trade circles.

So far picketing has been limited to only sporadic instances, such as the recent demonstration by a downtown Manhattan chapter of the Catholic War Veterans in protest of Columbia's "Marrying Kind" at the Victoria, Broadway first-run. This, of course, burned Col toppers for the reason that Judy Holliday, star of the film, has denied that she knowingly became linked with any outfit listed as subversive by the Attorney General. Also, no one had come up with any evidence to the contrary, but still the pickets marched against the comedienne.

Political Downbeat

Seen by industryites as plenty detrimental is the political downbeating of films in official publications and organizational bulletins put out by an outfit such as the Legion. An example here was the Legion's monthly mag of last December, which listed no less than 50 pix as being objectionable because of personnel employed in their production.

Legion publication, it's noted, reaches many subscribers, and controversial articles such as those involving Hollwood receive further penetration via the word-of-mouth routine. Thus, the number of persons introduced to the listed pix is up in the millions. If only 1% refused to patronize the product, the trade clearly loses an abundance of revenue.

All this, say highly-placed industry men, translates the overall situation in terms of immediate dollars. The long-distance loss in terms of detrimental public relations through any continued identification of Hollywood with politically distastefully persons could be lots more harmful.

Fact that film company presidents and other topkicks huddled with Legion toppers this week was taken to indicate that the industry has decided on positive action in combatting the problem. Presumably, the filmites want only the opportunity to voice their side in any dispute. They believe that level-headed reasoning of the issues involved, with both the trade and outside groups in a conciliatory mood, will reduce by plenty the flareups against pix.

What's specifically feared is any snowballing of agitation against pix which indiscriminately are labeled anti-American either via story material or personnel. Since the Jean Muir episode, it's observed, right-wingers in various fields have been increasingly impetuous in placing the Communist brand, oft-times by innuendo, on persons and groups.

Bad Biz Brings Few Closings

against 18,000 five years ago, but few tradesters in the know would take that seriously. There may be that many houses, but not that many operating on either a full-time or a weekend and seasonal basis.

VARIETY sampling shows a great differential from territory to territory. Situation in Chicago and on the Coast is undoubtedly bleak. Canada, on the other hand, has seen a strong upbeat in the number of houses, and the St. Louis territory, for instance, has had 40 conventional theatres close as against 39 new ones built, plus 87 new drive-ins, making a net gain of 86 houses.

Aside from changes in types of neighborhoods, closings have been brought on in many cases by just the plain "wearing out" of theatres. Many were built years ago and got beyond the point where spending thousands of dollars on refurbishing was feasible.

As a result, their business declined, just like those in the bad neighborhoods, so that lack of b.o. was the immediate reason for shuttering. But the survey would indicate that ordinary, fingerable causes, such as tele, were not the over-riding reasons for the diminishing returns.

Bleak Chi Picture

While the fear of theatre shutterings has lessened slightly here—in fact, there is talk of several of the closed houses reopening in the near future—figures still portray a bleak picture. There are 91 theatres closed now, not counting the Palace and Grand Loop houses, which are in the midst of a motion picture operators' jurisdictional dispute, and the total number of idle seats is 58,473. That's just in Chicago proper. For the rest of the area, including nearby Illinois and Indiana, there are 52 more houses and 25,248 more seats.

An analysis of the locations reveal that most of the closed spots are in the 300-seat class, but it doesn't hold true, especially in Chicago, where it ranges up to 2,000-seaters and the average is closer to 600 seats. Vast majority of the darkened theatres are indies, with the circuits managing to hang on to their links, except in one or two cases. There's also a direct relationship in the areas of the shutterees, most of them in transient and industrial neighborhoods. For example in Hammond, Ind., home of steel mills, four of six houses are closed; nearby Gary, four out of 14; East Chicago, two out of two. Cicero, Ill., also heavy industry, has three out of six.

While there's much talk about the influence of television, a statistical breakdown also points out that it's coupled with the economics of the surrounding areas. It's true that these areas are also the points of heavy sales of teevee sets. In addition, there are about a dozen theatres running on a part-time basis in these spots. Several have switched to foreign pix.

As for the vaunted hope of drive-ins, there are 35 in the exchange, and 10 in Chicago proper. While those in Chicago average about 1,000 cars — the largest, Double Drive-In, with 1,800 — it's just about one-sixth of the unused seats. In the rest of the exchange the open-airers are much smaller, averaging about 500 seats, or 12,500 seats against the 25,482 seats—a much better percentage.

Also there's talk that the ozoners are overbuilt in this area, with several shuttering early last season. However, the seasonal lure, ease of operation and adjacent food sales, make them profitable now. This is due partly to the fact that outdoorers here show first-run pix, doubling right after the Loop, and also bidding for the first rights, before downtown showings.

Minneapolis Area Bullish

Minneapolis, April 1.

This Minneapolis film exchange territory, including Minnesota, North and South Dakota and western Wisconsin, hasn't been hit by abnormal theatre shutterings so far. In fact, it has escaped almost unscathed from visible damage of some other areas, where TV has been getting in hefty licks. But in the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, some of the fringe independent neighborhood and suburban theatres are hanging on by the skin of their teeth, and it may be only a matter of time before anywhere from six to 12 or more of the approximate 100 may be forced to toss in the sponge. Also, there's some signs of distress among the downtown first-run houses in both cities now.

However, the fact remains that, taking the period from June 1, 1950, to Dec. 1, 1951, as a basis, the total number of seats, counting drive-ins, actually has been increasing substantially, according to figures gathered by the Minneapolis Metro exchange. And the closings that have occurred couldn't have been blamed in any part on TV competition, except in a very few cases.

Part of this relatively favorable picture may be due to the fact that outside of the Twin Cities and its closely adjacent area, the territory thus far has been completely untouched by TV. And in the most of Minnesota and all of North and South Dakota, still not invaded by that dreaded boxoffice foe, the better film theatres continue to enjoy much more than normal popularity.

There are two Twin Cities TV stations—the only ones in the entire territory—and reception probably doesn't extend beyond a 70-mile radius of Minneapolis. It is these affected situations, particularly in the Twin Cities and, worst of all, in the neighborhoods and suburbs, where suffering is now acute.

Metro figures show that fr n June. 1, 1950, to Dec. 1, 1951, 44 conventional theatres, seating 11,327, have gone out of business. At the same time, 20 new conventional theatres and 45 new drive-ins, accounting for capacities of 7,845 seats and 5,577 cars, have come into existence.

The closings have included two Minneapolis and one St. Paul neighborhood theatres and one downtown former first-run house. Two of these three have been or will be converted into commercial properties. The downtown house, closed since last December, eventually may reopen.

Also, since Jan. 1, two St. Paul "A" first-runs, the Strand and Tower, have gone dark. They had been sold by the Minnesota Amusement Co. in August, 1950, to comply with the Paramount consent decree, and their purchaser is trying to toss them back into the MAC lap. When the law courts finally determine their present owner they, too, may be lighted up again, but that time is well in the future.

In this connection, it's also become known that the MAC has offered one of its four loop "A" first-run theatres, the Century, for sale for commercial purposes, although the house continues in operation and has bookings which should keep it lighted for many months at least.

Still Plenty Healthy

While the non-TV area, comprising more than 99% of the territory in point of space, undoubtedly, for the most part, shows a boxoffice drop from the recent peak periods, it's still plenty healthy in the aggregate, according to percentage picture returns and knowledge available in the exchanges here. Also, the outlook is considered very good.

St. Louis Survey

St. Louis, April 1.

Survey on theatre openings and closing in the St. Louis trade area shows that five years ago there was a total of 625 houses. Of those, 40 were closed; 39 new ones have been built, making 624 now operating.

Drive-ins constructed in the past five years total 87. These are divided into 35 in Missouri (including seven in St. Louis County), 43 in Illinois, four in Kentucky, one in Iowa, one in Indiana and two in Arkansas.

Five years ago there were 110 houses in St. Louis and St. Louis County. Of these, 28 have closed, one new has been built and 83 are now operating.

Television, drive-ins, lack of grade A films and trend of population to move westward into St. Louis County are blamed for the shutterings in St. Louis. All exchange managers say outstanding pix will do fine biz; they just can't get big grosses for others.

Price of popcorn (buttered) has risen to 20c per box; other confections also have been hiked in price.

lumbia Pix for 15 years, having started in New York as a reader. Previously she was a secretary for Paramount in N. Y.

William A. Wheeler, committee investigator who did most of the questioning, said to her, "Miss Ettinger, a witness has appeared before the Committee and has given testimony to the effect that the witness knew you were a member of the Communist Party in New York?"

"I was," she replied. She said she joined about 1935 or 1936, and quit in 1940 or 1941 while still in New York. She went to Hollywood in 1945, but never resumed association with the Commies there. She said her unit in New York was largely composed of film story readers.

"Did you know George Willner in New York City?" asked Wheeler, referring to the Hollywood writers' agent whom the Committee has named as a Commie. She said the only party member she recalled from her New York days was Lee Sabinson. "I have a recollection," she testified, "of Lee Sabinson disappearing, and I had a feeling that he was gone forever. I have seen him in the years past. He has come to Hollywood and he has produced plays. But there never was a political discussion, I had assumed that he was either out or gone."

Knew Sabinson

"You knew Mr. Sabinson in these groups?" "I knew him in the beginning of the group or towards the beginning of the group."

Then she remembered more.

"I did know Nicholas Bela. I did know Lester Fuller."

"Lester Fuller is a writer?" asked Wheeler.

"Yes, I did not know the man as a writer. I had a feeling that Lester Fuller was all through. I had a feeling that he was as displeased as I was, and then I didn't see him for many years. I met him around Hollywood and just said 'Hello.'

"Then he was brought into the studio on a job last year by somebody else. I didn't do anything about it. It was many years since I had been in the Party. I could assume that it was many years since he had been in the Party. How could I go and say to the producer, 'You can't hire this man because he is a Party member,' because I didn't know."

Miss Ettinger added that she knew Martin Berkeley as a Party member in New York, but said she had never met John Howard Lawson in New York. In response to questions, she said that in her capacity as a story editor she knew George Willner.

"Did you favor him in any way in regard to hiring writers?"

"Mr. Wheeler, I never favored agents. I favored writers with agents, but it never came about because anybody belonged to an agency.

"You mention George Willner. That makes me feel I have to tell you about a conversation I had at Columbia with Mr. Kahane, who is one of our vice-presidents. Mr. Kahane asked me about my relationship with George Willner."

"When?"

"During the period I had left Columbia, which was from May, 1947, until the end of November, 1947. Mr. Kahane said he had gotten information from somebody that when I left Columbia it was for the purpose of going into business with George Willner, and I was going to get young writers to write scripts and I was going to sell these scripts to the studio with the writer, and presumably these writers were going to be Communists.

"This is, of course, ridiculous, and I was amused by it at the time because I didn't realize the implications in it.

"But I told him the whole story, and he knew it, and I have not only the man I went into business with, but I have people in town with whom I discussed relationship with this job, who knew about it.

"Now, the reason I left is because there was a man who had worked for Columbia, an assistant to Mr. Cohn, and he left to join Nat Goldstone; that is Milton Pickman. Milton had a high regard for me. I had often talked to him about a dream to buy my own stories, hiring writers, writing scripts and selling them to studios at enormous prices, because an agent in town, Charlie Feldman, would sell scripts for $100,000 and $150,000. I had visions of being very rich."

Miss Ettinger explained the details of her short-lived business venture and said emphatically that Willner had no connection with any part of it. She said Cohn kept calling her and telling her, "You made a mistake," and that she returned to Columbia.

In response to questions, she said she knew John Weber, an agent, but did not know whether he had been a Communist in New York.

"Was any pressure ever exerted on you from either John Weber or George Willner in regard to hiring writers?"

"Just the normal pressure of an agent saying, 'This is a good writer'."

The witness said that, at the request of the committee, she had gone through the list of all writers hired by Columbia from 1945 and that "there are over 900 names on the list."

Wheeler went over the list and said, "I have recognized 38 as having been identified as having been members of the Communist Party." He continued:

"I notice here that on Oct. 24, 1946, Ben Barzman was hired. Do you recall the circumstances?" Miss Ettinger said she couldn't recall, and had even called the producer in an effort to find out.

"Who was the producer?"

"Jules Schermer. He is no longer at Columbia. He is at Fox."

Quizzed On Bercovici

Asked about the hiring of Leonardo Bercovici in 1950, Miss Ettinger said "a deal was made between Sylvan Simon and, I think, Ray Stark," and that she had nothing to do with it. She couldn't remember details in connection with the hiring of Martin Berkeley in 1945 or Alvah Bessie in 1946.

Wheeler asked about Lester Fuller, hired in October, 1949, to work on an idea called "A Day in the Life of a Detective." She remembered about this.

"We had a man at the studio who is no longer there—Erwin Gelsey," she said. "Erwin was a man who had worked on the script after the writers had worked on it. He worked very close with Jerry Bresler. Jerry had gone through severe headaches because we had a writer on it for quite a while and nothing had happened or come through to satisfy Mr. Cohn.

"Erwin met Lester Fuller and said that he thought he was very bright, and he talked to Jerry about the job. Jerry asked me to call his agent, who was George Willner, and have him come in. He talked to him and he liked him. Lester Fuller came to work.

"I again say that I hadn't talked to Lester in 10 of 11 years. I had no idea what his party affiliations were. I occasionally passed him in Hollywood and said, 'hello'. I had not discussed anything with him. I couldn't go to the producer and say, 'This man is a Communist.' I didn't know."

Miss Ettinger was asked about a long list of Red front organizations. She said she had never belonged to any of them on the Coast.

Strawn Called

Arthur Strawn, who had Robert W. Kenny and Ben Margolis as his attorneys, as did the others who refused to answer questions, said that after newspaper work and writing in the east he came to Hollywood about 1935 or 1936. He said that during the war he produced Air Force training pictures at Wright Field, where he left with a captain's commission.

Strawn listed his screen and stage credits, and Wheeler asked him about "Twilight Street." Strawn recalled it.

"Did you write this manuscript in conjunction with another author?" was the next question.

Strawn consulted with his counsel, and then replied to Wheeler: "I think these gentlemen are trying to link me up with someone else who has been mentioned in the hearings. I find that I must refuse to answer under the 5th Amendment, on the ground that my answer may tend to incriminate me."

"With whom did you write it?"

"I claim the 5th Amendment on that, too."

"Do you know J. Redmond Prior —J. R. Prior?"

"I decline to answer that question on the same grounds."

Wheeler produced the certificate of registration of the manuscript with the Screen Writers Guild. Strawn said he had not registered the story himself, but would not answer other questions.

Wheeler interjected, "The logical person to register this would have been J. R. Prior, he having an interest in the manuscript." No comment from Strawn.

"Isn't it a fact," continued Wheeler, "that J. Redmond Prior is Lester Cole?" Strawn claimed the protection of the 5th Amendment.

"Do you know Lester Cole?" "I will make the same answer to that question."

Wheeler then claimed that Strawn had done a rewrite of "Bad Men of Tombstone" for Monogram, also with J. Redmond Prior. Strawn declined to answer.

"Mr. Strawn, have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?" was the next question.

"I decline to answer." That wound up Strawn's testimony.

Eugene Fleury, who appeared without counsel, said he is an instructor at the Art Center School in L. A. Before going into the service in 1943, he had worked five years for Walt Disney and then as a background painter for the Leon Schlesinger unit at Warner Bros.

Fleury said that before going into the Army he had belonged for a short while to the Communist Party, then known as the Communist Political Association. He said he had attended meetings at "Bill Pomerantz's home."

Wheeler asked him, "Bill Pomerantz is the former executive secretary of the Screen Writers' Guild?" "I believe he eventually became that, yes."

He said there had also been meetings at the home of David Hilberman, a former animator for Walt Disney. The witness said he knew Edward Biberman, formerly a teacher with the Art Center School.

He also recalled that John McGrew, an animator with Leon Schlesinger Productions, had been in his unit, which also contained other cartoonists, but no other picture people.

Anne Ray Frank, a native of Pittsburgh, told the committee she worked for Richfield Oil for several years up to 1942, when she worked for one week as a secretary for Samuel Goldwyn. Then she went to work for MCA as a secretary. The following year she began to write for radio. Mrs. Frank said she had freelanced and was a contributor to the F. Hugh Herbert show, "Meet Corliss Archer." Known professionally as Anne Ray, she married Melvin Frank, a writer, in 1944.

"Have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?" she was asked.

"Yes, I have." She said she joined in 1943 "through a friend of mine, Mrs. Meta Rosenberg." She attended several meetings of what appeared to be a unit of radio people whom she didn't know. Then she went to New York. On returning to the Coast she joined another Commie unit.

Shortly after her marriage in January, 1944, she told her husband about her Communist membership.

"Over his strenuous objections," she testified, "I continued the meetings. My attendance was occasional and irregular, however, amounting to no more than six or seven in all."

Because her husband was "violently opposed to my membership in the Party," Mrs. Frank quit early in 1945.

Shayne Roughed Up

Robert Shayne, a film, radio and television actor for many years, another witness, told the committee he had joined the Commies in New York in 1935 and had quit after a few months.

Shayne was roughed up once or twice by Rep. Jackson as "not being completely frank" in his testimony and, in turn, claimed the committee's subpoena had cost him his job.

Following day, Prokop Jack Prokop showed up, accompanied by his counsel, Ben Margolis. The testimony does not disclose the nature of his business, but he said his business address was at 10,974 W. Pico in L. A. A naturalized citizen, Prokop said he was not a Commie before coming to the U. S.

However, he refused to answer questions about whether he was a member of the party in L. A. under the name of Jack Frank. The committee claimed he belonged to the Benjamin Franklin Commy Club in L. A.

lumbia Pix for 15 years, having started in New York as a reader. Previously she was a secretary for Paramount in N. Y.

William A. Wheeler, committee investigator who did most of the questioning, said to her, "Miss Ettinger, a witness has appeared before the Committee and has given testimony to the effect that the witness knew you were a member of the Communist Party in New York?"

"I was," she replied. She said she joined about 1935 or 1936, and quit in 1940 or 1941 while still in New York. She went to Hollywood in 1945, but never resumed association with the Commies there. She said her unit in New York was largely composed of film story readers.

"Did you know George Willner, in New York City?" asked Wheeler, referring to the Hollywood writers' agent whom the Committee has named as a Commie. She said the only party member she recalled from her New York days was Lee Sabinson. "I have a recollection," she testified, "of Lee Sabinson disappearing, and I had a feeling that he was gone forever. I have seen him in the years past. He has come to Hollywood and he has produced plays. But there never was a political discussion, I had assumed that he was either out or gone."

Knew Sabinson

"You knew Mr. Sabinson in these groups?" "I knew him in the beginning of the group or towards the beginning of the group."

Then she remembered more.

"I did know Nicholas Bela. I did know Lester Fuller."

"Lester Fuller is a writer?" asked Wheeler.

"Yes, I did not know the man as a writer. I had a feeling that Lester Fuller was all through. I had a feeling that he was as displeased as I was, and then I didn't see him for many years. I met him around Hollywood and just said 'Hello.'

"Then he was brought into the studio on a job last year by somebody else. I didn't do anything about it. It was many years since I had been in the Party. I could assume that it was many years since he had been in the Party. How could I go and say to the producer, 'You can't hire this man because he is a Party member,' because I didn't know."

Inside New York—50 years ago . . .

Re-creating a corner of old New York for the theater is a stage designer's problem.

But re-creating it so that the color camera will see it and the sound camera hear it as the eye saw it and the ear heard it 50 years ago is quite another story.

It is in reducing problems of this character that the Eastman Technical Service is of great service. Their representatives collaborate with studio technicians; they scrutinize the scenery, establish light and color balances; they help select type of film, color or black-and-white, best to use. Special laboratory procedures, too, may be worked out to ensure precise processing—all to make sure that every foot of film produces best results.

To maintain this service, the Eastman Kodak Company has branches at strategic centers . . . invites inquiry on all phases of film use from all members of the industry. Address:

Studio Publicity Group Advises on 'Movietime'

Hollywood, April 1.

Studio publicity directors committee of the Motion Picture Assn. of America will function in an advisory capacity on public relations for the "Movietime" tours during 1952, Marvin Schenck, chairman of COMPO's project, announced.

Schenck finalized the arrangement in meeting with Duke Wales and Alex Evelove, committee's secretary and chairman, respectively, and Lou Smith, COMPO's Hollywood secretary. Committee functioned importantly in 1951 tour setup.

ply the "morals clause" to one of its stars convicted "of the use of marijuana."

In reply to the Jarrico suit, Hughes made public the following statement:

"I address to you, Mr. Jarrico:

"According to press reports, in your statement to the court you say that your refusal to answer the question put to you by the Un-American Activities Committee does not entitle anyone to draw the inference of guilt against you. . . . I do not think the public should be forced to guess or conjecture as to whether a man is a Communist. I think the public is entitled to know.

"If the public made a mistake in its interpretation of your refusal to answer the committee's question, then that is truly regrettable, and it should by all means be corrected. I should think you would be more anxious than anyone else to have this mistake corrected.

"If you refused to answer the committee because of some reason which we do not understand, won't you please tell the public now, so that we may all know the truth.

"Therefore, I ask you the question: 'Are you, or have you ever been a member of the Communist party?'

"If you have been misjudged, there is a simple way to correct the matter. Just answer the question."

Hughes has, further, publicly challenged the guild to list all members whose "political beliefs might be repugnant"; how many members have ever been connected with officially designated Communist-front organizations; how many of latter are on the executive board; how long since these people have been employed by the studios; why didn't guild make public the fact that an "authorized credit panel" consisted of three SWG members only, that RKO wasn't represented or permitted to present its case; whether it was true that only two or three voted for Jarrico credit, and who they were.

of 20th in its normal operations, Skouras has been giving much attention to day-to-day developments with the Eidophor theatre television system, rights to which are owned by 20th.

Mayer has been wanting out for some time. He even booked passage for the trek abroad a couple of times but cancelled them when it became apparent that a successor in the exec v.p. spot had yet to be selected by the board.

His decision to shove off this time makes it clear that time is more important than ever in electing a president to succeed Ned E. Depinet, since it already has been decided to hold off on selecting the new exec v.p. until the new prexy moves in.

Mayer's final day on the job will be May 2, leaving only four wweks in which to decide upon the new slate. Presumably, it would be desirable to have the new v.p. on the scene at least two weeks in advance of Mayer's departure so that the latter could personally acquaint him with the post.

Meanwhile, Mayer wants it clear that COMPO is continuing to function at full steam, despite the absence of a successor to him or Depinet. Mayer, special counsel Robert W. Coyne and ad-pub chief Charles McCarthy have been pressing daily to avoid any lull in COMPO's organizational activities, it's stressed.

'Miracle' to Supreme Ct.

press before publication. Films are a medium of communication within the protection of the First and Fourteenth Amendments but yet are dehied the press freedoms, the brief states.

Films' 'Danger'

Appellant raps censorship advocates who insist that "the power and influence of movies present a danger that can be met only by regulation prior to exhibition." This danger simply doesn't exist, it's stated.

Elimination of censorship doesn't mean, however, that the industry would duck its responsibilities, the brief notes, adding: "We are not here concerned with punishment after distribution or exhibition, and it is not urged that exhibitors, distributors or producers of films should be free from responsibility for abuse of their constitutional rights. It is, on the contrary, urged that subsequent punishment for abuse is the appropriate remedy, and the only remedy consistent with the constitutional provisions guaranteeing liberty of the press."

Appellant further argued that the N. Y. decision violated the constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state, and of religious freedom. "Miracle" had been found "sacrilege" in the N.Y. ruling. Considering the beliefs of the various faiths, London asserts it's impossible to be in agreement with all creeds and equally impossible to determine where the disagreement constitutes an abuse or a sacrilege. As a matter of fact, it's added, the word "sacrilege" is vague.

In the church-state approach, London declares that the effect of the "Miracle" ban "was to impose the religious views of a minority upon all the citizens of the state. The intense resentment of the members of the other religious groups in the state was the natural, foreseeable consequence of any such intervention by the government in a matter relating to religion."

"Only a group within the Roman Catholic Church found 'The Miracle' sacrilegious," it was said in the appeal.

Rap 'Latuko' Nudity

Albany, April 1.

"Latuko," showing the life and customs of a tribe in Equatoria, cannot be exhibited in New York State theatres with scenes depicting nude males and their genital organs. The Board of Regents so ruled Friday (28) in voting to approve a report filed by a subcommittee consisting of Regents William J. Wallin, John F. Brosnan and Jacob L. Holtzman. They viewed the picture at a special screening in New York the week before.

The Regents' decision called attention to the fact that special provision is made under Section 123 of the Education Law for an application to show a picture, not publicly, as in a place of amusement. The American Museum of Natural History, which appealed a February ruling by Dr. Hugh M. Flick, director of the Division of Motion Pictures, State Education Department, denying a license for "Latuko" unless all scenes of nude male tribesmen were deleted, asked that the board give the film special consideration, in view of its educational, scientific and cultural value.

Museum President White said, in a letter made part of the record, that if the Education Department granted a license for theatre exhibition, the museum would be able to offset a probable $15,000 deficit in operations for the current year. He added that denial of the request would probably force the institution to curtail its worthwhile activities.

The subcommittee's report said: "The picture presents in color a cross-section of the life and living of the inhabitants of a small African village in the Sudan. The film undoutedly has a certain scientific and educational value. In our opinion, however, the parts required to be deleted are indecent within the provisions of Section 122 of the Education Law."

The Museum appeal, filed through Shearman & Sterling & Wright, N. Y., cited endorsements of the film—which it described as a "faithful, authentic documentary"—by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, National Federation of Women's Clubs, National Parents and Teachers Assn., American Jewish Committee, Daughters of the American Revolution, Protestant Film Council, Father Halloran, formerly president of St. Louis University, and others. It also listed theatre exhibition, without objection, in Los Angeles, San Francisco, St. Louis, Memphis, Dallas and elsewhere.

One of the exhibits in the appeal papers was a letter from A. J. Gilbert, of the Porche Theatre, New Orleans, to the Hollywood Paramount Theatre, Los Angeles, in which Gilbert referred to an advertisement in VARIETY on a successful L. A. engagement. Gilbert wrote that he understood the picture showed men "stark naked" and asked what was the reaction thereto.

Dr. Flick, in an answer to the appeal, declared that an exhibition which includes "views of the genital organs of nude males" is "a poor vehicle" through which to educate American audiences in the ways primitive tribes live—as the museum contended. He continued that there are "many subjects of truth which cannot be questioned, which might be satisfactory to portray in the classroom or lecture halls, but which become indecent when given common exploitation in places of amusement before mixed audiences of males and females, of all ages and degrees of maturity and understanding."

The "widespread interest" which the museum cited was, in Flick's opinion, caused by "the nudity presented herein," not by the picture's "scientific and cultural" values.

The reviewing staff of the motion picture department unanimously turned down the picture when application for license was filed in January.

Balto Cuts 'Rashomon'

Baltimore, April 1.

Maryland State Film Censor Board was at it again last week, ordering a slice in "Rashomon" at the Little. Cut of some two minutes in which a woman is dragged into the woods, plus some changes in subtitles, drew critical comment by film reviewers in the local Sunpapers.

Par Case 'Wedge'

The jury set the damages at about three times the theatre profits, on the ground that this is what the forced sale cost the Brookside corporation.

"The trial court," said the brief of the majors, "permitted the introduction in evidence of the original petition, the bill of particulars, the amended and supplemental complaint, the findings of fact and conclusions of law, the final decrees against Columbia, Universal and United Artists, and the final decree against Loew's, Warner, 20th-Fox and National Theatres.

"Throughout the trial the defendants contended that future profits were not the proper measure of damages, but that any damages suffered by the plaintiff should be measured as of the date of the sale. The case, however, was tried on the theory that plaintiff was entitled to have considered, in determining its damages, the profits it might have made down to the expiration of its lease in 1952, and that these profits could be measured by the profits actually realiz d by Fox-Midwest, plus the projected profits for the remainder of the lease on the earnings realized duf-ing the first 33 weeks of 1950."

Official Sets Coast Stars for Vidpic Series; Plan Network Sales Only

Official Films, new telefilm production firm headed by Ike Levy and William R. (Billy) Goodheart, Jr., took the wraps off its production plans for the first time this week, with news that it has set deals with a number of top Hollywood stars and directors for various vidfilm packages.

Among those already pacted are Charles Boyer, Rosalind Russell, Dick Powell, Joel McCrea, Robert Cummings and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Alfred E. Green, who directed "The Jolson Story" for Columbia Pictures, has been set to direct one series, and Don Sharpe, who produces the top-rated "I Love Lucy" show, aired on CBS-TV, will produce two others, with Fairbanks producing the fourth. Sharpe also handles several of the actors involved.

While budgets on the various packages were not revealed, the marquee value of the tesps indicates they'll be among the most costly vidfilm shows yet produced. On that basis, Official plans to pitch them only for national network sales, bypassing the syndication on a local spot basis adopted by most other vidpix producers and distributors. On that basis, OF will need no distribution for the packages on a first-run deal, at least.

'Four Star Theatre'

Each of the packages is to be a half-hour in length, and the first in two of them has been completed. First series to be released will be "Impulse," a psychological show based on impulsive acts of people in various situations. Produced by Sharpe and directed by Green, the cast comprises King Donovan, Paul McVey, Christine Larson and Tol Avery. Larry Marcus is scripting. Series is being lensed at the Sam Goldwyn studios in Hollywood.

Boyer, Miss Russell, Powell and McCrea will rotate in OF's "Four Star Playhouse," which is to be produced by Sharpe, also at the Goldwyn studios. George Jenkins will direct this package, which will

KNBH Getting 730 Films From MPFT in Record Vidco Releasing Deal

Hollywood, April 1.

KNBH, NBC-TV outlet here, has leased 730 motion pictures from Motion Pictures for Television, in what is believed to be the largest such pix-to-television deal ever consummated.

Inasmuch as MPFT topper Matty Fox said here recently that his company had 750 pix altogether, the KNBH transaction embraces virtually every pic the N. Y. distribution company has. Deal is for a two-year period, and begins April 14.

Donald Norman, channel sales manager, announced the deal following successful negotiations between Robert Guggenheim, Jr., manager of film operations for channel four, and David Wolper, repping MPFT. All the 730 pix are American-made product, and features vary in length from 60 to 80-minute, with no editing planned on any of the pix to trim them into identical time segments.

Each night of the week a feature film will be screened, and the following ayem the same pic will be re-run. Pix will be screened Monday through Friday, from 11:05 p.m. until end; mornings, 10:15 a.m. to 11:45 a.m.; Saturday night, 10:30 to end; afternoon, 2:30 to 4; Sunday night, 11 to end, and morning, 9:30 to 11.

Other stars in the 730 pix include Paul Lukas, Mickey Rooney,

COL NIXES TELE BID FOR 'BLONDIE' SERIES

Hollywood, April 1.

Columbia, which previously nixed a bid for its library from Motion Pictures for Television, has rejected a pitch from Stephen Slesinger for 28 of the "Blondie" pix for video distribution.

Slesinger has TV rights to the series, and has made a pilot starring Arthur Lake, who also played the role of Dagwood in the pix.

Bunin's 'Alice' Is First Color Feature to Be Set For Release in Video

Hollywood, April 1.

In the first sale of a color feature film to television, Lou Bunin's "Alice in Wonderland" has been purchased by Crown Pictures International for exclusive video distribution in the western hemisphere. Deal, representing several hundred thousand dollars in an involved arrangement, was negotiated by Henry Souvaine, of Souvaine Selective Pictures, Inc., and Maxwell J. Fenmore, prexy and general counsel of CPI.

Bunin's "Alice," which was involved in litigation launched by Walt Disney in an effort to block its American release, will be shown only twice this year in the U. S. Negotiations now are underway for special Thanksgiving and Christmas beamings on a national sponsorship basis. Presumably, since regular color video still isn't available, it will be shown as a black-

Nassers Get OK to Bypass AFM In Releasing 'Distress' Pix To Video

Los Angeles, April 1.

Efforts by the American Federation of Musicians to collect added revenue from pictures sold or leased to television ran into a roadblock when bankruptcy referee Benno M. Brink declined to issue an injunction restraining the Nasser Brothers from making a quartet of pix available for video distribution. His ruling greenlighted the bypassing of the AFM 5% pix-to-TV formula and the tune union's demand for a recording fee on such films.

Brink told the AFM that its contract with the Nassers was legal and binding—but that they could collect only by assessing damages and then going to court to obtain such damages. The ruling paved the way for wholesale release of "distressed" films to video—and most of the pix currently being offered to tele stations fall into that category.

The AFM contract, Brink held, constitutes "an agreement to agree." Under its terms, "if the Federation has any claims at all under the television clause, it is a claim for damages. If it were held that the Federation had a valid claim for damages, the Federation would not have any prior claims on the pictures but would have to share with the rest of the creditors."

During the course of the lengthy proceedings, the Nassers had offered to settle with AFM for a flat $1,000 for each of the four pix involved in litigation. The compromise was turned down by AFM prexy James C. Petrillo since such a settlement might jeopardize the entire structure of the formula under which the AFM collects 5% of the gross revenue of soundtracked films released to video.

Set Precedent

George Goggin, attorney for the Nassers, described the ruling as a "far-reaching precedent that could give a producer of motion pictures the right to recuperate his negative cost where such cost has been advanced by a bank or others and has been secured by a mortgage."

"The producers can, without restraint," he declared, "televise the pictures. It is practically impos-

BROIDY DICKERS FOR 'PROFESSOR' AS TELEPIC

Hollywood, April 1.

Negotiations for the Joseph Schildkraut-Arnold Phillips television package, "The Professor," are under way, with William F. Broidy seeking the series for inclusion in the vidpix schedule of Interstate Television, Mono TV subsidiary.

Broidy began negotiations after ogling a pair of kines of the package, which has been showcased on KECA-TV. Schildkraut and Phillips are under contract to ABC-TV, but deal provides, if they sell the show, that the net gets 50% of their residual rights in the series, which would be filmed.

Vidpic Royalty Deals Inevitable But Aren't Dangerous, Sez Labor Rep

Hollywood, April 1.

Royalty payments on vidpix to Hollywood's talent guilds, sought in current negotiations, are inevitable, but "not as dangerous as some choose to believe," declares Elliott Kelly, labor rep for Louis D. Snader and the National Society of Television Producers.

Kelly's comment comes in the midst of deep gloom besieging the vast majority of vidpix producers here, who claim that residuals sought by Screen Actors Guild and Screen Writers Guild, and other terms, plus hike recently granted IATSE, will "put us out of business."

Kelly terms the latter (and pre-

BAGNALL'S PACKAGE OF RECENT PIX FOR VIDEO

Hollywood, April 1.

Newly-formed George Bagnall & Associates, television distribution firm, has acquired 18 feature films for immediate distribution to television stations. Most of the pix were United Artists releases in 1950 and 1951.

Sales campaign on the films will get underway this week, when sales veepee Jack O'Loughlin leaves on a tour of the nation's video markets. He will be accompanied by eastern and western regional sales veepees Fred Lindquist and Ken Hodkinson.

Newest of the films purchased are "The Hoodlum," "Korean Patrol," "Federal Man," 'Forbidden Jungle," 'I Killed Geronimo," "Timber Fury," "Fighting Stallion," "Hollywood Barn Dance," "Cattle Queen," "Badman's Gold" and 'Buffalo Bill Rides Again."

Prexy George Bagnall, former UA veepee, and vice president Pat Campbell, former veepee of Mutual, Don Lee Broadcasting, will headquarter here.

Telepix Exploitation As UTP Added Service

Taking another leaf from the motion picture industry, United TV Programs, indie vidfilm syndication outfit, has established a new "sponsor service" to provide a complete package of exploitation aids for all film packages it handles.

According to Milton M. Blink, UTP exec director, the outfit has negotiated arrangements with its producers to supply the necessary material from which UTP makes up its exploitation kits. These include stills, mats, feature stories, prepared spots, reviews, etc., which are sent to sponsors immediately after each sale, much the same as the theatrical film distribs provide exhibitors with press books on all products.

DAMM REBELS GANG UP ON NBC

Hard-Hitting Sales Technique At Hometown Level Seen Offset to TV

Chicago, April 1.

Hard-hitting merchandise techniques at the hometown level has become the order of the day for more and more radio station operators, as they realign their strategy to offset the inroads of television and make a pitch for the national business that's shifting from network to spot radio. The broadcasters' awareness that an aggressive promotional "follow through" is a necessary plus service for the spot advertisers, was obvious by the interest sparked among the attendees of the National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcasters' conclave by today's (Tues.) merchandising workshop session chaired by G. Richard Shafto, WIS, Columbia, S. C.

With most of the top-dog bankrollers re-examining radio on a slide rule "what-are-the-sales-results" basis, many of them are putting their coin in the local stations. And the coin, in most cases, is going to those operations which backstop the program contract with grassroots promotion and merchandising. As Shafto pointed out, "the trend of station income is local. By that I mean it is non-network. To bolster this income, you must institute for these local and regional advertisers the same merchandising practices that have made radio economical and profitable in the sale of soap, soup and Wheaties."

'Over-Transom' Sales Gone

The lush days with their "over the transom sales" are gone, when the station manager figured that all he had to do was to get the program on the air. This, as Shafto described it, is the era of selective AM buying. The sponsor demands over-the-counter results and picks the station that can deliver not only circulation but sales.

Significantly, there was an "accent-the-positive" note at this par-

Fine Fellows

Chicago, April 1.

Not generally known is that Harold E. Fellows, NARTB prexy, is in possession of a letter from Sen. William Benton (D., Conn.), whose controversial radio-TV bill has given him top billing the past year as the industry's No. 1 enemy.

Fellows doesn't show the letter around because "they wouldn't believe it, anyhow." Despite his arch-rival status, Benton goes to great lengths in the letter to tell what a great guy he considers Fellows.

White's Status At Mutual Undecided; Bare Video Plans

Chicago, April 1.

Tom O'Neil, of the General Tire-Yankee Network empire, and now master of all he surveys within Mutual's far-flung empire (with a 58% control), made his initial appearance here before the network's affiliates and won an endorsement from the station men on his future AM and TV plans. O'Neil bared Mutual's aspirations for moving into video, with a network of large and small stations, and although the official announcement was couched in unrevealing double-talk, it's known that O'Neil's plan envisions a network of filmed programming for simultaneous release around the country.

Of equal importance but left hidden, however, was the future status of Mutual president Frank White, whose three-year term expires May 1. There has been considerable conjecture as to whether White returns to Mutual, and it's

FCC on Hand To Take a Chi Bow

Chicago, April 1.

If there were any apprehensions among broadcasters as to new delays on the lifting of the TV freeze, they were practically dispelled when, for the first time, virtually the whole FCC Commission body put in an appearance at the NARTB convention.

With FCC chairman Paul Walker scheduled to make his initial public address since taking over as successor to Wayne Coy, he was accompanied to Chi by Commissioners Rosel Hyde, George Sterling, Robert Jones and newly-appointed Robert Bartley. Only absentees were Frieda B. Hennock and Edward M. Webster.

Walker, of course, will probably talk on the freeze lift, scheduled for announcement next week, probably on Monday (7). Veteran broadcasters say they don't recall when an FCC chairman was accompanied to an NAB convention by such as "bodyguard" representation of Commission colleagues, and the fact that so many showed up to take appropriate bows was seen as clear indication that they've paved the way for the UHF era in television.

Any further delays would have found Chairman Walker on the spot, what with broadcasters "bracing at the TV bit."

L'ville WKYW's 5th Anni

Louisville, April 1.

WKYW, town's all-musical indie, is currently whooping up its fifth birthday anniversary with spot announcements and special shows. Station is giving away 200 radio sets for the best letters written in, offering suggestions on how the station can improve its programs and service during the next five years.

MULLEN, KERSTA TIE UP AS CONSULTANTS

Chicago, April 1.

Frank E. Mullen, former exec veepee of NBC and more recently an industry consultant, showed up at the Chi convention to announce he is pooling resources with Noran E. Kersta (also ex-NBC) for an expanded consultancy service for TV broadcasters, including "assistance in financing, application procurement, facilities construction and detailed plans for all phases of station operation." Mullen will operate out of the Coast, Kersta in the east.

Associated with Kersta in the New York office is Ray Kelly, ex-NBC production director.

UNITE FORMALLY FOR TV COIN HIKE

Chicago, April 1.

Out of the year-in-year-out rump sessions spearheaded by Walter Damm, rambunctious broadcaster of WTMJ-TV, NBC affiliate in Milwaukee, has come a permanent organization, organized Sunday (30) on the eve of the NARTB convention here. New association, with Damm as president, and which won the backing of 35 of the 48 NBC-TV affiliates represented, will go to work on NBC in an effort to erase what is claimed to be "existing inequities."

Just what recognition it will get from NBC-TV is something else again. Web has its Station Planning Advisory Committee to handle the grievances of the affiliates, but the new Damm association, averring that there are areas in which SPAC can't function effectively, sees need for "further expression of the affiliates," which will work through SPAC in trying to resolve differences. Nonetheless, some saw it as a rebuke to SPAC, as well as the network, with a few of the key affiliate broadcasters taking the position that "some of the SPAC boys seem to be laboring for NBC rather than the affiliates."

Initial campaign to be waged by the new association will be directed toward station compensation, with a committee appointed to evolve a new formula, which will return a higher percentage of the overall network dollar to affiliates. NBC-TV affiliates feel that the time has come to reappraise their sphere of importance in overall network scheme. They don't think the present standard formula of shelling out 24 hours of free time to the network each month, and receiving 33⅓% of their rate card as the sponsorship spoils, adds up to a fair shake.

Higher Compensation

They want higher compensation, either through elimination of free hours, hiking the compensation percentage, or both. The committee's formula will be taken to the affiliates for individual negotiation with the network. Committee comprises Damm, Nathan Lord, WAVE-TV, Louisville; Clair McCullough, WGAR-TV, Lancaster, Pa.; E. R. Vadeboncoeuer, WSRY-TV, Syracuse; John Outler, WSM-TV, Atlanta; Harold P. See, KRON-TV, San Francisco, and Ray Welpott, WRGB, Schenectady.

The new association thinks something should be done by the network about hitchhikers and cowcatchers, claiming they're "too glaring" and should be integrated more effectively into the program structure. It will also seek a greater voice in the web's overall program operation, move already reflected in its criticism of the NBC-TV daytime schedule.

The affiliates resent the fact that NBC-TV is spotting too many of its strong public service shows in station time, necessitating local pre-emptions of sold periods, and feel that the web, too, should share the rap by slotting them in network time as well.

Fellows Regime Gets NARTB Okay For Sparking Org's Prestige Rebirth

Chicago, April 1.

It was "Hail Fellows well met" at this year's NARTB convention, as the banner turnout of delegates virtually agreed that the year-old regime of Harold E. Fellows as president has vested the parent trade organization with a new-found prestige and importance.

In a sense, the Chi convention this time up, with an agenda rooted in a knowhow and appreciation of what troubled broadcasters want to hear about, was in the nature of a tribute to Fellows. Whatever the contributing factor, it's recognized that the new NARTB prexy has sparked a rebirth of and enthusiasm for the organization in its multiple thrusts to hurdle the current transitional problems.

Some agreed that, basically, it's because Fellows is a broadcaster, understands his business, and knows what other broadcasters are talking about. Others point to his personality, and cite the importance of "being liked on the hill" without the need of becoming a professional lobbyist.

But on an equal level are two other elements in Fellows' favor, it's pointed out. Unlike his predecessor, Judge Justin Miller (now board chairman), who had made it an almost annual practice at conventions to lambast the trade press and look upon it as a destroyer, Fellows has a recognition of the constructive role the trade press can and does play on behalf of America's broadcasters, and conducts himself accordingly.

Also, Fellows parlays the attributes of a business man and an administrator, capable of making both policy decisions and business decisions on his own. It's pointed out that Judge Miller's penchant for putting policy decisions up the Board would throw the onus on the directorate when things went wrong, frequently creating a "house divided" within the NARTB organizational structure.

And finally, the broadcasters cite Fellows' background as a showman.

Steering 'Em Right

Chicago, April 1.

Of all industry exhibits that attracted steady streams into Exhibition Hall at NARTB convention headquarters here, it remained for RCA to pull the "stunt of the year" and pack 'em in.

Although it's got nothing to do with set manufacturing, recordings or network operation, RCA has brought on a live steer (weighing somewhere in the neighborhood of 1,200 pounds). Anybody can have a crack at guessing its weight. The one who comes closest to it by convention checkout time, gets equal poundage in frozen beef.

Affiliates Sore At NBC-TV Day Program Skeds

Chicago, April 1.

NBC's television affiliates are up in arms over what they characterize as the sad state of affairs of the network's morning and afternoon program schedules. They don't like it and they want the network to do something about it—and fast.

Specifically, the affiliates are concerned over the long sustaining stretch extending from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., and take the position that if NBC put in stronger shows than currently exist, it may invite some daytime advertisers. Criticism of the web's morning schedule did not include the 7 to 9 a. m. "Today" show, which in fact drew favorable off-the-cuff comment from station operators.

Some affiliate members didn't mince words in protesting that CBS daytime programming, particularly in the morning, was far superior to NBC's.

The affiliates were also vexed over the network's holding back on announcement of its summer program plans, criticizing last summer's crop of replacements as being not up to par, and wanting to know what's afoot for this summer.

SMITH JOINS GAINES ON NBC O.-&-O. STATIONS

Carlton D. Smith, until recently in charge of station relations for NBC, has been appointed director of operations for the web's owned-and-operated stations, under o-&-o. stations v.p. James M. Gaines.

Smith takes his new post April 14 in the new setup under which Harry Bannister, ex-WWJ and WWJ-TV (Detroit) general manager, becomes station relations chief.

NBC-TV Hit On Cancel Clam-Ups

Chicago, April 1.

NBC-TV affiliates don't think they're getting a fair shake from the network when cancellations come up. They're complaining that invariably "everybody but the affiliate knows about it" when a sponsor cancels out, with resultant disruption of their own local schedules.

The affiliates assembled at the Walter Damm rump session squawked that NBC purposely holds back on announcing a cancellation, to prevent local stations from selling the time or picking up a rival network's show. Cited as a case in point was Admiral's dropping of "Lights Out," with the affiliates claiming that although NBC knew about it weeks ago, the stations were notified long afterward, NBC even shelling out four weeks' extra compensation to affiliates in a bid to hold the time period.

Linkletter to Bring CBS $6,000,000 in Billings

Hollywood, April 1.

CBS will have another fair-haired boy this fall in Art Linkletter, comparable to Arthur Godfrey in helping to fill the net's tills. His 11 half-hours in both radio and television will account for annual billings of $6,000,000. This marks the first time the Coast star on his own has made a fiscal contribution of such proportions.

Next season Linkletter will have his "House Party" on both radio and tele five times weekly, plus a single weekly shot of "People Are Funny" for teevee.

BAB Girding for Banner Season; Warns Vs. Radio Deals, Rate Cuts

By FARRELL DAVISSON

Chicago, April 1.

Broadcast Advertising Bureau—the industry's own "sell radio" arm—is off and running with an expanded budget, new board chairman and enthusiastic endorsement from broadcasters attending the NARTB convention. That the trade's own advertising adjunct, now formally divorced from NARTB, has reached maturity under president William Ryan's aggressive leadership the past year, is underscored by the fact that membership is at a new high.

BAB boasts membership of 500 stations, with figure expected to zoom appreciably before the NARTB conclave ends. It starts its new fiscal year this month with a budget of $468,000—50% over last year's. Figure, of course, will mount as additional broadcasters climb aboard. In fact, Ryan and company hope to up the kitty to $750,000 by Oct. 1 to do the selling job they figure needs to be done.

Small Potatoes?

As new board chairman Charles Caley, WMBD, Peoria, pointed out, this is still small potatoes when compared with $1,250,000 shelled out annually by newspaper associations to plug their merchandise. Caley takes over the chairmanship post from Ed Kobak who is stepping down because of press of other duties. Kobak has been a key figure in BAB since its inception, and will remain active in the organization as chairman of the exec committee.

But before turning over the gavel to Caley, at yesterday's (31) session, Kobak repeated his lecture against deals and rate cuts. Same theme was sounded by Ryan, who urged broadcasters to screw up their courage and nix appeas to slice rates even if the turndown results in lost accounts. He argued that radio has picked up new momentum the past several months, and that the line can be held on

NARTB 'Rodeo'

Chicago, April 1.

Broadcast Advertising Bureau provided one of the major conversation pieces of kick-off day of the NARTB convention, with its western motif "roundup" session yesterday (Mon.). Showmanly affair, masterminded by BAB prexy Bill ("Bronco") Ryan and staff to offset the usual pewholder fatigue, combined entertainment and business for one of the best attended meetings in NARTB annals.

Show was emceed by WLS cowboy singer Bob Atcher, and formal BAB pitches were sandwiched by a bull-whip act, lariat whirler and tunes from a Range Quartet. Shilling the clambake was covey of gals outfitted in brief chaps.

Format had Ryan and new BAB chairman Charles Caley decked out in western togs, complete with sombrero. Retiring chairman Ed Kobak came dressed as an injun. All in all, it was literally a bangup powwow climaxed with door prize drawings—a year's supply of beef brought in on the hoof.

Cash & Members Finds NARTB In Industry Clover

Chicago, April 1.

Healthy state of affairs within the National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcasters is reflected in the organization's financial statement and the record convention turnout this year, exceeding by several hundred the previous top mark of 1,900 official registrants. Two years ago the NARTB (then the NAB) was broke. It even had difficulty scraping together the payroll.

Last year it was on the way to recovery, with $48,000 in the bank. Today the association has a surplus of $138,000, and this in the face of a 30% cut in dues attending the complete divorcement of BAB (Broadcast Advertising Bureau), which has its own dues-collecting setup.

Veteran broadcasters say it's a throwback to an earlier decade in broadcasting, when station operators were looking for the AM answers, even as today they're trying to cope with TV. Fact that last year there were only 1,300 official registrations, indicates the enormous strides made by NARTB within a year. Today 90 of the 108 TV stations are enrolled, including all the video networks.

Murrow Gets Top '51 CBS Paycheck

Salary of $132,144 paid to news commentator Edward R. Murrow topped the list of payments to CBS directors during 1951, it was revealed in the network's proxy statement mailed to stockholders last week. Board chairman William S. Paley received $100,000, while prexy Frank Stanton received the same salary plus $51,597 in the forms of bonuses and shares in profits.

Annual stockholders meet, according to the proxy, will be held April 16, at which time shareholders will vote for seven Class A and eight Class B directors. One Class A director remains to be nominated and may be proposed at the meet. If no nomination is forthcoming at that time, it's proposed that the CBS board will elect the eighth member sometime subsequent to the meet. "In the opinionf of counsel for the corporation," the proxy said, "this procedure is proper from a legal point of view."

Statement also informed stockholders that, pursuant to authorization by them at the last annual meet, Stanton has been granted an option to buy 100,000 Class A shares at $26.57 per share. Option

'Meeting' Loses Backer; To Stay as Sustainer

Reichhold Chemicals, which is backing the video version of "America's Town Meeting" on ABC-TV, is cancelling out. Last broadcast of the show, beamed Sundays at 6:30 p. m., will be April 20. Sponsor is bowing out after a 13-week cycle.

ABC-TV at this point has decided to continue the series, with George V. Denny, Jr., as moderator, as a sustainer. Reichhold reportedly exited the show to invest more coin in some overseas plants.

SWEZEY RENAMED TV BOARD HEAD FOR NARTB

Chicago, April 1.

Robert D. Swezey, of WDSU, New Orleans, was renamed chairman of the television board of the NARTB at the annual election Monday (31). Elected for two-year terms on the board were Swezey, George B. Storer, of Fort Industry Co.; Clair McCullough, of WGAR-TV, Lancaster, Pa.; Harold Hough, WBAP-TV, Fort Worth, and Paul W. Raibourn, KTLA, L. A.

Named for one-year terms were William Fay, WHAM-TV, Rochester, N. Y.; H. W. Slavick, WMCT, Memphis; Campbell Arnoux, WTAR-TV, Norfolk, and Ken Carter, WAAM, Baltimore. Board administers television affairs of the association, of which 88 TV stations and four networks are members.

New Complexion Seen For NARTB Confabs; Sights Bring Wide-Eyed Ogling

Chicago, April 1.

NARTB conventions are taking on a whole new com- -xion. A few short years ago radio broadcasters would have rubbed their eyes in bewilderment at the type of people who now show up, or the veritable "wonderland" of multi-slanted exhibits.

With the advent of TV and the half a hundred auxiliary operations that go into the making of video, "Exposition Hall" at Chi headquarters of the convention looks like a Jules Verne creation. Everybody and his uncle's got an angle and, surprisingly enough, they're getting plenty of wide-eyed ogling, so enthused are the broadcasters over the "new horizons" that seems to keynote this year's convention.

McFADDEN TO DIRECT NBC NAT'L SPOT SALES

Chicago, April 1.

Tom McFadden is being brought back to N. Y. from the Coast by NBC to take over as director of the web's national spot sales, it was revealed here today (Tues.) by Jim Gaines, veepee-manager of the NBC's o.&o. stations.

For the past two years McFadden has managed KNBH, the web's o.&o. video outlet in Hollywood. Prior to that, he managed WNBC and WNBT in N. Y. He succeeds James McConnell, who was dropped last week after 21 years with NBC. McConnell has since announced an affiliation with the John Blair station rep agency.

For the past year, national spots, which has assumed a growing major importance, has come under Gaines' jurisdiction. Successor to McFadden on the Coast has not yet been determined.

Nothing's Too Good

Washington, April 1.

When big stakes are involved, no expense is too great in presenting a case before the Federal Communications Commission. Paramount Pictures, United Paramount Theatres and ABC have all submitted elaborate exhibits in the current hearings on antitrust and related issues.

But when it came time last week for the CBS end of the UPT-ABC merger deal, Bill Paley's boys stole the cake. To prove its qualifications to take over WBKB-TV in Chicago (a mere $6,000,000 transaction), CBS provided parties to the proceeding with blue letheroid hatbox-size dossiers, each containing a set of 24 handsome blue portfolios detailing the web's record in broadcasting, various phases of programming operations (including the developmental story of "See It Now"), and a complete history of the web's o.-and-o. AM station in Chicago, WBBM, which will operate WBKB if the AB-PT merger is approved.

The dossier, a 50-pound parcel, was prepared by H. Leslie Atlass, chief of the web's central division.

New Selling-in-Depth Technique Pitched to Sponsors by Pat Weaver

New selling-in-depth concept for television advertisers, in which a sponsor will give viewers a complete, rounded story on not only his finished product but the people and processes involved in turning out that product, was proposed this week by NBC-TV exec veepee Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver, Jr.

According to Weaver, straight product advertising usually adopted by sponsors reveals a one-dimensional, flat and incomplete picture of American business. "This is a vital part of the American economy," he pointed out, "but it is also far more limited than it need be. Too often it is subjected to the accusation of 'huckster' because of extravagance of claim, slickness of outward form, imitativeness and phoniness of story. Too little of it in many instances is real information about the goods for sale to the American public, and about the companies that market the goods and about the men and women who produce them.

"That this information," Weaver added, "must be made into reason-why copy stories, is granted; that the advertising should reflect a character represented by the manufacturer, is usually granted; that both must be supplemented in times to come by a more complete picture of the whole process, is my conviction. And the ones who do it first will gain the most.

"As a matter of fact, many companies already recognize that their position with the consumer depends on more than direct sales advertising. Hence the support of public service campaigns via sponsored air time and space. But I am talking of fundamentally broadening the depth of sales appeal—of giving the consumer honest-to-goodness, demonstratable, in-the-flesh reasons why he should do business with Company X—in terms that are 100% straightforward and unchallengeable by the critics of business and advertising."

To provide sponsors with the opportunity to sell their stories in Whichaway?

Chicago, April 1.

As the "most watched guy" at the NARTB convention, Harry Bannister won by a wide margin. Bannister, as general manager of WWJ and WWJ-TV in Detroit, has been a "station man" since the early days of radio. But effective April 15 he moves to NBC as station relations boss.

Since there's no love lost today between the stations and the networks, and since Bannister's allegiance is still pledged to WWJ for the next couple of weeks, delegates were watching whether Bannister was "going thataway or thisaway."

NBC prexy Joseph H. McConnell and exec veepee Charles R. Denny came on to Chi to toss a cocktail party for Bannister Monday (31) to officially "introduce" him to the affiliate station managers.

FM-ers Fight Vs. 'Orphan Status'; 3 Drives Clicko

Chicago, April 1.

FM radio, the industry's orphan that refuses to stay lost, was back at the NARTB convention again this year, if anything stronger than ever. New hullish spirit of FM broadcasters springs largely from success of the first trial runs of the joint NARTB-Radio & Television Manufacturers Assn. campaign to spark interest in the medium.

Evidence of fruitfulness of the FM drive currently underway in three sections of country is already indicating there's a market for high fidelity service if it's aggressively promoted. On the basis of preliminary successes, NARTB's FM committee, headed by John H. Smith, has set further meetings with RTMA to work out details for continuation and expansion of broadcasters-manufacturers-retailers co-op effort. FM operators and retailers from practically every section of the nation have asked to be counted in on the program.

So far this year's "Sell FM" venture has been tried out in Washington, D. C., Wisconsin and North Carolina. In latter two states 6,000 FM sets have been sold during campaign which is still underway. Returns from nation's capitol are no yet in as project didn't get rolling until March 15.

Evidence that FM broadcasting is still very much alive and kicking was shown by yesterday's (Mon.) overflow meeting. Delegates extracted a promise from the committee that a larger hall would be provided next year.

A heretofore rather hush-hush angle popped out at the conclave to give FM enthusiasts further encouragement. That was reports from an increasing number of AM

ED PETERSON JOINS CBS AS STORY CHIEF

Edgar A. Peterson departs as producer-director of "The Faye Emerson Show" (CBS) within two weeks to take over at CBS-TV as manager of the story department. Peterson's last Emerson show will be April 12, and he joins CBS April 15. Story department job has been open since William Dozier was upped to the post of exec producer for CBS-TV dramatic shows.

Peterson came east from the Coast a year and a half ago to become producer of "Pulitzer Prize Playhouse" on ABC. He was producer-director of "The Amazing Mr. Malone" (ABC) just before taking over the Emerson program. For years he was a general production executive in the film business, as an aide to Dore Schary at RKO, David Selznick and Frank Capra.

Kintner Sees OK On ABC-UPT Tie

Robert E. Kintner, ABC prexy, told a meeting of 600 ABC radio staffers in Gotham Friday (28) that the FCC hearings on the proposed merger with United Paramount Theatres progressed well, and that there was no reason to doubt that the Commission would eventually approve the consolidation.

Kintner, speaking on the eve of the web's exodus from the RCA Bldg. to its new home on West 66 St., said it was expected that the FCC would okay the ABC-UPT wedding as in the interests of better radio and tele service. He said the Commission had been told that the merger would find ABC in the same relationship to the new corporation as Time or Life magazines have to Time, Inc.

That would mean, he indicated, that Robert J. O'Brien and Robert W. Weitman, UPT execs who will join the web if and when the merger is approved, will work full time for the network and not be involved in the theatre end. They will report to him, Kintner said, and he will report to UPT prez Leonard Goldenson.

ABC prexy said that the web's new radio studios in Gotham, Chicago and L. A., costing $3,000,000, are proof of its faith in radio's future. He told the radio staffers that they would be given first choice on switching to video, rather than hiring outside personnel, but that AM is still healthy and vigorous and is bringing in the coin. He therefore recommended that many of those in the radio side stay where they are.

MRS. DAYTIME DIALER'S PROFILE

70,000 'Viewdents' Say Comm'l TV Can Handle Public Educ'l Needs

By SANFORD MARKEY

Cleveland, April 1.

Commercial television can offer education the necessary outlets to meet the public's needs without taking special educational channels, according to a survey released to VARIETY by Western Reserve University on the basis of its "Telecourse" program started last September on a half-hour 9 a.m. WEWS Monday-through-Friday basis.

The survey reached students who took courses in elementary psychology and literature for both credit (for which they paid a fee) and for non-credit. The survey reached an estimated 70,000 "viewdents" of Telecourse and was conducted by Elroy L. Stromberg, professor and chairman of the department of psychology, and Peter J. Hampton, assistant professor of psychology; both taught the TV psych course.

The survey showed educational courses "given on television are sound and produce good results" in that:

1. Viewdents scored higher final marks, had better term papers and better attendance than campus students.

2. Courses reached a vast segment of the population "thirsting for additional knowledge."

3. Courses provided a new and different type of highly approved programs.

At the same time, both Stromberg and Hampton pointed out that the half-hour 9 a.m. program reached only "an almost exclusively female audience," and Stromberg maintained that commercial television must provide that evening time to reach the "male viewing audience also desiring educational programming."

Both he and Hampton also said they had received letters from

Chicago April 1.

WNBQ gave its Thursday night (27) audience a literal peek at an early-evening hotel fire. The station poked a couple of cameras out of windows on the 19th floor of its Merchandise Mart studios and shot the smoke and flames coming from the burning building several blocks away.

However, either because the fire wasn't considered major enough or they didn't want to break into the regularly scheduled network shows running at the time, WNBQ squeezed the coverage into two 30-second stations breaks at 7:30 and 8 p.m. It was probably the most minute special eventing on record.

Colgate Worried On Soaring Costs Of 'Comedy Hour'

Colgate, seriously concerned with rising costs on its NBC-TV "Colgate Comedy Hour," is reappraising continuation of the hour-long stanza. Sponsor is currently spending around $92,000 weekly for the package, including both time and talent, and that figure may soar to over $100,000 for the '52-'53 season if the present trends go on unchecked.

Among the plans proposed is one for a "rubber budget" on the hour, which would vary the amount of coin spent on production of each telecast. Nut would be geared to shell out proportionately more coin in the peak viewing weeks, and less as audience drops. That is also expected to mean shuffling the dates on which the various comics appear, as well as trimming production trappings, etc., on dates when smaller outlay is called for.

There has also been some discussion of dropping the stanza entirely and subbing two half-hour s'ows in its place. One of these might be a half-hour show built around Louella Parsons.

Gardner 'All Star' Debut Via Film

Hollywood, April 1.

NBC-TV's "All Star Revue" will use filmed show for the first time May 31 when Ed Gardner makes his video debut in a "Duffy's Tavern" skit. He flatly nixed a live show. Gardner, just back from Puerto Rico, owns controlling interest in his show, which will be budgeted at over $30,000. He's dickering now for lensing the hour-long layout at either Filmcraft or Roach studios. Comedian said he'd been nixing tele because he prefers film, and because he feels no comedian can be on regularly without wearing out his welcome.

The May 31 show marks start of a deal calling for a minimum of six shows, maximum of 10. Plans call for a musical story integrated into the situation comedy, with Jeanette MacDonald probable guester on the initialer, which James Kern probably will direct. If video works successfully, Gardner plans to drop the AM show, feeling both would be too much work. He plans a week's rehearsal, and two days shooting for the filmed show, which Leo Morgan will produce from AM scripts adapted for the visual medium.

WGAR Adds FM

Cleveland, April 1.

Reversing a trend, WGAR has applied for and has received an FM license. Entry of the 50,000 watter into the FM field locally marks the first such new station since two others (WCUO and WLAL) folded.

"Expansion involves a cost of $50,000," said Carl George, general manager, "and demonstrates our belief in the future of the aural medium."

Weekly School Report To Be Year-Round Feature Due to 'Inside' Success

WNBC and WNBT, Gotham flagships of NBC, have had such response from their "Inside Our Schools" series—which involves 70-odd radio and tele shows in the span of a month—that WNBT is scheduling a weekly report on the schools as a year-round feature. Half-hour program will be aired Saturdays in a daytime spot still to be picked by WNBT program chief Dick Pack.

Pack, who joined WNBT after general manager Ted Cott launched the "School" operation, finds that there is a wealth of interesting and significant material on the educational system and a variety of ways in which it can be presented —via forums, debates, remotes in the classrooms, coverage of parent-teacher meetings, etc.

Station, which is co-operating with Life mag on the project, is distributing 1,000,000 copies of a checklist, prepared by the weekly, with which parents and taxpayers can evaluate the schools. It lists 63 points on which a city's schools can be judged. Citizens are asked to check the points as they catch the WNBC-WNBT shows. Questionnaire, besides getting the citizens' rating of the schools, will also serve as a yardstick in measuring the effectiveness of the month-long program series.

HAS 2 KIDS, $4,500 AVERAGE INCOME

Profile of the average daytime radio listener has been put together by Colgate, based on research of its own, plus census data and material gleaned from the Chicago Penetration Study, Horace M. Schwerin and other audience analyses.

Using a sample of 8,000, the analysis found that the average daytime dialer is a married woman, between 30-34 years old, who has been wed for 11 years to a factory worker. Family's income is between $3,683-$5,542 annually, and includes two kids, a boy and a girl, aged eight and five.. They own their own home, which is valued at $7,500, but they have a mortgage to worry about.

Study covers listener's personality and habits, as a key to slanting programs to appeal to his specific audience. The target femme is interested mainly in her children and her home, although national and local affairs interest her more than in the past, the study indicated. She reads a local newspaper, subscribes to one magazine (probably a home, garden or fashion magazine) and occasionally buys a fiction or picture mag. She reads but one book a year, and her favorite literature is a light romance. She doesn't like stories with a sad ending.

A high school graduate, she cannot speak a foreign language and distrusts persons with foreign accents—although to a lesser degree than in the past. She has visited New York City once, would hate to live there, would like to see the West.

They Eat Well

Hausfrau doesn't discuss world affairs very much with her hubby, but she is concerned about his health and his progress on the job. She has three intimate woman friends, but isn't in a social club (later on she probably will join a woman's club or garden club).

Her health is good, but she's worried about the kids and their future. The family eats well, although not lavishly. She buys about four dresses a year, wears very little makeup, and has one permanent wave a year.

She is not very sophisticated, considers most stage and screen personalities as probably immoral, objects to swearing and excessive display of sex. If she likes audience participation shows, chances are she doesn't go for soap operas.

She would like to be on a participationer, but feels she would be scared. Her response to quizzers is directly dependent on her knowledge of the answers. Male emcees are preferred, particularly sympathetic, down-to-earth personalities rather than excessive smoothness. She objects strongly to emcees who embarrass contestants.

By contrast, fan mail received in 1951 by "Young Dr. Malone" and "Road of Life," both backed by Procter & Gamble, reveals that almost half of the letters were not written by housewives. Some 23% came from models, teachers and retired business people.

New Hazel Bishop Stanza Bowing to Quick Revise

Hazel Bishop cosmetics over the weekend completely revised plans for its new stanza, which preems on NBC-TV tonight (wed.) at 10 p.m. Airer will be "Your Prize Story," vice "What Shall I Do?" Stories will be romantic dramas, based on true experience tales submitted by viewers. Winners will get $1,000 for their yarns, which will be adapted by Margaret Sangster, soap opera scripter.

Show is packaged by Raymond Spector, head of Bishop's ad agency and former manager of Macfadden Publications.

NBC-TV Plans Shifting Skelton To 7:30 Sun., Miner Drama for Wed.

NBC-TV is reportedly planning two major program shifts for next fall, moving its high-rated "Red Skelton Show" down into the Sunday night at 7:30 slot and airing the new hour-long drama series to be produced by Worthington L. (Tony) Miner Wednesday nights at 8. Latter period is now held by the "Kate Smith Evening Hour." Questioned about the two moves, NBC-TV exec veepee Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver, Jr., answered "No comment."

Skelton, now slotted Sunday nights at 10 under Procter & Gamble sponsorship, has been up among the rating leaders since he preemed last fall. With General Foods opening up the 7:30 period at the end of this season, by checking off its "Young Mr. Bobbin" show, NBC is said to think that moving Skelton into that spot would bolster its entire Sunday night linenup. While both "Colgate Comedy Hour" at 8 and "TV Playhouse" at 9 have been outpulling their competing shows on rival networks, a lead-in by Skelton is expected to give them a stronger hold on the Sunday night audience.

Skelton's show originates live from the Coast, but the comic has been said to be favoring a switch to film for next season on the assumption that it would be less taxing. If the show continues live at 7:30, that would mean it would be aired on the Coast at 4:30 in the afternoon. To obviate that apparent difficulty, it's presumed that NBC would follow the "hot kinescope" route, recording the show on film for a playback on the Coast at 7:30.

Reported decision to slot the new Miner show Wednesday nights is reportedly based on the inability of Miss Smith's evening show to buck successfully CBS-TV's "Godfrey and Friends," which is aired directly opposite. NBC execs are said to think that a high-quality dramatic program would fare better against Godfrey's informal comedy-revue format. That would mean, however, that Miner's show would be aired back-to-back with "Kraft TV Theatre," also an hour-long dramatic series.

Web reportedly still considers Miss Smith a potentially strong personality for evening TV'ing. Whether it would continue her in an hour format for next fall or build a new half-hour package for her, however, hasn't been revealed.

Stripped Bare

Chicago, April 1.

Red faces abounded at NBC here last week when the execs opened their newspaper and found the WMAQ call letters prominently featured in a Minsky's burlesque ad. The ad announced the appearance of stripper Sally Sweet, complete with picture, and billed here as "Jack (Chez Paree) Eigen's Telephone Sweetheart — The Girl You've Heard About On WMAQ."

Eigen has been plugging the gal for the past several months on his nightly show aired from the Chez Paree over the local NBC outlet.

After some frantic phone conversations the station got its call letters out of the ad, but the Eigen mention continued.

Crosby to Decide This Week on Sub For Chesterfield

Hollywood, April 1.

Bing Crosby will make a decision this week on which of three interested bankrollers will succeed Chesterfield as his radio sponsor. He's closing out the ciggie firm but will be on air next season. Deal will give sponsor first call on TV when Crosby is ready for that medium. The Groaner and his producer-writer Bill Morrow are definitely opposed to weekly telecasts, and will insist on filmed shows. It's likely Crosby will take a few guest shots next season while continuing in radio.

If they come up with a good TV idea this summer, they'll prepare an audition. Otherwise they'll go along with radio. Schedule favored by both is weekly radio, monthly tele.

UCLA-Cornell Study On 5-Branch Merger Ready Shortly; Confab With 4A's

College labor relations experts mulling proposals for a blueprint under which the branches of the Associated Actors & Artistes of America can unite in a five-branch merger, are expected to announce their recommendations in a week or so.

Professorial group, from Cornell U. and the U. of California in Los Angeles, confabbed with reps of the 4A's last week. They outlined some of their proposals and discussed procedural questions.

Meanwhile, votes are being counted in the two referendums being conducted by the American Federation of Radio Artists and Television Authority on the proposed two-branch merger which would take place on July 1, if the five-branch merger hasn't been achieved by that time. Deadline in the referendums was yesterday (Tues.) and results will be announced shortly.

There was campaigning on both sides of the merger issue. American Guild of Variety Artists and Actors Equity each sent out circulars attacking the proposed AFRA-TV wedding as "casting doubt" on the work of the UCLA-Cornell study before it is even completed, and thus making a five-branch consolidation less probable. On the other hand, AFRA and TVA leaflets said that a vote in favor of the AFRA-TVA constitution "in no way precludes" the possibility of five-branch merger, but would make the July 1 deadline stick and thus "end procrastination" by the other branches.

Ennds Lights Up NBC's 'Lights Out'

Despite indications of a growing "softness" in the TV sponsorship picture, NBC video sales execs this week wrapped up a new sale in near-record time by pacting Pearson Pharmcal to take over its Monday night "Lights Out" show. Because of the sale, NBC is able to post the SRO sign again for its Class A evening time.

"Lights" had been bankrolled this season by Admiral, which checked off the show after the March 24 broadcast. With Pearson, for its Ennds product, taking over next Monday night (7), the web had an open stanza only last Monday night (31). And it filled that time, too, by inking Time magazine to sponsor a special one-shot edition of its early-bird "Today" show in the "Lights Out" time.

Agency for Ennds is Harry B. Cohen.

CBS-TV Repacts Lewis

Marlo Lewis was pacted to a new six-year deal this week by CBS-TV.

He continues as exec producer in charge of all the web's musical and variety shows, and also as co-producer with Ed Sullivan of "Toast of the Town."

Can. B'casters Sore at Music Fee Hike; Denounce Govt. Holdback on Tele

Toronto, April 1.

Decision of the federal Copyright Appeal Board to increase royalties for performance of copyright music, drew howls of protest in closing sessions of the four-day convention of the Canadian Assn. of Broadcasters here, which was attended by over 400 delegates from all parts of Canada, the membership embracing 87% of the Dominion's independent stations.

New formula will now double the royalty revenue to the Composers, Authors and Publishers Assn. of Canada (ASCAP affiliate), with independents and the federal-operated Canadian Broadcasting Corp. now ordered to pay 1¾% of annual gross revenue to CAPAC, instead of the former fee of 7c per householder set in the station area. Delegates were also incensed at the Copyright Appeal Board's decision that radio stations' books will henceforth be liable to CAPAC inspection.

In concern at a departure from the previous 15-year-old practice of collecting music royalties, the CAB board of directors sent on a protest to the Copyright Appeal Board, pointing out that music publishers should not be entitled to a percentage of station revenue derived from other than musical broadcasts. According to T. J. Allard, CAB g.m., the indies last year paid CAPAC some $152,000 in music royalties; this year they will pay an estimated $350,000.

The future of Canadian radio looks bright and business is good and shows prospects of becoming better, said D. Malcolm Neill, chairman of the CAB board of directors. But he also deplored the fact that Canada has no television, though private radio has been willing and anxious to develop TV in Canada at no expense to the taxpayer. "A completely unrealistic and not unselfish national policy has rendered it impossible for individual private companies to obtain TV station licenses," he said.

Though Toronto and Montreal will have federal-operated TV stations in August, he deplored the fact that Canadians across the

More Web Execs Join Station Reps

Growing importance of the AM and TV spot field is pointed up by network execs joining station representative outfits. Latest to make the move is James V. McConnell, for the past 21 years a key figure in NBC (most recently as director of national spot sales), who will become a veepee of John Blair, station rep, on May 1.

McConnell started with the old local service bureau of NBC and championed the use of simplified spot rate cards, which differed from the network rate structure. In his new job, McConnell will work both on radio and tele phases.

WJZ, N.Y., SHIFTING 3 SHOW PERSONALITIES

WJZ, N. Y. key of ABC, is shifting personalities on three shows. Replacing Herb Sheldon, who was dropped by the outlet due to his adding a stint for WNBT, N. Y., is Tom Reddy, who formerly was on "County Fair," Ladies Be Seated" and an all-night show for WJZ. He has taken over the 6:30-8:15 a. m. stint (with time out for newscasts), and starts a 2-2:30 p.m. afternoon strip next week (7).

Eddie Dunn, who is on the Jack Berch show, is taking over for John Reed King on "Grand Union Caravan," due to medicos prescribing a rest for King. Program chief Ray Diaz is on the prowl for a disk jockey to replace Bruce Wendells, who has been doing the 3 a.m. insomniac stretch from Birdland. Broadway jivery. Wendells has been drafted.

What! No Violin?

Jack Benny's "secret" yen to be a songwriter, which has become almost a running gag on his Sunday night radio show via CBS, will be carried over into TV Sunday night (6), when Snooky Lanson sings "When You Say 'I Beg Your Pardon,' Then I'll Come Back to You" on CBS-TV's "This Is Show Business.". Words and music, it says, are by Jack Benny.

Comic's AM-TV cleffing parlay, of course, is tied in with the fact that Lucky Strike sponsors both his radio show and "Show Biz," while Lanson is chief male singer on "Hit Parade," also a Luckies show. According to "Show Biz" producer Irving Mansfield, Benny "is no threat to Cole Porter."

Nolan Ankling 'Kane' on AM-TV Over Film Snag

Lloyd Nolan is ankling both the radio and TV versions of "Martin Kane, Private Eye" at the close of the current cycle, because the show's sponsor has refused to permit him to do the video version on film. Bankroller, U. S. Tobacco, is releasing him from his term pact after the May 22 video broadcast. Radio show, because it's taped in advance, will continue through June. Both shows are aired on NBC.

Nolan has both his family and home on the Coast, and since the TV show has been originating live in N. Y., he's been forced to commute almost weekly between Hollywood and N. Y. During the last eight months, he's been forced to turn down proffered roles in six films, according to Lester Linsk, his personal manager. Because of these factors, and also because he wanted a participation share in residual rights on his projected switch of "Kane" to a vidpix basis, Nolan has been insisting on the video show's shift to film.

Sponsor and the Kudner agency, which handles the account, are expected to come up with a replacement for him within the near future. Nolan, meanwhile, expects to enter vidfilm production with Linsk under the banner of their Transworld Productions, concentrating on documentaries based on official files of Government and civil agencies. He's the second "Martin Kane" to leave the show, William Gargan having created the role originally.

WEINTRAUB LAPS UP BLATZ FOR ALL MEDIA

Weintraub agency, which has repped Blatz Beer this season on TV, this week grabbed off the rest of the account, which had been the subject of spirited bidding among some of the top agencies during the last several weeks. Under the new setup, Weintraub will take over Blatz's total billings of about $6,000,000 per year, picking up the print and outdoor media biz which had been handled by Kastor, Farrell, Chesley & Clifford.

Weintraub has handled Blatz until now on the TV version of "Amos 'n' Andy," a show which has been consistently among the top 10 raters this season. It's believed that its success with the CBS video show was one of the primary factors in its snagging the rest of the account. Blatz is a subsidiary of Schenley, and Weintraub also has several other Schenley products.

World's 'Get a Hit'

World Broadcasting System has released "Get a Hit," transcribed baseball series. Each 15-minute program is designed to feature a local personality as narrator, with World providing the scripts and musical elements.

ABC's Van Horn 'Story'

Arthur Van Horn, who broadcasts as "Dean Cameron" on WJZ, N. Y., starts a new series on the ABC flagship Monday (7) at 8:15-8:30 p.m.

Titled "I Covered the Story," airer will consist of interviews with reporters who have done outstanding journalistic work in the previous week.

House May Vote AM-TV Probe On 'Offensive' Pgms.

Washington, April 1.

A Congressional investigation of radio and TV programming may be voted this week when the House is expected to take up the Gathings resolution creating a 15-man committee to inquire into "offensive" broadcasts and literature.

The resolution, introduced by Rep. E. C. Gathings (D., Ark.), was favorably reported last week by the House Rules Committee. It is identical with a resolution offered by Rep. Carl Elliott (D., Ala.) and similar to one introduced by Rep. Edward H. Rees (R., Kans.).

The Committee would be authorized "to conduct a full and complete investigation" to determine:

1. Extent to which radio and TV programs "contain immoral or otherwise offensive matter, or place improper emphasis on crime, violence and corruption."

2. Content of such matter in books, particularly so-called pocket-size books.

3. Adequacy of present laws to eliminate "offensive and undesirable" broadcasts, "and promote higher standards for such programs, and prevent the publication and distribution of books containing immoral, offensive and other undesirable matter."

The Committee, to be appointed by the Speaker, would consist of four members from the Commerce Committee, four from the Judiciary Committee, four from the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, and three from the general membership of the House, regardless of committee affiliation.

The resolution requires the Committee to report the results of its investigation during the present Congress. Hearings would be held in Washington.

Seattle AFRA in Strike Vote Against Web Locals For Economy Proposals

Seattle, April 1.

A strike against local network stations has been unanimously approved by the membership of the Seattle local of the American Federation of Radio Artists. The strike vote was taken after the stations had proposed a cutting down of announcing and engineering staffs, and creation of combination men to handle both announcing chores and platter spinning.

AFRA members are currently working under terms of the last contract, which expired Feb. 15, and negotiations on a new contract are under way, with George Leonard, of Washington Employers, handling negotiations for the stations. Stations included are KIRO, CBS; KJR, ABC, and KOMO, NBC. KVI, Mutual outlet, is not unionized.

New contract with independent stations, calling for a wage increase of 4.74% and the inclusion of commentators for the first time, is all set, with only ratification by the membership to make it official.

The network stations, saying they are caught in a "declining market" with resultant loss of revenue, want to cut down on both announcing and engineering staffs to effect operating savings. Members of both AFRA and IBEW are solidly against the proposal.

AFRA officers say that management of the indies, who negotiate directly, are much easier to deal with than Washington Employers, a labor-negotiating firm that represents network stations. They say that negotiations would be much easier and not so drawn out if they could negotiate directly with the network stations' management.

Pre-Code, Foreign Pix on TV Key Sex, Propaganda Sensitivities

Chicago, April 1.

The dusting off of motion picture oldies for television salvaging is highlighting the changes in standards of taste that have come up about the past couple of decades. Likewise the shifts in the country's political climate as reflected in the video revival of some of the dated "message" pix that blossomed during the '30s are especially pronounced in the present context.

The situation has elevated the film editors at the four Chi tele stations to new importance as TV film distribs reach farther and farther back on the shelf for product to peddle to video. The screening room traffic cops not only have to be alert for breaches of the current standards of decorum. In some cases, they also have been warned to guard against those films whose propaganda overtones have been outdated by historical changes.

It's a long and arduous task, this scanning the flock of shorts and features that are ground out here each week. Many of them predate the Hollywood Production Code, reaching back to the early '20s. Also there's been an influx of overseas product which raise problems for the pix editors because of different notions on the two sides of the Atlantic as to what's proper. For instance, the "damns" and "hells" that occasionally pop up more or less naturally in British films cause some head scratching.

But its the continental's treatment of sex that gives rise to the most scissoring. Cases in point are "Open City" and "Paisan" which WGN-TV just bought as part of an extensive library buy from Motion Pictures for TV. After the boudoir and thigh scenes are erased, film editor Elizabeth Bain wonders if there will be enough left to run.

Then there's the Britishers turned out during the war with a strong "chin up, tight little island" pitch that have cued some sensitivities among midwest Anglophobes. Not too long ago the Chicago Tribune focused editorial attention on this very point, charging tele stations with unduly plugging the English. However, the sheet's ire

Cavalier to Back 'Irma' On AM as Well as TV

Cavalier cigarets, which bankrolls "My Friend Irma" on CBS-TV, will take over sponsorship reins on the AM version as well, starting next fall. Cavalier, an R. J. Reynolds subsid, will replace Ennds on the radio side, to give it a two-way angeling on "Irma."

Ennds, of course, continues with the show through the remainder of this season, and is reportedly near the inking stage for sponsoring a revival of "Inner Sanctum" this summer. While its plans for next fall are not finalized, it's expected that it will either continue with "Sanctum" in a new time slot, or else pick up another show on CBS.

Nothing Could Be Finah for Dinah Than $1,000,000

Dinah Shore's future status for radio and television may be resolved within a few days. Indications at the moment point to a long-range NBC commitment for AM and TV, which, if finalized, would permit the singer to cushion her earnings over a period of years. Jaffe & Jaffe, attorneys for Miss Shore, aver that the singer's personal take for five years could top $1,000,000, if she were sold commercially in both mediums, but as a tax expediency would spread the payments over a longer period of years. In return, NBC would have an AM-TV exclusivity on her services for five years.

Decision is due this week on whether Chevrolet, current sponsors of Miss Shore's twice-a-week early evening TV show, will renew for next season. Lacking its own contractual arrangement with Miss Shore, NBC faces the possibility of Chevrolet moving the program to CBS, which is also pitching for the singer's services.

Miss Shore is currently a CBS radio personality, via Procter & Gamble's early-evening, cross-the-board show. Decision is still pending whether P & G axes the stanza. But even if the soap company sticks, Miss Shore would be obliged to vamp the program in the event of an NBC exclusive deal.

WNEW STARTS DRIVE OF CUFFO CONSUMER PLUGS

Intensive campaign of cuffo plugs, reminding listeners to buy various items, such as soap, cigarets and cereals, has been instituted by WNEW, N. Y. Indie is airing the spots not in behalf of specific sponsors but to help a long list of consumer industries. Idea is to provide general goodwill for the outlet among clients and prospective bankrollers.

Plugs are being integrated into the entire day's program structure. Typical pitch goes, "Going shopping? Just take a minute to check your supply of soap, for dishes, bath, face and hands. If you're running low, better stock up." Reaction from sponsors and agencies is that the free commercials will be a business stimulater and that the plan could be adopted by other outlets.

Pixers Young, Dunne Yen Buy of Phoenix AM-TV

Phoenix, April 1.

Loretta Young and Irene Dunne are reported dickering for KPHO and KPHO-TV, but station prexy John Mullins is disinterested in selling the town's only tele station.

Film femmes recently bought into KRAM, Las Vegas, which has a tele application on file. They're dickering for the Phoenix outlets via their negotiating reps, William Marriot and Alfred Zugsmith.

'Big Show' Fate Hinges on Tallu

Whether or not the "Big Show" returns to the NBC Sunday evening radio airlanes next fall is conjectural at the moment, with expectations that a final decision will rest on whether or not Tallulah Bankhead, femcee of the show, agrees to a TV showcase. It's been indicated at NBC that if Miss Bankhead does a TV program, as proposed by the web, it may be economically feasible to continue with the 90-minute radio stanza. Otherwise, one exec said, the show will probably be axed.

Although "Big Show" has been incorporated into the NBC "Operation Tandem," with its participating sponsors, the program as such has never paid off. It has a weekly budget of about $35,000, making it probably the most expensive attraction on the AM kilocycles.

PHILCO ADDING FINK TO EXPAND RESEARCH

Philadelphia, April 1.

Philco Corp.'s expanding activities in electronic research and development will be given added impetus by the appointment of Donald G. Fink as co-director of research operations. President William Balderston announced that Fink would join the company June 1.

During the last war Fink headed the Loran Division of the Radiation Laboratory at Mass. Institute of Technology. He was expert consultant to the Secretary of War (1943-45) and civilian consultant at the Bikini A-bomb tests. He recently served as U. S. spokesman at the Zurich, London and Geneva international conferences on television.

AM-TV SETS' 10 BILLION $ BOOM

Chi Due for TV Origination Hypo If FCC Okays CBS Buy of WBKB

Washington, April 1.

CBS will make Chicago an important source of TV program originations if it acquires the Balaban & Katz station, WBKB, under the projected merger of ABC and United Paramount Theatres. Transfer of WBKB to CBS for a consideration of $6,000,000 is contingent on approval by the Federal Communications Commission of the ABC-UPT merger.

Testifying before the Commission last Friday (28) at hearings on Paramount anti-trust and related issues, Jack L. Van Volkenburg, prexy of the CBS-TV network, said he anticipates "vastly expanded use" of Chicago as an origination point for programs if purchase of WBKB is approved. It is not unlikely, he testified, that two to three studios will be built for network shows alone, and that as many as 12 hours a week of CBS originations will come from the Windy City.

An owned and operated TV station in Chicago, said Van Volkenburg, will provide CBS with facilities it needs to reach competitive equality with other networks which have five o.-and-o. outlets. Under the proposed FCC allocations, he pointed out, there will be no commercial VHF channels available in Chicago, and the only way CBS can have a station there is by acquisition.

Discussing the reasons for wanting owned rather than affiliated stations, Van Volkenburg explained that the economics of TV network operations requires a "full compliment" (five under existing FCC rules) of o.-and-o. outlets. Operating a TV network, he said, is a "very expensive" business and costs are continually rising.

Profitable Operation

"On the other hand," he said, "station operation is now profitable. Many stations are operating at a profit and some stations in the

Net Execs Map Chi Video Plans

Chicago, April 1.

Windy City network television output may perk up a bit during the next few months, if present signs are read correctly. NBC-TV has already logged in another Chi show with "Those Endearing Young Charms" premiering on Sunday (30) and others are in the works. Also the town is awaiting the entrance of H. Leslie Atlass' CBS operation into TV which will come about if the ABC marriage to United Paramount Theatres is okayed by the FCC.

As a by-product of that deal, CBS will grab off the channel presently occupied by indie WBKB, owned by Balaban & Katz, a UPT subsid. For the past several months Atlass has been quietly blueprinting his video plans. Since Atlass has an influence in the overall CBS setup beyond the usual veepee status, it's considered a foregone conclusion that he'll project the Chi adjunct into the network picture to some degree once its gets rolling.

While it'll be several months yet before WBBM-TV hits the air if the ABC-UPT merger goes through, most observers feel the appearance of a third web-owned tele plant will have a bullish effect on the local scene, both in terms of originations and hometown activity.

Then, too, there's expected to be an upbeat at the ABC central division once some UPT coin is made available via the melding. As of now, the ABC setup here, riding out the economy wave, is more or less marking time with no additional activity expected until the merger is finalized.

U. of Utah Now Offering 5 TV Courses for Credit

Salt Lake City, April 1.

The U. of Utah, one of the few colleges in the west to offer TV courses for credit, has kicked off a course in the history of Utah, to bring its total to five. Class is headed by Dr. Leland Creer, head of the history department.

Setup calls for 11 video lectures, with students paying $1 for a handbook, and submitting 10 brief assignments for certificate credit. Students who want college credit pay $12, submit 15 assignments, and take a final exam.

Gillette Soloing On Derby; CBS To Pitch Preakness

Louisville, April 1.

Gillette Safety Razor, which bankrolled both the Kentucky Derby and Preakness last year on CBS radio and TV, will shell out a reported $200,000 for nationwide radio and TV coverage of the Derby May 3, and so has decided to bypass the Preakness this year. CBS, as a result, is out pitching that race, slated for May 17 at Pimlico, to other potential bankrollers.

Bill Corum, Churchill Downs prez. last week confirmed reports that the Derby will be telecast nationwide by CBS "on an experimental basis," meaning that the Downs will study closely effects on attendance at the track, betting volume, etc., before committing itself to future TV contracts.

Derby telecast will originate through WHAS-TV, local CBS affiliate. Special cable facilities will be set up by the Bell Telephone Co. to Indianapolis, nearest east-west link.

Last year's Derby was filmed, and seen on screens several hours after the race was run. Only previous live telecast was in 1949, made by WAVE-TV.

Downs has consistently refused to allow a live nationwide telecast until it signed CBS last year with a three-year contract, proviso being that a live showing of the race could be carried in one of the years only.

Garroway 'Today' Subs Kovacs' 'Ready' in Sharp Philly Program Shakeup

Philadelphia, April 1.

Sharp local TV programming shakeup took place yesterday morning (31), when WPTZ brought in Dave Garroway's "Today" as a replacement for its own pioneer early morning show, Ernie Kovacs' "3 to Get Ready." The Garroway show will now occupy the 7 to 9 a. m. segment, Monday through Friday, formerly held down by Kovacs.

Ernest B. Loveman, WPTZ vice-president and general manager, in announcing the change, stated: "While WPTZ is proud to have pioneered early morning television programming with its '3 to Get Ready' show, we feel we are performing a service in making 'Today' available to viewers of this area, particularly during this election year, when news of great national importance is being made daily."

Kovacs, who launched "3 to Get Ready" Nov. 27, 1950, as the first early-morning TV show, has been moved into the 12:30 to 1 p. m. segment. Entire Kovacs cast, including vocalist Edythe Adams and pianist Fred Shimins, will continue on the condensed program.

PUBLIC SHELLOUT IN LAST 5 YEARS

Washington, April 1.

Some conception of the enormous public investment in radio and television sets was given in a report issued last week by the Radio-Television Manufacturers Assn., which puts factory value of production during the last five years at approximately $5,343,000,000.

Assuming retail price, including installation and financing charges, at double the price at the factory, the report indicates that the public has spent around $10,000,000,000 for radio and TV receivers, exclusive of repairs, during the period from 1946 through 1951.

The RTMA report estimates that the 75,117,000 radio sets turned out in the five-year period had a value at the plant of $2,176,000,000, or an average of $29 per receiver. The value of the 17,002,000 TV sets produced during the period was estimated at $3,167,000,000, or an average of $186 per set. The relatively high average for TV reflects the trend toward console models, which comprised 52% of total TV output in 1951 as compared to 21% in 1947.

Willingness and ability of the public to lay out money for fancy TV sets is reflected in figures that show that, despite the tremendous increase in TV production during the past five years, the percentage of table model sets—the lowest price models—has declined. In 1947, when only 178,000 sets were produced, table models accounted for 65% of total output. In 1951, when production totaled 5,384,000 sets, table models represented only 42% of output.

The report shows that during the five-year period there were 7,772,000 table model sets produced, 7,800,000 consoles and consolettes, and 1,428,000 phonograph combinations.

Auto Set Upbeat

Although the proportion of phonograph combinations—the highest price sets—has declined from 14% in 1947 to 6% in 1951, the number of such sets built last year was greater than the entire output of TV sets in 1947.

Growing importance of the out-of-home radio audience is reflected in the rise of auto set production from 17% of the total radio output in 1947 to 36% in 1951. During the same period, the proportion of home sets has dropped from 70% of the total output to 53%. Portables account for the remainder.

Report said that TV inventories at the factory, which reached a high point of 801,000 sets last July, were down to 216,000 units at the end of 1951.

Promise of a market abroad for TV sets was indicated in export shipments of 56,075 sets last year.

CBS DICKERS MAYEHOFF FOR NEW COMEDY SERIES

CBS Radio is dickering with Eddie Mayehoff to do a weekly situation comedy series titled "That's My Boy," with Mayehoff to play the father role he created in the Dean Martin-Jerry Lewis film version produced for Paramount by Hal Wallis. Projected show is packaged by Cy Howard, who scripted and was associate producer on the film. Role of the son has not been cast, but it's expected that Artie Stander will write the show.

CBS, meanwhile, is slated to cut its audition of the new Frank Fontaine show April 17 on the Coast, and is trying to line up either Marilyn Maxwell or Lina Romay to guest on the initialer. Web has pacted Si Rose and Al Schwartz to script the series, which will make it the costliest new package in CBS' summer plans. Larry Berns is producing, with Lud Gluskin helming the music.

U. of P. May Ban Video Gridcasts If Hassle With NCAA Isn't Eased

Philadelphia, April 1.

The U. of Pennsylvania has threatened to ban television entirely next season over its differences with the National Collegiate Athletic Assn.'s TV program. Franny Murray, Penn's athletic director, said that if the university's Athletic Council considered the NCAA plan "illegal," Penn would not participate and would decline to have any of its games televised.

The NCAA plan for 1952 hasn't been fully worked out as yet, but indications are that the collegiate group will air more games next season, and more small colleges will take part. Penn has been one of the leaders in the fight against the NCAA program since the start, and fought the plan again at the association's January meeting.

Murray and his backers have taken the attitude that any agreement imposing restrictions upon individual colleges is illegal. The Red and Blue's failure to enter into the agreement might disarrange the whole program, since Penn has an impressive schedule for next season, starting in September with Notre Dame.

The Penn athletic boss claims controlled TV has not helped the smaller colleges in this section, as its backers intended. Football attendance figures last year at 14 colleges in the area covered by local telecasts show that Penn drew more than the other 13 combined. Princeton, one of the 13, outdrew the remaining 12, and what was left averaged to a very small attendance per game for the rest. According to Murray, the average decline for these institutions in 1951 under controlled TV was much greater than in 1950, when the games were on the air.

Foresight

Hollywood, April 1.

A 50-year-exclusive franchise has been granted by Palm Springs City Council to Telemeter, subscription device video company.

Telemeter v.p. Carl Leserman said that as a result of council's action, work will begin immediately on construction of a master aerial to feed L. A. video programs into the resort town, also on other cables and antenna needed for operation, which begins in September. Telemeter plans a straight diet of motion pictures for the test, and pix will come in on an eighth channel, with viewers able to get gratis shows on the seven other channels.

Libby Bowing Off 'Show of Shows'; No Sub Problem

Libby, McNeill & Libby, one of the three participating sponsors in the second half-hour segment of NBC-TV's "Show of Shows," has notified the web that it's checking out at the end of the current season. While this opens up the first vacancy in the hour-and-a-half Saturday night program in some months, NBC reportedly has a waiting list of potential new clients for the show. As a result, the finding of a replacement for Libby is mostly a matter of the web's coming to terms with the right advertiser.

It's expected that NBC will give the nod to a bankroller who's willing to ride through the summer on the replacement for the Sid Caesar-Imogene Coca show, which is to be a Saturday night dance parade featuring some top name bands. Show is one of the three big NBC productions on which it has decided that the sponsors, in order to insure their franchises for next fall, must stay through the summer. Other two shows are the Saturday night "All Star Revue" and the Kate Smith daytime cross-the-border.

TVA Mapping National Expansion Drive; New Local in Philly Okayed

Television Authority, now in five cities, is mapping an organizational drive which will spread the talent union into other towns. TVA's national board meeting met last week and authorized setting up a new local in Philadelphia.

In Philly, TVA will cooperate with existing locals of other branches of the Associated Actors & Artistes of America who participate in the tele trusteeship. These will include American Guild of Variety Artists, American Federation of Radio Actors and Actors Equity. An organizer will be chosen shortly to get the new local launched.

National board also approved the contract TVA linked with KSD-TV, St. Louis. Latter is the second pact won outside the three production centres of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. Previously TVA had won a pact with WDTV, Pittsburgh.

Heidt's 2d Tums

Hollywood, April 1.

Tums and Horace Heidt are teaming up again, this time on TV. Lewis-Howe bought half of his hour variety show on KLAC-TV.

Heidt initiated the first giveaway show for Tums years ago, "Pot o' Gold."

Levenson to Buck Berle in Switch

CBS-TV this week acceded to a request by Alcoa that its "See It Now" show be moved into an early Sunday evening slot but, as a result, the web's "Sam Levenson Show" will be handed the difficult task of bucking NBC video's Milton Berle program for a rating.

"See It," the Ed Murrow-Fred Friendly production, has been sponsored by Alcoa Sunday afternoons at 3:30. Starting April 20, the show moves into the Sunday night at 6:30 spot, which is now occupied by Levenson. Latter show, which has been drawing sizeable ratings but is still sustaining, will consequently be moved into the Tuesday night at 8 period starting April 22, where it will be airing directly opposite Berle's "Texaco Star Theatre" on NBC.

Frank Sinatra show had been slotted in CBS' 8 to 9 period Tuesday nights, but checked off after last night's (1) broadcast. Web plans to fill the hour with film for the next two weeks, prior to Levenson's move-in. Another half-hour show will take over the 8:30 to 9 slot at that time, but it hasn't been selected yet. CBS reportedly considers the Tuesday night setup only temporary and, while the web hopes Levenson may show up well against Berle, it will probably find another time period for him next fall.

One sidebar angle in the Levenson move, incidentally, is the fact that Irving Mansfield, who produces his show, was also producer of Berle's radio show at one time. In addition, both Berle and Levenson have been drawing their biggest audiences in the key cities, so the trade will be watching to see whether Levenson can cut into Berle's ratings.

Part Com'l Operation Will Insure Educ'l TV Stations' Survival: Coy

Educational television stations will better chances for survival if they operate on a commercial basis enough hours a day to cover expenses for their own informational stanzas, former FCC chairman Wayne Coy told the Cooper Union Forum Sunday (30). Coy, now an AM-TV consultant and 50% owner of KOB and KOB-TV, Alburquerque (subject to FCC approval), was beamed over WNYC, N. Y.

In his first public address since leaving the Commission five weeks ago, Coy said educational outlets would be "much happier, do a better job" and last longer with partial commercial operation. He also declared that educational tele stations should be operated by schools, colleges and similar institutions, rather than by states or municipalities, suggesting that operation by governmental agency might result in political propaganda.

Coy covered a wide field in the speech and question period, which totaled over 75 minutes. He started out with a self-kidding reference to his being a "knowledgeable fellow," recalling that for the past three and a half years, since inception of the freeze on new TV station construction, he had been regularly (and mistakenly) predicting a thaw—"and it still hasn't happened yet."

However, he pointed out, the freeze has been a great advantage to educators, having given them time to study video's potentialities and get in their bids for channels. He said he was "optimistic" for the future of educational TV, encouraged by the interest of some progressive educators in tele, but "pessimistic" because not enough "realistic study" has been made of the problems of operating tele outlets.

Banding Together

Mentioning the high cost of station operation, Coy suggested that if educators got together to produce programs and make them available to commercial outlets, it might be cheaper than if schools have their own channels. Former FCC chief gave commercial radio and tele a pat, citing AM's news and classical music and the "continuous improvement" in TV's dramatic fare.

Coy referred to various approaches to educational broadcasting such as the concept of the Ford Foundation, pay-as-you-see tele, closed circuit instructional telecasts, school-owned stations, public service shows on commercial outlets, etc. He said he had "great faith in the outcome of all these manifold expressions of interest in the problem."

Asked whether, since the air is a public resource, public funds shouldn't be used to develop educational TV (just as the Government pays for public parks), Coy replied that such a setup would have "socialistic" implications. He also said that the American approach to radio is better than that of the British Broadcasting Corp., because minority parties have an equal opportunity to get time, while in Britain time is apportioned on the basis of voting strength.

On the question of color tele, Coy said that the FCC had been asked to approve a color system, not to take into consideration the question of compatibility. He said that many advances, and not only colorcasting, made present black-and-white sets "obsolete to an extent." Thus, a big screen could make a 10-inch set obsolete, the introduction of a new ultra-high frequency station in a community could make VHF sets obsolete to the extent additional gadgets are necessary, etc.

Coy slapped at recent charges that his co-purchase with Time, Inc., of KOB was "approved" because Coy was on the Commission. He pointed out that the negotiations were made after he left the FCC and that the latter has not yet acted on the application for transfer of the license. Bril.

Detroit—Dr. Hale Aarnes, director of education in radio and television at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., will be principal speaker Saturday (5) at the McCall Mike Award dinner held in connection with the American Women in Radio and Television convention which convenes heer Friday (4). Aarnes's topic will be "The Undefined Impact."

DOROTHY & DICK
With Dorothy Kilgallen, Richard Kollmar
15 Mins., Mon.-thru-Fri., 7:15 p.m.
WOR, New York

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kollmar, who've become just plain Dorothy & Dick to WOR's morning dialers via their informal breakfast-time patter show, continue in the same groove with their pre-dinner gab series which preemed on the same station Monday (31). Show is aired from their home (as is the a.m. series), which helps the pair present the idle chitchat with ease and in comfort.

The gab, of course, is just an extension of the morning's discussion, covering topics from theatre news to world events. Dorothy Kilgallen, N. Y. Journal-American columnist and TV panelist; and husband Richard Kollmar, producer-actor, aren't shy about voicing their opinions, and sound off at the drop of a topic. For the Dorothy & Dick devotees who feel that the 45-minute morning confab is too brief, this new 15-minuter will supply some comfort. Gros.

MEDICINE, U.S.A.
With Charles Laughton, narrator
Producer: Budd Fishel
Director: John Becker
Writer: Peter Lyon
30 Mins.; Sat., 7:30 p.m.
Sustaining
NBC, from New York

The American Medical Assn. has launched a health education campaign, via radio and television, with this six-week-long series initiating the project. It should be one of the AMA's most fruitful drives. The kickoff vehicle, a study of alcoholism viewed through the eyes of one victim of booze addiction, was a moving document that also made sense from a scientific standpoint.

The story was not unusual. In fact, its very typicalness added to its point. It told of a young executive who, given added responsibilities, found that he "lacked instilled confidence" and turned to the distilled variety. It traced the pattern of increased tippling, the development of guilt feelings, the reliance on lies and self-deception and the inevitable vicious circle—a problem driving a man to liquor and the liquor intensifying his problems to the point of physical and emotional breakdown.

Peter Lyon's script covered the psychological aspects of the case, pointing out how the emotional mixup led to alcoholism. But it also stressed that addiction is a disease in itself, and showed how this illness is handled by the medicos. Role of Alcoholics Anonymous was depicted, but the alcoholic was finally rescued from slavery to the bottle by the efforts of his physician, who also called on the wife for help.

Story effectively made its point, although it might have had more impact by providing a deeper insight to the unhealthy relationships which led to the man's escape into drunken irresponsibility. Program wound with a brief talk by an AMA spokesmen who pointed up the medical lessons, stressing the association's concern with a disease that has claimed 4,000,000 addicts in the U. S. alone.

Charles Laughton, who is narrating the series, did a nice job and show was given an effective production. Bril.

Radio Followup

Hy Gardner and Danton Walker did a nice stand-in-job for Barry Gray during the latter's flying vacation trip to Israel. Both newspapermen, after the teeoff night's jitters, got the knack of it and proved an excellent team with their informal interviews over WMCA, N. Y. Gardner (N. Y. Herald Trib) developed quite a style of witty observations to teeoff their post-midnight stint, and Walker (News), with his suave manner, also handled his subjects well. For the finale Gardner confessed that it was agreed neither would indulge in any "controversial" discussions since that wasn't their forte. The columnists obviously insured themselves by lining up a generous reservoir of personalities for dropper-inner purposes and interviewing.

DORIS DAY SHOW
With Miss Day, guests; John Jacobs, announcer
Writer: David Gregory
Director: Sam Pierce
Producer: Marty Melcher
30 Mins.; Fri., 9 p.m.
CBS, from Hollywood

This is an okay musical stanza, featuring Doris Day vocals together with a couple of guest artists each week. Exclusive asset of this show is Miss Day, who is one of the most effective, personable song stylists in the business. The surrounding framework, however, is bogged down in a script that shuttles between the commonplace and cuteness. Session would be much improved with straight introes rather than the strained "cleverness" evident on the preem (28).

Opening show was lifted somewhat by the guest appearances of Mrs. Gus (Grace) Kahn and Danny Thomas, latter having played the late Gus Kahn in the Warner musical, "I'll See You in My Dreams," vis-a-vis Miss Day. Mrs. Kahn was on briefly in the set-up role of a plugger for her husband's songs, while Thomas joined in a couple of duets with Miss Day on "Ain't We Got Fun" and "Making Whoopee." These were solid, but Thomas' incidental comedy sallies were mild.

Miss Day carried the show with her superlative vocals of "Who? Who? Who?," "The One I Love," "Oops," "A Guy Is a Guy" and "Shanghai." Herm.

NEW YORK SPOTLIGHT
With George Hamilton Combs, Norton Mockridge
180 Mins.; daily, 12 Midnight
Participating
WJZ, New York

Latest entry into the post-midnight gab sweepstakes is George Hamilton Combs, WMGM, N.Y., commentator, who has taken over a six-times-weekly stint from the Sherbrooke, Park Ave. eatery. Completing the week will be Norton Mockridge, N.Y. World-Telegram-Sun crime reporter, who will take over the Friday night editions, when racketeering exposes will be given special attention. Combs' background, including broad journalistic activities and a stretch in Congress, gives him a certain amount of authoritativeness. Mockridge, lending an assist on the preem, came across as articulate and poised.

Kickoff show Wednesday midnight (26) wasn't typical of the stanza's approach. Combs started with an overlong credo, in which he stated the airer's purpose: turning a spotlight on New York, focusing on the excitement of show biz, the pageantry of Gotham and the super-charged atmosphere of political life. Major aim, Combs declared, is not to present a parade of celebs, but to include "little people in big jobs," to point up the conflict of ideas and causes and put them in "decent perspective." He said he will have only one crusade—for the right of others to crusade—and that his open mike will attempt to make the restaurant the city's "best-upholstered soapbox."

Nevertheless, the initialer had a lineup of names and semi-names including, among others, James Barton, Vanessa Brown, Lionel Stander, Georgia Gibbs, Rose Marie, John Erickson, Millard Mitchell, cleffer Ralph Blane, writer Ruth Gruber, UN Asst. Sec. General Ben Cohen, conductor David Broekman, etc. Chitchat with the performers was of the usual variety, including plugs for their current pix, plays or tunes. However, the UN's Cohen, speaking on how New York's many nationalities and creeds work closely together, indicated Combs' serious approach. Another similar sign was the discussion with Miss Gruber on her experiences in Israel.

Highspot was a panel kickaround, which Combs is patterning after the famous Algonquin round table, in which the question was on the next President's qualifications and desirability of a general in the White House. Taking part were Ralph de Toledano, coauthor (with Victor Lasky) of "Seeds of Treason"; Socialist Norman Thomas; economist Leo Cherne; ABC commentator Henry J. Taylor, and publisher William Ziff. In the background, and adding their views, were John Vandercook and Taylor Grant (both of ABC), public relationist Edward L. Bernays and military analyst George Fielding Eliot. It added up to a lively discussion.

Combs had a fairly wide representation of opinion, and in this field the broader the soapbox the better. He departed from the usual cliches of nitery oracles in admitting he hadn't previously met some of the artists guesting—and he even called some of them "Mister." That's a welcome evidence of humility. Bril.

Aren't Cafes Part of 'Show Business'?

George S. Kaufman doesn't like saloons, and he has said so in the past as permanent panelist on "This Is Show Business" (CBS-TV). It can become extremely awkward for the guest talent on the show, most of whom are from or double regularly into nite clubs. And Kaufman really zings it into the niteries.

Derby Wilson's "problem" about "not getting paid when fulfilling nitery engagements" was, generally speaking, the phoniest yet projected on this otherwise pleasant Sunday evening (30) half-hour. The coverup that "this isn't so true nowadays" (mentioning AGVA), and the comment about "what are you gonna do when some tough guy in the backroom says get out there and do a show," sounded like something out of an old Warner Bros. gangster picture, vintage Volstead. To top it off, Kaufman went into a tirade against nightclubs. He was in the same sardonic mood with a successive performer's "problem".

"This Is Show Business," incidentally, has now become so stylized as to completely defeat the general intent. Somehow the entertainment values have been such that the three specialty acts presenting their "problems" are not taken too weightily as having any "problem," for the obvious reason they are standard and competent performers. In fact, some are so good that they come back repeatedly (presumably with a different "problem"), but more obviously booked for the $500 and $1,000 guest-shot fees involved.

Panelist Sam Levenson, at least, has a mama and papa story, or some anecdote from his Brooklyn schoolteacher days, to throw in as parallel evidence in answering the "problem". The deadpan Kaufman, with his sophisticated approach to it all, has made no bones about the fact that he's doing this for the money involved; and as for seriously coping with the problems advanced, these are usually pegs for humor or raillery. Judith Evelyn, as guest-panelist, could have telephoned her stuff over. Abel.

OLD KENTUCKY BARN DANCE
With Randy Atcher, Janie Workman, House Sisters, Tom Brooks, Shorty Chesser, Tiny Thomale, Bernie Smith, Bell Family, Red River Ramblers (6), Robert Fischer, Maggie Mae, Bob Lawson announcer
Producer: William Aldridge
60 Mins.; Fri., 7 p.m.
WHAS, Louisville

This Friday night sustainer is really a showcase for WHAS radio talent, and is one of the station's top-budgeted sessions. Bill Aldridge has assembled the pick of the hillbilly talent in this area, and has injected a change of pace with baritone Robert Fischer and the House Sisters trio, to give listeners a lively one-hour show.

Barn dance music segment is strong with Red River Ramblers (6), sparked by "Sleepy Marlin's" fiddling. Guy has won numerous fiddling contests in the area, and really goes to town on the catgut. Tiny Thomale, accordian, and Bernie Smith, guitar, are standouts in the instrumental department, and a strong vocal entry is Fischer, who came through with a slick rendition of "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" at show caught Friday (28). House Sisters, femme trio, have smooth arrangements, and register with their harmonizing. Bell Family, mother, dad, Bonnie and Mike, juves, offer listeners something folksy in a real family musical group. They go over big with the listeners.

Comedy portion of the show is capably handled by Tom "Cactus" Brooks, in his w.k. whiskered character; Shorty Chesser, pint-sized comic, and Maggie Mae, hillbilly gal who get the yocks with her twahgy delivery, and corn-belt vocals.

Nice production job is turned in by Bill Aldridge, station's radio program director, who has deftly managed to get the various turns on and off the stage, without any lost motion, and keeps the entertainment tempo moving to make a fast-paced air show. Bob Lawson, staff announcer, handles the introes briefly and to the point. Effort is good all-round showcase for the station's array of talent. Wied.

FASHION, FOOD & FRILLS
With Eileen Burr, Betty Myers, Anne Summers, Howard Maschmeier, others
15 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 9:45 a.m.
FORST PACKING CO.
WPTR, Albany

An authoritative, brisk and light-touched program on subjects of interest to women originates from the Albany Times-Union plant, with five of the Hearst paper's femme writers featured. Howard Maschmeier, director of news and special events for WPTR, emcees it and handles the advertising.

Mrs. Eileen Burr (whose nom de plume is Prudence Penny), editor of the women's pages, and Maschmeier form the axle on which the program rotates. Miking on alternate days are Anne Summers, fashion editor; Betty Myers and Jeanne Arnold, society reporters, and Betty Hunt, travel editor. Mrs. Burr had done other work on radio and tele; Mrs. Myers, television only (originally with a department store show). The former is knowing and friendly, if sometimes dry and flat in delivery; the latter is easy but slightly hesitant. Miss Summers talks articulately about her field. Maschmeier registers deep-voiced and sure, although in spots he over-presses a bit. Jaco.

STARS IN KHAKI 'N' BLUE
With Faye Emerson, femcee; Pvt. Eddie Fisher, Bernie Leighton orch, guests; Jack Costello, announcer
Writer: Bob Condon
Producer-director: Parker Gibbs
30 Mins.; Sun., 10 p.m.
Sustaining
NBC, from New York

NBC has whipped up a fairly interesting G.I. show in "Stars in Khaki 'n' Blue," which preemed Sunday (30). Femcee Faye Emerson dubbed the entry as "Operation Entertainment" and the initialer was all of that.

Format is a conventional one, in that talent at camps and stations is auditioned by the net, which culls four or five turns to appear on the airer. Best of these is chosen by the studio audience as "champ of the week," and defends the title the following week.

Inaugural dished up a versatile musician from Mitchel Field, L. I., who played vibes-piano-drums; a baritone and two dramatic players from Fort Dix, N. J., as well as the Sampsonaires, a 35-voice vocal group from the Air Force base at Sampson, N. Y. Every contestant had some professional experience, on the basis of capsule backgrounds read off to listeners.

Miss Emerson, per usual, proved a gracious hostess and Bernie Leighton's band supplied good musical backing. This airer, as far as quality is concerned, is much better than radio amateur shows. However, it erred in selecting Army and Air Force talent exclusively on the kickoff. Surely, there must be someone in the Navy who can play a musical saw.

Future shows would do well to mix up the participants on an equal proportion among all branches of the service. Each week's winner, incidentally, carries off a Ben-Rus watch, an RCA radio-phonograph console and a Pvt. Eddie Fisher album. Warbler Fisher was piped from Washington to croon "Anytime" and plug the Red Cross blood donation drive. Gilb.

YOUR MONEY AT WORK
With Milton Fox-Martin, guests
15 Mins.; Sun., 10:15 a.m.
KIDDER, PEABODY & CO.
WOR, New York
(Daremus)

In an attempt to increase the flow of the public's savings into investments, Wall St. firms have been taking the airlanes on a finance orientation operation. Latest investment house to come into the picture is Kidder, Peabody & Co., which preemed its series, "Your Money At Work," on WOR Sunday (30).

During the course of its run, program will call on top finance men and management heads to dish out views on economic and financial topics. Plan has solid information values, but since it's presented like a college economic lecture, it falls into a pedagogic groove that dissipates entertainment appeal.

On the preem stanza, Milton Fox-Martin, who'll emcee the series, interviewed Hugh W. Long, prez of Hugh W. Long & Co., mutual fund firm. Long spoke at length on the advisability of investment dispersal and the best way to get the best return from the invested dollar. Neither Fox-Martin nor Long are showmen, and the question and answer period came across sans pace or excitement.

If series expects to nab a wide Sunday morn listening audience, it'll have to blend the schoolroom technique with show biz values. Gros.

WHERE DO YOU STAND
With Walter Cronkite, guests
Producers: Charles Von Fermd, Alma Walker
Director: Larry Beckerman
30 Mins.; Sun., 2:30 p.m.
Sustaining
WTOP, Washington

New debate-type show, currently replacing "The Big Question," hit the jackpot in last Sunday's (30) edition, its third effort on the public affairs circuit. Actually, though put in the "Where Do You Stand" slot, this show was a one-shot stab capitalizing on the stunning presidential announcement of the previous night.

CBS staff, which was taking its turn in the video pool, found itself with a scoop on its hands, since none of the other TV webs carried the now historic Jefferson-Jackson dinner in D. C.'s National Guard Armory. With the biggest story of this or almost any other week on its hand, producers and director of show scrapped the scheduled debate and managed to bring an 11th hour roundup of Presidential sweepstake principals to the screen. In some cases, they had to resort to the not-so-satisfactory subterfuge of telephone interviews, since a number of the aspirants are in the field campaigning. General effect, though spotty, was convincing and dramatic. If nothing else, it proved again that video has become almost as flexible as radio.

Walter Cronkite, an old hand at the game of analyzing national news, did a polished job of commentating and steering his guests into the most effective channels. He teed off the show with a film pickup from the big Demmy dinner, building, with his comments, a rather routine presidential speech to the highly dramatic finale where Mr. Truman threw his verbal bombshell. Aptly dubbing the announcement a "President's valedictory," Cronkite aided the camera as it picked up audience shots showing the stunned reaction of spectators.

Roundup of opinion was more routine, but cannily tossed together to give an impression of top level reaction. Sen. Richard Russell (D., Ga.) was sole avowed candidate to actually be interviewed in person, but Illinois's Gov. Adlai Stevenson, in the news as a possible draftee, and Eisenhower manager Sen. Henry C. Lodge (R., Mass.) were on hand to grind their own special axes. Via phone, there were muffled interviews with reps from the Taft and Kefauver camps, as well as a phone reaction from Demmy candidate Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D., Okla.). Except for lending an air of completeness and authenticity to the proceedings, the telephone interviews were of little practical impact.

Show was a good example of the increased scope of TV since the last national campaign. It revealed quick brain and foot work on part of the staff, and is definitely a forerunner of things to come in the succeeding months of political news. Lowe.

PICTURE PAYDAY
With Tommy Bartlett, Pris Henricks, Frank Sweeney, Harold Turner
Director: Frank Palmer
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 2:30 p.m.
CHICAGO TRIBUNE
WGN-TV, Chicago
(Caster, Hempstead & Hanford)

There's been a marked shift to video recently by the Chi daily newspapers, the latest being this audience participation strip under the auspices of the Chicago Tribune. While it's hardly a prestige show, it's buttressed by affable Tommy Barlett as emcee and it should serve as an adequate vehicle to reach the housewife clientele at which it's targeted. An added selling point is the fact the quiz elements are directly tied in with readership of the paper.

It's a two-way quiz with the studio guests competing for a string of prizes with the home viewers who send in the questions. The queries are based on Tribune photos sent along by the home contestants.

On session viewed (10) participants were given picks at four questions, using the stills as visual clues with organist Harold Turner providing additional musical tips. If the studio guesser flopped the prize went off to the person who sent in the query. There was also a jackpot prize but, despite the grade school elimination questions, none of the four studio guests got that far.

It was nothing elaborate, except perhaps the giveaway boodle which was unusually lush, but Bartlett kept things moving along smartly. Host was assisted by Pris Henricks, who introed the aspirants and handed out the swag. The prize cuffos and the single direct Trib selling spiel were adeptly worked by Frank Sweeney. Dave.

Tele Followup Comment

Special one-shot airing in capsulized form, of NBC-TV's early-bird "Today" show Monday night (31), evidenced the same good features and drawbacks that have marked the show in its cross-the-board 7 to 9 a.m. airing. NBC slotted the show Monday night, in the time usually occupied by "Lights Out," to give viewers, as well as agency and client execs who might not have a chance to see it in the mornings, an opportunity to get acquainted with it. New viewers must have carried away the impression that "Today" proves what a great means of communications TV can be, but that NBC has not yet fully tapped its fullest potentialities.

Originating from the special communications centre set up by the web in the RCA Exhibition Hall, N. Y., with all available communications tools in use, the show still did not capitalize as much on those tools as CBS-TV's "See It Now" has done, for example. Swing of the lenses around the Manhattan skyline, with the lighted windows forming a neat pattern, formed an interesting camera feature, but little else. And the film footage of the various candidates in the Wisconsin and Nebraska primaries looked as though it might have been gleaned from the cutting-room floor during the recent New Hampshire race. News editor Jim Fleming, assistant to "chief communicator" Dave Garroway on the show, hit closer to the requisite timeliness on this feature by conducting two-way phone interviews with NBC commentators in Milwaukee and Omaha.

Another feature bore out Garroway's contention that the TV cameras can take viewers into "exciting places," by cutting to Philadelphia for a live pickup of the traditional testing of the fire prevention facilities at Independence Hall. While the sequence itself might not have been earth-shattering in importance, it was interesting and indicated how the show will be able to cover an on-the spot event—if that event occurs during its air time. Again, on the drawback side, was a too-often repetition of the night's headlines, with Fleming at one time reading them immediately after they had been flashed on the screen. On the credit side again was a live cut-in to Clement Attlee's speech-making in Philly.

Otherwise, the show followed the same basic format of the morning edition. Garroway delivered a solid pitch on how it's conducted and the facilities it has available, emphasizing its basic purpose of filling in viewers on what's going on in the world "now." Jack Lescoulie interviewed a femme milliner on what to expect in Easter bonnets, which emerged as an innocuous bit of fluff. And Garroway ran through his usual weather reports, time signals and playing of new pop records. Show was bankrolled by Time magazine, which also sponsors a five-minute segment of the morning show. Garroway pitched the Time blurbs in his competent salesmanlike manner.

Last Sunday's "Colgate Comedy Hour" on NBC seemed to operate on the theory that filling out the required 60 minutes was the basic consideration. Most of the block was a hodge-podge that did not sustain sufficient interest to merit its bigtime groove. This is nothing against Tony Martin, who can sell songs, nor against his guest, Kay Starr, who can ditto. But some of the business involving Chico & Harpo Marx would have been unworthy of low comics at scale pay.

Opening silverware thefting skit following Martin's "Great to Be Alive" chirp was strictly a warmed-over affair that died. The comedy duo's western saloon slapstick contiguous to Miss Starr's "Wheel of Fortune" song was extremely unfunny. Incidentally, the singer's big "Wheel" click sounds better on her hypoed Capitol recording; such comparisons between straight live and tricky wax are inevitable.

Among the best work in the frame was Martin's medley from his pic, "Two Tickets to Broadway," mated to an Italo rendering from "Pagliacci." He also scored in "Begin the Beguine" afront tropicana trappings, a surefire "Ave Maria" supported by the St. Paul Choir (to rush the Easter season), and in a cute duet with Miss Starr at the finale wherein they interpolated bits of business while belting "I Cried for You."

A "Little Dreamer" ballet with Harpo Marx on his instrument was okay change of pace down about the middle. The comedy team's strong one was their buffooning medley on the piano. Here they were functioning in their old smash fashion instead of being weighted down with material not appropriate to their talents. Al Goodman's batoning was hep throughout.

Auto-Lite's "Suspense," that hardy thriller-diller in both the sight and sound media, did a Charles Dickens tale in a two-part wrapping via its Tuesday-9:30 p.m. grooving on CBS (March 18-25). "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" is no whodunit and, as unfolded in its adaptation by Halsted Welles, bore little suspense. In fact, a look at the first chapter would hardly persuade the average viewer to wait with baited breath for the concluder.

It had a lot of Victorian trappings and assorted characters, including a declaiming witch and her cauldron, some tense moments, antiquated histrionics and a nice quota of corpses thrown into a church crypt with fine regard for the appetites of bloodthirsty videoglers.

The theme was simple enough. John Baragrey, town's choirmaster and music instructor, murdered his nephew (Drood) in order to marry the latter's betrothed, Susan Douglas, over whom he exercised dominance. To cover his crime, he was obliged to do away with another gent (in love with Miss Douglas) who had unearthed evidence linking Baragrey to the Drood killing. He was about to choke his wife as well, since she was by now convinced of his dastardly deeds, when the suspicious locals stormed his residence and he scrammed. In the end, he himself died, due either to an overdose of the witch's brew, a broken heart or some such invention.

Baragrey gave the part the old menacing touches and Miss Douglas looked pretty, fragile and sensitive. Others cast were William Smithers, Betty Sinclair and Elizabeth Johnson, who labored valiantly. All of them deserved a better framework for their efforts under the direction of Robert Stevens, who also produced.

Auto-Lite's pitch in the first installment saluted George Mason, president of Nash Motors, who spoke. A vast improvement was on the second block, when Arthur Godfrey made an effective plea for safety in behalf of the National Safety Council, pointing to his own auto accident some 20 years ago in Washington. Ken Murray came on at the finish as trailer for yesterday's (Tues.) show.

A program of distinction in the longhair vein was offered viewers of the "RCA Victor Show" last Friday (28) on NBC-TV, when the show's star, Ezio Pinza, did the Death Scene from Moussorgsky's opera, "Boris Godunov," supported by orchestra and chorus. It may not have been the answer to the show's sponsors, who have been floundering around trying to find the best format for the ex-Met Opera basso, but it was an interesting change from the usual song-and-sketch routine. To longhairs, and likely to many others, the presentation was a TV treat.

Unusual for TV, the 22-minute scene was given in its entirety, without interruptions for commercials or narration. RCA got in its sales pitch first. Then Deems Taylor gave a brief explanation of the operatic scene's action and background. Then came the Death Scene, in a memorable performance. Striking sets and costumes established the mood and flavor of the scene at once, and the majestic orchestral score, with an excellent male chorus joining in at the start, carried the scene forward impressively.

What made the program, however, was the distinguished singing and acting of Pinza, as the half-mad, conscience-stricken murderer-monarch, Boris. Pinza dominated the proceeding from his first impressive entrance, through the priestly accusation and plea to his heir, to the mounting climax that ended suddenly with his death. A striking makeup job enhanced Pinza's dramatic deportment and fine vocalizing. Basso Nicola Moscona was also fine as Pimenn and tenor Alessio de Paolis was good as Prince Shuisky. Fact that the group sang the Russian work in Italian (as it's done at the Met), didn't seem too incongruous under its dramatic impact.

RCA's commercial, comparing a recording with a live studio piano performance of a tune, although an interestingly - staged video ad, wasn't a convincing sales pitch. There was a clear distinction in tone of piano and disk, despite the salesman's denial.

More heat than light was shed on "U.S.A. Confidential," the Jack Lait-Lee Mortimer bestseller, on "Author Meets The Critics" (DuMont) last Thursday night (27), but once again this show was the arena for the most exciting verbal slugfest on video. Mortimer and young Yale author Wm. E. Buckley, Jr. (subbing for the reportedly ailing Lait) were on the receiving end of slashing attacks on the book made by authoress-critic Virgilia Peterson and N. Y. Post editor James Wechsler. Faye Emerson, as usual, was in the middle as moderator, and in this instance at least, succeeded in moderating a discussion which threatened to fly apart in a storm of bad-tempered name-calling.

Wechsler needled Mortimer by demanding proof of several alleged disclosures in the book. The Post editor asked how Mortimer could claim he was "dragooned" into the Newspaper Guild at a time when the N. Y. Daily Mirror didn't have a contract. Mortimer claimed he was dragooned into the union "socially." Wechsler asked how come Mortimer didn't (at the time it occurred) print his allegation that the late Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia had weekly supper sessions with Frank Costello. Mortimer said that it was not his beat, since he was working on the N. Y. Mirror's Sunday staff. Other such colloquies were attempted amidst a welter of mutual accusations between Mortimer and Wechsler, with the latter at one point conceding that he had been a member of the Young Communist League when he was at college.

Miss Peterson and Buckley conducted their exchanges on a more dignified level, although Miss Peterson did not hide her complete distaste for the book, which she tagged as "yellow journalism at its most yellow." Buckley countered by stating that the book was merely reporting the facts of life.

At several points where the discussion threatened to foeus on the vice aspects of the book, Miss Emerson warned that the program would be yanked off the air if any offensive remark was made. That didn't prevent references to Polly Adler, however. On the whole, though, Miss Emerson acted with firmness and intelligence in controlling the show's participants.

Martha Raye has achieved a fairly consistent record of very funny shows during her tenure on the big programs over NBC-TV. Her Saturday (29) session for the "All Star Revue" was as good as anything she has done in this medium. Leo Morgan surrounded her with some expert production, with writing assist by Nat Hiken and Billy Friedberg.

There was a thread of continuity so that there was no need for many variety acts. As a matter of fact, the only outside vaude turn was Los Gatos, who performed their acrobatics with precision and were off.

Very staunch assist was by Sarah Churchill, who performed her chores well. Daughter of the British prime minister enacted the role of a Park Ave. dweller who becomes Miss Raye's room-mate, in an effort to pick up enough mannerisms to learn the role of Adelaide in "Guys and Dolls." It's essentially a funny idea and Miss Churchill fell into the groove handily.

Probably one of the funniest moments was Miss Raye listening to "The Continental." The English lass chimed in on that skit, after the mood and tempo of the comedy had been established by Miss Raye.

Miss Raye is an uninhibited comedienne who can be genuinely funny. It's slow comedy of a high order, and her show on this stanza indicated that she can hold attention on her own for the better part of an hour.

ABC-TV's "Paul Whiteman Revue," cancelled by Goodyear, staged a tuneful and entertaining valedictory Sunday night (30), sparked by the solid thrushing of Peggy Lee in the guest spot. While the sign-off show obviously wasn't budgeted as high as some of those aired during its two-and-a-half year tenure on the air, it was nonetheless backgrounded by one of those lush-looking sets which won for the program much of its fame. Whiteman chose to reprise the numbers which he considered were the best done during the

CAFE CONTINENTAL
With Billy Daniels, Benny Payne, George & Bert Bernard, Arnaut Bros., Pedro de Cordoba, John, Seven Ashtons, Warren, Latona & Sparks; Pere August, emcee; Helene Cordet, femcee
Producer: Henry Caldwell
60 Mins.; Sat., 8:30 p.m.
Sustaining
BBC-TV, from London

Since the postwar resumption of TV, "Cafe Continental" has been one of the major light entertainment attractions. Program was conceived by Henry Caldwell as a wartime offering for the forces in the Middle East, and has since clicked on the halls as well as video. A monthly feature, it has brought many continental vaude artists to British screens against an authentic nitery background.

Current bill, which very closely resembles a topline Palladium program, suffers from one major defect. Most of the talent is now standard in this country, and only one act, a 12-year-old Danish acrobat named John, has the novelty value which this program demands, and usually supplies.

There are very few current TV features that could attract a galaxy of artists such as Billy Daniels, Bernard Bros., Arnaut Bros., Seven Ashtons, Pedro de Cordoba, and Warren, Latona & Sparks in a single bill. That these name attractions have been brought together in a 60-minute transmission is a tribute to its pulling power and the public reaction to Caldwell's monthly TV feature.

For Billy Daniels, the program, coming 48 hours before his Palladium debut, marked his introduction to British audiences and acted as a much-needed booster for his vaude stint. It left little doubt as to his talent and established his standing with millions of viewers. Many of the other acts, like George & Bert Bernard, Arnaut Bros., Seven Ashtons, and Warren, Latona & Sparks, were sufficiently well-known to most viewers and their standard reputation was sufficient to underline their appeal. Pedro de Cordoba, however, who was first introduced to the British public via "Cafe Continental" and recently scored a major hit in "Excitement," brought his intriguing act before a much wider audience.

Technically, the "Cafe" program is presented with a degree of imagination. The set resembles a smart nitery and an invited audience filling the table space provides an authentic touch. Lensing occasionally breaks away from conventions and odd shots from a camera perched on the gallery offer a pleasing variation to the more familiar closeups and two shots. Myro.

LIVE AND LEARN
With Dr. S. I. Hayakawa
Producer: Marilyn Murphy
Director; Dave Waters
30 Mins.; Sun., 11:30 p.m.
Sustaining
WNBQ, Chicago

It's encouraging to see a station grab by the nettles the thorny problem of how best to purvey an educational format via television, and to dish out practically undiluted pedagogy for adult viewers. WNBQ's public affairs and education department headed by Judith Waller is doing just that with this series featuring lectures by profs from the various Chicago universities. It's high level stuff and patently doesn't spring from the school of video thought that educational subjects have to be eased in under the guise of "entertainment." Actually, the series comes closer to living up to the high-falutin "Operation Frontal Lobe" tag waved by the parent NBC-TV web than most of the network's own attempts in this field. "Live and Learn" won't boost WNBQ's Sunday morning Nielsen but it certainly will boost prestige.

Mareh 16 lecture was delivered by Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, widely-known U. of Chicago semanticist. It was the third portion of a four-part series on semantics and with a fine choice of the topical the author-prof offered a talk on "How to Listen to Campaign Oratory." It was neither stuffy nor too rarified. After all, the prof has devoted his professional career to the study of words and their meanings so the Sunday morning video audience presented no serious communications problem.

In words as simple and a lot less ambiguous than those used in the ordinary TV commercial, Dr. Hayakawa analyzed such political spieling traits as the use of scare words, black and white arguments and high-sounding but irrelevant truisms.

It was a meaningful topic, adeptly presented in a classroom setup, complete with students and charts. And it went a long way to fulfilling WNBQ's responsibility to a community that has made it one of the most financially successful TV operations in the country. Dave.

large cities have been operating at a very considerable profit." (WBKB made $1,227,000 in the first nine months of 1951).

In radio as well as in TV, Van Volkenburg pointed out, the major portion of CBS profits has come from its o.-and-o. stations and the high cost of TV network operations, including cable costs, is likely to accentuate this situation in TV. Van Volkenburg noted that it cost CBS $2,619,000 for cable in 1951 to feed 52 stations, with charges for the Chicago-Coast relay included only during the last quarter. In contrast, line costs to feed the network's 187 radio affiliates were only $1,433,000.

Acquisition of WBKB (which will become WBBM-TV under CBS), said Van Volkenburg, will be an important step toward achieving nationwide competitive TV service, strengthen the network's programming, locally as well as nationally, and "substantially" strengthen CBS financially.

Okay Balance Sheet

As evidence of CBS' financial qualifications to operate WBKB, Van Volkenburg pointed to the network's balance sheet showing assets of CBS and its domestic subsidiaries of over $98,000,000. Company's net profits, after taxes, during 1950 totaled $4,105,000. Profits in 1951, he said, will "at least" equal that of 1950.

H. Leslie Atlass, general manager of the web's o.-and-o. radio station in Chicago, WBBM, and veepee of the CBS western division, told the Commission the network plans to make WBKB the "television counterpart" of WBBM. Atlass pointed out that WBBM was responsible for 1,234 originations in 1951 to the CBS network.

If purchase of WBKB is approved, he said, operations of the station will be directed by key executives of WBBM. An operating staff of 167 persons is contemplated, he disclosed, exclusive of sales, accounting, maintenance, traffic and publicity staff, and exclusive also of WBBM's 45 musicians who will perform for both stations. He added: "It is our desire to retain the services of as many of the present employees at WBKB as is possible."

In addition to expansion of facilities, Atlass testified, CBS plans to add a number of network public service programs to the WBKB schedule, cut down the length of some of the commercials, provide more local shows, add an agricultural program, add a TV documentary, and subscribe to the TV code of the National Assn. of Radio and TV Broadcasters.

against British pix has apparently not extended to its own station WGN-TV, which still runs an occasional overseas film.

The differences in humor that have come about since the days of the silents is underscored by the passle of Mack Sennett and Hal Roach shorts being screened by WNBQ. Since some of them are being beamed in a noontime show targeted at the kiddies, the film department has been going over them closely. Some of the comedy has been cut as being a bit too earthy for modern moppets. Also any stereotyped handling of minority groups has to be eliminated.

The degree to which certain segments of the viewing audience get excited about pix which might be construed as propaganda was the aftermath of the unreeling of a film about White Russia recently. The station beaming the pic received a number of calls asking how come. The distinction between White Russia and the Soviet Union apparently wasn't understood by the beefers.

Com'l Stations Should Be Educ. Mediums: Marshall

Philadelphia, April 1.

The proposal that commercial stations rather than professional teachers be used to develop television's potential as an education medium, was voiced by Dr. Roy K. Marshall, scientist and TV personality, speaking before a school group in Haddon Township, Westmont, N. J.

Dr. Marshall received the organization's first annual achievement award, in recognition of his popularizing scientific subjects on television. Dr. Marshall declared TV's great potential as an educational force can only be realized if it's properly utilized. He said he was not in sympathy with plans to reserve a number of TV channels exclusively for educational stations.

As educational director of the WFIL stations, Dr. Marshall supervises the WFIL-TV "University of the Air" and the "Studio Schoolhouse" programs. He is known to network TV viewers for his own program, "The Nature of Things," and his weekly commercials on the "Ford Festival."

5-OUTLET UTAH-IDAHO WEB GETS UNDER WAY

Salt Lake City, April 1.

New Beehive Radio Network, with five outlets in Utah and Idaho, kicked off operations today (Tues.), with Frank B. McLatchy as manager. Flagship of the web is KSL, CBS 50 kw station here. Others in the tieup are KSUB, Cedar City, Utah; KEEP, Twin Falls, KEXY, Pocatello, and KID, Idaho Falls, Ida.

Beehive, with its name taken from the symbol of the old territory of Deseret which once included Utah and parts of Idaho, Wyoming and Nevada, will be represented nationally by CBS Radio Spot Sales, and will go heavy on merchandising promotion. KSL has a two-man staff for merchandising, and each affiliate will have one man for the job.

Offices of the net will be located here in the Union Pacific Bldg. According to McLatchy, the net will offer complete coverage of the Intermountain area.

NBC, Life Tie Up With Femme Voters To Get All Candidates on Same Mike

NBC, Life magazine and the League of Women Voters are cooperating in an unusual special event which will bring almost all the major Presidential candidates together on a single platform to discuss issues raised by citizens themselves.

Event was suggested by NBC's exploitation section, which is headed by Norman Pader, as a promotion feature for Robert Montgomery's five-minute "Citizen Views the News" strip, sponsored by Life on the web. The candidates will appear at the LWV convention in Cincinnati on May 1, with the skein airing the discussion in a half-hour live broadcast, probably at 10:30 p.m. Nominees to take part include Gov. Earl Warren, Sen. Estes Kefauver, Harold Stassen and Sen. Robert Kerr. A representative of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will appear. Web hasn't yet heard from Sen. Robert A. Taft. Other candidates will be added as hats are tossed into the ring.

As part of the promotion, forums to discuss the questions and issues to be placed before the candidates for their comment will be held under LWV auspices in at least 25 cities. One major department store in each city is cooperating. The sessions will open with a short film in which Montgomery outlines the purpose of the project. It's likely that NBC affiliates will beam the local discussions in their areas. NBC program veep Charles (Bud) Barry went on the closed circuit Monday (31) to gain the affiliates' support.

The NBC-Life-LWV tieup is also expected to stir up added femme interest in the election race, thus helping the chain's airing of the convention and election coverage, for which Philco is picking up the tab.

show's history, and while some steady viewers might not have agreed with his selections, they made for a well-paced half-hour.

Miss Lee, who concentrated heavily on ballads rather than the current novelty pops, registered solidly with her dramatic rendition of two oldies. Earl Wrightson and Maureen Cannon, regulars on the show, scored with their tunes also, but the big finale, which featured pianist Earl Wild playing his "Variations on Funiculi, Funicula," was over-produced. Terpers, choreographed by Frank Westbrook, merely gestured and the number would have had just as much impact if the cameras had stayed with Wild.

Producer Frederick Hieder and director Babette Henry, ABC video staffers who took over when Young & Rubicam withdrew its production staffers from the show, did the most with what they had, although they played around too much with their crane camera, to the extent that the cleverness of of their lens work often distracted from the music. Withal, the show did itself proud during the time it was on the air, and its cancellation will undoubtedly leave a void in the Sunday night viewing habits of a number of TV set-owners.

Rose Franken's "Claudia" stories have been circulated in virtually every medium, and have collected a batch of adherents who should follow along with Monday's (31) shift from NBC-TV to CBS-TV. It's a pleasant, charming series. The stories are slight, but the series is inhabited by characters that one instinctively likes.

The yarn which marked the "Claudia" moveover had the newlyweds Claudia and David entertaining David's brother and sister-in-law. Story had its amusing moments and an ending which had Claudia winning over a hostile sister-in-law. Joan McCracken and Hugh Reilly do nicely as the youthful couple, Margaret Wycherly performs ably as Claudia's mother, and William Post, Jr., and Dora Sayers do well as the visiting in-laws.

"City Hospital," which had a run of several months on ABC-TV, shifted to the CBS-TV web Tuesday (25). If the top quality blending of yarn, thesping and production displayed in the preem continues throughout the series, show will nab plenty of viewers.

Yarns, which are set against the backdrop of a city hospital, run the gamut from mellers with medical overtones to mysteries with psychological twists. Scripted by Julian Funt and Robert Newman, the tales unfold with clarity and firstrate dramatic values. On show caught, Dr. Barton Crane, the hospital director, permanently played by Melville Ruick, was involved with a middleaged femme whose physical ailments were caused via mental unrest rather than organic trouble. With the aid of the femme's Gal Friday, the Doc was able to prove that her ill-health was being caused by her scheming husband, who, through the power of suggestion, had convinced her that she was old and sick.

Ruick was aided in the slick drama by Helen Donaldson, as the middleaged femme; Beverly Whitney, as the gal aide; and Michael Ingram, as the heavy. All were convincing in their assignments. Curt Conway's direction sustained pace and made use of excellent camera angles. Carter Products is picking up the tab for the series, which'll be aired on a bi-weekly schedule.

Eddie Foy, Jr., Rosemary Clooney and bandleader Gordon Jenkins shared the spotlight on Sunday's (30) session of "Royal Showcase" (NBC-TV). Foy offered an amusing knockabout takeoff on a confirmed film-mystery enthusiast. Miss Clooney had the solo part in Jenkins' song - dance - orchestral suite, "Manhattan Tower." Suite had been played before (on the Ed Sullivan show), but here had a full production treatment, in an elaborate, lengthy presentation that involved intricate scenery, large singing and dancing chorus, and several leads. Lively and sentimental by turn, the work proved to be good, conventional Manhattaniana, smoothly and expertly done. Arthur Partington's dancing and miming as the central figure were standout.

Autobiography of Grandma Moses, the nonagenarian artist, emerged as pleasant but lacklustre video entertainment as staged on CBS-TV's "Schlitz Playhouse of Stars" Friday night (28). Adapted by David Shaw from Mrs. Moses' recently-published autobiography, the play had Lillian Gish in the title role spinning tales to her grandchildren on her early life and how she won recognition with her colorful American primitives after she had passed 80. Story flashed back from camera shots of Grandma Moses' paintings to the related incidents in her life, which was a clever technique. This was one spot, though, where color TV was urgently needed.

With Miss Gish etching a warmly human characterization of the nice old lady who was as eager to receive compliments for her strawberry preserves as for her paintings, the story captured much of Mrs. Moses' simple, homespun philosophy, as well as her life on a farm dating back to the days when Abraham Lincoln was President. Sisters Denise and Jane Alexander were competent as the artist at the ages of five and 12, respectively, and Georgianne Johnson turned in a sympathetic portrayal of Mrs. Moses at the age of 26. Russell Hardie was good as her husband, and Sidney Smith limned an okay role as the art connoisseur who discovered her artistic talents.

Joseph Scibetta reined both the actors and the cameras through their paces in fine style. Sets and other production mountings were standout. Durward Kirby again handled the Schlitz commercials, tying them in cleverly with the sets from the play.

The show business background of "Fury and Sound," one of the releases on "The Unexpected" series, last Wednesday (26) on NBC-TV, provided an excellent setting for a well-constructed yarn. Story dealt with a temperamental radio director who made life miserable for his assistant by belittling him in front of the company and then making a play for his wife. The assistant, with the aid of a supersensitive mike, goaded the director into committing suicide, but then got tripped up by his own conscience.

Performances of Hans Conreid, as the director, and Paul Guilfoyle, as the assistant, were in a fairly high key, but in keeping with the mood of the yarn. Film quality on this segment of the Ziv-produced series was good.

"New Dimensions" on WNBT, N. Y., last Saturday (29) was concerned with the Catholic Charities Guidance Institute and its handling of problem children. Program represents a laudable effort in the N. Y. diocese and particularly of Father Robert Gallagher, director of the Institute, in spotting and attempting to solve the emotional disturbances of the youngest generation.

First portion consisted of a panel discussion eliciting the opinions of a staff psychiatrist, whose name was not revealed, as per ethical considerations, and the organization's chief psychologist, Mrs. Marion Topping. Under Father Gallagher's cuing, they described the various steps taken to test babies and older children for aptitudes, coordination, logic, solution of problems via use of blocks, etc.

There were also "frustration" tests—these and others being on film in the second part. Watching the babies work out the problems provided a bit of educational entertainment, especially for family viewers. It was agreed that "the earlier we get them, the more we can do for them," particularly as applied to children with deviations in behavior.

Program from 1:30 to 1:55 p.m., was originated by Nancy Davids, radio and TV director for N. Y. Catholic Charities, who wrote and directed the film end, with overall production-direction by Hugh McDermott. Tacked on for five minutes to bring the frame to the 2 p.m. mark was a description of the organization's scope, climaxed by a celluloid speech by Francis Cardinal Spellman appealing for funds.

vailing) viewpoint as "nonsense," asserting the producer must recognize the "inevitability of royalty payments in the future," and adds they will not prove harmful.

Kelly, who reflects the Snader viewpoint, claims vidpix producers are unduly concerned at the demands by the SWG and SAG for residual percentages of the vidpix.

"These demands are not as dangerous as some choose to believe, because of the tax situation, because the producer pays his tax on the net profit. As a result, money for the residual is taken off the profit side, and the tax bite isn't so big," Kelly explained.

"Television production as of now is too young to accurately compute profit and loss," Kelly asserts. "You must anticipate increased labor costs, and provide for them. We've gotten a lot further ahead by dealing with the unions on the table, instead of fighting them under it.

"Unions are entitled to just demands. I don't say they're entitled to everything they ask for, but there is always a basis for compromise. We must compromise with them, and never lose sight of the fact that the unions have the biggest stake in this business. After all, there are more of the workers than there are of us. It's to the unions' interest to preserve jobs, and they are not out to jeopardize employment."

KSTP Needs City Okay To Take Muny Pictures

Minneapolis, April 1.

In a move to limit KSTP's activities, the city council's police committee has requested the city engineer and city attorney to notify the TV and radio station to get city permission before taking pictures on city property.

Action followed a letter from AFL City and County Laborer's Union, stating that KSTP had taken pictures of ice jams and other activities at Mississippi River city docks. Letter asserted that unionized employees resent the intrusion, and the pictures could show some municipal employees and officials in an unfavorable light. KSTP has been involved in a labor dispute with the AFL Technicians Union for two years.

'Studio Schoolhouse' Now Set to Woo FM'ers

Philadelphia, April 1.

WFIL's prize-winning "Studio Schoolhouse" radio series, presented Monday through Friday from 2:15 to 2:30 p. m., has been made available for FM reception, as of this week.

The program, designed for in-school listening, are in their ninth year on the station and have been sponsored continuously by RCA Victor since 1949. "Studio Schoolhouse" is heard in public, private and parochial school classrooms, and during the 1950-51 terms more than 154,000 public school students listened to at least one broadcast each week.

The programs are produced by members of the Temple U.'s Radio Workshop for the Philadelphia Board of Education.

ACLU Asks FCC to Study Monopoly Questions In Par-DuM, ABC-UPT Cases

Washington, April 1.

American Civil Liberties Union today (Tues.) congratulated the Federal Communications Commission for the scope of its hearings on (1) relations between Paramount Pictures and Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, and (2) the proposed merger between ABC d United Paramount Theatres. ACLU, which had an observer at the hearings but has not taken a stand yet, underlined certain questions on which it wishes the FCC to give "considered study."

In a letter to FCC chairman Paul Walker, ACLU said that the Par-DuMont inquiry should "determine the amount of parallel or competitive operations in the two companies," so that restrictive economic practices, "which are a barrier to diversity in communication, will be avoided." It also urged study of the question of free access to raw materials, particular raw film stock. Free speech, ACLU said, "may be affected by raw material problems of this kind, as well as by patent problems relating to the new color, subscriber and theatre television developments now in progress."

Regarding the UPT-ABC merger proposals, ACLU stressed two problems: (1) would the merger override considerations set forth by the Supreme Court to the effect that "a person may not be both a producer and exhibitor at the same time"; and (2) would approval of the merger, in the short run at least, strengthen ABC-TV "and make it better able to compete with the two dominant networks and thus enlarge the area of diversification?"

ACLU said it will give its views to the Commission at the hearings' conclusion, after it has fully studied the testimony.

Boston—Robert E. Bousquet, ex-Lever Bros., appointed director of media and research for John C. Dowd agency. E. D. Parent, exec v.p., was upped to general manager.

Don Mossman Of Joliet Makes The Switch That Had To Be Made!

WHO is producing the millions of weapons our Armed Forces need to defend America?

The answer is . . . all kinds of companies . . . big and little . . . in all sections of the country.

There are, of course, companies like RCA, with fine laboratories, skilled engineering staffs and mass production facilities.

But there are also thousands of little companies run with skill and courage by men like Don Mossman, who tackled and licked a mighty tough job for our Navy.

Who is Don Mossman?

Don Mossman has been a landlubber all his 43 years.

Born in Nebraska, he was educated in Missouri. He stuck to the land, even when it came time to go to war, joining the Army as a 2nd Lieutenant in 1942 and coming out as a Major in 1945.

Now he manages D. P. Mossman, Inc., a small switch manufacturing plant employing only 45 people, that is located in Joliet, Illinois . . . which is just about as far as you can get from the sea in this country.

Even though he proudly states that he makes more different types of push, turn and lever switches than any other company in the world, it is probable that until recently the Navy knew as little about Don Mossman as he knew about the Navy.

But because of the teamwork that exists between America's industrial firms, big and little, Don Mossman right now is making a major contribution to the effectiveness of every Navy task force and the safety of all the men in them.

The Navy Needs Information Fast

The Combat Information Center of major Navy ships is the very heart, brain and nerve center of a modern task force. Called the C.I.C. for short, it is the central point to which is funneled all vital battle information from radar, radio, telephone and other new, secret types of electronic equipment.

That information must be assembled and analyzed instantly and sent out with the utmost speed to every element of the task force . . . ships, aircraft and submarines.

Even a few seconds delay in getting this information out can mean the difference between victory and disaster — and the loss of ships and American lives.

Three years ago the Navy asked RCA to design and build a communications console that could send out such information in exactly the time it takes to push a button. Our top engineers went to work on this and finally designed a model that would do the job.

Their design, however, called for a very complicated switch that just didn't exist.

The RCA purchasing department went to companies experienced in complex switching devices. Many of these companies said it was too complicated — it required up to 889 different parts. Others said it was impossible. And still others were too busy with defense work of their own to divert their skilled manpower to our switch.

Only two firms expressed any interest in the switch at all. D. P. Mossman, Inc., of Joliet, Ill., was one of them.

Mossman's Switch Does The Job

To Don Mossman our sketch presented a challenge. With the help of his father who had founded the company, he made up a rough sample and our engineers saw at once that he was at least a year ahead of the only other company willing to try.

From that time on, Mr. Mossman and RCA engineers worked closely together.

At least once a week for the next three months, Don Mossman came to our engineering headquarters in Camden, N. J., to coordinate the development work on the switch.

To speed the work and get closer to RCA, he went up to Danbury, Conn., and made arrangements with the Capitol Machine Company of that city to produce the switches. Capitol itself is a small machine manufacturer and makes spray baking equipment for such things as fountain pen cases, lipstick holders, and clock parts. It had exactly the right kind of tools and skilled craftsmen needed to build the parts for the switch.

Under Don Mossman's direction, 18 of Capitol's 25 employees worked in shifts for 60, 70 and 80 hours a week.

Because of the Navy's urgent need for the new console, we assigned an expediter to the job, and he went all over the country in search of the necessary materials.

After four weeks of this intensive effort, the first engineering model of the switch was completed at 3 a.m. on a Monday and delivered that same morning at 7 o'clock in Camden. By the next morning we had Navy approval, and production of the new C.I.C. console was started.

119 Other Companies Are On The Team

THE combined skills of Mossman and Capitol and RCA . . . in Joliet and Danbury and Camden . . . made the switch that had to be made.

But, these companies are only three members of the team producing the new C.I.C. console for the Navy.

In all, we have called on 119 other companies to supply us with parts or materials in connection with this order.

68 per cent of these suppliers, like Don Mossman, are classified by our government as "small business" firms. They receive 71 per cent of our purchase orders.

These companies are located in all parts of the country, because no one region has a corner on production facilities, skilled management and skilled workmen needed to do the job.

In all, there are more than 5,000 suppliers with whom we are working day in and day out producing quality products for both the Armed Forces and the nation's consumers.

Many of these are very small companies. Actually, 70 per cent of all the companies who supply parts and materials to us are classified by the government as small businesses. About half of our suppliers employ less than 100 men and women.

But no matter whether they are large or small . . . no matter where they are located . . . the members of this All-American industrial team pool their skills and their resources to get the job done. Together, in peace and war, we serve America!

Inside Stuff—Radio

Radio Luxembourg's weekday audiences in Great Britain total around 6,000,000 adults, according to the survey by British Market Research Bureau. However, Radio Lux points out that it doesn't outpull the British Broadcasting Corp. in Britain, an impression which might have been conveyed by VARIETY's March 12 article.

Five-day averages show Radio Lux with 13.0% of the total audience. BBC's Home Service drew 28.4%, BBC Light Program drew 44.2% and BBC Television Program got 9.2%.

Bertram Lebhar, Jr., director of WMGM, N. Y., and Simon Rossant, account exec with the indie and M-G-M Radio Attractions, captured the 1952 East States Pair bridge championship over the weekend. The broadcaster-bridge experts are also on the team defending the Reisinger Cup team-of-four championship. Another show biz bridge champ is N. B. (Nate) Spingold, Columbia Pictures veepee, who incidentally is a friend of Lebhar and frequently plays bridge with the WMGM exec.

Mac McGuire, WIP, Philadelphia, disk jockey, beams a musical show via Mutual to servicemen around the world through Armed Forces Radio Network. Recently in the mail he received the following from a civilian listener in Japan. It was datemarked "Nakano-ku, Tokyo," and read, "Dear Mac: I often hear you people say 'Join the March of Dimes:' I didn't know what was meant by this, but now I know that it is to help the unfortunate people. As I am a Japanese and haven't any dollars or dimes, I would like to make my contribution in yen. It is only 200 yen, but I do hope you can use the money for the purpose. I am sorry if this may reach you too late. Thank you. With best wishes and good luck, J. I. K." McGuire's only problem is how to exchange it into U.S. money. Girard Trust-Corn Exchange bank reported it could not help, as Japanese currency has no exchange value on the U.S. market. If exchangeable the 200 yen would be worth 56c.

Purvis Planning Bid For Augusta, Ga., TV'er

Washington, April 1.

Melvin Purvis, ex-FBI agent and chief counsel for the Senate Subcommittee on Federal Manpower Policies, plans to apply for a TV station in Augusta, Ga., immediately following the lifting of the TV freeze. Purvis is part owner of Garden City Broadcasting Co., which operates WAUG and WAUG-FM in Augusta.

Purvis' company will be the second applicant for Augusta, which would be assigned two VHF channels under proposed allocations. Radio station WJBF, headed by J. B. Fuqua, is the other. It is expected that additional applications will be filed, necessitating hearings before the Federal Communications Commission.

CLEM RANDAU GROUP BUYS KXOB, STOCKTON

Stockton, Cal., April 1.

Purchase of KXOB was announced over the weekend by a group headed by Clem J. Randau, assistant administrator of Civil Defense in Washington. Others in the syndicate include Coast exhib Sherrill C. Corwin, film and television financier Ralph Stolkin and oilman Ed Burke of San Antonio.

New owners plan a television station for stockton in addition to the AM operation. KXOB was founded in 1947 by Lincoln Dellar, who owns a string of stations on the Coast.

Deal, subject of the usual FCC approval, was handled by Albert Zugsmith, prexy of American Pictures, who also has extensive radio and newspaper interests nationally.

Celebrating 30 years in '52... Chicago's Miss Waller and "Q"!

Judith Waller is Director of Public Affairs and Education for WMAQ, WNBQ and NBC-Chicago

On April 13 of this year, radio station WMAQ in Chicago will be just thirty years old. On this very same day, Judith Waller celebrates her thirtieth year with "Q". Is it any wonder that to countless hundreds she is WMAQ in Chicago?

Pioneer and perfectionist, teacher and taskmaster, Miss Waller personifies that essential ingredient of radio that has made WMAQ an outstanding station—service. Service to the public. Service to advertisers. Service to the industry. These three above all else.

So permit us this once to wax just a little bit sentimental about our business. Permit us this tribute to a great lady of broadcasting and to the ideals and standards which she has set for WMAQ and the industry.

Colgate Penalty For Cuffo Plugs

Practice of comedians giving cuffo commercials for various products, resorts, etc., has provoked Colgate to memo NBC-TV that if any comic lapses into an unauthorized pitch on "Colgate Comedy Hour" the audio is to be cut off.

Soap outfit was prompted by the Dean Martin-Jerry Lewis performance on Sunday, March 23, when the duo tossed in plugs for a Boston beanery, a camera, a magazine, etc. Sponsor, feeling that this not only diminishes the value of its paid-for spiels but also cuts down on the show's entertainment value, issued the directive to the web to have the sound portion cut if performers break the rule against the slyly inserted "commercials" with their payola flavor.

Bankroller feels it is taking a drastic but necessary step. It figures potential offenders will be curbed by fear of getting their voices stilled.

Mansfield Method

"This is Show Business" has no problem of performers putting in unauthorized plugs, according to Irving Mansfield, show's producer. Mansfield revealed that he solved that problem last September by inserting a clause in the contract stating that any performer who departs from script to insert commercial mention of other products, agrees to accept scale salary for the show no matter what figure was previously negotiated. Consequently, a performer who brings in the plug for a product may get $170 instead of $1,700 or whatever other figure was previously agreed upon.

Mansfield stated that his show was also plagued by performers ringing in plugs for Knickerbocker Beer, Hess Bros. Department Store in Allentown and Hadacol. He consequently went to the CBS legal department for advice and soon afterward inserted the scale clause. Mansfield stated that he hasn't been bothered since.

"Show Business" producer was especially bitter at the Knickerbocker Beer plug inserted by Romo Vincent in the Ed Sullivan show March 9. Mansfield stated that the brewers do not spend a nickel on CBS. On the other hand, Pabst, Anheuser-Busch and Schlitz spend millions on that network and must be protected against free encroachments.

Mansfield said that performers sometimes have legitimate gags tied onto product names. Acts must get permission to use these gags on his show.

At the same time, George Heller, Television Authority executive secretary, declared that his union could take no action to protect performers who depart from script to insert commercial products in a routine.

WFAA, Dallas, 'Early Birds' Fete 22d Year on Air

Dallas, April 1.

The WFAA "Early Birds" have completed their 22nd year on the air—one of the oldest breakfast time shows airing. Show observed a week-long birthday party with a host of its early stars dropping in for a visit.

Present cast includes Claire Stewart, vocalist; Charlie Goodwin, accordionist; John Allen, m.c.; Billy Mayo and the WFAA orch; Bob Shelton and Norvell Slater; Little Willie (played by Ben McCleskey), Hack Berry (played by Elmer Baughman), and others.

"The Saturday Night Shindig," originating in the WFAA studios each Saturday night and fed to the Texas Quality Network, observed its eighth anniversary Saturday (29).

CBS-TV Sets Saturday Nite Spot for Politicos

In line with its recent decision to sell time to political parties prior to the Chicago conventions this summer, CBS-TV has set aside its Saturday night 6:30 to 7 slot for such purpose. Time has been occupied on the network by "Meet Corliss Archer," which checked off last Saturday night's (29) broadcast, following the web's inability to tag a sponsor for it.

CBS-TV is also retaining its Friday night at 10:30 period for political talks, but this time is being given gratis to the parties. Web's news and special events department is programming it under the title of "Presidential Timber," in which the various Presidential candidates or their representatives state their qualifications to the voting-viewing public. Saturday night half-hour will be sold on regular time and facilities charges to the politicos.

ARMED FORCES HYPOING PUB RELATIONS VIA TV

Pointing up the growing emphasis placed on television as a public relations medium by the various branches of the Armed Forces both the Navy and Air Force are currently pitching series of films based on their activities to networks and local video outlets across the country. Army, meanwhile, will preem its second 13-week cycle on "The Big Picture," a film record of the war in Korea, April 13, on WCBS-TV, flagship station of the CBS-TV web in N. Y.

WCBS-TV gained an exclusive on the first "Big Picture" series, but it's believed the Army will make the second cycle available to all stations on a day-and-date basis. Federation Bank & Trust Co. of N. Y., which sponsored the initial series on WCBS-TV, is currently mulling the bankrolling of the second series as well. Films will continue in the Sunday afternoon 2 to 2:30 period.

Local Ballcasts to Cost Tele Webs Heavily in Time Rebates to Clients

With all major league baseball teams except the Pittsburgh Pirates being televised again this year, the TV networks will be forced to rebate thousands of dollars in time costs to their sponsors for network time pre-empted by local affiliates, in order to air the ballcasts. Rebate tariff will be exceptionally heavy this year because of the number of scheduled night games, which means pre-empting Class A time periods.

As with most such cases when network time is taken over by the local stations, the nets pay back full time costs to the sponsors, but rebate nothing on program costs. Since the 16 major league teams represent only 10 cities, and since the Pirates permit no TV, only nine markets are involved. Sponsors, consequently, get their regular coverage in all other markets, except for localities where the local affiliates might cover minor league clubs.

Web's pre-emption notices signify that all network programs will be carried as scheduled in case of rain-outs or rescheduling of the ball games. In addition, a number of stations plan to air kinescopes of the network shows affected by the ballcasts, providing the sponsors are willing to accept kine airings in time periods different from those in which their shows are usually aired.

NEGRO SET AT FRISCO'S KNBC AS ANNOUNCER

San Francisco, April 1.

The employment of Wallace G. (Wally) Ray as KNBC staff announcer, according to Lloyd E. Yoder, KNBC general manager, marks the first time a Negro has held such a position in the San Francisco Bay area radio.

Ray resigned as assistant manager of station KBLF, in Red Bluff, Cal., to join the KNBC staff. A native of Los Angeles and a graduate of Manuel Arts High in that city, Ray served as a Marine Corps anti-aircraft gunner in the Pacific during World War II.

Inside Stuff—Television

In an effort to lick rapidly-rising production costs, Frank Wisbar is planning virtually uninterrupted shooting on the next 40 films in the "Fireside Theatre" series. Wisbar will launch the first 13 April 14 and, with but brief interruptions, will follow the first group with 16 and then 11 more. Same production personnel will be kept on the payroll throughout the period to maintain a compact working group. Wisbar hopes by this method to keep costs at last year's level, or perhaps even reduce the outlay on individual telefilms.

Students in the American Theatre Wing's television lab will participate in the N. Y. City civil defense organization's TV unit. They will serve as volunteer writer-producers, working on a series of seven half-hour shows dealing with atomic effects, first aid, fire fighting, etc. Programs will be a combo of live and film and will be beamed on a network outlet in N. Y., and later made available to other stations. George Wallach, head of the Wing's TV lab and a staffer of WNBT, N. Y., was appointed executive producer for the civil defense organization's tele unit. Students in the ATW tele course will work under his supervision.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, chief consultant to RCA, is slated as the principal speaker at the National TV Film Council's quarterly forum next Wednesday (9) at the Hotel Warwick, N.Y. He'll talk about color TV and also describe some new contributions to the future of the medium. All-day forum will devote most of its time to the growing importance of film in the over-all industry picture, with a number of other guest speakers also scheduled.

Dr. John White, vice president of W.R.U., declared the university is convinced that the public "can best be served by having educational institutions develop program attractive to commercial stations" rather than compete with commercial stations.

"Education," he said, "missed the boat in movies and radio. Now TV is here, and we have another opportunity; an opportunity we cannot afford to miss."

Production-wise, colleges would find themselves "hard-pressed" to program for a complete day on their own TV station, according to Dr. Barclay Leathem, the university's producer of television activities. He also questioned whether educational institutions could compete successfully with commercial outlets for audiences.

The educators agreed that, if necessary, colleges could buy evening time for programming and seek sponsors, and that this would "benefit the community to a far greater extent than to have educational institutions build, operate, and attempt to promote their TV stations that would in effect be tax-supported."

Weslaco, Tex. — KRGV, owned by the O. L. Taylor Co., Inc., observed its 25th anniversary last week. Future plans call for a television affiliate.

"... they did an unprecedented job of public service ..."

Below is a copy of a letter released to the press by the Memphis-Shelby County Chapter, The American Red Cross. It shows conclusively once more in an emergency how WMC and WMCT rise to the needs of their area.

PRESS RELEASE
RELEASE DATE: SUNDAY, MARCH 23, 1952
MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE

When the disastrous tornado struck the Five State area Friday night, March 21, the services of Radio Station WMC and Television Station WMCT were made immediately available.

The entire staff and facilities set up for the general disaster emergency aid pool began immediately cooperating with the Red Cross, civil authorities and destruction workers in the area. WMC, WMCF and WMCT were the only stations which maintained a 24-hour service, remaining on the air after midnight and throughout the night of the tornado. The value of this service is inestimable, for it meant a source of constant contact with the Red Cross office, dispensing information, clarifying the news for many who had relatives and friends in the stricken area, and helping to avoid panic and false rumors.

They threw open their channels to the Red Cross, transmitting calls for assistance and bulletins to the general public.

WMC's Chief Engineer quickly established short wave amateur communications through ham networks throughout Arkansas and Tennessee and served as a communication center between the Memphis Red Cross headquarters and the stricken areas.

The stations greatly facilitated the disaster operation in the early hours of the disaster by announcing the proper telephone numbers to be called for specific information, reducing the load on overtaxed switchboards.

Each news announcement was carefully weighed and handled in such a way as to best interpret the true picture to the public. There was no sensationalism. The meticulous accuracy of the news reports aided all agencies concerned. Every report was double checked.

WMC and WMCT staffs stayed on the job all night long, right along with Red Cross workers. They did an unprecedented job of public service.

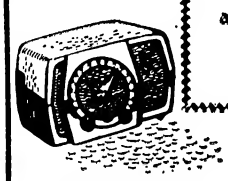
To Have Given
30 YEARS OF PUBLIC SERVICE
To Milwaukee!

Yes, 30 years in radio is a long time. And in this, our 30th anniversary year, WISN renews its never-broken pledge to always program in the public interest.

Milwaukee knows that it can look to WISN—first in public service—for the finest in local and network (CBS) radio.



WISN
MILWAUKEE'S PIONEER RADIO STATION

Milwaukee WISN Preps 30th Anni

Milwaukee, April 1.

WISN here celebrates its 30th anni June 22, with a month-long series of special programs and events set during June.

Milwaukee's first AM station, owned and operated by the Hearst Corp., joined CBS in June, 1929, and has been Columbia's outlet here ever since. Gaston W. Grignon has been associated with the station since it was launched in 1922, and has been general manager for the past 20 years. Some 13 staffers have been with the outlet for 15 years or more.

The 5 kw operation has stressed public service. On June 4 it marks the 10th anni of its "Know Your Druggist Better," a weekly drama devoted to the profession of pharmacy. Another vet stanza is "Your Question, Please," panel discussion by teenagers, which has won the Milwaukee County Radio Council award for the past three years. "Your Common Council" has a panel of aldermen view current community problems. This year the station launched two shows designed for in-school listening—"Radio News Roundup" and "Radio Art Class," beamed in cooperation with the city's public schools.

KIRO, Seattle CBS Outlet, Links Up With Daily For Pubservice Programs

Seattle, April 1.

KIRO, CBS outlet here, has inked a contract with the Seattle Times, afternoon daily, for cooperative work in the field of public service. Saul Haas, president and general manager of KIRO worked out the agreement with H. H. Cahill, general manager of the Times.

First joint undertaking was the reporting of recent city elections, with coverage of Republican caucuses the second.

According to the agreement between the two media, they should be mutually helpful "especially in the field of public service; the promotion of good citizenship, and the promotion of each by the other as outstanding institutions."

The agreement marks the first time the Times has agreed to cooperate with a radio station, although the morning Post Intelligencer, other daily here, has agreements with KOMO and KRSG at the present time, and also owns 25% of KING-TV, only local television station.

TVA COLLECTS $26,000 IN CLAIMS ON COAST

Hollywood, April 1.

Television Authority here has collected approximately $26,000 in claims from local video stations and nets, from December, 1950, to the present time, Coast rep Wayne Oliver reported to TVA's exec board. Payments garnered were due under the code, but had been held up due either to protests or requests for clarification.

One of the largest items was a claim for $1,300 against Bob Clampett Productions by Daws Butler and Stan Freberg, voices on Clampett's "Time for Beany" show on KTLA. Claim was on basis that the pair wasn't paid commercial fees, and didn't get coin for doubling.

Also included were two hefty chunks of sugar held in escrow until WSB had okayed the new TVA Code. KTTV released $5,020 for staff mikesiders, and Mike Moser of Terra Productions released $5,122 to cast members of ABC-TV's "Space Patrol."

Chicago — First member-elected Central Region reps on the Television Authority national board were picked here last week. They are Harry Elders and Muriel Bremner. Sam Siegel and Dean Almquist were named as alternates.

Class A stock, on the date the option was granted, sold at a high of 31¾, and closed at 38½ Friday (28).

Fourth in the list of salaries to directors of the company was the $65,000 paid exec veepee Joseph H. Ream, who also received $17,475 in bonuses and shares in profits. Other execs whose annual payments were listed included James B. Conkling, Columbia Records prez, with $45,833, plus $10,000 in bonuses and share in profits; Bruce A. Coffin, Hytron prexy, with $26,922, plus $25,000, and Lloyd H. Coffin, Hytron board chairman, and David H. Cogan, CBS-Columbia prexy, who received the same as the Hytron prez.

MMM AMONG 'AMERICA'S 12 MASTER SALESMEN'

Mary Margaret McBride, ABC network femme gabber, was among a group of 12 American business personalities toasted at the Hotel Roosevelt, N. Y., yesterday (Tues.) by the Sales Executive Club. Event was timed with the publication of the book, "America's 12 Master Salesmen" by the B. C. Forbes Co. Harry White, exec secretary of the sales exec club, authored the book's foreword.

Miss McBride was the only woman included in the group of "master salesman," the others being Thomas J. Watson (International Business Machines), James A. Farley (Coca-Cola), Alfred Lyon (Philip Morris), Red Motley, (Parade mag), Elmer Leterman (insurance), Winthrop Smith (Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane), Alex Lewyt (appliance manufacturer), Bill Zeckendorf, (Webb & Knapp realty), Conrad N. Hilton (hotels), Max Hess, Jr. (department store) and the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale.

sible for the AFM to claim damages because the musicians have already been paid in full for their services under prevailing union wage scales. How can there be damages when they've already been paid."

Virtual impossibility of assessing damages had been admitted by Phil Fischer, AFM veepee, during the course of testimony in the proceedings.

Brink's decision that the AFM has no property rights in the pix was seen as an open invitation to other producers to begin dickering for video rights to their own films.

The bankruptcy referee held that the Nassers cannot reject the tele clause in the contract. However, he added: "I can't imagine why businessmen would make such a contract because it leaves the matter to litigation."

He interpreted the contract to mean that the producers and the AFM would negotiate and arrive at terms and conditions fair and equitable to both parties for the use of sountracks on television. Under this interpretation, "the soundtracks can be used and the only remedy to the AFM is a claim for damages."

However, the challenge to the formula upsets AFM's long-range plans for collecting a revenue from the use of motion picture films on television. No decision has been made as yet on an appeal but it's expected the subject would be thoroughly discussed by AFM execs this week. Under the law, a Federal judge can be asked to review the findings and appeals can be taken, if desired, all the way to the Supreme Court.

The four pix which the Nassers are trying to peddle to video are "Don't Trust Your Husband," with Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll; "Cover Up," with William Bendix, Dennis O'Keefe and Barbara Britton; "Without Honor," with Laraine Day, Dana Clark and Franchot Tone; and "A Kiss for Corliss" with Shirley Temple and David Niven.

ticular powwow that was noticeable at other meetings of reps from the AM side of the industry. Originally this panel was to have been devoted to the radio rate controversy, but the topic was dropped in favor of the more "constructive" examination of merchandising tactics.

One of the most elaborate merchandising setups in the country—that developed over the past 12 years by Crosley's WLW, Cincinnati—was outlined by merchandising director Jack Zinselmeier. WLW and its sister video plant, WLWT, both pioneers in this field, now have 26 different promotional and merchandising services available as "extras" for their clients. Station has 26 staffers working on the "plus" campaign, which includes such things as retail store field work, distribution checks, attitude surveys, mailings and special display material.

Heavy Tie-Ins

The Crosley operation has tie-in arrangements with 2,500 grocery and 1,000 drug stores. Zinselmeier reports that in two years of operation, over 65% of the special display material sent out by the stations has been used by the retailers.

The special need of a station in a mid-size market for an effective merchandising formula was spelled out by Lester Lindow, general manager of WFDF, Flint, Mich. To offset any tendency by the national spot advertisers to bypass the middle-size cities, the importance of the particular market has to be strengthened by the use of merchandising and promotion tools, he said.

F. C. Sowell, manager of WLAC, Nashville, stressed the need for additional hometown selling "extras" to keep the particular account aboard into the next option cycle. He reminded the broadcasters that they frequently forget about their own medium for promotional use. He advocated liberal "plugging" of major clients' shows. Also on-the-scene airing of store openings and other special retailers events has proved successful for WLAC.

Sowell summed up the thought of the afternoon session by pointing out "the secret lies not in how many listen, but how well you sell those who are listening."

Detroit—"Open House," WWJ-TV's audience participation show, has a new emcee—Paul Luther, formerly of WLW-TV, Cincinnati. Ted Johnson, former emcee, had to quit because of his disk jockey duties at WXYZ. Show is sponsored by Hotpoint, Inc.

Serializing Pix

Problem of how to compress an hour-and-a-half or two-hour feature film oldie into 55 minutes of television time without emasculating the pictures, has been solved by WCBS-TV, CBS-TV's N. Y. flagship, through the simple expedient of serializing such features on two succeeding days. Station has found the pix receive much greater audience acceptance that way, than if they were edited down to the requisite single-day running time.

Move has been made necessary by the station's recent trimming of its cross-the-board "Early Show," which comprises feature films, to 55 minutes. During recent weeks, WCBS-TV has programmed both "Man in the Iron Mask" and "Son of Monte Cristo" as two-part serials in order to preserve their original length, and is prepared to follow the same procedure on other pix if they run long enough.

affiliate, there's also the possibility the station may be asked for more web productions. The Chi Tribune plant has the most extensive studio facilities in the city and has had good success with its DuMont shows. Three of the five programs WGN-TV sends along the cable are currently sponsored.

Meanwhile, things have brightened up at NBC. Tele chief Jules Herbuveaux has been scanning new show ideas in the hopes of getting an opportunity of slotting some of them in the open time that's popping up on the parent web.

Besides "Charms," which the local NBCers feel is a sleeper, the wraps are being taken off other new packages. An audition version of a show, featuring commentator Alex Drier and using a news-dramatization format, was shown to International Harvester and agency reps yesterday (Mon.). Web is also pitching a couple of show ideas, including "Short Story Playhouse" used last season, as a hiatus filler for Standard Oil when the Wayne King group takes its summer vacation.

Radio is still the best buy per dollar despite the insistence for further rate reductions from "people in high places," Ryan said. Radio's national circulation is 105,000,000, compared to newspaper's 50,000,000. There were 12,000,000 AM sets sold last year and 9,200,000 of these went into new radio homes, the BAB prexy stated.

BAB plans to continue to focus emphasis on the local retailing sales level, with 42 sales clinics set to kick off later this month. With a hefty new budget—and prospects for more—outfit plans to step up services for the coming year. BAB's financial backing comes from member stations who pay monthly dues based on one-half of highest hourly rate.

Channel has given advertising a bonus pitch on the pix. An advertiser buying five spots on the nighttime screenings during the week will be given bonus blurbs the following morning on the same pic. The "ten-for-five" pitch, i.e., paying for five spots and receiving 10, is expected to help tremendously toward paying the freight.

CBS to Buck Sum. Ball With Music

In an attempt to beat the pull of baseball pickups carried on local stations during the summer months, CBS Radio will launch a new series of Sunday afternoon shows during July and August grooved specifically for listeners who might be on the beaches, driving their cars, on vacation, etc. Tentatively titled "On a Sunday Afternoon," the show will present two or three hours of music, both live and on disks, combined with frequent safety pitches in association with the National Safety Council.

Idea was conceived by program veepee Lester Gottlieb, who pointed out that most listeners tune into either baseball or music on Sunday afternoons in the summer. Since it's impossible for a network to air baseball, CBS has decided on the music. With a w.k. disk jockey as emcee, Gottlieb plans to include, in addition to recordings, music by studio orchs both in N.Y. and Chicago and pickups from bands in amusements parks, such as Atlantic City's Steel Pier. Music, Gottlieb said, will not be tossed on the air indiscriminately but will range, in a planned setup, from the more popular symphonies through pop songs to show tunes.

For the safety end of the show, the top CBS stars will cut safety slogans, which will be inserted periodically during the program. In addition, a certain amount of time will be turned over to local affiliates every half-hour for local insertions on weather and traffic conditions. It's also planned to present short newscasts and baseball scores. Show will be offered as a special package deal to clients, with CBS considering it a good bet for an outfit such as a gasoline firm, tire manufacturer, etc.

AFRA ASKS L.A. INDIES FOR 10% PAY BOOST

Hollywood, April 1.

American Federation of Radio Artists, now negotiating with L.A. indie radio stations, seeks a 10% overall wage hike, health and welfare plan to be paid for by employers; severance pay based on one week for each year of service, with minimum of two weeks notice; special conditions covering employment of part-time mikesiders, with premium pay of time and a half, and a minimum call provision, announcers to get full day's pay for part time work.

Present contract with the stations expires April 30. Claude McCue, Coast rep for AFRA, is handling negotiations with KFWB, KMPC, KLAC, KFAC, KFVD, KGER, KRKD, KFOX, KIEV, KWKW, KALI and KGFJ.

Naturally, The Nation's Station deems it a great honor to be numbered among the members of that exclusive group—"The Thirty Year Club" of Radio.

Yet, what has gone before is but a prelude of the future. Since the call letters, WLW, were first heard on the air in 1922, one increasing purpose continues to permeate every policy, every activity at WLW—to become and remain America's finest radio station in every phase of operation.

5 Kilo is Killo-Dillo In WFIL-adelphia

You can't stand on ceremony if you want to be heard by shoppers in all 14 counties of Philadelphia's $6 billion market-zone.

Best way to break the ice in this area of 4,400,000 people and $6 billion in buying power, is to get 'em at home, where more radio owners tune WFIL than ever before.

BMB says two-thirds of all radio-equipped homes listen regularly to WFIL—5,000 watts at 560 kilocycles. You hit hard, fast, and clean—not only in Philly but in all 147 "home markets" outside city limits where a majority of the area's population lives and shops.

And these same five kilos sweep way out into a huge bonus area in many nearby counties, giving WFIL total coverage of 6,800,000 people with more than $9 billion effective buying income.

To be first on the dial in America's third largest market, schedule WFIL.

It's the Male Touch For N.Y.'s WNBT

The male touch is being applied to WNBT's (N. Y.) femme-slanted daytime sked, since Dick Pack, ex-WNEW, has taken over the program helm. Herb Sheldon, added two weeks ago to the Eve Hunter show, will do the strip solo starting next Monday (7), with Miss Hunter resigning.

Pack has also booked John Conte, who formerly had his own show for Stokely-Van Camp on NBC-TV, to be host-narrator on a strip in the 12:30-1 p. m. period. New series will spot old films, with each feature edited down to fit the half-hour span. Conte will bridge gaps in the narrative.

Concept behind the moves is that hausfraus prefer the masculine element on the daytime stanzas. Same theory cued the outlet's skedding of Richard Willis' "Here's Looking at You" and recent slotting of Morey Amsterdam on the 9 a. m. airer.

NBC-TV flagship is also going in for top foreign film product. New kick starts tomorrow (Thurs.), when Roberto Rossellini's "Paisan" will be screened at 11:15 p. m. Upcoming pix include Rossellini's "Open City" and Vittorio De Sica's "Bicycle Thief."

known that he's had three outside offers, all of which he's rejected.

It's understood there are several areas of indecision involving White's future operational sphere, plus a financial arrangement under a new contract which would permit White to spread his income. With Mutual now committed to a TV network role, White wants the presidency to be all-encompassing, and it's on this particular point, it's reported, that a stalemate currently exists.

The situation will be resolved one way or the other by the time the board of directors meets the latter part of April.

Contract of Bill Fineshriber, Mutual programming exec veepee, also expires same time as White's, and it's understood the White-Fineshriber deal will be treated as a "package," giving both the same wide areas in which to operate.

FM'ers

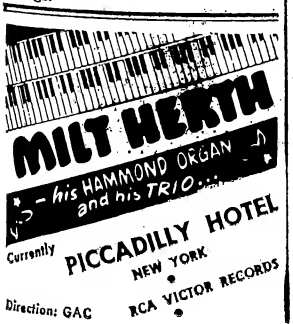
station men that they've had to turn to their FM transmitters to furnish reception in sections of their coverage area blanked out by interference. Postwar upsurge in the number of AM stations has increased interference problem, it's claimed.

FM group, chaired by Ben Strouse, WWDC-FM, Washington, as it has in years past threw some "how come?" questions at manufacturer reps sitting in. Perennial query as to when TV set makers are going to install FM tuning bands was again phrased as a formal resolution. Also manufacturers were asked about FM car radios and continuous tuning bands in FM-AM sets. Manufacturers said these matters are being studied.

San Antonio—C. A. Harrell, city manager of San Antonio, will make his debut on KTSA in a series to be titled "Your City Government." The airings will be a public service and will report how the local city government operates. Harrell will conduct all the programs and have guest stars, and other city officials, from time to time on the airings.



PHILLY MAYOR SETS TV FIRESIDE CHATS

Philadelphia, April 1.

Mayor Joseph S. Clark, first Democrat to hold the top Philadelphia office in 67 years, will stage a series of television fireside chats over WFIL-TV, beginning April 9. On each of his appearances the Mayor will reply to adherents and opponents alike, explaining his personal views and those of the city government of questions, suggestions and criticisms directed at him by the public.

In certain cases, he will invite critics and supporters to appear on the program for further discussion. A corps of telephone operators will be on duty at WFIL-TV to accept calls during Mayor Clark's telecasts. Programs, to be given twice monthly, are called "Tell It to the Mayor." They will run 30 minutes, Wednesday evenings at 8. District Attorney Richardson Dilworth, Clark's running mate on the ticket, currently reports to the people on the conduct of his office once a month, Sundays at 2:15 p.m.

WNBQ Gets NBC-TV Okay On Summer Local Sales; Lines Up Two Sponsors

Chicago, April 1.

With the parent web opening up a few segments of unsponsored prime time for summer local sale, WNBQ, the Chi NBC-TV station, has been busy pitching the Wednesday and Sunday night 9:30 to 10 Class A periods. Just a matter of hours after the "sell locally" order came through last week, WNBQ peddled the Sunday slot to Louis Milandi Foods, who will put in Frank Wisbar's "Story Theatre" telepix, starting April 20.

John McPartlin's sales crew also got the station off a big sustaining hook by selling the half-hour "Noontime Comics" strip to Jewel Food Stores. Jewel long has been a hefty user of local teevee, being the original sponsor of "Zoo Parade" when it was first aired in Chicago only. Store chain is also bankrolling the Friday night weather show on WNBQ.

Nelson Bros., currently shifting pretty much from radio to video, has signed with WNBQ to bankroll a special 90-minute primary election telecast April 8.

Salt Lake City—Ben Burnette, KSL transmitter technician for 14 years, has won a degree in business administration at the U. of Utah, and has switched to the station's sales department. Ruth Farr has left KSL's program department and has been replaced by Georgia Reed.

this fashion to viewers, Weaver proposes they buy all available time on "Today," NBC-TV's 7 to 9 a.m. cross-the-board show.

Behind the Scenes

"Should an advertiser on 'Today' show the broad canvas of his industry as it solved its problems of product quality, attractiveness, uniformity, manufacture, distribution and salesmanhisp," Weaver said, "we believe that he would feel a groundswell of appreciation back from the people. It would be an earnest of American industrial thought."

Since NBC's "Today" is devoted essentially to depicting "what's new," it provides sponsors with a "perfect pattern" to utilize this selling-in-depth technique, the NBC video chief declared. Within the show's format, based on the theory that when a person, place or thing is in the news, then people will have an interest in it, Weaver said, "we can relevantly cut to the factory, the testing grounds, and board room, too. Here we can one moment hear why the goods are being made of this fabric, and why in that color; next we can see the window display being put into a window in a famous store, to illustrate which of the sales points shown earlier was being concentrated on for the campaign.

"Here we can look over the shoulder of a corporation president as he addresses his dealer and retailer organization, with apologies to the public for a 90-second intermission. But will the public look away when real life is being enacted before them? Of course not."

Broader Aspects

Weaver pointed out that, with about 25% of "Today" now sold, there is still about an hour-and-a-half of time available on the show for an advertiser to utilize such a technique. With this, the sponsor gets some 12 minutes of commercial time. First advertiser who buys this time "on the occasion of his breaking a new advertising campaign, the introduction of a new model, announcement of a new price cut, or even on issuing an annual statement, is going to make history," Weaver said. He concluded:

"Advertising is popular with Americans. Handled right in TV, the broader aspects of marketing will be fascinating to most people. Product selection is going to call for more than ordinary reason—why copy in the days ahead. The kind of people who make the product is going to be a real factor in moving goods. And here, selling in depth will begin a foundation of public faith in a company's sincerity, honest and skill that product advertising cannot sway. The possibilities are so thrilling that for a minute I wish I were an ad man again."

'Cut Out Radio-TV Confusion'

Radio's 'Hold the Line'

4. With radio advertisers pressuring anew for a cut in nightime rates, broadcasters fear the AM industry may crumble prematurely. With growing evidence that TV and AM are distinct mediums and an awareness that the "rich TV economy" pre-guarantees a radio resurgence, AM broadcasters are determined to "hold the line" before it's too late.

5. An awareness that a united organizational front is more necessary than ever at a time when there are 88 separate pieces of legislation before Congress having a vital bearing on the future of the radio and television industries.

Thus, broadcasters moved in on the "crossroads" convention in quest of answers that will have a far-reaching effect on both the radio and TV industries. In contrast to recent previous conventions in which the NAB could easily have spelled out: "Nothing About Broadcasting," the agenda for this year's three-day meet was jampacked with panels, workshops, exhibits and smoke-filled chamber-huddling designed to help broadcasters out of their current confusion as the AM-TV transitional era poses multiple problems.

AM's 'Declaration of Faith'

Responding to this "industry alert," th NARTB convention has been productive of constructive moves having a vital bearing on pocketbooks of statio owners. The convention wasn't a day old before Paul W. Morency's all-affiliates radio committee, on the first anniversary of its inception, crystallized its long-standing fight to perpetuate radio's bigtime status in the face of rate cuts and bargain basement deals, and came out with a "Declaration of Faith" calculated to give the medium new-found stature.

Network brass made itself conspicuous throughout, the convention, with an awareness of a growing need to court favor with their TV affiliates, now that national spot and local business is making increasing inroads on their programming. The cross-currents and conflicts of an industry still a-borning were everywhere in evidence—in the pitch of TV film packaging operations, station reps who are moving into a new sphere of influence with the national spot business upbeat, and in activities of equipment and other allied fields—all seeking a stake in the expanding TV horizons, now that the UHF is about to become reality.

Walker Holds Key

And not least of all was the scheduled appearance tomorrow (Wed.), as the "main attraction," of FCC chairman Paul A. Walker, who probably holds the answer to the immediate future. While at preconvention time the lifting of the TV freeze by next week appeared a fait accompli, there have been disturbing reports circulating at the convention of an indefinite holdoff. Walker, who came on the Chi scene yesterday (Mon.), has refused to tip anything about the freeze or what he intends to say. Not even his FCC colleagues had an inkling of anticipated revelations, with result that by today many of the broadcasters seeking a place in the UHF sun had developed the jitters.

Morency's "statement of faith" to the radio industry will be remembered as a cherished document. The WTIC, Hartford, and industry factotum won an ovation from assembled broadcasters that topped anything within memory of NAB convention vets, as he summed up the "radio story" and laid down the gauntlet to those who are sending radio to an early grave. He cautioned against the coming critical year in radio, when all affiliated stations must examine their operations critically and carefully; he cited the responsibility of networks in contributing their share toward stabilizing the industry; he warned of the confusions in which radio has been "trapped" by "rating concepts" and called for an end of all the phony research that currently leads to a mass of misinformation and contradictions, and pleaded for a united stand against rate card chiselling.

Morency Resolution

The resolutions adopted by the all-affiliates committee best reflect the healthy strides made toward achieving the Morency objective to attain for radio a high degree of acceptance, stability and real appreciation of its worth as an advertising medium.

The resolutions follow:

Whereas: It has been noted that there have recently been, increasingly frequent attempts on the part of several large national advertisers and national advertising agencies to make purchases of time on radio networks and individual radio stations on terms that would result in considerable discounts from the established and published rates of those networks and stations; and

Whereas: It has also been noted that there has been a tendency on the part of certain individual stations, involved in competitive situations, to look with favor on such proposals to desert their published rate cards, in fact in some cases to have approached both local and national advertisers with solicitations for future business at rates well below their published figures; and

Whereas: It is considered that such practices on the part of radio stations, on the one hand, or their willingness to accede to such proposals, on the other hand, have as their ultimate result the depreciation of the value of individual radio stations in the field of advertising and the confirmation of the belief already held in some quarters that radio as a medium is in desperate circumstances and that individual station operators are ready and willing to prostitute their properties in order to obtain revenue, the combination inevitably leading to the ruination of the industry;

Therefore: Be it resolved that all radio station operators give thought to this dangerous situation; take effective measures to insure the maintenance of their own rate cards, and use such methods of persuation as seem most desirable to inhibit such practices.

Net Relations Proposal

Resolution on network relations:

In considering the relationship of the national networks to their affiliates and to the industry at large, your committee concludes that as a necessary incident to their dominant position in the radio industry, the networks must be prepared to accept commensurate responsibility of leadership in all appropriate measures calculated to reserve and strengthen that industry.

We are inclined to believe that the networks are cognizant of their responsibility and willing to accept it. We are aware, however, that particularly in view of the current uncertainty among many of radio's principal clients as to the extent of the inroads which television will make upon other media including radio, there is a considerable question concerning the proper steps to be taken to insure the continued strength and prosperity of radio.

We believe that, by and large, the affiliates throughout the country, with their hundreds of millions of dollars invested in radio, are perfectly willing to consider open-mindedly any suggestions made by the networks with a view to improving network service or increasing its value to the public and to advertisers.

We also believe that those affiliates would ask in return only that the networks approach in the same manner suggestions and proposals made by the affiliates to the same end. As affiliates, we have no desire to regale ourselves with self-deceptions, nor do we ask anything more of the networks than a full disclosure and an opportunity for frank discussion of their objectives in making any changes in the pattern of network broadcasting and affiliation arrangements. We want only to face with them the full facts and to arrive at mature, impartial conclusions.

Seek Nets' Reaffirmation

Therefore be it resolved, that the network affiliates in meeting assembled, reaffirm their confidence in the power and efficacy of network radio, and assert their willingness fairly and objectively to consider any and all efforts reasonably calculated to strengthen, improve or protect the position of network radio as a public service and advertising medium, and;

Be it further resolved, that said affiliates earnestly petition the networks to refrain from any action which might in any respect modify the pattern of network radio or the basic arrangements between networks and their affiliates, without full and frank consideration with their respective affiliates of the reasons for such action, and the end to be attained by it, with due regard to long-term industry values as compared with immediate competitive gains or curtailment of temporary losses, and with like regard to the encouragement of the solidarity of the industry incumbent upon them as a dominant factor in it; and further petition the networks to exert their greatest efforts to re-establish the essential dignity, prestige and stability of network radio.

Whereas: Your affiliates Committee has consulted with a number of research experts during the past year; and

Whereas: These consultations have convinced your committee that the radio broadcasting industry in the period of its existence has spent more money and has been more conscientious than any other advertising medium in supplying to its buyers and their agencies minute data concerning radio; and

Whereas: Despite all efforts to supply complete information, no study, or combination of studies, even purports to measure the true and total value of radio, but rather has resulted in a mass of contradictory information leading to unprecedented confusion in evaluating the medium; and

Whereas: For the proper stability and acceptance of radio broadcasting as an advertising medium, it is imperative to have available valid information acceptable to all interested parties:

Therefore, Be It Resolved: That the affiliated stations, in meeting assembled, recommend the formation of a committee composed of representatives of affiliated stations, independent stations, station representatives, networks, advertisers and advertising agencies to pass on the acceptability of any research to be undertaken to insure acceptability on the part of all interested parties, and that no research, unless given the endorsement of this committee, be generally acceptable.

Be It Further Resolved: That action toward this end be instituted by the research committee of the Broadcast Advertising Bureau.

BOTH ABC AM-TV IN CHI LOSING PGM. DIRECTORS

Chicago, April 1.

Both the AM and TV ABC operations here are losing their program directors. Dick Woollen has notified the web he's checking out of his radio program director berth May 31 to make his home in Los Angeles. Earlier, James Pollak, TV program chief, handed in his resignation as of May 1.

Woollen came into the Chi AM post in March a year ago, after a six-year hitch with ABC's Coast plant. His pending move to return to California isn't connected with the web's current economy cutback. He's anxious to get into television, and he and his family haven't found the Windy City climate to their tastes.

As in the case of the TV program job, the AM post may not be filled, pending the outcome of the ABC-United Paramount Theatres merger.

Johnson Opposes Nets Owning Over 5 Tele Stations

Washington, April 1.

Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) of the Senate Commerce Committee, told the FCC yesterday (Mon.) he is against proposals to allow networks to have more than five owned and operated TV stations. In any event, he said in a letter to Commission Chairman Paul Walker, consideration of the question should be deferred a year, so the agency can concentrate on more urgent problems connected with lifting the freeze.

Slapping at efforts of NBC, ABC and DuMont to raise the five-station rule to encourage building of UHF outlets, Johnson declared:

"Perhaps revision of the multiple ownership rule might accelerate development of UHF, but will it be done at the terrific price of still further concentrating TV in a few powerful hands? To allot five VHF stations to one network is being most generous with the people's property, and it is very valuable property too. How, in good conscience, can any network ask for more?"

Johnson charged the nets with using "the old rush act" on the Commission in making their proposals just as the agency is in the process of lifting the freeze. He urged that such "a drastic step" as revision of monopoly rules be given "very careful consideration," and that no action be taken until next year, "when all phases of this problem can be explored, and when the agenda of the Commission is not so crowded and confused."

While he was at it, Johnson took a dig at opposition of manufacturers to lifting the NPA ban on color TV, on grounds that such action would divert engineers from defense work. "I notice," he said, "that some of the interests desiring to increase their TV network holdings are complaining that our current supply of electronic engineers is so short, that any additional use of engineers would amount to a diversion of engineers from defense work, and would seriously affect our defense production program. If there are no engineers to work on color television, how can they be spared for the proposed UHF development at this particular time?"

Johnson suggested that the Commission put first things first. "The vital matter right now," he said, "is lifting the freeze and allocation of channels to a large area of U. S. long denied the benefits of TV."

BREWERY AXING HITS PITT RADIO FURTHER

Pittsburgh, April 1.

Local AM is continuing to take a shellacking from the big breweries here, radio's longtime bread and butter in these parts. Latest to retrench, with most of the money going into TV, is Pittsburgh Brewing Co., which has dropped Mildred Don and the Men About Town completely.

Program, which had a continuous run of around six years, was 15 minutes on a three-times-weekly basis, and a couple of months ago the suds people, repped by Smith, Taylor & Jenkins agency, notified KDKA that it was cancelling out, effective March 1. Then, at the last minute, the bankroller had a change of heart and decided to drop only the Friday segment, hanging on to the Monday and Wednesday slots.

Last week the ax fell on those two quarter-hours as well, the show winding up with tomorrow's (Wed.) program. It was timed perfectly for Miss Don, well-known Pittsburgh singer, since she was retiring, anyway, at least temporarily, to await the stork.

"Alice" is a combination live-action and puppet feature with such top British stars as Pamela Brown, Steven Murray, Felix Aylmer and David Read heading the cast.

Jack Covel, CPI veepee, reported that the firm intends to acquire other top recent pix to add to its distribution list. Firm, long known as Exclusive Distributors, Inc., has been selling features to video for some time.

Video Luck

Washington, April 1.

It was just pure luck which gave CBS a TV beat on President Truman's address here before the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner Saturday night (29) announcing he would not accept renomination. The speech was offered to all TV nets, but only CBS took it, never suspecting the President would use the occasion to say whether he would run again.

CBS also broadcast the speech by radio, as did NBC, ABC and Mutual.

Seattle's KOMO Names New Gen. Mgr. in Shakeup

Seattle, April 1.

Other changes at KOMO make Frederick Patterson program manager, replacing Warren; George E. Dean, switching from public relations manager to public service manager; Ray Baker, commercial manager, named a vice-president, and Kenneth Fisher made treasurer and assistant secretary.

Spur to Film Seen in Celluloid TV Winning 3 Spots in Nielsen's Top 10

In what may offer further incentives to TV sponsors to convert their shows from live to film, the latest Nielsen ratings for the metropolitan N. Y. area reveal three of the top 10 shows are film programs, with a fourth now prepared to switch to film this week. Lineup is topped by CBS-TV's "I Love Lucy," which has been produced on film since its inception.

Number of TV bankrollers, particularly those with dramatic shows, are reportedly closely interested in the pattern being set by Lever Bros. with its "Big Town," which goes from live to film on CBS starting this week. Under a deal set up by Lever and its agency, Ruthrauff & Ryan, the bankroller is expected not only to recoup its budget costs on the show, but even to make a profit during the first run of the films through permitting them to be syndicated to stations it does not cover under sponsorship of non-competing advertisers.

In addition to "Lucy," the Nielsen N. Y. ratings show "Big Town," "Fireside Theatre" and the Groucho Marx show ("You Bet Your Life") as other film programs among the top 10. In addition, the Red Skelton show, in 10th position, is expected to shift to film next fall, spearheading the possible conversion to film of a number of name personality programs, such as Burns & Allen.

Following are the Nielsen top 10 for the N. Y. area for the four week ending March 8:

I Love Lucy (CBS)	53.1
Talent Scouts (CBS)	48.2
Show of Shows (NBC)	44.8
(3d half-hour)
Colgate (NBC)	44.8
Show of Shows (NBC)	42.2
(2d half-hour)
Texaco Theatre (NBC)	40.2
Big Town (CBS)	37.5
Fireside Theatre (NBC)	36.6
Groucho Marx (NBC)	35.9
Red Skelton (NBC)	35.7

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By MIKE GROSS

Johnnie Ray: "What's the Use?"-"Mountains in the Moonlight" (Columbia). Johnnie Ray's current wax momentum should carry this coupling into the top brackets. "What's the Use" is a novelty item that blends a wry lyric with an Armenian-Arabic flavored melody for sock results. Although it's a change of pace from his usual frenzied pyrotechnics, he handles it with a deft styling and an infectious humor that should please the Ray rooters. On "Moonlight," Ray gets back into the familiar emotional groove that will net it plenty of spins.

De Marco Sisters: "Goin' on a Hayride"-"Festival" (M-G-M). The De Marco Sisters jump into the pop wax sweeps with a pair of gay tunes that make their M-G-M initialer a potent disk entry. Gals project a youthful ebullience and a musical savvy for solid impact. "Hayride," from the "Three Wishes for Jamie" score, is a charming rhythm number which the De Marco femmes deliver with zest. Flipover is bouncy enough to nab a good share of the juke play.

Trudy Richards: "I Don't Mind"-"I Never Loved Anyone But You" (Decca). Trudy Richards' workover of "I Don't Mind" gets her solo preem on the Decca label off to a fast start. The multiple-voiced waxing gimmickry comes into full play here but it's used cleverly and serves to hypo overall effect. Miss Richards hits with a strong, appealing voice that'll sell the fast-paced number to the jocks and jukes. Sy Oliver's orch and George Barnes' guitaring hypo the side's topflight production. Reverse, an okay blues entry, displays her versatile style but it has less commercial appeal.

Jack Haskell: "Be Anything"-"Come Back" (Coral). Jack Haskell continues to impress as a wax potential but he's held back on this coupling by the material. "Be Anything," a big ballad that's received top diskery coverage, shows off his pleasant baritoning but it's out too late to overtake the rival etchings. Haskell is out early with "Come Back," however, but it's a routine entry with little commercial appeal.

Dick Beavers: "It Must Be Spring"-"I'd Be Lying" (Capitol). "It Must Be Spring," also from the musical, "Jamie," doesn't have the commercial potential of "Goin' on a Hayride," tune from the same show currently getting a strong wax coverage. Despite the pleasant quality of its melody, it's moderate fare, at best, and Dick Beavers gives it an okay rendition. Good for occasional spins. Ballad item on the Capitol reverse is nicely handled and should get some plays.

Perry Como: "One Little Candle"-"It's Easter Time" (Victor). Perry Como has come up with a good commercial side in "One Little Candle." Although it's a song with a message, the unpretentious lyric and captivating melodic line give it plenty of pop appeal. Como supplies a tasteful treatment. A sure bet for jock and juke spins. "Easter Time" is an unimaginative holiday item that will have little impact on the pre-Easter market despite a firstrate Como workover.

Vera Lynn: "A House Is a Home"-"Blue Fool" (London). Vera Lynn, one of England's top songstresses, gets across more of her silken piping style on this coupling. Although tunes aren't standout items, Miss Lynn's melodic voice shows to advantage. "Home" is a fair ballad which she sells winningly while "Blue Fool," although a bit on the heavy side, is enhanced by her top vocaling.

Stuart Foster: "Take Me"-"Chiminey Smoke" (Abbey). Stuart Foster displays okay platter potential on his Abbey initialer. Foster's has lots of wax savvy and knows how to get the most out of a lyric. His preem sides, which show him off in a straight ballad and in a lighter folksy vein, aren't strong enough to ride out the current competition. On "Take Me," Foster projects a romantic "Smoke," making it a better spinning bet.

Rosemary Clooney: "Poor Whip-Poor-Will"-"Half As Much" (Columbia). Miss Clooney builds "Whip-Poor-Will," a fair item of the folk genre, into a click etching via her fancy piping. Thrush's rendition on this side is her best in some time. It'll probably get a hefty number of spins on all levels. The Col flipover is unexciting and has slim chances. However, Miss Clooney projects her serious mood styling with effect. Percy Faith's orch offers a top-drawer backing on both sides.

Robert Merrill-Roberta Peters: "Indian Love Call"-"So In Love" (Victor). In an attempt to cash in on the recent publicity given Robert Merrill and Roberta Peters on their marriage, Victor has paired the two Metop stars on two solid romantic items. Platter, however, will have trouble edging its way into the pop market. Both Miss Peters and Merrill have strong, well-trained voices but they come across on wax as stiff singers. The classic "Indian Love Call" fails to ignite while Cole Porter's charming "So In Love" lacks spark.

Jane Turzy: "The Boom Song"-"Little Train A-Chuggin' In My Heart" (Decca). "Boom Song," is a cute novelty number which Jane Turzy styles into a click potential. The catchy melody is enhanced by a sprightly lyric with ribald overtones. Miss Turzy supplies a simultaneous finish of propriety and naughtiness. A sure bet for the juke trade. Reverse is another well rendered novelty but'll take second place to its mate for top spins.

Harry James Orch-Kitty Kallen: "When I Dream"-"To Be Loved By You" (Columbia). Kitty Kallen teams up with Harry James for the first time in six years (she recently wound up her solo Mercury Records pact) on a pair of good commercial bets. Miss Kallen and the James crew get

Paul Winchell Set By RCA for Kidisks

Continuing to latch onto video personalities for its kidisk artists roster, RCA Victor has inked ventriloquist Paul Winchell to a term deal. Winchell and his dummy, Jerry Maloney, will be assigned to pop novelties.

It's planned to issue the initial slices on both the regular pop and the juve labels.

Band Reviews

RUSS CARLYLE ORCH (11)
With Gloria Patry
Hotel Muehlebach, Kansas City

It's been several years since Russ Carlyle has played a location date here, his previous stand being in the early post-war days in the same Terrace Grill of the Muehlebach. The three-week stand here is proving an okay engagement for orch and hotel alike, dinner-dancers finding the orch one of the classier crews with its rhythms and melodies and with entertainment appeal to boot.

Musically the Carlyle style is soft and sweet, favoring the alto lead. Line of sidemen includes four reeds, pair of trumpets, trombone, piano, string bass and drums, doubling at times pushing the reeds to five. This set up provides melodies in the sweeter vein, with accents on rhythms for dancing, and leaning on current pops and established faves for its selections. This is rounded off by a sprinkling of Latin rhythms.

Carlyle gives featured play to vocals, dividing the assignment with blonde Gloria Patry. She adds a good deal to the orch with her looks and her warbling of rhythm and cuter tunes, with an occasional ballad for good measure. Leader himself handles a major share of the vocals, giving them a personable baritone style and showing versatility in mimicry of the Ink Spots and other turns. Combo of femme and leader hold the vocals up to the smooth music level of the orch. At times the pair work in a duet to vary the stylings, and generally front the crew. There is some specialty work on trombone by Billy Lang and at the piano by Mike Caranda which round out the orch's versatility.

WILL OSBORNE ORCH (12)
Adams Hotel, Phoenix

Current edition of Will Osborne's band is virtually intact version of crew that played this circuit last year. Only major addition is the anchor man in the brass section, a strong department that complements the five reeds, bass, drums, and piano, rounding out a conventional Osborne layout.

Band, which checks out after two-week stay here for extended stand at the Golden Hotel, Reno, has been toned down somewhat to fit the confines of the Corinthian Room, but Osborne let all the stops out when outfit switched over to a seven-man Dixieland kick. It makes for an interesting departure from the slide music routines and gives maestro a chance to work out on the skins.

Portfolio harks back mainly to the "memory" tack, giving Osborne frequent opportunities to vocalize such oldies as "They'll Never Believe Me," "The One I Love Belongs to Somebody Else," and "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Leader's highly stylized baritoning packs a romantic wallop that bridges the past with the present.

Band opened on a Tuesday night (a switch from the usual Thursday) to fairish biz, but favorable word-of-mouth accelerated subsequent trade despite rainy spell that put quietus on most of the local night spots). Jona.

JIMMY PALMER ORCH (11)
With Joanne Lynn, Gene Long
Melody Mill, Riverside, Ill.

Jimmy Palmer, who started in the band business a decade ago as a sideman, is currently at the scene of his first click. Maestro, who during the war fronted a swing band in the east, started a sweet combination in this Chicago suburb about a year and half ago, and since then has been on the upgrade. Palmer now has several good disks on Mercury. While still under the tag of territory band, with a few more platters under his belt, genial bandleader should be ready for the Coasts, both east and west.

Return here marks his sixth date for this dancery and when he pulls out April 12 he's inked for a repeat April 30 for an indefinite stay. His success, of course, is due to his book, modeled on the Sammy Kaye style but with some additional drive from the brass. Not too much, but enough for the lift that has the young dancers jamming this spot. Instrumentation of four saxes, two trumpets, and two trombones with rhythm section, fits most of the dance arrangements. Signing titles are either done by Palmer or Gene Long, and there's the title gimmick of "dancing shoes" with the proper shuffle effect gotten through sliding two wood blocks together.

Most of the members double on other horns and are well trained in the choral work. Joanne Lynn, pert blond, has a light voice which registers well on the ballads, belts across several dramatic tunes in fine style. However, he's a mike hugger and could get better results with a little more stage presence. Rotund Nick Daniels steps out of his trumpet chair to get some laughs with his comedy songs. Zabe.

SAMMY PAGNA QUINTET
Latin Villa, Kansas City

One of the newer small groups to be heard out this way the Sammy Pagna quintet also is one of the most youthful. Outfit has nearly five years under its belt and is beginning to shape up as one of the more promising and smoother combos.

Unit is built around Pagna's accordian, with Gene Roberto on trumpet, Gerry Bond on clarinet, Tommy Terry on string bass and Tony Conte on drums. It's an unusual setup without piano, guitar

Cincy Area Gets Payola Rap

One of the most flagrant payola situations in years is currently dominating the Cincinnati area, according to publishers and major diskers in New York. It's become virtually impossible to get a tune played in that territory unless cash or equivalent consideration is thrown in, they claim.

Situation is doubly acute because "most of the disk jockeys are on the take along with the jukebox operators." It's alleged that the latter are refusing to include tunes on their machines unless they either get the disks on the cuff or get substantial deals on the price.

It's the first time in years that a city has been pinpointed for its payola proclivities on such a wholesale scale. While the payola exists nationally, pubs have rarely faced a situation where they are locked out of a city unless they come across with favors. This has been particularly murderous on new tunes since the current hits are being spun normally as required program fare.

Likelihood of D.C. Action on Juke Bill Fades in Shadow of Prez Elections

Washington, April 1.

As Congress, its mind on the coming election campaign, heads for adjournment by July 1, there appears little likelihood that it will pass legislation making the juke boxes subject to the copyright laws. Best guessing by legislators is that the Bryson bill, and the three proposed alternates to it will be shelved with hundreds of other bills.

Last week's hearings before a House Judiciary sub-committee considering the measures, did nothing to hasten the bill on its way but merely added confusion. Spokesmen for the record manufacturing companies continued to insist there should be no change in the present copyright laws. They were just as opposed to the three amendments as to the Bryson bill itself.

On the other hand, spokesmen for the composers and music publishers urged Congress to get busy and vote a law. They favored the Bryson bill. But if they couldn't get it, they endorsed the third alternative, which would require the production of specially marked records, carrying higher copyright charges, to be sold for juke box use.

The witnesses—Herman Finkelstein for ASCAP; Sidney Wattenburg for the Music Publishers Protective Association, and John Shulman, for the Songwriters Protective Association—were in emphatic harmony on one point. They were against alternative No. 2, which calls for a general hike in the 2c record side royalty for all purchasers. They said they wanted justice from the juke box operators, not more money from the person who buys records for home use.

'Confusion & Monopoly'

Shulman said the composers should get more royalty but that was something to study at another

Townsend Gets Top Col Promotion Job As Earle Moves Up

In a reshuffle of Columbia Records' ad-promotion setup, Irving Townsend has been stepped up into the company's top advertising-promotion post vacated by Al Earle, who was named exec assistant and director of consumer research. In his new spot, Earle will be assigned to special projects and will coordinate all inter-departmental activity, serving as liaison between prexy Jim Conkling, and exec veepee Goddard Lieberson and other divisions of Columbia.

Earle had been with Col's ad-promotion department for the past eight years, having been with the research division of E. I. duPont de Nemours before that. Townsend was upped from his post of sales promotion manager and will continue to direct this department as well as supervise album cover designs and packaging.

Sammy Kaye's $4,300

Sammy Kaye grossed over $4,300 Saturday night (29) at a one-niter staged at the Mosque, Newark.

Stand drew 2,500 payees.

Kessler Quits 3 Suns To Handle 4 Aces

Herb Kessler, manager of the Three Suns for the past couple of years, has severed his ties with the instrumental trio for fulltime handling of the Four Aces, vocal quartet which has been clicking on Decca disks.

Al Nevins, accordionist with the Three Suns, is taking over the trio's management.

Local 802 Execs Balk at 5-Day Week, Like Chi

A move to establish a five-day week for musicians in the New York area is being opposed by execs of Local 802, American Federation of Musicians. A resolution for a five-day week, emulating the action of the Chicago AFM local, has been introduced in the N. Y. branch by some rank-and-filers but is not likely to be okayed in view of the board opposition.

Local's exec board, while in favor of a five-day week in principle, contends that such a move would be impractical in the light of current economic circumstances in show business. Such a step, it's felt, would only cut down areas of employment opportunities which are already narrow enough for musicians.

Same reasoning prompted the local's board to reject resolutions for increasing the scales for single engagements, parades, fiestas, weddings and other such occasions. The exec board, however, passed a motion to increase rates for arrangers and copyists on single engagements by 15%. New rates will be effective May 1.

COAST AFM LOCAL PUTS BOB KIMIC ON BOARD

Hollywood, April 1.

American Federation of Musicians Local 47 exec board has appointed Bob Kimic to the board, to fill vacancy created by Bob Hennon, newly elected financial secretary. Hennon was elected to complete unexpired term of Al Meyer, who died recently.

At April 28 membership meeting tunesters will elect member to exec board in spot now held by Kimic, with Kimic likely candidate.

Cap Inks Sablon

Capitol Records has inked French singer Jean Sablon to a longterm pact.

Sablon formerly recorded under the RCA Victor label.

Flamingo Records Co. chartered to conduct a recording business in New York. Capital stock is 200 shares, no par value. Directors are Sidney Kraft, Theodore Karlins and Herman Panitch, N.Y.

PUBS RECONVERT PLUGGING SETUP

Although the music industry has generally been lagging behind other show biz media in sizing up video's potential, some of the top publishers are now starting to reconvert their operations to give TV its right plugging weight. One of the major firms is already setting up a special video department with a staff that will concentrate exclusively on TV programs, artists, producers, etc.

At the present time, video plugs are handled on the same basis as radio. Many of the contactmen, however, have grown up with the radio techniques and have tended to brush off TV as unimportant in the process of building a song. Video, moreover, has brought new problems for songpluggers, since tunes have to be angled for sight values on the new medium. Few of the publishers have been concerning themselves with this aspect and have taken the easiest way out by sticking to the standard live AM show and disk jockey channels for their exploitation.

Video's steady emergence as a dominant show biz medium has finally forced some of the bigger firms to start stressing TV song promotion. Before long, it's expected that the pubs' special departments for TV will be building script and production ideas to enhance chances of getting their songs showcased on video.

One of the factors tending towards a negative attitude towards TV by publishers has been the failure of any song to emerge as a hit as a result of being launched on TV. Several tunes have made some stir following their TV debuts but none has broken through into any sizable sales factors." While taking that into account, the new attitude tends to stress TV as a valuable adjunct to other exploitation channels, with the sight values of TV able to supply that extra kick needed to lift a tune into the hit lists.

'Variety' Music Cavalcade Set For May 12 Pub

Prentice-Hall has scheduled the "VARIETY Music Cavalcade," compiled by CBS musicologist Julius Mattfeld, for May 12 publication at $10. This is the anthology of American popular music from 1620 to 1950, and was originally published in the VARIETY Radio Directory, and later serialized in these columns.

Dr. Mattfeld has updated and revised the historical (current events) information that accompanies his cavalcade of music from the days of the Pilgrims, to mid-20th century. He has also expanded it generally. It's designed for usage in film, radio and television studios, by ad agencies, program builders, musical conductors, copyright researchers, attorneys affiliated with music and general show biz, and kindred sources. Abel Green, editor of VARIETY, has written a special introduction to give it the amusement industry flavor and merchandising potential.

King Inks Winner Of 'Talent Scouts' Show

In a move to augment its pop artists roster, King Records last week inked vocalist Steve Lawrence to a longterm pact. Lawrence is the first pactee to be acquired by Dewey Bergman, diskery's recently appointed artist and repertory topper.

Lawrence, a 16-year-old, was a winner of Arthur Godfrey's "Talent Scouts" show several weeks ago.

ASCAP Prexy Race Narrows Down To Harbach and Hammerstein

With elections of officers of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers slated shortly, the race for the prexy spot has narrowed down to two possibilities—incumbent president Otto A. Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein 2d. It's understood that Harbach can have the job if he consents to serve for a third term, but there's a strong possibility that the vet lyricist will refuse to serve again because of the taxing character of the post.

Hammerstein is the only other prominent ASCAP figure who can command unanimous support from the ASCAP board which must elect the officers no later than June. Hammerstein had indicated several years ago; when the job was offered to him, that he could not take over ASCAP's presidency because it would prevent him from working on his legit musical interests, old and new. Some supporters of Hammerstein, however, are talking of creating an exec vice-prexy post, which would involve the detailed administrative work and thereby allow the president free to act as spokesman for the Society only. That was the position of ASCAP prexies when the late John G. Paine served as general manager of the Society.

As a dark horse candidate, the stock of writer Jack Yellen was boosted considerably as a result of his speech before the annual meeting of ASCAP in New York last week. Yellen's plea for peace in the ranks was favorably received by both publishers and writers, and his name has been mentioned as a possibility for the ASCAP prexyship.

If Harbach consents to run, the board will have to rescind a resolution limiting any president to two one-year terms. Since it's only a resolution and not an amendment to ASCAP's constitution, the revocation of the two-year ruling will need only a two-thirds vote of the board.

Mills Music Expands Disk Artists' Stable

Mills Music, which has been spearheading the drive of pubs into the waxing field with its American Recording Artists subsid, recently bolstered its artists stable with the pacting of the Starnoters, house band at WGN, Chicago; and pianist Bill Krenz. Sidney Mills, ARA v.p., who's been waxing his own tunes on intermittent treks around the country, peddles the etchings to diskeries on a royalty basis.

Pair of Krenz sides, waxed by Mills in Chi, were picked up for release by M-G-M Records.

BMI Has Deals With 6 European Performing Assns.

During the past year, Broadcast Music, Inc., has wrapped up agreements with four European performing rights societies. BMI inked deals with the French (SACEM), Belgian (SABAM), Spanish (SGAE) and Austrian (AKM) societies in addition to having previous agreements with the Italian and German societies. Jean Geiringer, BMI veepee over foreign relations, is currently dickering agreements with other Continental societies.

BMI foreign agreements provide that BMI will administer the performing rights in the U. S. of all the overseas works which BMI affiliates will publish in this country. At the same time, these societies will represent the rights of BMI affiliates in their respective countries and account to BMI for the rights of the BMI publishers and writers.

Series of BMI foreign deals stems from the two-year-old antitrust consent decree under which the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers is prevented from having exclusive deals with overseas performing rights societies.

PEGGY LEE IN SWITCH FROM CAPITOL TO DECCA

After close to 10 years as a Capitol Records pactee, Peggy Lee ankled the diskery Friday (29) to ink a longterm pact with Decca. Although Miss Lee's current contract with Cap had more than a year to run, she was released by Alan Livingston, diskery's artists and repertory chief, after an amicable confab.

Miss Lee, who was one of Cap's first major pactees, cut her first sides for Decca this week. Cap also has several of the thrush's sides in the can waiting for release.

Levant's Rubinstein

Oscar Levant, who played the Rubinstein Concerto in D Minor with the N. Y. Philharmonic under Dimitri Mitropoulos at Carnegie Hall, N. Y., last weekend (29-30), recorded the work with the same support for Columbia Records on Monday (31).

Piano opus is a concert rarity now, not having been performed in N. Y. since 1938, and not done by the Philharmonic since 1920.

New Gramercy Label

Singer Frank Stevens has organized his own Gramercy Records, with headquarters in N. Y.

He is recording the first of four new Bob Merrill songs, "Desire Dresses For Me," for release in mid-April.

Low-Priced, 3-Speed Playback For Col As Promotion Device

Further pointing up the growing inroad of the 45 rpm speed platters in the pop field, Columbia Records has designed a low-priced playback machine which will be geared for that speed as well as the 33's and 78's. One of the last majors to adopt the 45 rpm system, Columbia formerly concentrated on its own 33 rpm development with the distribution of single-speed long-play record machines.

New machine will probably be priced at slightly under $13 and will not be an automatic changer. It will be handled as a promotional device, with Columbia selling it at a price to cover manufacturing and distribution costs. Col's machine parallels a similar device being packaged by RCA Victor in the three-speed category except that Victor's instrument will have the automatic feature.

Paradoxically enough, Columbia is also reviving its seven-inch 33 rpm pop releases although the diskery is now committed to the 45's in this field. The seven-inchers were virtually abandoned by Columbia last year after an attempt was made to buck the 45's and institute a single-speed standard for the industry. Currently, however, Columbia is issuing five top current hits on the small-sized long-play disks.

M-G-M Builds Roster

Further augmenting its rhythm and blues roster, M-G-M Records last week pacted vocalist Johnny King and the Budd Johnson orch.

Their initial pressings will be released in several weeks.

Alec Templeton will commence his Australian tour in Melbourne June 14, and his Sydney season on July 3.

Inside Orchestras—Music

Current pop music trends were taken to task last week by Harriet Van Horne and Robert C. Ruark, N. Y. World-Telegram & Sun columnists. Miss Van Horne, W-T & S radio-TV critic, said that she didn't like the current state of popular music, as evidenced in radio and television programs. In particular, she deplored the crying songs, the clap-hands songs and the twanging hillbilly laments. "Where," she asked, "were the sweet singable songs of yesteryear? Had music publishers abandoned all standards of quality?"

Columnist Ruark commented, "I have just bashed in my radio with my scout axe, because I do not think I can live through very much more of this maudlin mood music which torments us these days." He added that "the busted heart has always enjoyed a pretty steady play as the basis for versifying, but I swear I don't recall a comparable period of downright dolor. In passing through several eras—the early Gene Austin, the Nick Lucas, the Bing Crosby and Sinatra-Como-Billy Daniels epochs—considerable capital was made of grief, but not in such job lots, to such dreadful music."

Johnnie Ray, whose sixmonth rise into the bigtime via click waxings has been a show biz phenomenon, is piling up added revenue from his songwriting. Of the eight sides already released (two on the Okeh label and six for Columbia), Ray has used four of his own compositions. Ray penned "Whiskey and Gin," "Tell the Lady I Said Goodbye," "Little White Cloud That Cried" and his latest release, "Mountains In the Moonlight." Ray's credited with the words and music on all. Larry Spier, with whom Ray has a five-year pact, is the publisher.

Further evidence of the potency of a disclick in boosting the stock of performers on the vaude and nitery level, is seen in the swift comeback of singer Ella Mae Morse. Miss Morse, who retired six years ago, scored effectively on her second Capitol Records waxing, "Blacksmith Blues." Disk topped the half-million mark in about six weeks and has brought in bookings which'll keep her busy until June. Miss Morse begins an engagement at the Warner Theatre, N.Y., April 7. It'll mark her first appearance in Gotham since 1944.

Arias from popular operas are currently being overhauled en masse for pop consumption. Latest longhair entry is "The Bigger the Figure," which was adapted by Marshall Barrer from Rossini's "Largo al Factotum," from "The Barber of Seville." "Since My Love Has Gone," which Tony Bennett kicked off several weeks ago on the Columbia label, was adapted from an aria from Verdi's "La Traviata." Howie Richmond is publishing both tunes.

Andy Razaf, lyricist, who suffered a paralytic stroke on the Coast recently, has penned the words to a new tune despite paralysis from the waist down. Tune, "My Faith," was written in collaboration with Teri Josefovits. Razaf had previously written lyrics for such tunes as "Honeysuckle Rose," "Ain't Misbehavin'," "Stompin' at the Savoy" and "In the Mood," among others.

Tommy Dorsey has made an unusual tieup with the Damon Runyon Memorial Fund by which the maestro has agreed to donate 5c for each disk jockey spin of his Decca platter, "Hambone." Deejays have been circularized with the pitch and are asked to mail back cards indicating the number of times the side was played per week.

time and should not be considered as a substitute for the Bryson bill which specifically places juke boxes under the copyright laws. Of all the witnesses on both sides, Shulman was the only one to endorse the first alternative. This would eliminate the section of the copyright laws which says that if a composer permits his song to be used by one record manufacturer, all the rest of the record manufacturers shall also be entitled to make records of the number, providing they pay the statutory royalty. Most speakers contended elimination of this provision would cause confusion and monopoly. Shulman said it would open the way to free competition and put the composers in better bargaining position.

Frank Walker, general manager of M-G-M Records, changed the issue by urging an overall study of the royalty situation to provide more money for everybody. If the composers are to get theirs, he said, then the performing artist and the recording company which provides special arrangements should also get more. He said the pending bills are "quickies" and that the entire situation requires additional study.

William H. Fowler, vice president of Capitol Records, charged that speakers for the composers and music publishers have "misled" the House committee on facts of the record manufacturing business. He said the suggestion that different color labels on records be used for juke boxes was highly impractical since the manufacturers had no control over the purchases by the juke box ops. He said the plan would provide one more kind of record to be scrapped as obsolescent when the manufacturers guessed wrong about the popularity of a song. This, he continued, could put some of the record companies into the red ink column.

'Obsolescence Hazard'

"Your proposals," he said, "would add extra operations in manufacturing, extra operations in handling, extra operations in shipping and warehousing, and you would add extra operations at the distributor level. Finally you would add a whole new obsolescence hazard."

Samuel Yamins, secretary of Decca Records, fought all three alternative proposals. Which proposal would be the least obnoxious to you?" a committee counsel asked him. "Each of the proposals is obnoxious and would cause economic disaster to the industry," he replied.

John Griffin, executive secretary of the Record Industry Association, spoke for the small record companies. He was asked the same question about which would be "least obnoxious." Griffin thought a while and replied, "I guess the third proposal would be least obnoxious. The third proposal only kills our juke box business. The others kill our whole business."

New Dance Needed To Revive Terpery Biz, Says Vaughn Monroe

Hollywood, April 1.

Budding dance band renaissance won't get very far unless a new dance craze is created. That's the opinion of Vaughn Monroe, currently punctuating a decade in the band business with a series of shots in a Republic oater, "Toughest Man in Tombstone."

"Television has hit the dance band business hardest," Monroe declared. "If we're going to get the youngsters back into the ballrooms, somebody will have to create a dance. In the past, such dances as the Charleston, Black Botton and others always brought a spurt to band business. I'm thinking of talking to Arthur Murray about creating a new step that will revive interest in dancing."

Band biz is better today than it has been, Monroe pointed out, but it still doesn't compare with prewar conditions. Number of band locations is steadily diminishing, especially in the west, and the growing expense of touring a band makes it less feasible for name crews to travel as they did ten or a dozen years ago. One-nighters still can keep a band fairly active if they are properly routed. Majority of these, however, are in the east.

Monroe indicated his band work will be cued to television in the future. He flatly denied recurrent reports that he might break up the band he has fronted since 1940.

"We'll work out of New York next winter," he declared, "so that we can do television. When the summer rolls around again we'll be available for ballrooms."

Monroe rejoins the band, which has been fronted by Zizzy Talent in his absence, next week for a two-week stand at the Flamingo, Las Vegas. Ork then moves slowly east and will settle down in the fall at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Current film chore is his second at the valley studio, and he has three more to go on a five picture contract that spans five years. Initial oater was "Singing Guns," which earned a good reception for a new cowpoke character.

Don Reid to Europe On Abbey Distrib Deals

Don Reid, artists and repertory topper of Abbey Records, indie label, headed out on a two-week European trek Saturday (29) to set up distribution of the diskery's current long play release, "The Second Elizabeth." Platter is a tape-edited story of Queen Elizabeth II with David Niven narrating.

Reid also expects to acquire European-made classical masters for release on the Abbey label in the U. S.

Cleve. 'Moondog' Dance Promoters Cleared Of 'Overselling' Tix Rap

Cleveland, April 1.

Legal proceedings have been pigeon-holed against three persons who fire officials sought to have arrested in connection with the "Moondog Coronation Ball" staged at The Arena March 21.

Fire officials sought to have warrants issued against WJW deejay Alan Freed, Leo Mintz and Milton Kulkin, the latter two record dealers. A fourth promoter, Lewis Platt of Akron, told VARIETY he was the promoter of the event; that the others were merely hired by him or were assisting him. Platt, veteran Akron dance promoter, was not named by fire officials.

Battalion Chief Bernard Mulcahy told Assistant Police Prosecutor Bernard Conway the three Cleveland men oversold the Arena by selling more than 17,500 tickets to dance. Promoter Platt denied the accusation, saying only 8,600 advance tickets had been printed, and that total sale had been just over 9,000. The Arena holds 11,000.

When facts were presented to Conway he indicated there had been no violation of city laws, but that he would "study the State code to see whether an infraction had taken place." Fire officials indicate this marks an end to the affair.

Estimated crowd of 20,000 that flocked to the dance resulted only from radio plugs by Freed over his late evening disk show. Crowd beat down Arena doors in effort to get into the hall, necessitating emergency calls for police and firemen. One person was injured in the bustle and elbowing. The dance was cancelled.

Cool Jazz in Germany, Like in U.S., Played Only for Kicks to Tepid B.O.

By CPL. JESSE GROSS

Bad Kreuznach, Germany,

Predominately influenced by the Stateside platters of Lennie Tristano, Miles Davis, Stan Getz, George Shearing and other exponents of "modern" music, a small number of German musicians are concentrating on popularizing this off-beat instrumentalization in Western Germany. However, the b.o. value of this "cool jazz," as it's billed over here, is still a long way from being profitable, with audiences limited mostly to members of jazz clubs, of which there are about 14 in the non-Soviet controlled sectors of Germany.

Indicative of this trend towards a "progressive" styling and also the limited b.o. appeal of this type of musicalizing is the recent tour undertaken by the Joe Klimm Combo. Comprised of six men, including Klimm, group went out on a week of one-niters earlier this month, under the management of Hans Rossbach, prexy of the Jazz Club of Koblenz. Tour, which teed off March 10 in Koblenz, also took in Neuwied, Mainz, Bad Kreuznach, Ludwigshafen, Kaiserslautern and Idar-Oberstein, and in most situations only drew half-filled houses, according to Rossbach.

Poor business done by the group was attributed to, among other things, the lack of lure names. The music itself is not entirely new to German record buyers since Tristano, Davis and other AFMers of that cult, are given okay platter coverage by German diskeries via exchange deals with American recording firms. In contrast to this turnout of pressings by U. S. artists, Rossbach noted that German recording outfits give practically no play at all to German musicians of the "progressive" school. This, Rossbach reasons, is a reluctance on the part of waxeries over here to gamble with new names, specializing in a field that caters to a definitely limited audience. As a result, the musicians have their hands tied in that they can't pick up a large enough following to create record company interest and they can't get the needed waxings to help promote a larger audience.

Prior to the concert tour, which wound up in Idar-Oberstein March 16, the Klimm sextet, organized about a year ago, has confined its appearances mostly to American clubs in Germany and German jazz clubs. Practically all of these German jazz clubs, incidentally, now belong to the German Jazz Federation, of which Rossbach's Koblenz org is also a member. Goal of the Federation, formed in October of last year, is to build an interest in jazz in Western Germany and to further the authentic playing of the music, which a large number of the clubs feel has been given detrimental treatment by certain commercial jazz promoters.

Typical Concert

Typical of the dates played on the one-niter tour was the recent performance given at the Kursaal Theatre here. House, which seats about 900, drew in about 400 payees, with tickets selling for 3.50 and 1.50 Deutsche Marks, the equivalent of about 80c and 40c respectively. Program, incidentally, also included Rafi Luederitz's Boogie Woogie Trio, composed of Luederitz, Hans Kresse and Rudi Sehring. Luederitz handles the ivories, while latter two, bass player and drummer respectively, also play with the Klimm unit. Also in the sextet, besides Klimm at the piano, is Werner Fink on trumpet, Albert Mangelsdorf on trombone and Jacki Freund on tenor sax.

Repertoire of the Klimm outfit included "I May Be Wrong," "Pennies From Heaven," "Ornithologie" and "Perdido," while the trio's session cluded "Honky Tonk Train Boogie" and "Hamp's Boogie." Audience reaction to the offerings of both combos ranged from whistling and stomping to shouts, which were probably the equivalent of "go man" back in the U. S. cool joints. Only vocal, in the blues vein and done in English, was rendered in neat fashion by Luederitz, who, incidentally, also knows his way around a keyboard. Freund handles the tenor sax, despite having had the foremost joint on a few of the fingers of his right hand amputated.

St. Loo Symph Season Draws 178,000 Payees

St. Louis, April 1.

While attendance of home concerts of the St. Louis symph orch during the 1951-52 season just closed showed a decline of 1,625 as compared with the previous season, an increase of attendance of road engagements resulted in a total of 178,000 persons attending all, an increase of 25,000 over the 1950-51 total.

Oscar Levant drew the blue ribbon as the best crowd getter, drawing 3,700 payees to a special Gershwin soiree. Artur Rubinstein, who closed the season with a pair of concerts, topped all other artists to the subscription series. He was followed by Isaac Stern as the best b.o. draw.

J. Ray and 4 Aces Illustrate Jocks' Ballyhoo Value

By MORT NUSBAUM
(WHAM Disk Jockey)

Rochester, N. Y., April 2.

Your recent story about "Tin Pan's Sizzling Newcomers" set me to wondering whether you still think the Deejays are the bad boys of radio and the music business.

You referred to the meteoric rise of acts like Johnnie Ray, and the Four Aces. If DJs need any vindication (which I don't think they do), this proves that, as a group, the disk jockeys are one of the most potent forces for good in show business today.

I suppose there are those who feel that this sudden entry of newcomers into the business is not good. It is, in a way, shattering the old traditions of veterans and the illusion of a "chosen few," but I don't think many could find fault with a system which allows unknowns to become hits practically overnight, when they have the talent it takes.

Your story did not actually say so in so many words, but is there anyone to deny the fact that Johnnie Ray, the Four Aces, and many others who could be named, skyrocketed to fame purely on the strength of their records? And as a corollary to this, it goes without saying that their records would never have been heard were it not for the jockeys. Conclusion: the Harold Fields to N.Y.

London, April 1.

Harold Fields, John Fields Music exec, sails next Wednesday (9) for a four weeks' New York trip to promote a batch of new British tunes already issued by his company in London.

This will be Fields' first business trip to America and he intends to take over between 12 and 14 new numbers to U. S. publishers.

Irving Deutsch Set As Robbins Mgr. In Reshuffle, Vice Ross

In an organization reshuffle of the J. J. Robbins & Sons Music Co. setup, Irving Deutsch stepped into the post of general professional manager last week, replacing Charles Ross. Latter moved into the top professional spot of Ed Kassner Music Co. and its subsid, Piccadilly Music. Kassner and Robbins are in partnership, and move was intended to give greater coverage to the firm's subsidiary activity.

Deutsch, at the same time, will head a new firm, Deutsch Music, also affiliated with the Robbins group. Firm will be associated with Broadcast Music, Inc., although no coin deal has as yet been inked. Deutsch will alternately operate on both coasts, filling the gap left in Hollywood by the recent exit of Goldie Goldmark from the Robbins firm.

Deutsch was formerly associated with Redd Evans in the Jefferson Music setup.

AFM OKAYS DAMONE FOR DUBBING VOCALS

Chicago, April 1.

Chi Local 10, American Federation of Musicians, has given Mercury Records artist Vic Damone right to wax vocals in Belgium and then track the orchestra here. Damone, who is in the European occupation army, hasn't cut anything in the last six months and the AFM board said that "hardship" was evident, especially since singer has at least another six months before he will be back in the United States.

Jacques Kluger of the Mercury Belgium office will do the sessions in Germany and Art Talmadge, disker artist and repertory head here, will supervise the tracking here, probably with Ralph Martiere orchestra. It's one of the longest distance backing jobs in the pop field, although it's been done several times in the classical catalog. Damone will do at least six sides at the first cutting.

Burke-Van Heusen Music has changed its name to Burvan Music. Firm is a Paramount music subsid.

Pop Music Biz at Its Lowest Ebb In England Since King George's Death

Pop music biz in England, which has been on the skids for the past couple of years, has taken another downward turn after a short upsurge during last year's Christmas buying spree. Death of King George VI recently brought everything to a standstill and the music biz hasn't pulled out yet.

Sheet sales are currently at its lowest point with the number one hits racking up a maximum of only 9,000 copy sales a week as compared with the 35,000 to 40,000 figure about three years ago. Biggest hit in England during the post-war era was "The Third Man," which clicked along at a 60,000 weekly sales pace for almost three months.

Another detrimental factor to sheet sales in England today is that the life of the hit tunes have been shortened by many months. Only in few instances does a hit remain on top for more than six weeks. "Too Young," one of 1951's biggest hits both in the U.S. and in England, totalled only 250,000 sheet sales in Great Britain.

According to British music execs now in New York, the limited song plugging outlets there keep sheet sales at a minimum. "Give us 1,000 disk jockeys," he said, "and sheet biz will be booming again." England currently has two working deejays, whose combined air time totals 60 minutes. The necessity for live plug concentration lengthens the time in which it takes a song to build there. "Slow Poke," which hit the top brackets here in about two weeks via several disk clicks, is just about showing some action in the English market after 10 weeks of concentrated plugging.

Main plug outlets in England are orchs, touring pantomime troupes, the British Broadcasting Co., and artists. British contactmen consider Anne Shelton, Vera Lynn and Donald Peers as the top artists' plugs. Placing songs with them is as important to the building of a tune in England today as a Rudy Vallee or Kate Smith air plugs was in the U.S. in the 1930s.

Lilyann Carol, Belafonte Signed by Victor

Building its roster via vocalists geared for the current "new sounds" market, RCA Victor has inked Lilyann Carol and Harry Belafonte to term pacts. Miss Carol, former vocalist with Louis Prima's orch, will be featured on rhythm material.

Belafonte has been working the nitery route as both a crooner and folk balladeer.

See Replacement Of 78s by 45s In Next Few Years

Complete displacement of the conventional 78 rpm disks by the newer 45 rpm platters in the juke-box field was predicted last week by John W. Haddock, prexy of AMI, one of the largest coin machine manufacturers. Haddock stated that the switchover would take place over the next few years.

Figures from the Music Performance Trust Fund roundup on record production over the past few years underline the trend towards the 45's. In 1949, the 78's accounted for over 94% of the total of 188,435,054 platters put on the market as against only 79% of the 1950 total of 184,037,054 platters. The decline represented relative gains for the 45's in the juke field.

Haddock said that the long-play disks would play no role in the juke industry due to the impossibility of making individual selections on such disks. The advantages of the 45's, however, are numerous, according to the juke ops, who prefer the new system's longer-wearing vinylite platters, greater fidelity, flexibility and easier handling. The juke ops, incidentally, account for about 20% of the total sales in the pop field.

Financial report for AMI showed the company netting $461,000 in 1951 after taxes, compared to a 1950 net of $504,475. The company's working capital, however, rose to $904,125 in 1951 from $819,800 a year earlier. At the close of 1951, total assets were $1,811,000, rising from $1,627,154 in 1950.

Mitch Miller, Columbia Records artist and repertory chief, returned to the N. Y. homeoffice this week after a 10-day Jamaica, B. W. I., vacation.

BMI Gets NARTB Okay On 'Grassroots' Drives To Aid Industry Setup

Chicago, April 1.

Broadcast Music, Inc.'s "Grassroots" promotion projects to cement industry relations at the Hometown level, which got rolling at last year's NARTB gathering when 12 state broadcaster associations agreed to take part, now encompasses 38 state groups. Reps from all state associations attended the annual luncheon yesterday (Mon.) sponsored by the music licensing outfit, and heard prexy Carl Haverlin's report on promotional values that have accrued to date through various BMI-sparked projects.

Rising importance of state groups, several of which have sprung into being the past year largely because of BMI program clinics and campaigns, was acknowledged by NARTB prexy Hal Fellows. He pledged support of the National Trade Organization, pointing out there are many significant industry problems, such as a punitive state legislature, that can be best fought by state broadcaster groups.

Haverlin reported his pet project—expanded airing of longhair music—is not paying off promotion-wise for stations, but is proving sound business. Under prod of BMI's concert music drive, over 800 outlets last year beamed 6.2 hours weekly of highbrow music. He pointed out that sponsored longhair last year fetched in $45,000 000—a bigger take than baseball.

Besides 42 BMI clinics spanning the country the next two months, the firm has set a weeklong summer seminar for August in Denver. BMI also has skedded TV clinics during May in New York, Chicago and Hollywood.

Decca's Jock Contact

Expanding its national promotional staff, Decca has added Herb Liebeck as disk jockey contactman for the southern area with headquarters in Cincinnati. Other contactmen were recently added in Chicago and Los Angeles.

Liebeck was formerly a deejay at WBTM, Danville, Va.

Platter Pointers

M-G-M Records has packaged a sparkling soundtrack album of the score from the Metro filmusical, "Singin' In the Rain." Gene Kelly, Donald O'Connor and Debbie Reynolds split the assignments on the Arthur Freed-Nacio Herb Brown oldies with an enchanting gaiety. Such tunes as "Good Morning," "Fit As a Fiddle," "All I Do Is Dream of You," "You Are My Lucky Star" and the title song are excellently executed and should help put album into the top-sales class . . . Bernie Mann orch has a fine rendition of "Waitin' " (King) . . . Tony Mango's workover of "Water Under the Bridge," a slick commercial number, on the indie Rainbow label rates plenty of spins . . . Edmundo Ros orch scores with "She Met a Handsome Banker" (London) . . . Margaret Whiting is warmly effective on the oldie, "My Ideal" (Capitol) . . . Liberace fails to impress on "September Song" (Columbia) . . . Ken Griffin displays some fancy organ work on "Put Your Little Foot" (Columbia) . . . Stan Kenton does an okay job on "Delicado" (Capitol) . . . Tony Bavaar dishes out plenty of wax charm on "I'll Sing to You" (Victor) . . . Tommy Dorsey orch has one of its best etchings in some time in "Keel Row" (Decca) . . . Sunny Gale and the Eddie Wilcox orch have a strong etching in "A Lasting Thing" (Derby) . . . Charlie Barnet impresses with his sax licks on "These Foolish Things" (Abbey) . . . Burl Ives makes "One Hour Ahead of the Posse" on the Decca label a top bet . . . Bill Snyder's keyboarding on "Ravioli Rag" on the same label is firstrate.

or other such rhythm sources, but depends for the essential beat on the drums and bass and the particular stylings of the group.

With its youthful approach the crew handles a sweet top 10 tune as well as it does the traditional rhythm and bounce numbers, and adds a sizable store of Latin numbers. In addition to their fine instrumental work, they show a wide variety of vocals, with specialties by Pagna, Terry and Conte, by trio work and by group vocals. In whatever they do there is a good deal of pep and vinegar which sparks the proceedings.

Late Percy Wenrich Tops for Versatility In Pop Cleffer Ranks

By JIM WALSH

Final curtain fell within six days for both members of a once great songwriting pair when Percy Wenrich's death in New York on March 17 followed Ed Madden's March 11 in Hollywood.

Although Wenrich was one of most versatile of pop cleffers and wrote just about every sort of number, he should be specially well remembered as tunesmith who made better use of American Indian themes than any other. Epidemic of Red Man tunes in early 1900s was kicked off by Neil Moret's "Hiawatha" and "Anona," by Mabel McKinley Baer, niece of President McKinley. Vincent Bryant and Gus Edwards followed with "Tammany"; Moret had another in "Silver Heels"; Charles Johnson did well with "Iola," and Fred Hager with "Laughing Water." Kerry Mills had perhaps the biggest hit of the lot, the still popular "Red Wing," and followed with moderately successful "Lily of the Prairie."

But Wenrich was only one of the Indian idolators who came through with three smashes—"Rainbow" (recently revived by Del Wood on Tennessee platter) in 1908; "Silver Bell" (still a big one with hillbilly bands), 1910; "and "Snow Deer" (currently available in 88-note thumping by Joe "Fingers" Carr on Capitol), 1913. Victor record of "Rainbow," by Billy Murray and Hayden Quartet, was a big seller for almost a generation. Columbia dish was by Frank Stanley and Henry Burr, and when the master showed defects many years later, demand was still great enough for it to be remade by Burr and Edgar Stoddard. "Silver Bell," by Ada Jones and Murray, was the biggest selling Edison cylinder for years.

As far as can be traced, Wenrich's first recorded song was "What's the Matter With the Mail?" which late Arthur Collins sang for Columbia and other companies in 1905. (For the first few years, Columbia appeared to have trouble spelling genial Percy's last name right. It appeared many times on labels as Wendrick.) "Mail" was a typical example of the once popular but now frowned on "coon song."

Born in Joplin

Wenrich was born in Joplin, Mo., in an area where ragtime was popularly supposed to have originated. Rudi Blesh and Harriet Janis, in "They All Played Ragtime," credit him with being one of the best white rag writers. Compositions in this genre include 1906 "Smiler Rag" (included in Fred Van Eps' current "Five-String Banjo" album); "Red Rose Rag" and "Alamo Rag," both around 1911. Wenrich also appears to have been first popular writer to see possibilities of what developed into Hawaiian music craze. He wrote "My Hula Hula Love" in 1911. It led procession of thousands of other ditties dealing with charms of palm trees, white beeches and hula maidens.

Percy did justice to lure of South in numbers such as "Dixie Gray" and "Kentucky Days," which were rough drafts for his terrific 1914 opus, "When You Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Big Red Rose." Locale of all three was Kentucky. Couple of years after "Tulip" he came through with another in similar vein, "Sweet Cider Time When You Were Mine."

But judging by total number he wrote, songs about moon and moonlight were Wenrich's favorites. These include possibly prettiest melody he ever did, "Moonlight Bay" (many collectors consider the Edison record by Billy Murray and Premier Quartet to be the finest old-style male quartet recording ever made), "Jungle Moon," "Sugar Moon," "In the Glory of the Moonlight" and "It's Moonlight All the Time on Broadway." The west was paid tribute in "'Way Out Yonder in the Golden West." Ditty whose title included nearly all the seasons was "Goodbye, Summer, So Long, Fall—Hello, Winter Time." Attractions of beautiful feminine eyes were hymned in "Spanish Eyes" and "Open Your Eyes" (recorded on one Columbia record by Wenrich's wife, Dolly Connolly) and "Naughty Eyes."

Topical Hits

When the nation entered first World War, Wenrich had a topical hit, "Where Do We Go From Here?" Prohibition was joshed with "How Are You Goin' to Wet Your Whistle (When the Whole Darn World Goes Dry?") Percy kept in step with jazz era, producing such complex dance tunes as "All Muddled Up" throughout '20s.

Apparently, Wenrich never made any records, but his wife, who survives (however, she has been in poor health for years), was a Columbia and, later, Emerson star. She specialized in recording her husband's compositions. Of course, the pair was also big-time in vaude.

Probably Wenrich song that will last longest is "Put On Your Old Grey Bonnet," now considered a true folk classic. (There was an English song of about same period, 1909, titled "Put On Your Old Green Bonnet.") Some years ago, a French collector of what he thought were folk tunes told of listening to girls far back in mountains singing lovely things with words, "you picked me and I picked you in berry pickin' time." Wenrich wrote "In Berry Picking Time" in 1918. (Savant also said two finest Elizabethan folk songs he heard in his mountain journeys were "After the Ball" and "Two Little Girls in Blue.")

Percy Wenrich died on St. Patrick's Day. With his unfailing virtuosity, he had written, in 1915, a number that could be appropriately sung while sons of the ould sod were marching. It combined two of his favorite themes, beauty of moonlight and girlish eyes, and was called "When It's Moonlight in Mayo," referring to County Mayo in Ireland.

Fiddler's Suit Vs. NCAC Thrown Out of Court

The $100,000 damage suit brought by violinist John Creighton Murray against National Concert & Artists Corp. was dismissed in N. Y. Supreme Court last week by Judge Eugene Brisach who ordered the jury not to consider the case. Attorneys for Murray are planning to submit an appeal.

Murray, who pacted with NCAC in 1947, claimed that the agency did not use its best efforts to further his professional career. In June 1949, the suit asserted, NCAC sent a notice to its field offices stating "please remove Murray from the NCAC list immediately . . . he's no longer available under NCAC management and as far as we know he's not available under any other management." The distribution of the notice, Murray asserted, violated the 1947 pact and wrecked his career.

Violinist also sought $4,250 from NCAC as monies due him from appearances on the Civic Concerts series from Nov. 8, 1948, through April, 1949. Of this Murray was awarded $2,193 with $1,068 going to NCAC for payment of monies it shelled out to promote his tours.

Ralph Peer, head of Peer International, returns to his New York headquarters from Europe Monday (7). Peer was abroad for six months.

HILO HATTIE REJOINS OWENS' HAWAIIANS

Hollywood, April 1.

Hilo Hattie rejoined Harry Owens and his Royal Hawaiians on KTLA on her own terms after a five-month absence.

Hattie (Mrs. Frank Nelson) ankled the Owens crew after a 10 year association when Owens nixed her plans to p.a. between teledates. During the last five months she's been heading a troupe of her own in a trek around the country. When she returned to the Coast for a spot in U-I's "Ma and Pa Kettle Go To Waikiki," she and Owens got together and arranged a settlement.

platter-chatterers have made it possible for heretofore undiscovered talent to suddenly become fabulous successes.

Even the greatest diehards cannot raise the cry, this time, that any payola was involved in the picture. Nor were there even any "pressure groups" or gimmicks. The boys around the country who spin the platters latched on to something they felt was good, and the public agreed. Do you know of a fairer or better system for newcomers to get a break?

Actually, I believe that we are now on the threshold of a new era, because while this "newcomer business" actually has been going on for quite some time, your recent VARIETY story has pinpointed the situation, and painted a clear picture of it. The reason I refer to a "new era" is a letter which I received this week from Sidney Nathan, president of King Records. A year ago, a letter such as this would have been unprecedented. As it is now, it merely seems like normal procedure. The letter (addressed to all disk jockies), pointed out that King was "only too happy" to listen to any new artists or composers. Prior to this new era, how could an unknown ever get his song or voice into the inner offices of a recording company? Unless he had a first cousin or "knew someone who knew someone," his chances of being heard were practically nil. I say hurray for this new situation! I say hurray for the fact that one of the major labels (Decca), sent an a.&r. man to Rochester a short time ago to ask me if I knew of any unknown—but good—singing talent in this area. That was the first time in my 15 years in radio that a record company ever came here actually looking for talent. Again I say, this is a healthy situation, and part of this new cycle of "sizzling newcomers."

Incidentally, aside from the fact that all of this is opening doors for new talent, I think it is a healthy hypo to some of the old-school talent who have been living in an ivory tower.

I think it is making them more careful in the tunes they select for waxing, and, incidentally, is making them a bit more conscious of the fact that they do have a public. The Four Aces, for example, in addition to having best sellers on wax, are smashing nitery records, and are really knocking themselves out to be cooperative with personal appearances on the jock shows. Witness on the other hand, the recent debacle when a top artist failed to show up at a sellout house a couple of weeks ago here in Rochester. After a near riot in which the police had to be called, and all patrons refunded their money, the vocalist casually wrote it off with a statement to the local papers that he would "make it up to them, (the public)—some time." Those ivory towers aren't going to last very long with public relations like this.

So a final tip of the hat to your "sizzling newcomers"—and to the DJs who make it possible!

Froman's Sock Cincy P.A. For Music School Fund

Cincinnati, April 1.

Jane Froman packed the 2,500-seat Taft Theatre Monday night (31) for an appearance with a special showing of her 20th-Fox biopic, "With a Song in My Heart." Top was $2.50. Proceeds will start scholarship fund in her name at Cincinnati Conservatory of Music where she, too, studied on a scholarship.

Screening was followed by singing of several of 28 numbers she did in picture. She was accompanied by Bert Farber, WLW staffer.

Martiere to GAC

Chicago, April 1.

Ralph Martiere has been pacted to a three-year contract by General Artists Corp. After breaking in at the Lake Club, Springfield, Ill., April 8, band comes up to Melody Mill, Chicago, for two weeks, starting April 18. Group is then slated for Meadowbrook, New Jersey dancery, May 3.

Orch is also inked for Les Paul-Mary Ford show at the Paramount, N. Y., in June.

Canadian ASCAP to Get Upped '52 Revenues From Radio Under New Ruling

Ottawa, April 1.

Composers, Authors and Publishers Association of Canada (Canadian ASCAP) is due to get a handsomely upped 1952 revenue under a ruling of the Copyright Appeal Board. Board switched the system for CAPAC's collections for music in its repertoire played by radio stations with the estimated result that privately-owned stations will double their collective sum and the public-owned Can. Broadcasting Corp. will pay around $25,000 more than last year.

Fees to be paid by private stations under the new ruling, which is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1952, are to be based on gross revenue of the stations. CBC fees will be based on gross revenue and population. Private station fees will amount to 1¾% of the gross revenue it reports officially to the federal Transport Dept. CBC, with considerably less commercial broadcasting, pays 1¾% of gross revenue plus 1% per capita of population.

Previous system based fees on the number of radio receiving sets in Canada at 14c. per set, CBC paying half (seven cents) and the private stations, as a group, the other seven. Unofficial estimates set the new rap at $350,000 for the private broadcasters ($152,421 last year) and $175,000 for CBC ($152,421 in 1951). CBC pays its percentage fee only on commercial revenue and no fees on revenue from acts of parliament or radio licenses.

Jack Meyerson Forms New Low-Priced Label

Another entry into the low-price long play disk field, Plymouth Records, was formed recently to peddle classical and pop etchings. Plymouth's initial catalog contains 50 classical works which were recorded in Europe.

Diskery's operations will be headed up by Jack W. Meyerson, former prez of the now defunct Musicraft Records.

Queen Elizabeth Biog Put On Wax by Abbey In Solid Production

Against an historical backdrop covering events of the past quarter-century, Abbey Records has knit together a topflight long play etching relating the story of Queen Elizabeth, from her birth to her ascension to the throne. Platter, titled "The Second Elizabeth," is produced a la Columbia's "Hear It Now" and Capitol's "Hark, The Years," with narration, taped recordings and musical backing but it confines its material to the voices and events pertinent to the story of England's new Queen. It's a well-produced, excellently documented piece which capsules the world in which Queen Liz grew up with sock entertainment and information values.

David Niven, in the role of narrator, handles his assignment with sincerity and authority. The taped voices of such historical figures as the late King George VI, Duke of Windsor, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, President Truman, Dean Acheson and Winston Churchill are effective. The few tapes available of the Queen's voice which are spotted throughout come across with impact. Best of her tapes is the first radio speech she made in 1940 (at the age of 14) to the children of Great Britain. Minor flaw in the album is that the Queen isn't heard often enough.

Kay Starr, Morse Top Paul-Ford in Cap Sales

After more than a year of pacing Capitol Records sales, Les Paul-Mary Ford and Nat (King) Cole have dropped down to third and sixth position, respectively, with Kay Starr and Ella Mae Morse taking over the one, two spots. Miss Starr is rolling along in high gear with her etching of "Wheel Of Fortune," while Miss Morse is clicking with "Blacksmith Blues."

"Fortune" is Cap's best selling disk with more than 800,000 sales racked up in about two months. "Blues" has already passed the 500,000 mark. Paul-Ford follow in Cap's listing with "Tiger Rag" and Ray Anthony's workover of "At Last" has taken over the fourth spot. Les Baxter's "Blue Tango" and Cole's "Unforgettable" the diskery's clicks in fifth and sixth positions, respectively.

Nitery Tariffs Regulated in New OPS Rulings With 1951 as Basis

Washington, April 1.

New ceiling price system for restaurants, announced last Friday (28) by Office of Price Stabilization, has specific sections applying to cover charges, corkage, etc., especially where there are floorshows. Language covering these says:

"If you made a charge for entertainment on only certain days of the week or at certain times of the day during 1951, you may make an entertainment charge on other days of the week or at other times of the day for the same type of entertainment as long as that charge is no higher than the highest charge made for that type of entertainment during 1951.

"If, during 1951, you varied your charge for entertainment in accordance with the type of entertainment offered, you may continue this practice, provided the charge you make for any given type of entertainment does not go above the highest charge made for that type of entertainment during 1951.

"You may apply to your OPS district office for permission to institute or increase an entertainment charge in the following circumstances: (1) if you did not offer entertainment during 1951, and you now wish to do so and make a charge for it; or (2) if you offered entertainment but did not make a charge for it during 1951, and you now wish to replace the entertainment offered during 1951 with another type of entertainment and, by reason of the change, to institute an entertainment charge; or (3) if you offered entertainment for which you made a charge during 1951, and you now wish to replace the entertainment previously offered with another type of entertainment and, by reasons of the change, to increase your entertainment charge."

Regulation states further that for new restaurant and niteries opened in 1952, the ceiling price for cover charge for entertainment must be made by application to the OPS office.

Exemptions from the restaurant and eatery ceilings are provided for stands, such as those in theatre lobbies, which sell candy, nuts, gum, pretzels, ice cream, coffee, soft drinks, etc., and also the sale of food and beverages in vending machines.

Warner, N.Y., Completes Bill for Vaude Return

Lineup for the opening show of the Warner Theatre, N. Y., has been completed with Ella Mae Morse and Harvey Stone signed for the return of vaude at this house next Monday (7). Previously pacted were Gene Nelson and Louis Jordan.

On the following layout, starting April 23, the Ballet Theatre will be the sole stage attraction. The Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet is currently in that house on a legit basis.

Warner Theatre has been without stage shows for nearly a year. The straight film policy didn't work out too well.

Mastin Trio's 60-Hr. Trek To Make Pitt Copa Teeoff

Pittsburgh, April 1.

Will Mastin Trio, with Sammy Davis, Jr., had a pretty hectic trip making their date last week at the Copa here. Threesome had a bit to finish up for the new Tony Martin pic, "A Song of Forever," at RKO, following their second TV shot with Eddie Cantor on the "Colgate Comedy Hour" and they didn't get through with it until late Friday night (22). They were due in Pitt on Monday (25) and since Mastin and the Sammy Davises don't fly, they hopped into their car early Saturday morning and by alternating drivers and pounding the highways continuously made the cross-country trek in about 60 hours. They reached the Copa only minutes before the first dinner show was scheduled and went on without even a music rehearsal.

Act gave the Copa the biggest week it's had in months, and spot's all-time high for any Lenten season.

Omaha's Gourmet Unopen Since Recent Fire Damage

Omaha, April 1.

The Gourmet, deluxe night spot, has not been touched since it was gutted by fire on the eve of its skedded opening recently. The place, which cost "Tiny" Barnes, local sports figure, more than $150,000 to furnish, never opened. It's on Omaha's busy Dodge St., eastwest artery.

Authorities have no idea whether Barnes' possible enemies could have had something to do with the blaze. It's still a local mystery.

Cafes Eye That Old In-the-Black Magic After Easter Period

New York nitery business still has not recovered from the ailment that comes annually on March 15, namely incometaxitis. The bulk of the business is still divided between two cafes, the Copacabana and the Latin Quarter. Business elsewhere is spotty and much of the b.o. in the other cafes is coming in tthrough the efforts of banquet managers.

Bonifaces feel that there will be some pickup after Easter Sunday (13), but aren't too optimistic over the immediate prospects. They point out that the garment centre, from which the niteries draw much trade, hasn't had too good a season. On the other hand, New York has been designated as a "distress area" in the allocation of defense contracts. The Government will, consequently, allocate more war work for this area than it has been getting to date. Business might pick up when that happens.

But at this point bonifaces are banking on a summer pickup. They hope that tourists will hit town in sufficient numbers to effect a hypo.

JANE FROMAN TO TOP N.J. RIVIERA'S 1ST BILL

Jane Froman will headline the first show of the season at the Riviera, Ft. Lee, N. J., April 22. She was signed late last week by Bill Miller, cafe's boniface, after the William Morris Agency's George Wood set up the deal.

Miss Froman's film, "With a Song in My Heart" opens at the Roxy, N. Y., Friday (4). Cafe run is expected to reap added publicity benefits because of the biopic.

Singer played the Riviera several seasons ago. She's in for 16 days at around $8,000 a week.

U.S. Revs Hit St. P. Flame With 3G Liens; File Appeal

Minneapolis, April 1.

Internal Revenue Bureau has slapped liens totaling $3,000 on the St. Paul Flame. Spot was the town's No. 1 nitery and only one playing name acts until its licenses were revoked last week after conviction of owner Henry Greene and a bartender for selling liquor to a minor later involved in holdups. The Government alleges arrears in withholding and excise cabaret and floor taxes.

Greene has appealed minor-sale convictions to the state supreme court. If latter reverses them, the city council has made known the spot's licenses will be restored.

Morgan's Steeltown Pair

Pittsburgh, April 1.

Al Morgan has been booked into the Twin Coaches in Belle Vernon April 28 and three weeks after that plays Bill Green's on Route 51. Two spots are only a half-hour drive from each other.

Just a month ago, Morgan played the Monte Carlo downtown and gave that room the biggest week in its nearly three-year history. At that time, management wanted him for a return engagement this summer, but that deal hasn't been set yet, and may not jell because of his two engagements in April and May so close to downtown Pittsburgh.

Philly Op in Jam On Sale to Minors

Philadelphia, April 1.

Testimony of two 16-year-old girls involved in the fatal stabbing of a sailor resulted in the holding of William Kranick, proprietor of the Top Hat club, in $1,000 bail for the Grand Jury (30) on charges of permitting the sale of liquor to minors.

Magistrate James McBride scoffed at counsel's pleas that "Kranik ran a respectable place."

Hamid Wins CNE Contract Vs. AGVA Toronto Opposition

Toronto, April 1.

In the "Canadianizing" of the Canadian National Exhibition, "ordered" by Mayor Allan Lamport, the George A. Hamid agency, N. Y., has beaten the rap on being "ruled out" as booker of the afternoon vaude show in the grandstand, plus the evening show. Representations by the Toronto branch of the American Guild of Variety Artists that Hamid is not an accredited AGVA agent and, therefore, could not line up CNE talent, went to no avail when Hamid was awarded the contract last week (26).

On claim that Canadian talent agents had been given the brushoff and the intimation that everything already had been set, Mayor Lamport stressed that he had just discovered that the Hamid deal had been set up by Elwood Hughes, CNE g.m., last December. (Hamid said in N. Y. that no papers were signed until last week. He has had this contract for some 25 years.) Lamport is still "ruling" that only Canadian agents can book CNE acts, based on fronting by Bob Logan, Canadian representative of AGVA.

Admitting that he was inexperienced in show biz technique, but insistent that the CNE get away from American agency "domination" of the past, Mayor Lamport had agreed with Hughes that Hamid line up the afternoon and evening grandstand shows but changed his mind when George Taggart and Norman Harris, Toronto talent agents, with the reported backing of Logan, protested that Hamid does not hold an AGVA franchise. Mayor Lamport hotly insisted that Hamid should have been properly accredited before he (Lamport) had given his okay prior to the "revelations" of AGVA.

It was reported that Hamid's contract received the unanimous vote of the CNE committee in charge. His Canadian rep is Len Humphreys, who is also his stage manager at CNE.

Hamid gained the contract in the face of bitter political opposition as well as a campaign against him by AGVA, with which he has been feuding on the union's insurance scheme.

Martha Raye's L.Q. Date 1st N.Y. Cafe in 2 Yrs.

Martha Raye will play her first New York cafe stand in two years at the Latin Quarter, starting Aug. 31. She previously played the Riviera, Ft. Lee, N. J., and prior to that had a long run at the now defunct Harem.

Latin Quarter boniface Lou Walters occasionally puts names in not only to buck the competition of the Riviera and the Copacabana, but in this instance so that he can nab additional coin because of the influx of tourists over the Labor Day weekend.

Walters is currently in Las Vegas and is expected back later this week.

Givot's N.Y. Concert

George Givot will give a concert at Town Hall, N. Y., May 5. The former nitery and vaude comic has been essaying longhair stands for some time. He recently concertized at the Wilshire Ebell Theatre, Los Angeles.

Givot will give selections which will include lieder by Schubert, Wagner, Handel, Mozart, Mendelssohn and Jacques Wolfe. Ivory backgrounding will be by Ralph Linsley.

Percenteries Singing Annual Blues; 'Save a Buck, Bring in 2' New Refrain

Angelo's, Omaha, Pacts Series of Name Bills

Omaha, April 1.

Angelo's only local nitery booking high bracket acts, will continue that policy. Next three bills are the Mary Allen quartet, Peewee Hunt and his show and the George Shearing outfit. Marquee acts in the immediate past at this spot included Nellie Lutcher and Willie Shore.

In going in for names, Angelo's is now expertimenting with a 50c cover on Saturday nights only, but may be encouraged to a nightly tariff if the response is good.

Lena Horne Ups Lido 3G Per Day in Paris Stopover on Big Tour

Paris, April 1.

Lena Horne, booked for the week she is spending in Paris on her way to Israel by Pierre-Louis Guerin as a hypo for his Club Lido, would still be giving encores if she had heeded requests of the patronage which would not permit her to leave the floor. Advance reservations for the engagement jammed the nitery.

At opening (25) she appeared in a fetching white gown and with Arnold Ross at the piano, Joe Benjamin as bassist and Bill Clark as drummer, she sang nine songs. For her next appearance she switched to an equally effective black gown.

Reception was such that it shows potency of talent here provided it really is first-class and a sure draw. Otherwise it means a deep dip in the red. Hypo at the Lido can be estimated as an increased take of $3,000 per day.

Her Paris date is to be followed by others in Monte Carlo, Milan, Genoa, Florence, Rome and Naples. From there, she and her troupe sail April 27 for Israel for a series of concerts and then to London for two weeks at the Palladium, following with Glasgow, Liverpool, Dublin, and spots in Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

JOSIE BAKER SCORES IN MEX CITY NITERY

Mexico City, March 25.

Top recent socko in niteries here, for the first time in Mexico, is Josephine Baker's presentation, "Chez Elle," at the newest after-dark spot, Rumba Casino. Opening night drew turnaway trade. That is continuing.

Miss Baker had intended to play Havana this month. But the Batista coup obliged her to cancel and continue here indefinitely.

Rumba Casino is yet another try where two very good niteries, the Minuit and Claridge, born of the extraordinary wartime boom here, had flopped. La Baker, reportedly, is taking 20% of the gross.

Wirtz Icer's 2 in Canada, Closing Season in Cincy

Chicago, April 1.

Arthur Wirtz's "Hollywood Ice Revue" is doing two repeat dates before swinging into Canadian territory. Show goes back to Indianapolis for five days starting April 12 and also Detroit for five more beginning the 18th. First north of the border engagements will be at Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, April 24-30, and the Forum, Montreal, May 4-11.

Blader swings back into the States to Cincinnati and plays the Garden there week of May 14 to close the season. Plans for the 1953 tours are now being made with Barbara Ann Scott as headliner again.

Cafe de Paris Lineup

London, April, 1.

Hermione Gingold is booked to open at the Cafe de Paris April 21, for one month following Dwight Fiske. Hildegarde follows on May 19, also for one month, after which Noel Coward returns for six weeks starting June 16.

Cafe then closes for six weeks for redecorations, reopening Sept. 15 with Jack Buchanan.

Agency business is hitting its annual crisis, with commissions reaching their lowest point of the year. Agency toppers are looking over every department for economies, and some minor help have been let out, with others slated to go. In one agency, assistants have been demoted to secretaries. Some cuts are expected later this month.

In several offices, the execs have been giving staffs pep talks in an effort to line up some new sources of revenue. At one office, for example, signing of new singers was stressed. It was pointed out that this type entertainer is the most easily developed these days. A record contract is sometimes all that's necessary. At this office, it was held, the lead in this department has passed onto General Artists Corp., which has been most successful in building singers. It was indicated that should there be no improvement in this direction, there would be some changes made.

The agency crisis is in a great measure due to the decline in nitery and vaude revenues during the past season. There has been an appreciable slide in video revenue during the last few months, which has deepened the overall percentery emergency.

The agencies are not willing to hold onto the present number of employees over the summer, even though there is some indication that there will be a pickup in the fall. The major offices have had some minor housecleanings, but nothing approaching a major retrenchment wave in any department.

Not too many economies can be made in the vaude and nitery sectors since these were cut to the minimum some time ago. However, other divisions can be tightened up and it's likely that unless there is an appreciable pickup, more departments will be working with minimum personnel.

Henie's $67,000 Refund On Bronx Cancellation

Task of refunding money for the cancelled Sonja Henie engagement at the Kingsbridge Armory, Bronx, is more than half completed. Ticket takers, as of the weekend, had refunded $67,000 of $90,000 advance.

Refund booth located at the Bond clothing store on Broadway will stay open until Friday (4) to take care of stragglers. It's likely that refunds after that will be done through a postoffice box number to be set up.

Miss Henie was slated to start at the Armory last Wednesday (26) but called off the show ostensibly because Armory officials demanded a $1,000,000 bond. Miss Henie opens at the Teatro Blanquita, Havana, this month.

Ralph Slater Loser In Hopnotism Damage Suit

London, April 1.

Ralph Slater was ordered to pay $2,800 damages and costs to a 23 year-old girl who alleged negligence and assault after she had been hypnotized on the stage at a Brighton Theatre in December, 1948. The plaintiff, Diana Grace Rains-Bath, complained of anxiety neurosis after the stage incident and was treated subsequently by a medical hypnotist. It's believed that this verdict eliminates any future possibility of hypnotism acts playing British vaude.

The hearing at Sussex Assizes lasted three days. During the last two days, Slater conducted his own defense after his attorney had asked to withdraw, complaining that he could not agree with Slater's procedure for defense. During the hearing, Slater was frequently called to order by the judge for using Americanisms. While making his final address, he was prevented from walking around the court and facing the jury. Slater argued he was not on trial for stage hypnotism, but for negligence and assault.

Attorney for the plaintiff asked substantial damages.

The case drew frontpage newspaper coverage, because the hearing followed attempts to introduce legislation in Parliament to prohibit stage hypnotism.

AGVA to Mull Defense of Connors Vs. Suit by Insurance 'Originator'

Question of whether the American Guild of Variety Artists will defend Vic Connors in a suit brought by David Cohen, who claims to have originated the plan used in the AGVA insurance program, will be decided by the union's board. Union counsel, Silverstone & Rosenthal, are said to be opposed to the step, inasmuch as such assignment to the defense may automatically mean that AGVA assumes responsibility for the acts of Connors as an individual.

Union has been served with papers in which Connors; Henry Dunn, former national administrative secretary, now heading the Lew & Leslie Grade office in Hollywood; Matthew M. Adler, broker on the AGVA insurance program, and Fred J. Kothe, a licensed N. Y. broker, who fronted for Adler until latter obtained his license in that state, are being sued by Cohen for $150,000. Adler is collecting commissions on the deal and Cohen feels that the cut is rightfully his. Alan Corelli, ex-Theatre Authority, served the papers. It's believed that he brought Cohen together with AGVA.

Union counsel have brought up the question of responsibility because of a letter written to Silverstone & Rosenthal by Connors stating that inasmuch as he was acting for the union, it is up to the union to come through on his behalf. However, it's noted that AGVA was not named as a defendant in the suit, and feeling among counsel is that the union should not enter a situation which may cost them a good deal of money. Some feel that the union, in supplying counsel, might be considered responsible for any damages that may be awarded to Cohen.

It's expected that a hot fight will take place when the AGVA board meets to discuss the issue.

Court Limits Suits Vs. Henie to Current Claims In Huge Balto Actions

Baltimore, April 1.

Judges of the Supreme Court last week stayed the filing of any more pleas in connection with the damage suits against Sonja Henie over collapse of stands at the 5th Regiment Armory here March 6. Court froze all further pleadings because of the large number of suits involved. About 230 claims, amounting to more than $5,000,000, have already been placed before the courts.

Jurists explained that they wanted to hear one phase of the case at a time in order to expedite matters. It was also pointed out that depositions will be taken from Miss Henie next Monday (7) before Judge Emory H. Niles.

Miss Henie is currently in Havana for her icery date at the Teatro Blanquita.

Mull 'Jewel Box Revue' For Showcaser in Pitt

Pittsburgh, April 1.

It begins to look like the Miami Beach "Jewel Box Revue," which has spent the last two summers here at Balconades, about 10 miles from downtown, will get an even better break locally this year following the sale of Balconades for its conversion into a business property. Negotiations are underway for the Doc and Danny show of femme impersonators to be berthed within five miles of the Golden Triangle, in East Liberty at Johnny Brown's Club.

Although Brown's doesn't have the capacity of Balconades, it's better located and seats as many as the Jewel Box in Miami Beach. In past years, Brown's usually has been closed during the warm months except for occasional weekend operations.

IBEW's Name Bills In Midwest For Member Pitch

Chicago, April 1.

International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers here is putting an unusual twist on recruiting drive for new members in midwest cities. If plan is successful, it will be adopted on a larger scale.

AFL union is packaging a vaude revue headlining Beatrice Kay and Jack Durant and will present show before telephone operators in St. Paul, Minneapolis; Sioux Falls, S. D.; Omaha and Des Moines starting April 7. If the scheme works before the CIO helloers, more shows will be sent out and repeat entertainment will be given in the spots first visited.

Deal has been worked out with Phil Lampkin of the William Morris office here and Frank Darling of the IBEW. Local here is the largest in the country, mainly due to area's huge radio and TV factories. Union presents vaude shows here twice-monthly, buying headliners like Jimmy Durante to top the bill. Last week Pat O'Brien was in the star niche.

Ohio Ct. Rules for Patron Who Forgot to Duck Puck

Columbus, April 1.

In a decision of interest to arena managers and others operating similar facilities, the Ohio Supreme Court last week (26) upheld a $22,500 verdict awarded a spectator for injuries sustained in Cleveland while watching a hockey game between the Cleveland Barons and a Philadelphia team in 1948.

Herbert W. Morris, of Lakewood, won the verdict from the Cleveland Hockey Club, Inc., as the result of a compound fracture of the skull suffered when he was struck in the eye by a puck.

In upholding the lower courts, the Ohio Supreme Court held that a patron occupying a reserved seat who has never seen a flying puck does not, in the absence of any warning, assume the risk of being hit by a puck flying from the arena during the game. The judges went further, to hold that the dangers to spectators at a hockey game played in an arena 200x85 feet are not so general as to be matters of common knowledge.

'BAGELS' BAGS 23½G IN 2D PHILLY WEEK

"Bagels and Yox" pulled $23,500 during its second week at the Forrest Theatre, Philadelphia. Show closed there Sunday (30), will open tonight (Wed.) at the Mosque Theatre, Newark, for four days and continue with dates in Washington, Baltimore and Norfolk before coming to the Flatbush, Brooklyn, April 9, and the Windsor, Bronx, April 16.

It's slated to open May 11 in Chicago for a run.

Harlem Globe Trotters Make B.O. Bonanza As Basketeering Barnums

Like professional wrestling, basketball as played by the Harlem Globe Trotters is in that twilight zone between sports and show business. The fanciest crew of ballhandlers in the business, the all-Negro Trotters have parlayed their court finesse and circus antics into a worldwide boxoffice phenomenon under impresario Abe Saperstein.

At a $6 top, the Trotters packed Madison Square Garden, N. Y., last Sunday (30) to capacity twice in an afternoon-evening doubleheader with a collegiate all-star aggregation, which was beaten in both games. For the crowds, however, the contests themselves were strictly subsidiary to the Trotters' clowning before and during the games.

Although Saperstein arranged for a top-drawer vaude show between the halves, it was the Trotters who supplied most of the kicks at the Garden in the warmup period with a spectacular exhibition of ball-passing to the tune of "Sweet Georgia Brown," the team's theme song. High point of this act was the dimming of the Garden lights with a beam spotlighting the Trotters' phosphorescent gloves and ball while they beat out the rhythm.

The half-hour intermission was covered by a good lineup of acrobatic and juggling turns with the addition of a glamor angle via the appearance of French actress Gaby Bruyere in a song and can-can hoofing act. The Garden, unfortunately, was not the best showcase for Miss Bruyere, whose singing was lost in the unstoppable audience shuffling and noise. The other acts included a first-rate trampoline boy-girl team from Cincinnati Univ.; the juggling Rudy Cardenas and a Chinese hand-balancing trio, the Tong Bros., all of whom clicked solidly in the general circus atmosphere.

The Trotters, incidentally, took off from the Garden for a cross-country tour with the collegians, following with an overseas trip to the Far East, India and Europe. The team, headed by the crowd favorites, Goose Tatum and Marques Haines, is the steadiest working troupe in show business with a 51 week circuit guaranteed each year. Herm.

Mpls. Tables Bill On Cafe Finances

Minneapolis, April 1.

The combined city council health and hospital and ordinances and legislation committees voted down a proposed amendment to the city's liquor ordinance designed to disclose multiple and concealed ownership of local niteries and other establishments dispensing alcoholic beverages.

Action followed a public hearing at which particular objection was voiced to a clause which would have required a financial statement of income and expenditures from all liquor license holders, specifying all parties receiving any part of the revenue and the amount.

After the committee voted 6 to 2 to table the proposed amendment, its authors announced they'll reintroduce it in a revised form, with the objectionable clause eliminated.

Meanwhile, one of the city's largest niteries, Curly's, is still shuttered following revocation of its licenses for selling liquor after hours, and the council hasn't yet made known if it will permit the establishment's sale for a reported $100,000 or throw the valuable liquor license on the open market. Also, a municipal court judge hasn't rendered his decision in the case of Vic's, another leading nitery, charged with selling liquor to a minor, and in St. Paul the license of the Flame, top bistro, is hanging in the balance following conviction on a similar charge.

Yank Acts Need Strong Union Aid To Offset That Paris Pusharound

Paris, April 2.

Not until AGVA or Equity open a Paris office and secure the services of a hep lawyer to protect the interests of visiting U. S. talent will American performers get a fair chance here. When something goes wrong, either in payments or in other contractual matters, all the performer does—or can do most of the time—is to complain to his agent. Latter takes up the matter, and in some cases very perfunctorily, since he stands to lose more from a dissatisfied permanent booker than from a transient artist. In many cases the agent has not taken the trouble to get the performer his working papers, placing him in a condition where he can't even start to sue if he wants it. In other cases, such important matters as payment of rehearsals, or permission to double, or billing, are settled on a handshake, which for the U.S. performer turns promptly into a headache.

All Paris operators and agents are not black sheep. Operators like Pierre Louis-Guerin of the Lido, or agents like Felix Marouani (representing the William Morris agency) or Dave Stein of MCA, are strictly on the up and up. But too many localites resort to practices which, to say the least, are unethical.

An American actress, booked to star in one of the biggest shows in Paris, found herself compelled to quit before opening when no suitable material could be found for

Talk Krupa Jap Trek

Deal is on for Gene Krupa to tour Japan following his current stand in the Hawaiian Islands. Upon completion of negotiations, Krupa would tour military bases in that country and also play civilian promotions.

Pitt Penn's Names

Pittsburgh, April 1.

Penn Theatre, Loew de luxer which had the Tony Bennett-Toni Arden stageshow knocked out last week when Bennett fell ill, has rebooked another act which has been on and off for some time. It's the unit headed by Les Paul & Mary Ford, featuring Richard Hayes, and comes in week of May 3.

Package of Four Aces and Margaret Whiting set for Penn June 6 and Johnnie Ray is slated to follow them a couple of weeks later. Stanley thought it had Ray tied up for a date early next month, but the Penn won out in the bidding. Stanley, which played Gene Nelson-Connee Boswell recently for its first flesh in nearly a year, has nothing in sight for immediate future.

Havana Montmartre Acts Make Hay by Doubling

Acts playing the Montmartre, Havana, will be able to pick up some additional change by doubling at the Radio Centre Theatre there. George Prentice has been pacted for the dual chores starting May 8.

Last season, Mario Aguerre Madrano, Montmartre boniface, set up deals whereby acts would play his cafe, the vaudery and would work a radio station. It was thus possible to get acts for less coin at each spot since the overall was more than they could make in any one medium. In addition, each component chipped in on fares.

System didn't stay in effect too long, but it has apparently been revived with the theatre and cafe doing the importing. Leon Newman agency set up the Prentice deal.

Hub's Old Howard Throws In the Sponge But May Reopen in Midsummer

Boston, April 1.

Due to a severe nosedive in biz, a combination of the general slump hypoed by the recent cleanup drive set off by Archbishop Cushing, Hub's oldest burley. theatre, the Old Howard, shuttered last week (29). While the theatre usually suspends activities for about six weeks during the summer, this is the first time that conditions have forced such an early closing. According to present plans, the house will reopen in August, but a recent announcement that owner Al Somerby, who has operated the spot for 50 years, is ready to retire and wants out may change the entire picture. It's reported that several operators would like to take over the lease, but Somerby figures 50 years in the biz is long enough and intends to dispose of his entire holdings.

While peelers, in accordance with the laws dusted off following the cleanup drive, are supposed to stick to a "modified" strip, a glimpse of Rose LaRose, featured in the windup bill, indicated the heat is off. But even that is apparently not enough inducement to lure sufficient customers to the boxoffice to offset the red ink.

Ray's 7½G in Texas

Dallas, April 1.

Johnnie Ray has been booked for Texas dates from Sept. 22 to 28. Singer will play Joe Bond's Sky Club here, Sept. 25-28, after the Plantation Club in Houston, Sept. 22 to 24.

Ray will receive $7,500.

'Flattop Follies': Battle Atmosphere Greets USO Unit on Berthed Carrier

By JOE COHEN

If USO-Camp Shows execs had been deliberately looking for a situation whereby CS troupes would have simulated battle conditions, they could hardly have found a better basic training ground than that under which Unit 1021 broke in Thursday (27) on the USS Oriskany, docked at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. It was probably the closest to such conditions available in stateside entertainment.

The setting itself was sufficiently rugged to pass muster for the mccoy, with the troupe working on a canvas-covered lift which brings planes onto the flight deck of the carrier. However, the greatest preparation for rough work came during the opening act when loudspeakers instructed the fire-fighting crews to report to stations pronto. Several gobs rushed off to fight a blaze which had broken out because of some welding being done aboard. Shortly afterward, an officer announced that none of the assemblage was in any danger and "Please enjoy yourself." The acts were later interrupted occasionally by loud hammering backstage.

With these unscheduled gimmicks, this troupe would have had the best training for work near the Korean battlelines. However, the outfit is slated to work the Northeast Theatres and afterward in Africa and the Caribbean.

Show Goes On and On

The unit, once it gets some kinks ironed out, will offer some prime entertainment. Show comprises good acts, but on night caught, they were probably testing all their material, and each turn performed for interminable lengths. Running time was accentuated by the fact that most of the chairs were uncomfortable, and also because a large number of hostesses had been assembled on board for a dance, and the show would be cutting into the terping time.

Abe Schiller, entertainment director of the Flamingo Hotel, Las Vegas, apparently believes that one good turn deserves another. Schiller agreed to let Gene Nelson go four days before expiration of his contract so that he could open at the Warner Theatre, N. In return for that favor, Schiller has been lettering disk jocks, and newspapers to do everything possibly for Martin, and extending the hospitality of the Flamingo to recipients of his missives.

Fate of Cleve. Pettibone, 4th Raided, Up in Air

Columbus, April 1.

Future of the Pettibone Club, plush Geauga County nitery and gambling spot in the Greater Cleveland area, is again in doubt. The spot was closed by Gov. Frank J. Lausche's raiders in June, 1950, and the state fire marshal's order to raze the establishment has since been the subject of court tests. Most recent decision came last week (24) when the fire marshal's order was reversed in Franklin County Common Pleas Court at Columbus by Judge Joseph M. Clifford. The fire marshal's office has not yet decided whether to appeal.

Closing of the Pettibone marked the fourth and last raid on gambling spots singled out by Governor Lausche. The Mounds Club in Lake County was closed July 9, 1949; the Jungle Inn, Aug. 12, 1949; and the Colony Club in Lawrence County, Dec. 20, 1949.

Liberace, pianist, has been signed for the Emerald Room of the Shamrock Hotel, Houston, June 10.

'Flattop Follies' Atmosphere

balloons and has a pleasing line of gab, started the proceedings. Aside from the interruptions that broke up her turn, she held the gobs nicely. She makes some fancy formations on the balloons and hits it off with an okay reception.

The Fontaines, comprising two boys and a girl, couldn't show their best terp steps on the floor on which they were working, but their acro work went over exceedingly well. They have some picturesque and difficult tricks that win mid-term applause and they look like the type of turn that can meet visual requirements in all situations.

Chester Dolphin, who works as emcee, is a vet juggler who has integraded a line of chatter with his manipulations. Dolphin's lines aren't for the east side trade, but they have sufficient laugh content to hit the maritime tastes. His juggling is good and his emceeing gives the acts proper buildup.

The magic by Kismet is standard for the course. The tricks and gab are okay and hit the mark. However, there could be some pruning so that the stint would have greater punch. He works with members of the audience for additional laughs.

Roy Smeck, who has worked most USO-Camp Shows routes, shows a fine line of string instruments. He works out on the banjo, uke and guitar for trick visual and musical effects. It's another item that the sailors liked.

Accordionist Lola Jay, backed by sax, drummer and piano, does an occasional song acceptably and a good job at showbacking.

Unit is so constituted that it can be split up for duty in hospital wards. Overall design of this layout is good. A job of editing is needed to put it on a par with some of the better layouts masterminded by Abe Lastfogel, Jim Sauter and Lawrence Phillips.

Cole Circus Programs TV Acts for Chi Sure; Road Tour Cancelled

Chicago, April 1.

Cole Bros. Circus, which will not tour this year as a unit, is making a special pitch in the act department, buying several because of their TV popularity. While most of the 52 acts, largest number the circus has had, have not appeared on video due to production problems, there are a great many that have and the Arthur Wirtz-controlled aggregation is putting special emphasis on those.

There will be no headliner on the bill which opens April 18 at the Chicago Stadium and runs through May 4. Circus decided not to try a tour as railroad expenses were too high and has desposed of all rail cars except one, converting to 12 trailer trucks.

After the Chi run, management will lease equipment and animals to fair and circus groups. Sam Levy, of Barnes-Carruthers, again has set the talent which will feature Unis, Elly Ardelty, Baudy's Greyhounds & Monkeys, Professor Keller's Cats, Natal, and 12 working elephants. Bill Burke produces.

Most Equipment Sold

Peru, Ind., April 1.

The Cole Bros. Circus, once billed as "the world's second largest," has dwindled to little more than a sideshow of horses, ponies and elephants, and a spokesman in Chicago said the show will not go on tour this year. Last year the road tour was discontinued for the first time since it was organized in 1934 at Rochester, Ind., by Zack Terrell and Jess Adkins.

Most of its major equipment is sold or up for sale. The circus weathered bad business, frequent changes of ownership, bankruptcy, and a $150,000 fire in 1940 that destroyed nearly 150 of its animals. At times it employed up to 700 persons, featuring Clyde Beatty, Terrell Jacobs, Ken Maynard, and William (Hopalong Cassidy) Boyd.

Boyd, Arthur Wirtz, and James D. Norris, an associate of Wirtz, bought the show in 1950 as it faced a new set of bankruptcy proceedings in Indianapolis Federal Court. Winter quarters were moved here with several thousand dollars spent on the new quarters, much of it for a new elephant barn.

William B. Horstman, Chicago, vice president, said the show sold its 29-car train and was substituting motor trucks. Company plans to accept advance engagements rather than gamble on tours, he said. Most of the show's parade menagerie has been sold, and only performing animals were retained. The animals will be billed under the Cole Bros. title at an annual spring show at the Chicago Stadium, April 18 to May 4.

Covent Garden Ups Prices

London, April 1.

Because of rise in production costs, Covent Garden Opera House has upped admission prices for most parts of the theatre. Increases range from 7c. to 20c.

Orchestra seats will now have a top price of $2.70 as against $2.50. Grand tier seats jumped from $2.80 to $3.00. Increased admission prices will add approximately $280 to the gross capacity of the house.

Laine Pays 60G To Ex-Managers

Hollywood, April 1.

Frankie Laine, who recently dismissed his managers, has settled with them for $60,000, representing their potential revenue for the pact's remaining 30 months. In addition, he'll pay disbursements and general bookkeeping items accrued in the past.

Under their deal with Laine, Sam Lutz, Dick Gabbe and Seymour Heller were receiving 12½% of his gross earnings. The trio's attorney Max Fink, commented after the settlement, "we're satisfied, although we think the amount is less than would have been earned in that period."

Singer, booked by General Artists Corp., is witnout a manager at present.

H'wood Savoy Now Troc In Steinman Takeover; Eckstine as Teeoffer

Hollywood, April 1.

Harry Steinman, husband of singer Fran Warren, and Bernie Ebbins, brother of personal manager Milt Ebbins, are taking over the Sunset Strip eatery now known as Savoy and will reopen it May 8 as an intimate nitery called Trocadero, with Billy Eckstine as initial attraction. Eckstine will play the spot almost three weeks before heading east for his N. Y. Copa stand.

Steinman plans no dancing policy, with Dave Barbour combo furnishing show music, and entertainment will be along the lines of the N. Y. Blue Angel. Name singer policy is being set, with Miss Warren probably playing there later.

Duo took over the spot last weekend and shuttered it for refurbishing. They are paying off the Phil Ohman band which had been playing there. Nola Hahn, longtime local club and restaurant operator, who'd been running Savoy, is not in the Trocadero setup.

Pitt Singer Pacted For Featured Coast TV Spot

Pittsburgh, April 1.

Johnny Kirby, local radio-TV singer, has pulled stakes for Hollywood, where he's been signed as featured singer on Al Jarvis' two-hour daily TV program over KECA-TV. Kirby landed the job recently while vacationing on the Coast. He heard Jarvis was looking for a new vocalist, made an audition and was promptly tagged.

Last year, Kirby took a trip to the Coast and that time landed the juve lead in the Paula Stone-Michael Sloan musical, "Little Boy Blue." What that flopped, he returned to Pittsburgh and for the past several months has been under contract to Duquesne Brewing Co. as singer on its Slim Bryant programs on both AM over KDKA and TV over WDTV. Kirby came back from the Coast to do his last Bryant "Dude Ranch" TV'er last Wednesday night (26), on which Rosemary Clooney guest-starred, and returned to Hollywood immediately after. He was due to join Jarvis yesterday (Mon.).

Stepin's Texas 2

Stepin Fetchit has been booked for Don Albert's Keyhole here, April 16-17, in line with new policy of "special attractions."

Ernie Fields' orch has opened at the spot with Frank James, one-legged dancer.

considerable discussion with top CBS and American Tobacco brass, to do whatever was desired by the tobacco firm's prexy, Paul Hahn. And Hahn, it's understood, gave the nod to AM, on the assumption that video does not yet offer the same mass circulation coverage required by a product seeking mass consumption as that offered by radio. Whether the budget of Benny's show will remain at $30,000 per week hasn't been divulged, but it's believed that the comic will receive the same payment next season, under his Amusement Enterprises deal with CBS and Luckies.

Luckies Needs Radio

On the basis that the manufacturer of a mass consumer product in a highly competitive market still needs radio to hit the requisite mass audience, it's pointed out, Luckies was swayed by the fact that Benny's radio show has been at or near the top of most rating surveys all season. If the comic abandoned radio to concentrate on TV, Luckies would be left with virtually no radio representation, since its "Hit Parade" and Kenneth Banghart news show, both aired on NBC, hit nowhere near his rating. That's the factor which is expected to influence other top-spending AM advertisers who are also considering dumping some of their costlier packages.

Whether the other sponsors in CBS' potent Sunday night lineup will now swing immediately into the renewal field remains to be seen. It's been generally conceded, though, that the top-rated Benny show anchored the rest of the evening, and thus his decision would pull the rest into line. Others in the Sunday night lineup are "My Friend Irma" at 6, which has already been pacted for next season by Cavalier cigarets; Colgate's "Our Miss Brooks"; Rexall's "Amos 'n' Andy"; Coca-Cola's Bergen-McCarthy show, and Philip Morris' "Playhouse on Broadway.

Of these, Edgar Bergen is considered most up in the air at this time, since he has not signed for next season yet and both NBC and CBS are pitching for him. Benny's TV shows next season, incidentally, will continue to be aired Sunday nights at 7:30, in the time held the other three weeks each month by Luckies' "This Is Show Business."

Benny Dropping Harris

Hollywood, April 1.

Jack Benny is reported dropping Phil Harris from his radio show at close of this season, after 15-year association, with Bob Crosby the likely replacement. Understood Benny favored Crosby since latter appeared on his telecast, which Benny considers his best yet.

Relations between Benny and Harris became strained when the latter refused to guest with the comedian on his teleshow.

Yank Acts

her because the house wanted to promote one of its own babes.

That same actress, now due to open in another show, has a strange feeling that the man in charge of rehearsals is doing all he can to cut her material to such an extent that she will hardly be able to make any impact on the audience.

Another case in point is that of an American dance act, originally booked into another spot at about half its U. S. salary with the idea of doubling elsewhere.

When a chance came for that act to get such work in a big show, which it is currently stealing, and where it had been promised adequate billing and publicity, it found itself compelled to agree to pay the management a kickback amounting to 25% of its salary there to be permitted to double in the big show, and unable to obtain from latter the right kind of publicity and billing. The act, not hep to French practices and chary to resort to a lawyer to get the matter straightened out, since the agent did not insert the necessary provisos in the contracts, is now unable to protect itself, and the agent fears that pressing the matter might irk a couple of his local big buyers.

There are plenty cases when operators would find honesty pays if they were sure that some big organization, with plenty of coin to back its claims, and able to enlist the right kind of legal talent to insist on enforcing them, could be resorted to by visiting U. S. talent currently not operating as a unit and consequently weak.

utilize various scripters. Sharpe will also produce the "Robert Cummings Show," in which Cummings will portray a real-estate agent whose efforts to solve other people's problems result in amusing consequences. This series will be directed by Fred Guiol and scripted by Mitchell Lindeman, with Julie Bishop cast as Cummings' vis-a-vis.

Fourth series will be "Terry and the Pirates," produced by Fairbanks' Dougfair, directed by Richard Irving and scripted by John and Gwen Bagni. Cast includes John Baer, Mari Blanchard, Gloria Saunders, William Tracy and Jack Kruschen. Based on the comic strip, this series will be grooved for an adult, rather than a kid audience. Stal.

New Acts

ALBERT DEKKER
Readings
20 Mins.
Village Vanguard, N. Y.

Albert Dekker, of legit and films, is continuing the trend in nitery readings started here recently by John Carradine. And, incidentally, it's a revival of an old Village Vanguard tradition. This room at one time was an important centre of Greenwich Village culture inasmuch as poets and literateurs read their output here.

Dekker's voice has the resonance to fill large auditoria. In this situation he shows a reverence for Edgar Allen Poe, starting off by telling something of the tragic life of the poet-author. He provides some further insight by reading one of Poe's letters to a friend in which he told of the tragic death of his wife.

Dekker does 20 minutes in all, impressing with an edited version of "Tell-Tale Heart," which builds suspense and dramatic impact. In the poetry department, he reads "Annabelle Lee" and "Bells" as the major works. He stresses the dramatic side of these works too much as it affects the essential lyric content of the poems.

The success of two declaimers in a row at this spot indicates that there's something to this reading racket. The literary life is again being "discovered after all these years. And it has its possibilities. Just as the art houses are one of the more profitable aspects of the film exhibition business. Vanguard boniface Max Gordon may have set in motion forces, which may bring about a cafe version of the sureseater. It may be an American version of the political cabinet in Europe. Jose.

DENNIS & MAXINE
Dance
12 Mins.
Prince George Hotel, Toronto

Dennis & Maxine, pair of Canadian kids, have been in revues, plus the U. S. nightclub routes, but are now breaking in a new routine strong on technique, comedy, youth and polish. Glide opening in waltz time is standard but the one-arm lifts and centrifugal spins scored begoff when caught.

With Maxine stacked in the proper places, youngsters also display plenty of versatility, particularly in their bouncy Castle Walk, the male's softshoe waltz-tap to "Tea for Two" in the Pat Rooney style while his partner is making a costume change, their brisk and vigorous Charleston, and a wow finish in which the diminutive brunet perches on her partner's shoulders for stilt-walking effects.

Pair have looks and youthful enthusiasm, plus flash wardrobing, and are okay for any entertainment medium. McStay.

BIBI JOHNS
Songs
10 Mins.
Blue Angel, N. Y.

Bibi Johns is a pretty, wholesome-looking little blonde whose main shortcoming at this stage is an apparent lack of experience. Her soprano voice is pleasant, but she could get much more out of the lyrics; that factor is particularly noticeable when she does "Love." There is a lot of sex to be gotten out of the "Love" lyrics, but Miss Johns, instead, gives it a little-girl connotation.

Miss Johns does numbers in English, her native Swedish and in French. Surprisingly enough at show caught, she showed more facility with the latter, her finale, than the others, but that may have been because she was warmed up by then after an initial nervousness. Kahn.

MITCHELL GREGG
Songs
15 Mins.
One Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

Mitchell Gregg is a virile-looking singer with powerful pipes and expressive phrasing which should make him a good bet for musicomedy, vaude and vaudeo, as well as niteries, once he gets more experience. He did considerable TV and nitery work on the Coast prior to returning to New York last year for a role in the revival of the Kern-Hammerstein "Music in the Air."

Gregg has a wide tenor range that gets full dramatic play here in a neatly-varied selection of standards and pop oldies. Opens with "Go On and Sing, My Heart" and then hits paydirt with "I'll Be Seeing You," which he milks for romantic expression. His "You're Breaking My Heart," in Italian, gets neat treatment but the tune itself has become hackneyed and so misses fire. Closer is "One for the Road," which again spotlights his dramatic ability with a song. Stal.

GLORIA WARNER
Songs
10 Mins.
Village Vanguard, N. Y.

Gloria Warner, until recently a schoolteacher in Florida, is a Walter Winchell discovery of last season who has just gotten around to her N. Y. nitery bow. Miss Warner indicates that she can make good on the commercial cafe circuit.

This room, is not a fitting test of her true potential inasmuch as the Vanguard draws an "intellectual" clientele and Miss Warner's routining is designed for the commercial spots. She's got a good voice, is personable, and has good projection, though lacking in warmth. Her talk is charming and there is a nice quality to her singing. She's well coiffed and garbed.

Miss Warner needs a few more dates before she'll be eligible for work in other media. As it is, she can hold down a spot nicely on the intime circuit. Jose.

OSCAR BRAND
With Phil Raiguel
Songs
15 Mins
Village Vanguard, N. Y.

Oscar Brand is known around the offbeat entertainment centres and has appeared on N. Y. radio stations. He impresses as a capable balladeer, but needs seasoning.

Brand has some good material and has the feel of what to do with it, but there's a variance between conception and execution. For this occasion, he does some lighter works with a comedy vein running through. He's able to get his theme across, but deliveries lack the depth and maturity of some predecessors who have worked this spot, namely Richard Dyer-Bennett, Harry Belafonte and Josh White. Brand, however, displays some personable traits that experience will develop. He's assisted by Phil Raiguel, who accompanies him vocally and with the guitar, banjo and violin. Jose.

TINA DIXON
Songs
6 Mins.
Apollo, N. Y.

Portly Tina Dixon is a Negro songstress whose repertoire leans mainly toward blues. Her voice doesn't match the quality of some of her contemporaries. However, what she lacks vocalistically she makes up in salesmanship.

In warbling such standards as "Jelly Roll Blues," Miss Dixon lingers on the lyrics in an interesting way. A low-cut gown displays her visual assets to advantage. But whether these compliment or detract from each number depends upon the individual patron's reaction. She's okay for theatres and cafes in the Harlem idiom. Gilb.

ANTON & ANITA Dance
8 Mins.
Casino, Toronto

Hungarian team of Anton & Anita look set for the cafe and video field. Their spins and lifts are startlingly different, with plenty of that no-hands technique in fullstage whirls, with girl horizontal across her partner's shoulders.

Adagio work, unrelieved by any comedy, packs plenty of thrilling punch climax in the various routines, with pair also potent on European deportment and offbeat dance styling based on speed and obvious danger. McStay.

HARMONICAIRES (2)
Harmonica
10 Mins.
Blue Angel, N. Y.

The Harmonicaires, tuxedoed, personable two-man harmonica team, go through the standard instrumentalizing, during which they interpolate some light comedy. Their payoff is the satire on the Spike Jones musicalizing. In the latter they bring out a set of gadget instruments which they blow for laughs, and it's a good bow-off bit.

They're okay for the visual media, on the lower half, though they could use some more special material. Kahn.

GAIL MEREDITH
Songs
20 Mins.
Ritz Carlton, Montreal

Gail Meredith, Canadian-born chirper, returns to Canada after a song stint in the U. S. to make her first Montreal appearance as an intimery songstress at the Ritz Cafe. Of medium height, blonde and with an okay wardrobe, Miss Meredith essays plenty of show savvy to make her a cinch on the boite circuit.

Leaning more to the special-material type of number, Miss

Jimmy Durante with Eddie Jackson, Jack Roth, Jules Buffano, Candy Candido; Rosette Shaw, Mayo Bros. (2), Elaine Dunn, Helen Carr, Harry Snow, Copa Girls (8), Michael Durso and Frank Marti orchs; songs, Joan Edwards & Lyn Duddy; $3.50-$5 minimum.

Jimmy Durante is in for a quickie at the Podell-Entratter underground mint and the place is vibrating. This is no act; this is a full-panoplied invasion with large overtones of the charge of the light brigade, and maybe even Hannibal's promenade over the Alps.

Entry of the Cyranose some 30 minutes after the show proper teed off post-midnight Thursday (27) was signal for a vociferous ovation by an SRO house. The comic acknowledged by personalized greeting of ringsiders and then went into his long "Gotta Start Each Day With a Song" device that has served him so smashingly in all media. If there was a suggestion of his tour de mayhem being culled from his TV stints, it didn't seem to matter. These were round hats, three-dimensioned pianos and solid, touchable instruments. The interrupted songs, the timely placed gags, the shenanigans with the tooters and besweatered Copa cuties, including a wrestling set-to with the latter, drew salvo after salvo. Drummer Jack Roth, long a Durante stalwart, and pianist Jules Buffano contributed telling assists.

The meow bit with Candy Candido hit the laffmeter jackpot and then Eddie Jackson tied together the last half of the 50-minute Durante excursion with tandem items. It was one of those click nights when the Jackson cakewalk was good for a begoff—that and his song pairings in jumping jack movement. In the final minutes, there was nothing that could top the troupe's "Umbriago" reprise with the musicrew marching off and on as cued by the Schnozzola's mock commands. This was perhaps one of Durante's greatest entertainments, played against a minimum of "new" material. However, a pat hand is still the one to beat.

The precede to Durante was an extremely pleasant display. The Mayo Bros. (2) showed over the mark taps highlighting slides and splits done on a small platform. Followup comedy stuff was weak, but they got back in stride with some more leg fillips that put them ahead. Production numbers of the Copa Girls and singers Helen Carr and Harry Snow pinpointed the graceful terp-chirp repertoire of shapely Elaine Dunn. Tunes written by Joan Edwards & Lyn Duddy helped liven the proceedings, especially lyric-wise. Rosette Shaw is good when bouncing out such numbers as "You're the Top" and "Old Black Magic," but can omit the dramatic, overstylized cleffings without hurting her future in the thrushing sweepstakes. Still, her serious stuff represents a laudable try. Trau.

Riverside Hotel, Reno

Reno, March 26.

Xavier Cugat, Abbe Lane, Eddie Garson, Dulcina, The Barrancos, Diablito, Senor Wong, Orch (12), Starlets (12); no cover or minimum.

This show has distinction of being the first to fill the house nightly since the record snow-pack stopped traffic from entering Reno this winter.

From Cugat's opening gun, even including the second Monday night show which has a rep in all local spots of resembling a morgue, the show has been capacity. George Moro's Riverside Starlets turn out with two of their best routines yet. They open show with a fast and involved dance to "Cumana."

Cugat's teeoff number, "Begin the Beguine," has all the trimmings of flute, fiddle, and special lighting and is nicely staged and makes good listening. Band then revs up on "Mombo No. 5," a frantic thing that turns Dulcina loose. Dulcina and Diablito flank the band and are phenom in speed and grace.

Eddie Garson is a ventriloquist who comes on with Congo drum, chants a moment, and out springs his Chico Chico. Chatter is cute and Garson is flawless in his ventro. The conversation is sometimes so fast it appears the voices are overlapping. When Garson carries on a four-way conversation with Chico Chico, his sister Chiquita, a telephone operator, and another gent on the phone, talent is really shown. Illusion is perfect and draws top returns. Act bows off with a Latino duet.

Dulcina comes back for a fast song and prance through 'Oye Negra." El Gringo is the tambourine virtuoso who looks spectacular in his violent spanking of the instrument—jumping, and throwing—and goes over with better than average success.

Senor Wong is new to the show—a Chinese with a Latin influence. Material is really corny but the effect of this odd mixture of Orient and Latin makes for plenty of laughs.

The Barrancos, mombo team, sell flash and precision in first minute on floor, and they stay through two long and accelerated numbers. They make a great impression.

Abbe Lane looks delicious in strapless stuff. All gowns fit snug and show off her beauty. Tanned and in a soft light, she opens with "Acapulco Polka." Voice is steady and pleasant. Her best is "The River Seine" done in French and English. For a Latin medley, she comes to life and takes off briefly on a little rhumba. Sells in intimate and friendly manner.

Show wraps up with another click routine by Starlets, in stunning costumes, who tango with complicated interweaving. Closing is cleverly done as Cugat plays theme, cast comes aboard and dances to it, and light faded down to spot which finally twinkles out on maestro's fiddle and hands.

Whole show is fast moving and interesting. It's the first good business since winter set in. Mark.

Casablanca, Miami B'ch

Miami Beach, March 30.

Lenny Kent, Beth Hunter, San Kanez Orch; $2.50 minimum.

Playing his fifth date within a year in this area, Lenny Kent has shifted his wares to the Morocco Room of this big North Beach hotel from what was his regular stand, the Sans Souci Blue Sails Room. From biz over the weekend, he looks to pack them in as heavily as during his runs downtown.

It's a granted fact hereabouts that Kent is one of the better draws—for his dough—around, given the right room and setup. Where at the Sans Souci he played one show nightly, in this 400-seater he is setting up two shows, dinner and supper. Essays the same routinings he's projected before and garners the same yocks, with aid of new twists in his now standard Texan routine, plenty cleaned up and much more effective.

Emcees the proceedings, coming on with fast line of patter aimed at risibilities of the familiars in the room and, on general topics, for the warmup. In own slot, he builds to his Texan routine with takeoff on Jack Cole after ad libs with ringsiders, selecting femme guests for the fun. Tops with his takeoff on Billy Daniels, then his standard double-talk resume of the show for latecomers for a wrapup.

Beth Hunter (worked here last season in "Borscht Capades" and at Copa City) is a much improved thrush with a high ranging and well versed set of pipes. Only fault is continued top-note punching where more shading on lyric interps could add to impact. Withal, she belts them with mixture of standards which include a solid "My Man" with dedication to late Fannie Brice; a Negro spiritual, "Lucky Ol' Sun," and for the topper, her Yiddish lieder done in typical cantorial style. She's gowned and coiffed in smarter manner than last season. A potent bet for video and cafes once she gets that shading into her arrangements.

San Kanez orch okay on the backings. Lary.

Bagatelle, London

London, March 25.

Jack & Eddie Eden, Edmundo Ros Rhumba Orch, Arnold Bailey Swingtet; $5 minimum.

The current engagement of Jack & Eddie Eden can only be regarded as a stopgap for this de luxe Mayfair cafe. Offering is below standard in quality and has little value as a drawing card. This was reflected on opening night when biz was not up to average.

Although the audience was more restrained than usual, the Edens did little to raise their spirits. The duo—one at the piano and the other standing alongside—specialize in original material, but a few of their numbers have topical allusions which are out of date. The humor is a minus quantity and an attempt to emulate the Ink Spots registers only moderately.

If the Edens are hoping for a click in their forthcoming American tour, they must launch a quick rewrite job on their lyrics. They are not made of the stuff to command public favor.

The two resident orchs, Edmundo Ros and Arnold Bailey, provide the terping music in fine style. Myro.

Mocambo, H'wood

Hollywood, March 25.

Dick Contino, Eddie Oliver Orch (6); $1.50, $2 minimum.

Current stand marks a return to show biz for Dick Contino, but it's a short-lived one; he's awaiting a draft call that will put him in service probably within the next fortnight. The Mocambo visit, however, should do much for Contino's morale and convince doubters as to his future prospects. Opening night turnout was hefty and friendly, paced by a Danny Thomas introduction.

Stint is Contino's first since his draft law difficulties last year but the layoff actually seems to have improved his stuff. He's never been better and the fingerwork that lifts his turn above the realm of ordinary accordionistics has never been more agile. For this Sunset Strip spot, he's offering a bit of singing as well as squeezebox serenading and it's worked in to good effect. Crowd returned him peak plaudits for every offering, and though this isn't normal entertainment fare for this room, business should be pleasant.

Excellent backing of Eddie Oliver's musicrew counterpoints Contino's stuff and the band also does its usual good job on dance chores. Kap.

Mount Royal, Mont'l

Montreal, March 26.

Pierre Cartier, Jo Sullivan, Max Chamitov Orch (8) with Norma Hutton, Dick Marshal Trio; $1.50 cover.

In their last show before they shutter for Holy Week (starting April 7) the Normandie Room of the Mount Royal Hotel introduces a new entry to the local cafe belt, Jo Sullivan, and brings back Pierre Cartier for his fourth stand in town.

Combination of Cartier's glib magic and Miss Sullivan's healthy piping is solid hotel fare and surefire in this room, which is patronized for the most part by the transient house guests, the more sedate tourists and the expense-account crowd.

Miss Sullivan takes the opening slot and the tiny chirper comes through with a group that is varied but at times a bit out of her range despite a voice of better than average quality. An aria from "Romeo and Juliet" draws a nifty reception; likewise her interp of "Over the Rainbow," but a special-material item went overboard and gal had a time trying to get back to the crowd when caught.

Cartier, as usual, exhibits the old savvy that established him solidly in previous spots around town. He reprises the sword and card trick, manipulating his egg-into-the-glass routine easily and lards all stanzas with his fast patter accented effectively for okay yocks.

The Chamitov band backs entire revue with style and Nick Marshall cuts the interlude music handily. Newt.

Flamingo, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 20.

Gene Nelson, Wayne Sherwood, Pantomaniacs (2), Flamingo Lovelies (8), Matty Malneck Orch (10); no cover or minimum.

Gene Nelson's arrival via pix into nitery terps has been accomplished through vaude preeming of his act. Inserted between theatre dates in this Flamingo fortnight which promises to lure heavy traffic.

Nelson has assembled his choreos into a class display good for top rooms anywhere. Youthful appearance, warm manner of gab delivery, plus knowledge of terp craft melt frost present, if any. "Lullaby of Broadway" warbled and then lightly legged, gets him underway. Clever idea of solving breathers between rounds is lacing on of several types of dancing shoes for each turn. Exhibits some extraordinary leaping and legmania when he zooms to top of a spinet for smash close of "Zing Went the Strings of My Heart." Unusual brief session has him dancing with spotlight beam to "Laura." Pace changer is "Wine, Women and Song," sung first and then frisked neatly. A gin mill scene with terps to "St. Louis Blues" is tops in his packet of well-wrought routines.

Fine technique in leaps, butterflics, and sustaining of mood lifts this one into fine art category. Ad lib sesh with "Tea for Two" is by way of begoff and receives peak encomiums after Nelson rounds stage whipping himself into many spot butterflies.

Wayne Sherwood, another nitery tyro, clicks with song session demonstrating clear, baritone pipes. Although he is presented to disadvantage by having to gab as emcee forcing a self-intro, young warbler surmounts to finish way ahead. Puts every ounce of feeling into each number, coupling "What Is This Thing Called Love" and "All the Things You Are." Departs from ballads to forge dramatic "Toreador Song," and legit "Serenade" from 'Student Prince."

Followup tosses him among Flamingo Lovelies in special Sam Coslow tune, "Look Younger, Love Longer." Vehicle is more for the femmes who exercise some calisthenics, mutter doggerels as Sherwood knits idea through production chant. With background of Lou Holtz' "Merry-Go-Round," plus this nitery date, Sherwood can hit theatres, TV, etc., for all-around experience. He possesses above-par voice and ability to deliver.

Pantomaniacs are pair of newcomers to footlights saddled with the almost passe record act. Novelty of such mimicry has worn off, making for extra hard work to get over. One lad muggs Frankie Laine's "Jezebel" to distaffer ringside for fair returns, and later singles a Judy Canova in costume while plainting "I Ain't Got Nobody." Best laughs emanate from workout of "Go to Sleep," using man and wife hijinks.

Village Vanguard, N. Y.

Albert Dekker, Gloria Warner, Oscar Brand with Phil Raiguel; Clarence Williams Trio; $3.50 minimum.

This Max Gordon operation should draw from a comparatively wide audience. The three performers on this bill, each making local nitery debut, are sufficiently diversified to draw from many taste categories.

Topper is Albert Dekker, the actor who does readings from Edgar Allen Poe, with staunch support from Gloria Warner, the ex-schoolmarm who was the subject of Winchell columnar adulation for a time, and balladeer Oscar Brand, w.k. to many through radio and dates off the commercial trails. All are reviewed under New Acts.

This bill is the second to headline a reader, John Carradine having just completed a run here. It may reach trend proportions. After all it's a gimmick to utilize some of the world's greatest writing, and it's a method of showing that the human voice is a highly expressive instrument. Dekker communicates a mood that starts with his own reverence for Poe and then delves into his interpretations of various works of this master. Dekker not only holds the crowd but hits a jackpot mitting.

Miss Warner indicates that she'll work out well on the commercial nitery stands and Oscar Brand shows a potential for a limited number of cafe situations.

The Clarence Williams Trio showbacks and provides the dansapation. Jose.

Darbury Room, Boston

Boston, March 28.

Paul Clement Trio, Harrington-Paull Trio.

By an odd quirk in booking, the popular Darbury Room is currently showcasing two local musical groups, the Paul Clement Trio and the Harrington-Paull Trio, both with the same instrumentation, piano, bass and vibes. It's seldom that a spot will book in two similar groups, but it appears to click okay here, for the combos have diversified repertoires which do not overlap and each has a distinctive style.

The Clement Trio, comprised of leader-bassist Clement, pianist Leo De Carlo and vibraharpist Lou Magnano, has been together for more than five years and during that time boys have dreamed up an assortment of musical gimmicks suitable for intime rooms. Guys handle pops and standards in slick fashion, vocalize singly or as a group, honor customers' requests and in general dish out a neat brand of rhythms and music. Magnano is particularly solid on the vibes and occasionally gives out with an uninhibited sesh of pounding reminiscent of Lionel Hampton.

The Harrington-Paull Trio, organized a couple of years ago, is a disciplined unit which showcases trio vocalizing. The instrumental arrangements, while subdued, lean slightly towards the bop department. Boys vocalize such standards as "Basin St.," "When You're Smiling" and insert an instrumental "Symphony Sid" for change of pace. Lineup consists of bassist Steve Harrington, former vocalist with Baron Hugo orch, and the Paull Brothers—George on the 88 and Ralph on vibes and drums.

Both groups score nicely with patrons. Elie.

La Vie en Rose, N. Y.

(FOLLOWUP)

This Monte Proser hospice is in the midst of one of the stronger comebacks to have been registered on the east side this season. Since the advent of Dorothy Dandridge this spot has been doing an SRO trade. Surrounding show gets an occasional refurbishing, but the Negro songstress remains the focal point of the display.

Newcomer on this occasion is Jan Arden, a younger brother of singer Toni Arden, who impresses with a set of well-developed pipes. Arden is growing as a singer and stylist. His voice is essentially warm, but his concentration on style causes him to lose some of the color. Nevertheless, the net effect is more than enough to meet this intimerie's requirements. Tunes include a good assortment of ballads and rhythm. All his selections are from the ranks of standards, which in his case seems to be good overall strategy. He gets prolonged mittings at the end of his turn.

Miss Dandridge, with Phil Moore Trio backing continues to impress with a sexy delivery and gowns and chassis to match. With each succeeding performance, she seems to learn more about the room. She's mastered this cafe to the point where she can project virtually every gesture and npte to maximum impact.

Other holdover is Robert Clary, the petit piper from Paris. Undersized tunester sells his stuff with an exuberance worthy of Mickey Rooney. He has a good sense of impish comedy. There are times when he goes somewhat overboard on pixie mannerisms, but the mob doesn't seem to mind and he too gets a hot palming.

Jan Jones is the added singer who works 2 a.m. show. Jose.

Ciro's, London

London, March 26.

Katherine Dunham with Lenwood Morris, Vanoye Atkins, Lucille Ellis, Wilbert Bradley, Ricardo Avalos, Arthur Bell, Lavinia Hamilton, Leu Camacho, Lucie Guannel, Frances Taylor, La Rosa Estrada, Albert Laguerre, Rosalie King, Miriam Burton, Milton Grayson, Victor M'Unn, Gordon Simpson. Choreography and direction, Katherine Dunham; costumes, John Pratt; musical direction, Bernardo Noriega; Ronnie O'Dell Orch, Ramon Lopez Rhuma Band; $6.50 minimum.

Nitery operators have been facing a critical period during the past few weeks, particularly with the decline in society patronage as a result of Court mourning. Managements have been undecided on the best method to be adopted to stem the depression. Mostly, there has been a tendency towards caution, and many of the cabaret attractions during the past few weeks have had all the appearance of a stopgap approach.

Now, in the midst of this period of uncertainty, Ciro's has come through with an expensive name. The Katherine Dunham troupe has been booked for four weeks on guarantee and percentage. If opening-night business (at upped prices) is a guide, the booking justifies the confidence of Theo, who major domos at this chic West End nitery. Advance reservations insured capacity house and about 200 were turned away.

The elegant room, decorated with palm leaves for the occasion, was filled with show biz personalities who came en masse to partipate in Miss Dunham's first European cabaret date. The company has had a no. 1 reputation since it first played London four or five years ago, and currently is winding a three-month season at the Cambridge Theatre.

For this nitery engagement, half a dozen pop items from the Cambridge show have been selected to provide a contrasting, yet invigorating, entertainment. Inevitably, customers who have seen both shows may complain that their particular favorite item has been omitted, but a sincere attempt has been made to offer a balanced show within the confines of the more limited floor space. For pop consumption the dance routines include the Latin stuff, and for a touch of nostalgia there are snippets from a bunch of early 20th-century tunes followed by terps from the '20s.

Presentation has been given all the staging qualities of a full-scale production. Wardrobe is colorful and varied and one of London's leading lighting experts, Robert Nesbitt, has been called in to insure the pro technical touch so frequently lacking in West End niteries. The musical backgrounding also represents a departure from normal routine with the two house orchs combining with native musicians to provide a vivid, rhythmic—and somewhat noisy—accompaniment. Myro.

One Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

Louise Howard, Mitchell Gregg, Bob Downey & Harold Fonville, Hazel Webster; no cover or minimum.

Louise Howard, one of the perennials at this Manhattan intimerie, is back for her ninth or 10th stand, and she's using almost the same comedy material that she broke in on here. As a result, except for the yocks from her few fans who apparently are amused no matter what she does, her spotlighting at the top of the bill slows the pace. Mitchell Gregg, new male singer, holds down the other solo spot, with regulars Bob Downey & Harold Fonville, at the twin pianos, and Hazel Webster, with her 88'ing interludes, rounding out the lineup.

Just back from a European tour, Miss Howard is as raucous and uninhibited as ever, giving evidence that she could stand up with the best of the belt-'em-out comediennes provided she had the right material. After a mildly funny opening in which she kids Paris, she swings into a takeoff on "Old Soft Shoe" as the groundwork for some satire on oldtime vaude. It's a clever idea but suffers from tired gags.

On the more impertinent side is her rendition of a tune which she claims to have picked up in England, titled "Everybody Wants to Go to Heaven," on which she accomps herself on a uke. It's okay for a pace-changer. She closes with her standard bit on a floozy speakeasy pianist during the Prohibition era. It's still good for some laughs but is weighed down so heavily by antiquated jokes that it never gets rolling. Miss Howard is a talented comedienne, but she should see about some new material, and fast.

Gregg, who pleases with a round of standard tunes, is reviewed under New Acts. Downey, the genial manager of the room, teams with Fonville for some solid pianistics, socking across such things as Richard Rodgers' "King and I" score and "Slaughter on 10th Avenue." Due take turns backing the solo acts. Miss Webster fills in competently on the in-between music. Stal.

Chez Paree, Montreal

Montreal, March 28.

Deep River Boys (5), June & Martin Barrett, Don Dellaire, Boots McKenna Line (7), Palm de Luca Orch (8), Peter Barry combo (5); 85c admission.

Nothing helps biz and gives the Chez Paree a lift like a stint by the Deep River Boys. Just returned from a click tour of the British Isles, the Deeps (with new tenor Carter Wilson) have as solid a songalog as ever.

Riding out with a rollicking "Lucky Old Sun" as an opener, the group maintains a fine tempo from the pops to such clinchers as "September Song" for plenty of palming. Of all the similar outfits who have played this room in past couple of years, this combo has the edge from both the visual and vocal angles. Instead of glomming the mike throughout, they move around the floor and break away from the static presentation of like entertainers with some good visual patterns that sell but never get in the way of general harmonizing.

Terpsters June & Martin Barrett do well in a short session that is mainly tap stuff. The male half of duo tends to predominate with his over-enthusiasm and pacing is in need of overhaul for better effects.

The Boots McKenna girls come to life in preseht show with their best routines to date. Their "Prelude to the Blues," with baritone Don Dellaire setting the mood, picks up more than the usual plaudits. Palm de Luca batons adequate show music and the Peter Barry rhumbaists keep the Latin-inclined customers satisfied. Newt.

Alpine Village, Cleve.

Cleveland, March 27.

Ernestine Mercer, Leonard Kobric, Lalage, Freddie Michael, Tanzarettes (7); Hans Reiss, Dave Ennis Orch (7); $1.50 minimum.

For the last two months Alpine Village has been experimenting with Hawaiian and Chinese package revues which didn't come up to the standards of this theatre-restaurant. It gets back in its stride with Ernestine Mercer sexing up a revue that has everything from real talent to colorful novelties and a punchy closer.

For this, Miss Mercer of the Amazonian curves rates most kudos. Sultry songstress, who clicked at New York's Latin Quarter, bowled over first-nighters with her Dagmar-like charms, surprisingly fine dramatic soprano and smartly routined act.

As a sirenish satirist, this well-stacked chanteuse carries enough tangy individuality to keep blase gadabouts bug-eyed-and-eared. Her impish, excellently voiced "Carmen" number, in a costume that doesn't hide her beautiful underpinnings, immediately breaks down audiences to point of guffaws.

More obvious is her striptease version of "Sweet Mystery of Life," but it has the same air of frothy, knowing mockery she puts into her impressions of Hildegarde and Ethel Merman. Her metier lies more in operatic satires on the order of "Habanera" and "Gypsy Song." Her show-piece, "Love for Sale," is given a tremendously vivid, sexy dramatization. Leonard Kobric is her personal accompanist.

Circus flavor creeps into the Alpine revue when Lalage, formerly of the Ringling big tents, performs nimble nipups and drops on a trapeze. With a nice sense of dramatic timing she does about 60 spectacular giant one-arm swings on a web. Two new banks of floodlights above the hydraulic rising stage are used effectively in this stunt.

Freddie Michael is a disarmingly youthful acro wonder-boy in handstands, lifts and contortionists feats, all handled with easy grace. Boy has to take extra bow after Herman Pirchner, club owner and emcee, explains that Michael was a bedridden victim of polio up to age of 14.

Seven Tanzarettes, a dance line organized here, cut a bright impression although working too hard and nervously on opening night. Their jungle fantasy looks too gaudy in costuming but the comely gals hoof with steaming vitality and smilingly.

Dave Ennis' orch, a veteran group in briskly cueing shows, gets together with dancers in one of those bucolic audience-participation numbers that still go over with visiting firemen. It segues into Ennis' "lead-a-band" switcheroo that is also so popular he couldn't drop it if he wanted to. Pullen.

Ruby Foo's, Montreal

Montreal, March 26.

Lucille & Eddie Roberts, Len Berger, Fred Toldy, Joska de Barbary; no cover or minimum.

The Starlight Room at Ruby Foo's is an ideal layout for the thought-transmission gimmicks of Lucille & Eddie Roberts, and duo sell act as strongly as before despite frequent appearances in this town. Leading off with a few card and magico items as a warmup, team segue into their mental moments with male touring the room as femme stands on the small stage and, blindfolded, identifies any object given to him; calls out patron names, tells where they're from, and generally baffles everyone.

Combo have socko showmanship at all times; patter by the guy is brief and salted with an occasional gag to keep interest going throughout the room—no mean chore in this rather awkward layout plus competition from the bar.

Between productions, pianist Len Berger and violinist Joska de Barbary team up for some okay interlude music with Fred Toldy spelling Berger for the nostalgic and semi-classical stuff. Newt.

Clover, Portland, Ore.

Portland, Ore., March 26.

Joaquin Garay, Heller & Helene, Herman Jobelman Orch (5); no minimum; $1.20 cover, $1.80 Sat.

Bossmen Ferguson and O'Hara have booked themselves an SRO show this inning despite the unusually heavy traffic of sock name attractions in town this week.

Joaquin Garay is making his Pacific Northwest debut at this ace nitery and smashed over on opening night for more than an hour with his golden pipes, gags, impressions, and polished showmanship. Handsome guy comes on with a song and has the house in his mitt from entry.

He chirps in Spanish, French, Italian, Yiddish, Mexican, and Irish; sprinkles the tunes with original lyrics; and adds plenty of zoom to establish himself as one of the finest all-around entertainers ever to appear in this city. His best bets were "Clancy Lowered The Boom," "Enjoy Yourself" and "Smoke, Smoke, Smoke." He graciously begged off after an hour and 20 minutes.

Heller & Helene open the show with some nifty ballroom stuff. Guy puts the orb-filling gal through some difficult lifts and spins. Better than average team, they show class and skill. Herman Jobelman's boys back deftly and set the tempo for dancing. Feves.

Copa, Pitt

Pittsburgh, March 27.

Will Mastin Trio with Sammy Davis, Jr.; Jackie Kahane, Miriam Sage Dancers (4), Hy Edwards Orch (5); $1.75-$2.50 minimum.

Copa pulled a 10-strike in grabbing the Will Mastin Trio with Sammy Davis, Jr., for the usually weak Lenten season. On the heels of their two TV guest-shot clicks on Eddie Cantor's "Colgate Comedy Hour," only one of which came through here, act's hotter than a pistol. Not only that, but boys deliver in spades. They're giving Lenny Litman's spot a week such as this room hasn't had in a long time.

Of course, young Davis is the sparkplug of the Mastins, which include his uncle, Will Mastin, and his father, Sammy Davis, Sr., and he's probably one of the outstanding talents extant these days. Junior Davis has everything; he's a terrific hoofer, his pipes are top drawer, his comedy timing is practically perfect and his mimicry is tops. Takeoffs aren't just passed out willy-nilly, but they're neatly worked into the routine, and his Mario Lanza, Jimmy Stewart, Jimmy Cagney and Jerry Lewis, especially the latter, are sock. Davis is currently polishing up an impression of Johnnie Ray doing "Cry" that should be great for him.

Mastin and the older Davis do some okay hoofing during the turn and manage to stay nicely in the background without making a show of it while Davis, fils, is doing his stuff. And he does plenty. Crowd here simply refused to take no for an answer even though kid was begging off out of sheer exhaustion.

Jackie Kahane m.c.'s the layout and he's a glib, engaging comic with an easy delivery, an ingratiating manner and a nice gift for the easy throwaway. Material-wise, Kahane's still looking, but even so his stuff has improved over his last few visits to the Copa and so has Kahane himself. He could be right up there in a short time with the proper guidance. Miriam Sage Dancers, a long-running unit here, always deliver. Gals are goodlooking, attractively costumed, expertly trained, and their routines have plenty of zip and class Hy Edwards only has five men on the bandstand, but no act or dancer has yet complained. Cohen.

Torch Club, N. Y.

Ray Bourbon, T. C. Jones, Mickey Mercer, Juan Luis & Lenora; $3.50 minimum.

This new east side drinking spot, on the site of the defunct Jack Eigen club, is dipping into dangerous waters for its pulling power. The lavender-scented policy might work as a penny-catcher, once word gets around the soprano-hipped circles that new camping grounds have been established. On opening night (28) at least, the joint was loaded with ambiguous characters of both sexes.

The talent lineup is similarly not easily identified, but the entertainment results can be categorically defined as negative. Ray Bourbon, the show's topliner, sets the tone with his monologs and female characterizations. This sort of thing can be done with some taste and finesse, but Bourbon misses. His routine tires after 20 minutes, but the fans adored him.

T. C. Jones, another female impersonator, has a more legitimate turn in better taste, but he only has fair capabilities. Jones does takeoffs on Katharine Hepburn, Bette Davis and Edith Piaf in suitable coifs. However, he drags out each impression way beyond what they're worth and his carbons only have superficial accuracy.

Juan Luis & Lenora, in the opening spot, are a standard Latin hoofing team unfortunately limited by the small size of this room's floor. Their flamenco-styled terping is neatly handled. Luis, however, should cut down his vocalling stints, particularly that stale "Spanish Boogie Woogie" number.

Mickey Mercer doubles as emcee and vocalist in acceptable style. Mercer's high tenor voice fits the atmosphere and he delivers a brace of standards with moderate impact. Herm.

Mapes Skyroom, Reno

Reno, March 28.

Ben Lessy & Patti Moore, The Honey Bros. (3), Josephine Fontaine, Hal Pruden's Orch (8); no cover or minimum.

This show was unfortunate enough to get in on Reno's first bad winter. Business was off and houses were empty most the time.

Josephine Fontaine opens show and pulls eyes with a well-filled strapless. She sings with a nice huskiness but gives impresh she could do much more. She sells mechanically with gestures and movement almost pat. Of course, show has been playing to half a room most the time, but effort still should be made. Her potential is undoubted.

She does a half-hearted Sophie Tucker and Beatrice Kay—both naturals for her—but again, she seemed to be holding back. Her "Them There Eyes" brings nice returns.

Honey Bros. are a shot in the arm as they charge on for some violent dancing and comedy. Trio does some sensational tossing around of each other, all with tongue in cheek. Efforts leave even the customers breathless. Some clever dialog fits into the acrobatics and dancing.

Ben Lessy & Patti Moore are an energetic combo with all the vaudevillian flash and vivacity. Most of their stuff is singing standards—with their own lyrics—sometimes double entendre but never crude.

Lessy does a piano stint with his accompanist, Martin Denny, playing things like "Chinatown," and even a few bars with his nose on the keyboard. He and Patti Moore then swing off with "Sweet Violets," better than the usual lyrics, and "Wait Til the Sun Shines Nellie." A final bit to "Melancholy Baby" has the Honey Bros. come on stage behind them, in long underwear, engaging in a quiet little sequence of hilarious poses—with no apparent rhyme or reason. Lessy & Moore are on stage about 40 minutes but never lack for a bright moment. Mark.

Washington, London

London, March 27.

"Ballerina On Ice," starring Maj Britt with Bennett, Margaret Ellison, Sheila Trice; choreography, Maj Britt; Al Tabor Orch, Jose Trio; $4 minimum.

Ice cabaret is an innovation for British night spots and its inauguration, with Maj Britt as principal dancer, at the Washington Hotel is an experiment that commands wide interest. A miniature rink, measuring 10 by 10 feet, has been installed in the restaurant and the company includes a trio of girls.

The experiment has a potent novelty value, but the restricted space gives the artists little or no opportunity to demonstrate their prowess on the blades. The grace and glides normally associated with ice shows are necessarily absent, and the repertoire has been adapted to fit the severe limitations of the rink.

Within those limitations, the company puts on a brave show. But that is hardly enough in these highly competitive days. The modified routines do not match the undoubted talents of Miss Britt, and although she was responsible for the choreography, has not been able to do justice to herself. A floor at least twice the size of the one used would be necessary to achieve the anticipated fast and invigorating entertainment.

Of the star's three solos, the most pleasing is her Can-Can rendition, but although she has the floor to herself, the restriction of movement hampers her style. Altogether, seven routines are included in the stint, running just under 30 minutes, but all suffer from the same handicap. Myro.

Continental, Montreal

Montreal, March 26.

Pierre Dudan, The Caribbeans (3), Chris Cross, Leon Lachance, Johnny di Mario Orch (6), Bill Moody Trio; 85c admission.

Paying little heed to the gloomsters who use the Lenten season as an excuse for empty tables, boniface Jack Horn breaks out extra coin to offer one of the best shows seen in the Continental Cafe for sometime.

As current headliner, the management introduces Pierre Dudan to localites and this tall, amiable Frenchman has no trouble selling his songs and spreading his charm around this big, low-ceilinged boite.

Kickoff in this neat showcase goes to the Caribbeans, two guys and a gal, who set patrons in a good mood with polished hoofing. General choreography is a cut above the usual and despite an apparent glut of this type dancing (a la Jack Cole) the Caribbeans are right up there with the best. Most of their sets feature the femme member of troupe and the reason is obvious when the clientele views her physical attributes. She can also terp.

Eddys', K. C.

Kansas City, March 28.

The Honey Dreamers (5), Buster Shaver & Olive, Tony DiPardo Orch (8); $1 cover.

Return of the Honey Dreamers here is more than an ordinary booking, since they had to cancel out last summer in the midst of the July flood. This engagement is a followup to that interruption, and the singing group is making up for what the house missed last summer. Biz is buxom, attesting the worth of the Dreamers' name and TV rep.

The Eddys have set this one up as a two-act affair, with Buster Shaver and his cute little girlfriend in a standard song and dance turn of their own. They lead off with midget Olive warbling with Shaver at the piano, then swing into ballroom terp with acro work and win with rhythmic "Ballin' the Jack." They do their work in accomplished manner, scoring on the novelty appeal of the unusual partnership.

In their 30 minutes, Honey Dreamers (Marian Bye, Patty McGovern, Bob Davis, Lou Anderson and Bob Mitchell) combine their rhythmic vocals with expressive choreography to earmark their work as among the finest of singing ensembles today.

As starters they pick a couple from the current pop list, doing "Please Mr. Sun" in slower ballad fashion, then switching to a bouncy version of "Tiger Rag," both drawing nice mitt. "It's Curtain Time" midway is a montage of Broadway showtunes, "Another Opening, Another Show," "Wonderful Guy," "Whistle a Happy Tune," "Bewitched," "Hostess with the Mostest," "Top Banana," "The Dog Song" and "Guys and Dolls" make up a neat resume of musicals neatly done.

"Chicken Song" fills the novelty bill and "Pretty Eyed Baby" is a rhythmic holdover from previous hit parades, one of their best bits. With Bob Mitchell leading the way, they give a choral effect to "You'll Never Walk Alone." Then switch to an energetic "Shadrach" and close with "Home Town Band" in which Davis and Anderson add to the proceedings with instrumental work. It's classy entertainment and heartily approved by the customers throughout. Quin.

Meredith scores with such items as "How I Got My Start" and "That's All You Were After." Segueing into the pop field, she creates only a so-so impression with a threadbare Galypso, "Never Too Tired," which has a tendency to be labored for obvious yocks, and a torchy "St. Louis Blues," which could stand a more sophisticated interpretation in this sort of room.

Gal has smooth manner and an easy approach to each song. The experience and training gained from singing with bands, in theatres and on TV is evident at all times. Occasionally, some of her gestures are played too broadly for a small cafe but the basis is there. Newt.

DANNY ALEXANDER
Dancing
5 Mins.
Apollo, N. Y.

Danny Alexander has a fine novelty turn in his rope-dancing. In bowing at the Apollo, the Negro lad opens briskly with some snappy hoofing sans rope. Then seizing the manila, he gets off spirited stepping while simultaneously jumping the line.

Alexander occasionely drops to his knees without a miscue. His is a neat example of muscular coordination, and he rates as a sight act suitable for most visual media. He's also well groomed in light trousers, white shoes and Eisenhower jacket. Gilb.

STANLEY BAXTER
Comedy
9 Mins.
Citizens' Theatre, Glasgow

Young Scot is new on the comedy horizon, having switched lately from legit to dame comedy and burlesque clowning.

He reveals top talent in takeoff of middle-class gentility and snobbery. Femme impersonations are top-rate, though restricted in appeal through comedy use of dialect. Facial humor has much possibility for video work.

Okay for general vaude dates and intimate revue, and also possible nitery spottings where Scotch is understood. Gord.

Pat Henning to London

Pat Henning has been signed for the Palladium, London, starting Monday (7).

He'll be on the bill headed by Jo Stafford.

Music Hall, N. Y.

"Glory of Easter" with Music Hall Symph (Raymond Paige, director), Music Hall Ensemble, Gertrude Lockway; "Spring Song" with Carla Willyoung, Grace Thomas, William Maun, Loretta Hamilton, Patricia Drylie, Corps de Ballet, Andrea Dancers (3), Edward Ruhl, Choral Ensemble, Bela Kremo, Rockettes; entire production staged by Leon Leonidoff; settings, James Stewart Morcom; costumes designed by Frank Spencer (executed by H. Rogge); lighting, Eugene Braun; special lyrics, Albert Stillman; "Singin' in the Rain" (M-G), reviewed in VARIETY March 12, '52.

Come Christmas and Easter, the Music Hall is almost duty-bound to repeat the awe-inspiring religious pageants that have been its holiday forte for years. "The Nativity" is the Hall's strong point at the Yuletide, and now, again, for Easter, it's "Glory of Easter" that is the religious spectacle to provide the lure for the tourists. And with good reason. For no matter how often it has been presented here it remains a lesson in showmanship and entertainment.

How producer Leon Leonidoff and his able staff are able to maneuver the series of turntable stages; the complex lighting system; the beautiful costuming; the musical integrations—all these escape to a considerable degree the casual layman eye witnessing the finished product. They must certainly be part of a great ingenuity in order to achieve the effects that draw customer ohs and ahs.

There is little that can now be said of "Glory of Easter," the always-impressive 10-minute spectacle in which the entire Music Hall ensemble takes part. Gertrude Lockway is the soloist on "Kamenoi Ostrow," a vocal touch to an exciting pageant of religious faith.

The variety portion of the bill follows, after an intermission, and it's a potpourri that socks home. There's a pastoral scene in which the ballet corps is importantly involved, after which follows the "Window Shopping" fashion parade of models, attired in the latest spring numbers submitted by the top couturiers. It's an obvious plug for the designers, but an interesting show nevertheless in the manner in which it is all staged.

The Andrea Dancers, two men and a femme, do an exciting balancing act in which the girl is mostly tossed around like a rubber ball. They're show-stoppers with intricate stunts and showmanship.

The show's other outstanding feature is the novelty juggling of Bela Kremo, whose occasional misses at show caught failed to distract from the overall socko of his performance. Kremo could pick up stronger comedy bits to detract from the misses, but otherwise he's a strong crowd-pleaser.

An apt trailer for the picture—"Singin' in the Rain"—is the finale "rain" number. Kahn.

Palladium, London

London, March 25.

Billy Daniels (with Benny Payne), Wiere Bros. (3) (with Mildred Seymour), Pauline Grant Ballet (16), Vic Hyde, Tony Fayne & David Evans, Great Alexander Troupe (6), Knie's Film Chimpanzees, Bernard Miles, Warren, Latona & Sparks, Palladium Tiller Girls (16), Woolf Phillips Skyrockets Orch.

With its second vaude bill of the season the Palladium gets into its normal stride, having an American headliner and a couple more U. S. acts in the bill.

Engagement of Billy Daniels as the starring attraction represented a bold gamble on the part of impresario Val Parnell. The vocalist was largely an unknown quantity to British audiences. Few of his disks have been widely circulated and little was known of his style and talent beyond a favored recording of "Black Magic." Latter had been aired on a disk jockey program, and a TV preview two nights before his Palladium debut.

That the gamble looks like paydirt was indicated by the roaring first-night reception. Daniels got the boffo Palladium treatment when he wound his 30-minute stint with his two best tunes, "My Yiddishe Momma" and "Black Magic."

Daniels opened his act cautiously, and with his first couple of numbers, "Just One of Those Things" and "September Song," was obviously feeling his way. Then he showed a firm mastery of the audience and in his own exuberant fashion, with tremendous assist from accompanist Benny Payne, socked with a flow of tunes chosen with great care to provide a balance of new and old material. The house orch was on stage to back the artist in their renowned fashion.

After a long season in "Peep Show," the three Wiere Bros., assisted by Mildred Seymour, enhance their already high reputation with their laugh loaded routine. Their top-grade precision work and perfect timing, coupled with their unmistakable sense of humor, gives the act a distinctive gloss.

Also playing a Palladium return visit is multi-instrumentalist Vic Hyde, who plays several brass simultaneously and winds with an ingenious one-man-band, controlling drums with one foot, cymbals with another, piano with one hand a piece of brass in the other. Act makes solid impact and registers in encouraging style.

The Palladium Tiller Girls, per custom, open the show in a routine of moderate appeal, but soon give way to the Great Alexander Troupe, a sextet of springboard acrobats with a boisterous and energetic routine. Impressions by Tony Fayne & David Evans are mainly of local appeal with sporting characters predominating. They have pleasing style and their material is more than adequate. Knie's Film Chimpanzees are an endearing bunch of animals who cover a lot of familiar ground, but specialize in some novel hand balances. They applaud themselves — just to show they know they're good.

Bernard Miles one of Britain's most versatile artists (he's a film actor, director and producer, as well as a vauder), makes a pleasing impression with his out-of-the-rut act as a rustic. He is an accomplished raconteur and rates a nonstop flow of restrained chuckles for a succession of hick yarns. Warren, Latona & Sparks, firm faves here, qualify for another clicko reception with their standard routine.

Major innovation in the current bill is the inauguration of the Pauline Grant Ballet troupe, with ex-Sadler's Wells terper Gillian Lynne featured. The opening routine, with the accompanying music by Leroy Anderson, attains fine standard. Principal dancers have style and poise and the choreography combines charm with simplicity. Myro.

Chicago, Chi

Chicago, March 28.

Lewis & Van, Nita & Peppi, Gracie Barrie, Larry Storch, Louis Basil Orch; "Wild North" (M-G).

While this stageshow might not be sock boxoffice these two weeks before Easter, it has all the elements of a fine revue. It's balanced fare and plays smoothly.

Lewis & Van are good openers with their taps. Especially bright is their unison work on the miniature stairs. There could have even been a little more of this stint. They follow with some excellent steps and then come back with strawhats for reprise of the "Old Soft Shoe" which gets them off strongly.

Nita & Peppi are a youthful balancing team who haven't been around before but are a smash act. Brother and sister start well with straight arm lifts and turn builds with lass doing twists while youth is straightening from a bend. Rollups off and on a table and backoff are punchy, capped by boff finish via femme doing some running flips and male palm-catching her aloft and carrying her offstage for heavy applause.

Gracie Barrie is a welcome repeat, but her intro is somewhat mothy. She does the ballad, "Cry" in okay fashion, but it's the special material the seatholders go for. She has a new bit about the hillbillies in the mountains since TV has made inroads there and follows with paraphrase, with slightly salty lyrics, of "I'm Going to Live Till I Die." Comely songstress also registers with another takeoff on "Sunday Kind of Love."

Larry Storch has discarded many of the standard motion picture apings he once did with result that stint seems much stronger. He has some amusing quickies before going into his English fight announcer, by now almost a classic, and follows with some more quick dialect bits. There's a real staunch piece about a dancer from pic, "David and Bathsheba," with a Bronx accent, but payoff is lessened with abrupt ending. "Darkest Africa" sketch is a groovey thing with comic doing a few bars on the sax and strutting off. He closes with another old but still hardy bit on a lady barfly. Louis Basil, per usual, does a bright job as emcee and band conductor. Zabe.

Paramount, N. Y.

Blanketing both the stage and film shows at the Paramount, Frank Sinatra is making a solid "comeback" in the current layout with the strong b.o. fully credited to him. That "comeback" role is a unique spot for any performer grossing over $600,000 in all show biz media last year, but coming after his recent agency, video and domestic hassles, Sinatra is proving that he's still a potent marquee factor.

This, of course, isn't 10 years ago when lean kid with the bowtie and relaxed voice set a new bobby-sox vogue for romantic crooners. Styles have changed since Sinatra first clicked on this same site and a new generation of kids are now screaming for other idols. But, despite all that, Sinatra is still pulling the customers and showing more b.o. stamina than most of the freakish and ephemeral song stylists of the day.

From the ranks of show business, a flock of celebs, including Jimmy Durante, Phil Silvers and Jackie Gleason, turned up on opening day (26) for brief on-stage intros. It was an intra-trade "vote of confidence" in Sinatra.

Still a slick piper of songs in his own genre, Sinatra over the years has developed a stage polish and overall showmanship savvy that add importantly to his selling qualities. That savvy, incidentally, works in handily during his current stand when he has to face the inevitable heckling from the juves in the audience who have been following the vicissitudes of his private life. Sinatra handles all of this suavely and with a genial comedy flavor. None of the heckling has been of the vicious sort during this stand.

Sinatra is delivering a straight song turn this time which contrasts with his last appearance on this stage with Dagmar. Probably, Sinatra would do better in punching up his turn with the same kind of gag-and-song routine instead of banking solely on the vocals. It would give him more opportunities for a well-rounded act and would cut down any invidious comparisons with the current crop of vocalists.

Sinatra's repertory is heavily accented on the standards with such numbers as "World On A String," "Could Write A Book," "Black Magic," "Hear A Rhapsody" and "Birth of the Blues." For his encores, Sinatra handles requests from the audience including the inevitable "Nancy." The distance that Sinatra has travelled over the past decade is sharply pointed up by the appearance on stage of a young "Danny Wilson" vocalist prize winner, Ted Sanford, who delivers one tune with unsophisticated uncertainty.

The rest of the show provides firm backing to Sinatra. Frank Fontaine hits his string of carbons, running the gamut of standard impressions from Arthur Godfrey, through Winston Churchill to Billy Eckstine, Vaughn Monroe and Johnnie Ray. His special material takeoff on a sweepstakes winner is particularly effective. Fontaine, however, seems lost without his script, and his ad libbed comments are limply unfunny.

In the opening spot, June Hutton hits with a brace of pop tunes. Blonde looker has a neat rhythm attack that sells in surefire style. Her book includes "Tenderly," "Just A Little Girl" and a medley of show tunes.

Drummer Buddy Rich heads a good orch and emcees the bill with a clever line of chatter. Herm.

Olympia, Miami

Miami, March 30.

Alan Dale, Paul Gray, Merry Mutes, Elissa Jayne, Renald & Rudy, Les Rhode House Orch; "Bugles In The Afternoon" (WB).

Accent is on comedy in the lineup this week. Overall it's diverting vaude.

Topliner Alan Dale makes for a solid song salesman who also applies his vocalistic talents to takeoffs on the better tunestars for a well received turn. Mixture of the pops is adroitly handled to add to impact.

In the top comedy slot, Paul Gray impresses with his quietly, albeit effectively delivered melange of mostly original ideas that start them giggling and build into laugh elements. Stuff is off-trail and deliberately zany. This usually tough house for a comic went for him all the way at show caught.

Merry Mutes added to show build with their recording-pantos. Looking like a pair of fugitive Ivy Leaguers, they turn up a consistent array of special platters using a good deal of the Spike Jones screwball stuff. Mugging and biz interjected mark them a zingy pair of buffoons. The duo interchange on the comedy bits, to add continued aud interest. Tall crew-cutted lad who does the intros is an intelligent looking guy who adds class and contrast via his talk.

Elissa Jayne has herself a twist on acro-dancers with her patter that leads into a "can Bette Davis" do this idea for her eventual spins and flips. Balancing work of Renald & Rudy sets well, with their muscular control work bringing the gasps. Les Rhode and house orch are okay on the backgroundings. Lary.

Apollo, N. Y.

The Clovers (5), James Moody Orch (11), Eddie Heywood Trio, Tina Dixon, Danny Alexander, George Wiltshire & Co.; "Street Bandits" (Rep).

Traditional pre-Easter amusement biz slump finds the Apollo with a lightweight bill this week. Moreover, the theatre temporarily drops vaude starting Friday (4) and resumes April 11. Holy Week shelving of stage entertainment has long been a house policy.

Although the current stanza lacks a top marquee name, the session nevertheless adds up to fair entertainment. James Moody band starts the layout rolling with a brassy opener, "Mad Wednesday." With three rhythm, three reed, and five brass, the neatly attired crew is inclined to overstress the noise to the detriment of the melody.

In contrast to the volume of Moody's crew is the soft instrumental work of the Eddie Heywood Trio. Long a top pianist, Heywood deftly caresses the ivories to develop the maximum audience potential on such tunes as "Cheek to Cheek," "Jealousy" and "Begin the Beguine." Bass and drum give him fine backing and the overall result is hefty.

The Clovers, who are handed top billing, are a vocal quintet showing considerable improvement over their last date here. Boys are developing more of their own style and their arrangements likewise are better. Accomped by a guitar, they warble "Needless," "Fool" and "Love You Heart and Soul," among others.

Introed as "King of the tenor sax returned from European triumphs," Moody is spotlighted in a couple of instrumental tunes at the finale. Working with a smaller unit culled from his band, he displays a fine sense of rhythm and improvisation on "Body and Soul" and "Mood for Love."

Songstress Tina Dixon and terper Danny Alexander are reviewed under New Acts. Sandwiched in the session are a couple of standard comedy bits supplied by George Wiltshire, Vivian Harris, Dusty Fletcher, et al. Though timeworn, the routines reap a fair quota of laughs. Gilb.

Empire, Glasgow

Glasgow, March 27.

Two-a-night Variety, with Jack Crisp & Jeta, Harold Taylor, Ravic (2), Tony Hancock, Ronald Chesney, Edward Victor, Peter Brough & "Archie Andrews," with Hattie Jacques, Peter Madden; Empire Orch under Bill Matthew.

Britain's top radio vent, Peter Brough, is here currently with his doll of equal fame, "Archie Andrews." Show is obviously aimed at moppets and falls down badly on adult appeal, being thinnish in parts and drawn out.

The doll dons Highland dress to become a real Scotch laddie as a kind of Archie MacAndrews. There's no doubting the talent of Brough, a most pleasant and relaxed ventriloquist. An "Educating Archie" sketch, with able support from Hattie Jacques, Peter Madden and Tony Hancock, is included to maintain the radio flavor.

From Hancock, rising name in British vaude, there are comedy impersonation's, notably one of a James A. Fitzpatrick travelog, and Ronald Chesney entertains in accomplished fashion on the harmonica.

Curiously, the best act is from one of the smaller names, the good old-fashioned shadowgraph turn of Edward Victor, making all kinds of characters and animals with deft manipulation of the hands. Ravic and partner offer acrobatic thrills on roller skates.

Verdict must be this is a slight show, ending on a contrived party note by inviting members of the audience on stage.

When variety does this, it's practically certain it must be short of good material. There has been increasing evidence in recent weeks that British vaude is getting shorter of good entertaining acts to buttress touring bills fully. Fluke success of many performers via radio is one reason. Gord.

Capitol, Wash.

Washington, March 30.

Johnnie Ray, Joey Adams with Al Kelly, Rollo & Bonnie Pickert, John Tio, Sam Jack Kaufman House Orch (16); "Japanese War Bride" (20th).

Show biz is traditionally a business of overnight phenomena, of seven-day wonders. Johnnie Ray, current rage of the jukeboxes and teenagers, defies description or analysis. An indication of the singer's appeal lies in fact that town's critics who might be expected to tear apart this unorthodox product of the sticks, unanimously showed their fascination for the guy in rave reviews.

Whatever else Ray is, he's undoubtedly a slick showman. Having hit on an attention-getting style, he plays it to the hilt, working himself and his audience into a literal frenzy of emotion. He alternates between the essentially homey, humble farm boy of his patter, to the schizophrenic of his songs. He bounds on stage, leaps off, and punctuates his self-accompanied tunes with unrepressed arm flinging, tossing of his body, and finally a single dramatic gesture, sometimes dropping to his knees, other times sagging in his piano chair in exhaustion. As he wails and emotes, his youthful fans supply a Greek chorus of shrieks. Though customers are largely below voting age, the elders who wander in react with equal bewilderment and fascination. It all adds up to boff biz for the Capitol.

Rundown of the Ray routine is as follows: "Walking My Baby Home," sung with tragic effects; "Faith and Hope," a Ray original, introduced with a canny "This is my Ma and Pa's favorite" pitch; "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone"; "Broken-Hearted," with overtones that bring tears of sympathy from the femmes; "September Song," an offbeat version that impressed as tasteless and not up the Ray alley; and, finally, "Cry," the tune with real tears and the works. Voice-wise, singer has an unusual quality and plenty of warmth, but no real depth or lasting value. Actually, he's sounder on the ivories than singing. Total effect is amazing.

Backing up headliner is as solid a lineup as Capitol has had in weeks. Joey Adams, with his current teammate, Al Kelly, has an act with far more universal appeal than his former Tony Canzoneri-Mark Plant combo. Though essentially a comic with adult appeal, Adams seemed to reach the level of his juve audience at show caught and clicked straight through. With the borscht belt gags eliminated, he impressed as consistently funny and in control of the galleries. Al Kelly, with his double-talk and sandpaper voice, makes a good foil for Adams' emceeing. Together, they're a hep act and rate the fine reaction they garner.

Rounding out this solid layout are two acts with accent on novelty. John Tio, the little man with the talking bird, delights in the special way that only animals and moppets can. His act is good humored and tops of its kind, with his feathered partner coming through on cue with a routine of whistles, talking, takeoffs on animals and humans, and tricks. In the curtain-raising slot are two bright, bouncy terpers, Rollo & Bonnie Pickert, whose enthusiasm almost convinces one they're first-rate. Actually, they're fairly routine, except for their bounce, and for some catchy stunts. Best of these is their terping on stilts. Lowe.

Casino, Toronto

Toronto, March 28.

Guy Mitchell, Bamberger & Pam, The Elimars, Anton & Anita, Jesse, James & Cornell Trio, Jimmie Cameron, Archie Stone House Orch; "Magic Face" (Col).

Husky-voiced Guy Mitchell is packing in the teenagers, plus jamming the stagedoor alley, for a song sesh that looms big at the Casino. With Joe Antman, his pianist-arranger, in the pit, Mitchell whams over his "Liberty Belle" and then into tempo changes with a log of "Charmaine," "The Roving Kind" and "My Heart Cries for You," all to sock returns. Kids induced to come in for handclapping and community sing participation. Bouncy "My Truly Fair" and "Keep on Smiling" rated a rousing begoff finish when caught.

Whole 65-minute stage stanza has plenty of speed and diversity, with Anton & Anita (New Acts) over big for their dancing; the Elimars for clever juggling on the slack wire; Freddie Bamberger & Pam for patter, plus burlesqued classics and boogie-woogie at the grand; Jesse, James & Cornell, with their twirling tray dance, tap challenges, glides and leaps. McStay.

'Pacific,' 'King' in Colossus Status With $2,895,000 Payoff on Duo to Date

"South Pacific" and "King and I," current Rodgers-Hammerstein hits whose respective third and first anniversaries will be celebrated at a party April 12, have reached the status of an industry in themselves. As of March 3, the former paid another $200,000 dividend, bringing its total distributed profit to $2,795,020.93. At the same time, "King" issued a $100,000 dividend as its initial profit distribution.

With two companies, "SP" has been netting an average combined profit of about $17,000 a week recently, the accountant's statement shows. "King" has been netting around $11,000 a week. "SP" will be three years old next Monday (7). "King" was one year old last Saturday (29). "SP" was capitalized at $225,000 and cost $185,000 to produce. "King" was financed at $360,000 and cost $131,000 to produce.

Accounting discloses that the operating profit of the original Broadway production of "SP" was $34,838.05 for the four weeks ended March 1, bringing its total net to $1,370,811.53 for 152 weeks' operation. For the same five-week period the touring edition earned $51,270.16, bringing its total profit to $1,330,814.77 for 98 weeks' operation.

In addition to the combined total of $2,701,626.30 operating profits on the two productions, there was $220,302.65 revenue from South Pacific Enterprises, including recording royalties, fees for use of the title, etc. After deduction of $29,219.29 paid to Coast producer Edwin Lester (in con-

Festival Season Prepped For Philly to Hypo Legit Subscriptions Setup

Philadelphia, April 1.

The Council of the Living Theatre will link forces with the Theatre Guild and the American Theatre Society in organizing a festival season of plays here with a view to restoring the "road" and revitalizing the stage on a nationwide basis.

Kickoff will take place April 15, with ceremonies at the 143-year-old Walnut Street Theatre. Katharine Cornell, national chairman of the Council, will unveil a plaque (donated by her co-chairman Robert E. Sherwood) honoring the Walnut as "the oldest structure in the U. S. wholly devoted to the living theatre."

Festival season has another tie-in locally with the commemoration of 200 years of the living theatre in America, because founders of the professional stage first found encouragement in this city in William Plumstead's warehouse, back in 1752.

A committee of 500 locals will act as a liaison group between the theatregoing public and the producers in formulating a subscription program. The Philadelphia committee will hold a luncheon at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel following the ceremonies at the Walnut, at which the subscription drive will be inaugurated. A representative Broadway delegation will be present at the luncheon.

Actually, the festival season locally will be largely an extension of the Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society's present program. It will raise the number of productions given here on subscription from six to 12. Test campaigns this year in three "pilot" cities (Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh) proved encouraging and led the Council, et al., to plunge ahead for 1952-'53. The Philadelphia program will be followed next in Minneapolis and other key cities.

Spokesmen for the festival season say Philly will need to raise about 12,000 subscribers to carry two week bookings. Present Guild-ATS subscription is about 8,000. Subscriptions will guarantee producers against loss, and an active group of 12,000 committed to dozen plays should stimulate entire theatrical scene.

Mary Chase Marionettes, Inc., has been chartered to conduct theatrical, moving picture, television and radio entertainment in New York. Jerome Gold is a director and filing attorney.

Hylton Gets 'Remains'; Talks 'Wagon' for London

Jack Hylton has acquired the London production rights to "Remains to Be Seen" and is reportedly working out details of a deal for "Paint Your Wagon." Former show, a comedy by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, was produced by Leland Hayward. It's currently touring a 198-performance run on Broadway. "Wagon," a musical with book and lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner and score by Frederick Loewe, was produced by Cheryl Crawford. It's at the Shubert, N. Y.

Hylton's London edition of "Call Me Madam" had a smash opening recently. He previously had produced such Broadway hits as "Kiss Me Kate" and "High Button Shoes" in London.

'Remains' Vamps With 30G Profit

"Remains to Be Seen," which started a road tour last week in Cleveland, represented a profit of about $30,000 on its 198-performance run, ended March 22. That included the show's 40% share of the $125,000 film sale. Thus far, $25,000 has actually been distributed on the $75,000 investment.

According to the most recent accountant's statement, the Howard Lindsay-Russel Crouse farce had earned back $74,020.07 of its $88,727.68 original cost as of March 1, leaving $14,707.61 still to be recouped. However, operating losses for the final three weeks of the run, plus closing expenses, are estimated to have totaled around $3,500.

At the moment, the liquid assets of the Leland Hayward production include around $10,000 undistributed cash balance, plus $12,000 in bonds and $10,000 sinking fund. Film proceeds are still due.

WAYNE VICE WALSTON FOR LONDON 'PACIFIC'

Fredd Wayne, who clicked on Broadway two seasons ago in "Texas, Li'l Darlin'," sails today (Wed.) on the Liberte to take over the featured comedy role of Luther Billis in the London production of "South Pacific." He'll go into the cast April 14, succeeding Ray Walston, who's withdrawing, reportedly for a film assignment.

While appearing in the Rodgers-Hammerstein-Logan musical, the actor plans to double in nitery engagements in a comedy sketch recently written by Roger Adams and Doro Maugham.

Tent Operetta Season Mulled Near Danbury

Danbury, Conn., April 1.

Tent operetta and musical comedy season is being projected on a Route 7 site north of Danbury, next to the White Turkey Inn, by James Westerfield, actor-producer, and Stephen Rose, TV producer.

Theater-in-round plan, similar to that which has operated on the Danbury Fair Grounds the past two summers and with which Westerfield was associated in the first season, is being promoted among potential investors in this area. Norton Levine of New Haven is repping Westerfield.

Capacity of 1,500 and six-time-a-week sked is aim, starting June 30. Pencilled season includes "Show Boat," "Naughty Marietta," "Annie Get Your Gun," 'Finian's Rainbow," "Rosalinda," and "Carmen Jones" with all-colored cast. Robert Q. Lewis has been mentioned for a stellar week.

PAPER MILL PREPS 13TH YEAR

Frank Carrington will inaugurate his 12th musical season at the Paper Mill Playhouse, Millburn, N. J., April 14, with "Kiss Me, Kate."

"Where's Charley" will follow.

N.Y. City Ballet Visit To Spain Stirs Protests

Visit of the N. Y. City Ballet to Barcelona this month, as first date of a five-month European tour, has aroused protest from several political groups and individuals. Some 50 well-known dance-world names signed one protest petition. Basis of protest is their anti-Franco feeling.

Three-week Spanish engagement was pencilled in by Leon Leonidoff, Paris impresario, who is booking the troupe through Europe, and company sees no politics involved.

Playwright's 600G Estate Entangled in Confusion Of Four Separate Wills

Playwright Le Roy Clemens, who died in St. Petersburg, Fla., last December, left an involvement of wills. Four wills have been discovered, and a Connecticut court is expected to hand down a ruling around the end of the month whether one of the testaments should be okayed. Estate involves around $100,000.

The 63-year-old Clemens either wrote or collaborated on more than a dozen full-length plays, including "Aloma of the South Seas," "Alias the Deacon," "Tin Pan Alley," "The Hurdy Gurdy Man" and "Let Tommy Do It." He turned out three film scripts as well as a number of vaude sketches and one-act plays.

First will of Clemens was made in 1932, but later was cancelled. He drew up another in 1944 in which he left $5,000 to Mrs. Elizabeth Miele of Colemans Station, N. Y. However, attorney Jerome F. T. Tobin, who represents Clemens' brother, Victor, is seeking to have this document set aside.

Clemens also made a will in 1947 in Hot Springs, Ark., which bears signatures of two witnesses under Arkansas law. Last will was made in Connecticut with two witnesses on April 28, 1949. But when executors Jack Connolly and Grant Woods attempted to have the 1949 testament probated, it was tossed out by a Connecticut court, since laws of that state call for three witnesses on a will.

Connolly, incidentally, is a film executive with the U. S. State Dept. and was named Clemens' executor, since he was an old classmate of the playwright. Woods, the other executor, is director of the Skowhegan (Me.) Players.

In attempting to set aside the 1944 will, Tobin has submitted a duplicate of the original of the 1949 Hot Springs will to a Washington, Conn., court for approval. Decision was reserved on whether this document should be admitted to probate. Residuary estate, it's understood, goes to Victor Clemens, the sole survivor. Playwright Clemens never married.

'WAGON' EARNINGS 85G; $171,098 STILL TO GO

Operating profit on 'Paint Your Wagon" totalled $18,679.07 for the five weeks ended March 1. That brought the total earnings to date on the Alan Jay Lerner-Frederick Loewe musical to $84,971.97, including $2,495 advance on sheet music royalties. It left a balance of $171,097.91 still to be regained. Incidentally, the $40,000.05 gross for the week ended Feb. 23 was overquoted.

The Cheryl Crawford production, capitalized at $225,000, plus $22,500 overcall, has returned $22,500 to the backers. The show is in its 21st week at the Shubert, N. Y.

Neway, Rothmuller in U.S. Preem of 'Wozzek' Opera

Patricia Neway, last seen on Broadway in "The Consul," will have the femme lead in the U. S. stage premiere of Alban Berg's controversial modern opera, "Wozzek," with the N. Y. City Opera Co. at City Center, N. Y., tomorrow night (Thurs.). Name role will be sung by Marko Rothmuller, who flew in from London (where he's singing at Covent Garden) for the preem. He flies right back to resume with the British Opera Co., making the same round-trip flight later this month for another scheduled performance of "Wozzek" here. Howard Vandenburg, Luigi Vellucci, Ralph Herbert and David Lloyd will have other roles, with Joseph Rosenstock conducting.

Bellamy Set to Be Next Equity Prez; Evans, Massey, O'Neal, Gillmore V.P.'s

Ralph Bellamy is set to be the next president of Actors Equity. Star, who has agreed to serve, is figured certain of election. He will succeed Clarence Derwent, whose third two-year term is about to expire and who has declined to run again. The union's annual membership meeting and election will be held on a Friday, the last week in May or first week in June, at the Hotel Astor, N. Y.

In addition to Bellamy, the full ticket announced yesterday (Tues.) by the nominating committee includes Maurice Evans, first vice-president; Raymond Massey, second v.p.; Frederick O'Neal, third v.p.; Margalo Gillmore, fourth v.p.; Paul Dullzell, treasurer, and John Effrat, recording secretary.

For the council, to serve five years: John Drew Devereaux, John Forsythe, Marjorie Gateson, Richard Gordon, Juanita Hall, Katherine Meskill, Claudia Morgan, Elliott Nugent, Kent Smith and Frederic Tozere. Council replacements, to serve three years: George Britton and Rusty Lane. Council replacement, to serve two years: Dort Clark.

The second vice-president of Equity for the last several years, Bellamy previously refused to be a candidate for the presidency two years ago, when he was approached as a possible successor to Derwent, who expressed the wish to step down at that time. However, Bellamy has now agreed to run in order to work for the five-branch merger plan, of which he's a strong advocate. As a former member of the Screen Actors Guild board and a current star in television ("Man Against Crime," on CBS-TV), he's figured in excellent position to bring the various union factions together on merger.

'Blondes' Gain Now 460G; Another 20G Divvy Paid

Another $20,000 dividend on "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" was issued last week, bringing the total profits thus far to $460,000 on the Herman Levin-Oliver Smith production. Show is currently playing the second week of a fortnight stand in Pittsburgh.

The musical version of the Anita Loos original, with book by the authoress and Joseph Fields, tunes by Jule Styne and lyrics by Leo Robin, had operating profits of $20,866.03 for the four weeks ended March 15. That brought the total net on the show to date to $511,657.43. The production, financed at $200,000, actually cost $208,000 to bring in.

Still due are the proceeds from the $150,000 sale of the screen rights to 20th-Fox. Initial payment of $29,375 of the show's 40% share of that is due next Sept. 1, and the $30,625 balance is due in January, 1953.

Swire to Coast; Simon With 4A's

Willard Swire, who was recently "reinstated" as assistant executive secretary of Actors Equity after a mixup over his "resignation," has been temporarily reassigned to the union's Coast office. He planed out to resume the post last Friday (28) and to continue "as long as his services are required." According to council members, it's hoped that a permanent representative for the Coast office can be found within the next month.

Robert Carver, the union's business rep who had been holding down the Coast spot since Swire came east several weeks ago during the internal row leading up to Louis M. Simon's exit as executive secretary, returned over the week-end to New York, and has since resumed his regular duties in the homeoffice. Swire, who was sent to the Coast temporarily last January, after Christopher O'Brien was relieved of his duties there, indicated on his arrival there Friday, that his first move would be to arrange a general meeting of the local memberships of Equity and Chorus Equity.

Meanwhile, it has been learned that although Simon is no longer an official of Equity, he will continue indefinitely as exec-sec of the parent union, the Associated Actors & Artistes of America. There's apparently ample precedent for such a course, a current example being Dewey Barto, who has continued his 4A's spot although he's no longer executive secretary of the American Guild of Variety Artists. It remains to be seen whether the Equity council will name another delegate on the 4A's board to replace Simon.

'GIGI' REGAINS 50G OF 88G PRODUCTION COST

"Gigi," Anita Loos dramatization of the Colette story, has reportedly earned back about $50,000 of its approximately $88,000 production cost. The Gilbert Miller production, starring Audrey Hepburn, is currently in its 20th week at the Fulton, N. Y., and is earning a steady profit at a gross that has recently been topping the $17,000 gross mark.

Comedy is expected to lay off for the summer and probably tour next fall, with a possible London engagement a year hence.

Franchot-Wesp to Run Buffalo Suburb Barn

Buffalo, April 1.

Firm of Maude Franchot and Richard Wesp, which angeled the Niagara Falls (Ont.) players last summer, is reported to have closed a lease for the Glen Casino at Williamsville (nearby suburb) for a strawhat this coming summer.

Casino for many years has been a popular night spot operated by Harry Altman, partner in Buffalo's Town Casino.

Sadler's Theatre Ballet Bows in Okay B'way Style Despite Its Overtouting

Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet, arriving at the Warner, N. Y., last Tuesday (25) for its Gotham debut after a sock 25-week tour of the U. S. and Canada, made a pleasing if unexciting bow. Somewhat oversold and suffering from comparison with its big-sister troupe, the Sadler's Wells Ballet, which had had sock tours of the U. S. in two previous seasons, the highly-touted troupe left some viewers last week feeling a little let down. Opening-night crowd, in particular, a benefit society audience similar to a Broadway first-night list, sat on its hands, while subsequent audiences of balletomanes were more cordial.

Troupe garnered a sock net of $80,200 for nine performances at a $6 top, ending Sunday night (30), with sellouts every evening but Sunday, although that night was good. Matinees were a little light. Sol Hurok is impresarioing.

Troupe, consisting of youngsters all under 25, is a good one, and without the shadow of its more glamorous big sister, would shine more strongly. It has a couple of fine ballerina leads in Svetlana Beriosova and Elaine Fifield, good supporting femme leads in Patricia Miller and Maryon Lane, and a strong male contingent, with star David Blair and supporting talent like Pirmin Trecu, David Poole and Donald Britton, quite outstanding.

Troupe is weighted down by some indifferent ballets, some stodgy direction and a relaxed British approach. But repertoire on the whole is good, and troupe is accomplished enough to hold its own in the ballet field as a major company and a good concert attraction.

Sadler's revealed a creative find in its young choreographer, John Cranko, whose "Beauty and the Beast," "Harlequin in April" and "Pineapple Poll" show imagination taste and versatility. Frederick Ashton's ballets, like "Les Rendezvous" and "Capriol Suite," are interesting but not inspiring. Troupe does a classic like the short "Swan Lake" and a full-evening-length "Coppelia" very well. Such works as "Nutcracker" and "Facade" seem dated, either in staging or costuming. Some of the costuming is very chichi and bad.

Crix Best Play Choice Wide Open; 'Poster' Alien Bet; 'Joey' Eligible?

N. Y. Drama Critics Circle apparently faces a slim choice in picking the best play this season. Selection is apparently wide open, with no outstanding candidate and a possibility that the aisle-sitters may pass up an award. Same situation, only more so, exists in the musical field. However, "Fourposter" is rated the leading entry in the foreign classification, with "Gigi" an outside bet.

On the basis of reviews there is little prospect of how the balloting may go. Richard Watts, Jr., of the Post, has indicated he favors "I Am a Camera" as the best play, and he's expected to have some support. But at least scattered votes are presumably due for "Mrs. McThing," "Point of No Return" and "The Shrike." According to his reviews, Brooks Atkinson, of the Times, may pick "Grass Harp" or "Jane."

However, last season's balloting indicated that reviews may have little to do with best play selection. Ward Morehouse, drama columnist of the World-Telegram & Sun, has been buttonholing Circle members at first-nights to shill for "Point of No Return" and talk down "Mrs. McThing," while George Jean Nathan, in his weekly column in the Journal-American, has also rapped the latter play.

Watts, who's been a "Pal Joey" rooter ever since the Rodgers-Hart-O'Hara show was first produced in 1940-41, has touted the current revival as the best musical of the season. Otherwise, there's been little speculation about a possible choice in that category. John Chapman, of the News, suggested in a column some time ago that "Fourposter" hardly rated as best play, but didn't mention it for the foreign classification.

The Circle will meet next Tuesday afternoon (8) to make the selections (or vote to skip it in any or all categories).

Road 'Roberts' 33G in Black

Since starting its current-season tour last fall, the road edition of "Mister Roberts," starring Tod Andrews, has had operating profits of $33,610.28 through March 15. Added to the previous earnings on the venture, that brought the total net to date to $1,333,718.70. The distributed profit totals $1,250,000 thus far, and there are bonds and deposits amounting to $12,225 and a sinking fund of $10,000, leaving $61,493.70 available for distribution.

The Thomas Heggen-Joshua Logan comedy-drama, staged by Logan and produced by Leland Hayward, had an 1,157-performance run on Broadway, with Henry Fonda as star until the final few weeks. A second company was sent on tour in the spring of 1948, shortly after the original production opened, and except for summer layoffs has been playing ever since.

A cut-down production of the show will probably be sent out again next fall, possibly traveling by bus and truck, with the idea of playing numerous split-weeks and one-nighters which rarely see legit. Film rights to the dramatization of the Heggen novel have never been sold, but it's figured Hayward may now be interested in such a deal.

OLNEY BARN PLANS 14 WEEKS, OPENING JUNE 6

The Olney (Md.) Summer Theatre will start operation June 6 for a 14-week season. Although no bookings are set, a possibility for the season finale is "Comin' Through the Rye," the Warren P. Munsell, Jr., play about the life of Robert Burns, with traditional Scotch songs as incidental music. For the first time, the spot will have apprentices.

Kenneth Banghart, radio-TV announcer-commentator and a prolific legit investor, will be partnered with Washington radio actress Evelyn Freyman in the operation of the strawhat, having bought a major interest in the venture last fall. Richard Skinner, manager for the last three years, will not be back, but is reportedly set for a similar assignment at either the Cape Playhouse, Dennis, Mass., or the Falmouth Playhouse, Coonamessett, Mass., both operated by Richard Aldrich.

Trapp Family Finishes Four-Week Hawaii Trek

Trapp Family Singers returned to the Coast over the weekend from its first tour of Hawaii. Song group spent four weeks in the islands, giving five concerts alone in Honolulu for $8,000 gross total. Trapps also give 11 concerts in the outer islands. Tour, booked by Columbia Artists Mgt., was under the local management of Dean & George Oakley.

Group is due east for a TV appearance on the Kate Smith Hour April 9. Then it has some recording sessions before departing for its summer singing camp at Stowe, Vermont.

Unions Aid Cincy Ams

Cincinnati, April 1.

Concessions by musicians, stagehands and treasurers unions paved way for Stage, Inc., amateur dramatic group to rent the Cox theatre for presentation of "Goodbye My Fancy" May 14-17.

Except for a single in-the-round production at the Netherland Plaza Hotel's main dining room, all of the group's plays have been staged in the Art Museum.

Shakespeare Arena Fest Set for Antioch College

Dayton, April 1.

A Shakespearean Festival, in which the seven historical plays of the Bard will be presented in chronological order, has been set by the Antioch Area Theatre, Antioch College, Yellow Springs, for July and August production.

The plays, "King John," "Richard II," "Henry IV," "Henry V," "Richard III," "Henry IV" and "Henry VIII," will be given outdoors on the steps of the college administration building, erected when Horace Mann was president of the college.

First play is set for July 9, with a new play weekly and occasional reprises of those already given. Plays will be of professional calibre, the college sponsoring them and providing operating funds necessary. Administrative staff in charge consists of Paul Treichler, drama instructor at Antioch, and Arthur Lithgow and Meredith Dallas, of the Yellow Springs Area Theatre.

Inside Stuff—Legit

First hinterland Show Train, aside from the one that plies occasionally between New Haven and New York, will be run by the Pennsylvania R.R. from Altoona to Pittsburgh April 24 for "South Pacific" at the Nixon. Altoona is the home town of Janet Blair, who is starred in the national company, and that date is not only the second anniversary of the touring "SP," but also Miss Blair's birthday. Show Train is being sponsored by the Altoona Mirror, city's big newspaper, and town has reserved the entire capacity of the Nixon for that night, when more than 1,700 of Miss Blair's fellow townsmen are coming in to pay her homage. PRR has set up a special deal for Altoona, because that's where the railroad's big Central Works division is located. Round trip fare ordinarily is $8.90, but it's being cut to enable Altoonans to get the train ride back and forth and an orch seat, scaled at $5.20, for "South Pacific" for $10. For those buying seats in mezzanine or balcony, tariff will be less.

Performance will have all of the aspects of a gala event, with show's authors, Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, producer Leland Hayward and director Joshua Logan coming on for the anniversary fete. They've reserved Jackie Heller's Carousel, downtown Pitt nitery, for a party honoring Miss Blair and the entire cast as well as Altoona civic leaders, after the performance. Show Train will be tagged the "Janet Blair 'South Pacific' Birthday Special." Deal for it was worked out with the PRR by J. E. Holtzinger, general manager of the Mirror; Gabe Rubin, owner of the Nixon, and Al Butler, "South Pacific" advance agent.

"Tony" awards, in memory of director Antoinette Perry, were presented Sunday night (30) by the American Theatre Wing to "Fourposter," as the outstanding dramatic play of the season; "King and I," as the top musical; Julie Harris ("I Am a Camera"), performance by femme star; Jose Ferrer ("The Shrike"), performance by male star; Gertrude Lawrence ("King and I"), musical performance, femme star; Phil Silvers ("Top Banana"), musical performance, male star; Marian Winters ("Camera"), supporting performance, femme; John Cromwell ("Point of No Return"), supporting performance, male; Helen Gallagher ("Pal Joey"), supporting performance, musical, femme; Yul Brunner ("King"), supporting performance, musical, male; Jo Mielziner ("King"), designer; Ferrer ("Shrike," "Stalag," "Fourposter"), director; Romert Alton ("Joey") choreographer; Max Meth ("Joey"), musical director; Peter Feller ("Call Me Madam"), stage technician; plus special awards to Edward Kook, "encouragement and development of stage lighting"; Judy Garland, "important contribution to revival of vaudeville," and Charles Boyer ("Don Juan in Hell"), for "assisting in a new theatre trend." The annual presentations were made by Helen Hayes at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y.

Recent story in VARIETY about how local papers are increasingly brushing off legit, brings to light an incident last summer in Trenton, when The Trentonian, a tab and the only local morning sheet, allegedly was pressured to stop reviewing weekly shows at the Lambertville (N.J.) Music Circus and the Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa., both about 15 miles away. Thereafter, the sheet merely gave space for weekly advance puffs written by pressagents for the spots, but otherwise ignored them except when the New Hope borough council slapped a special tax on the Playhouse. However, radio station WBUD at Morrisville, Pa., across the Delaware River from Trenton, helped to fill the gap with weekly backstage interviews taped opening nights for subsequent-day broadcast.

Paul Vroom, general manager for the touring "Affairs of State," leaves Friday (4) for a 10-day vacation in Bermuda in preparation for the coming season. As of the moment, his schedule of future assignments includes partnership with William G. Costin in the production of A. B. Shiffrin's "Burst of Summer," general manager duties on two touring editions of "Affairs," Richard Krakeur's musical production of "Casey Jones," Robert Joseph's presentation of "My Darlin' Aida," a new play to be produced by Anthony Parella, a new musical to be produced by William Hellinger, plus tentative projects of several other managements.

Mail order response for the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera Assn. season has already topped the $500,000 mark—almost half the potential capacity for the 22-week season. CLO tees its 15th anni program with Judy Garland April 21 and follows her four-week vaude stand with "Song of Norway," "Call Me Madam," "South Pacific" and "Jollyanna." Same program will be staged for the San Francisco Civic Light Opera season. Normally, season ticket sale for CLO averages 60% of the total gross. This year it's figured the package deal sales may go higher than 75%.

Ernest M. Rawley, manager of the Royal Alexandra, Toronto, was given the annual "Heart Award" of Tent 28, International Variety Clubs, for his welfare efforts in behalf of "Variety Village," residential and vocational training school for handicapped youngsters, this financed by trans-Canada leaders in the entertainment industry. With Mayor Lamport present at the dinner in the Royal York Hotel banquet hall, presentation was made to Rawley by J. J. Fitzgibbon, president of Famous Players (Canadian), with Reuben Bolstad, Chief Barker, reading the citation.

Lent Shrinks Chi Biz, But 'Guys' Gets Record $56,916, 'Bell' $23,500

Chicago, April 1.

With the exception of "Guys and Dolls" which went clean again, legit here has been hit by the Lenten doldrums. However, "Moon Is Blue" has been helped by the early curtain Tuesday nights. "Bell, Book, and Candle" was off, but still profitable. Show will move May 5 to the 1,000-seat Selwyn, with Joan Bennett and Zachary Scott succeeding Rosalind Russell and Dennis Price as co-stars. Show is now set to continue its tour to the Coast, then work back eastward via the south.

"Remains to Be Seen" is due next Monday (7) at the Erlanger and "Two on the Aisle" will move into the Great Northern when "Bell" transfers to the Selwyn.

Estimates for Last Week

"Bell, Book, and Candle," Great Northern (5th wk) ($4.80; 1,500). Eased off to over $23,500.

"Guys and Dolls," Shubert (5th wk) ($6; 2,100). New high for the run, with even the limited-vision "post-seats" going; $56,916 is figured a house record.

"Moon Is Blue," Harris (48th wk) ($4.80; 1,000). Early curtain Tuesday nights is helping; about $15,600.

'Cocktail' $16,400; 3 Preems, Philly

Philadelphia, April 1.

"Cocktail Party" here last week repeated its healthy biz for its second sesh. "Brass Ring," one of three shows which arrived last night (Mon.), cut down its originally scheduled two-week stand at Walnut to one. Other openings last night were "The Chase," at the Locust, and "Member of the Wedding," playing one-week return engagement at the Forrest.

"Cocktail Party," Walnut (2d wk) ($3.90; 1,340). Maintained first week's pace with a tasty $16,400.

'PACIFIC' SRO $53,620 SETS INDPLS. RECORD

Indianapolis, April 1.

"South Pacific" packed away a near-capacity $53,620 in the finale of a record two-week engagement at the Murat here last week. That topped the sock previous stanza by $450. Top in 2,000-seat house was $5. It's an all-time high for legit attractions here.

Murat has the Shrine Circus in for annual 10-day stand starting this week, then a run of conventions until "Mister Roberts" plays return engagement May 5-7. That looks about all for this season.

'Roberts' Nearly $17,500 In One-Nighters Week

Joplin, Mo., April 1.

"Mister Roberts" maintained headway last week with a gross of nearly $17,500 for eight performances in a string of one-nighters. The stands included Sunday (23), winding up a four-show stand at the Auditorium, Memphis; Monday (24) at the Robinson Auditorium, Little Rock; two nights and a matinee Wednesday-Thursday (26-27) at the Convention Hall, Tulsa; and two nights and a matinee Friday-Saturday (28-29) at the Convention Hall here.

For the previous week the Tod Andrews starrer pulled $21,600 in eight performances split between Atlanta, Nashville and Memphis.

Waters $21,600, Balto

Baltimore, April 1.

"Member of the Wedding," starring Ethel Waters, hung up a resounding $21,600 at Ford's here last week as the fifth and final offering this season under American Theatre Society-Guild subscription.

Nothing is on deck currently or listed for the immediate future here.

'Call' Sad $1,400, L.A.

Hollywood, April 1.

Local legit limped along last week with only one small house, the 334-seat Ivar, alight. Tally for the first frame of "Assembly Call," heavenly fantasy, hit a pale $1,400 for a slight loss.

Production continues this week, still the only legit offering save for the usual intimate group shows.

'Darkness' $4,900 for 2 As Robinson Has Flu

Portland, April 1.

Illness of Edward G. Robinson was disastrous last week for "Darkness At Noon" after show grossed $2,200 Sunday night (23) at the Civic, San Jose, Cal., and adding $2,700 Monday night (24), at the Auditorium, Sacramento, the star had an attack of flu and was unable to play the balance of the week, cancelling four performances at the Mayfair here Thursday-Saturday (27-29).

Actor was expected to have recovered sufficiently to return to action for the Sidney Kingsley-Arthur Koestler drama's scheduled run this week at the Metropolitan, Seattle.

OLIVIA $22,400 SPLIT; RICHMOND 6G LOSS

Richmond, April 1.

Olivia de Havilland in "Candida" racked up a hefty $4,900 for a Tuesday night and Wednesday matinee (25-26) at the WRVA Theatre here. Prior house commitments ruled out a Wednesday night performance. Show played to capacity (1,265 seats) for the night presentation, while matinee also pulled a crowd surprisingly large for this town, where evening shows are usually a blight. House was scaled at a $3.75 top.

WRVA Theatre's Playgoers Guild series of guest-star stock wound up its sixth-week season about $6,000 in the red, according to Jack Stone, manager. Total gross amounted to $16,100 and pre-estimated nut of $22,000 did not include house rental nor salaries of regular theatre personnel.

Kay Francis, guesting with the resident company for the final week (March 17-22) in "Theatre," drew a gross of $3,490 for seven performances. House was scaled to a $2.50 top, used a two-for-one policy on Monday nights and had offered subscription tickets at $12.50 for the series, thus giving subscribers a bonus of one play.

The series opened on Feb. 11 and ran through March 22. Bills included Arthur Treacher in "Clutterbuck;" Nancy Carroll in "Legend of Sarah;" Ilka Chase in "Over 21;" Gene Raymond in "Angel Street;" Vicki Cummings in "Gramercy Ghost," and the finale. Resident company included Truman Gaige, Eugene Stuckmann, Lynn Kendall, Mark Hopkins and Cynthia Latham with Judith Paige in for four weeks. Bertram Yarborough was director-producer.

17,500 in 6 Shows

Hershey, Pa., April 1.

Thomas Hammond's revival of "Candid," starring Olivia de Havilland, nabbed a hefty $8,300 in two evenings and a matinee at the Community Theatre here last Friday-Saturday (28-29). That gave the show a total of $22,400 for the eight-performance week, including $4,100 for a single showing Monday (24) at the Auditorium, Charleston, W. Va., and $5,100 for two performances Thursday (27) at the Center, Norfolk.

Venerable 'Ladies' 17G In K.C. Stock Revival

Kansas City, April 1.

Orpheum here had surprisingly good biz last week with "Good Nite Ladies," the venerable farce. Three-acter minus any name value played to hefty attendance for the seven-day stand, including two matinees Saturday (29). Management used a two-for-one ticket deal on the announced top of $3.66, and grossed $17,000.

Town has a lull in legit until "Mister Roberts" opens Friday (4) for a three-day stand, this time switching to the Music Hall, under the John Antonello banner, for the return engagement here.

'Tidings' 14G, St. L.

St. Louis, April 1.

With the local legit field to itself last week, the Empress Theatre had neat biz during a one-frame stand of "Glad Tidings," with Melvyn Douglas and Katherine Sergava as visiting stars. Eight performances with $2 top grossed an estimated $14,000. Critics praised the play and cast.

Miriam Hopkins in "The Heiress" opens a one-week engagement tonight (Tues.).

'Boat' $17,500, St. Pete; Hurley Planning Tours

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 1.

"Show Boat" grossed a shipshape $17,500 last week at the St. Petersburg Operetta. "Roberta," starring Victoria Sherry, Earle McVeigh and Robert Smith, opens tonight (Tues.) and plays the regular schedule through next Sunday (6).

Pat Hurley, Operetta producer, has formed a new corporation for the presentation of operetta on a 30-week schedule for the next five years. The operation is to start in December, 1953, and the plan is to play Tampa, St. Petersburg and Memphis. The producer figures on doing original musicals and is seeking suitable scripts.

Havoc Nifty 17G, 'Aisle' $35,700, Hub

Boston, April 1.

Only two legits are alight here this stanza, "Two on Aisle" in third week at the Shubert and "Affairs of State" in fourth week at the Plymouth. Both are doing slick biz. "Aisle," originally slated for three weeks, has extended another two, and "Affairs" has likewise tacked on a couple of weeks and possibly more.

"To Be Continued" opens next Tuesday (8) at the Wilbur and "Cocktail Party" is due April 14 at the Colonial.

Estimates for Last Week

"Affairs of State," Plymouth (3d wk) (1,200; $3.60). June Havoc starrer got $17,000, comfortably profitable; extended through April 19.

"Two on the Aisle," Shubert (2d wk) (1,700; $4.80-$6). Bert Lahr-Dolores Gray starrer drew $35,700 for first full week; also continuing through April 19.

'TATTOO' BRISK $19,200, 'HAPPY' $11,000, FRISCO

San Francisco, April 1.

"Rose Tattoo," with Maureen Stapleton and Eli Wallach, stepped to a breezy $19,200 for its second stanza at the 1,775-seat Curran. Effective exploitation and strong reviews helped hypo. House is scaled to $3.60.

"Happy Time," with Reginald Gardiner and Irene Hervey, opened March 24 at the 1,550-seat Geary to mixed reviews. Show wound up its first frame with a colorless $11,000 at $3.60 top. Tour beyond here is questionable.

Blizzard Dims 'Moon'; So-So $14,600 in Mpls.

Minneapolis, April 1.

Arriving on the heels of the winter's worst blizzard, when transportation still was crippled, and minus any marquee names, the third company of "Moon Is Blue," at the 1,900-seat Lyceum at $3.60 top for six nights and two matinees, started slowly, but built steadily by reason of laudatory reviews and favorable word-of-mouth. Its closing night gross was the engagement's best and attraction finished to a fair $14,600. Passing up St. Paul entirely, show played its Twin Cities engagement exclusively here, and St. Paul newspapers, as usual, refused its advertising and permitted no news column mention of its local presence.

Sole underline is "Darkness at Noon," with Edward G. Robinson, due April 9 for five nights and two matinees. It's the Theatre Guild's fourth and final subscription offering of the season.

'Ring' 5G, Wilmington

Wilmington, April 1.

"Brass Ring" drew fair $5,000 in four performances last Thursday-Saturday (27-29) at the 1,223-seat Playhouse here. Irving Elman play was breaking in prior to Philly and then New York.

Next on the local schedule is the tryout of "Hook 'n' Ladder," due April 10-12.

'Stude' 16G, Toronto

Toronto, April 1.

Despite bad weather, "Student Prince" did a fair $16,000 at the Royal Alexandra here last week, with 1,525-seater scaled at $3 top.

Revival is splitting this week between Buffalo and Rochester.

B'way Dips a Bit; Most Shows Off; 'Janie' Big $45,600, 'Egypt' $16,100, 'Day' $15,200, 'Jane' 14½G, 'Joey' 40G

Business generally eased a bit on Broadway last week. That more or less followed the traditional pattern for pre-Easter. Most shows felt the slightly slower pace, with a couple of entries taking sizable drops and a few reversing the general trend. Attendance was reportedly off slightly again Monday night (31) of this week, with little indication of immediately improvement.

The total gross for all 26 shows last week was $700,500, or 79% of capacity. Week before last the corrected total for all 26 current shows was $724,664, or 81% of capacity, representing a jump of 7% from the previous week.

A year ago last week the total for all 24 shows was $652,100 or 86% of capacity, a top of 7% from the week before (Easter Week).

Of the recent openers, "Grass Harp" drew a generally downbeat press and started slowly. The previous week's "Three Wishes for Jamie" had a hefty gross, with parties a factor, while "Flight Into Egypt" and "One Bright Day" remain uncertain prospects. Last week's only closing was "Long Watch."

Principal conventions and shows (with respective dates and probable attendance) which may provide patronage this week and next include N. Y. City Film Exhibition (29-6) (no estimate); National Safety Council (30-1) (125); Knights of Columbus Bowling Assn. (weekends, March 30-May 20) (500); Canada Dry sales meeting (31-4) (50), and N. Y. Antiques Fair (31-5) (60,000).

"King and I," St. James (53d wk) (MD-$7.20; 1,571; $51,717) (Gertrude Lawrence). Capacity again, over $51,700.

"Long Watch," Lyceum (2d wk) (CD-$4.80; 995; $22,845). First full week, around $2,500 (previous week, first four performances grossed $3,200); closed Saturday night (29) after 12 performances, at a loss of about $90,000.

"Moon Is Blue," Miller (56th wk) (C-$4.80; 920; $21,586) (Barbara Bel Geddes, Donald Cook, Barry Nelson). Over $16,900 (previous week, $17,800); will have 7:30 starting curtain Monday nights.

"Mrs. McThing," Morosco (6th wk) (CD-$4.80; 912; $26,800) (Helen Hayes). First week at this smaller-capacity house, almost $22,000 (previous week at Martin Beck, $33,000).

"One Bright Day," Royale (2d wk) (D-$4.80; 1,035; $27,000). First full week, nearly $15,200 (previous week, first five performances, $9,400).

"Paint Your Wagon," Shubert (20th wk) (MC-$7.20; 1,361; $46,000) (James Barton). Almost $37,000 (previous week, $36,500).

"Pal Joey," Broadhurst (13th wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,160; $39,602). New high for run, at $40,024 (previous week, $39,997).

"Paris '90," Booth (4th wk) (MC-$4.80; 900; $20,235) (Cornelia Otis Skinner). About $8,400 (previous week, $9,500).

"Point of No Return," Alvin (16th wk) (D-$4.80-$6; 1,331; $37,924) (Henry Fonda). Nearly $37,500 (previous week, $38,000).

"Shrike," Cort (11th wk) (D-$4.80; 1,056; $27,700) (Jose Ferrer, Judith Evelyn). Almost $23,300 again.

"South Pacific," Majestic (154th wk) (MD-$6; 1,659; $50,126) (Martha Wright, George Britton). Over $44,400 (previous week, $45,000).

"Stalag 17," 48th St. (47th wk) (C-$4.80; 912, $21,547). Nearly $14,700 (previous week, $14,200).

"Top Banana," Winter Garden (22d wk) (MC-$6.60-$7.20; 1,519; $51,881) (Phil Silvers). Just topped $41,500 (previous week, $41,700).

"Three Wishes for Jamie," Hellinger (2d wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,527; $51,300) (Anne Jeffreys, John Raitt). First full week, over $45,600 (previous week, three regular performances and three previous grossed $41,000).

"Venus Observed," Century (7th wk) (CD-$4.80; $6; 1,645; $45,000) (Rex Harrison, Lilli Palmer). Over $23,500 (previous week, $30,200); announced to close May 17.

REOPENED THIS WEEK

"Don Juan in Hell," Plymouth (CD-$4.80; 1,063; $29,019) (Charles Boyer, Charles Laughton, Cedric Hardwicke, Agnes Moorehead). Paul Gregory's "reading" production of the excerpt from Shaw's "Man and Superman" opened Sunday matinee (30) for a return engagement announced for eight weeks, but subject to extension; show can break even at around $11,000.

'BLONDES' $36,300, PITT; STEEP SCALE HURTING?

Pittsburgh, April 1.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" bettered $36,300 last week at the Nixon, but that was a bit below break-even level. Musical might have grossed more at a somewhat lower scale. Orch seats every night were $5.85 ($4.50 plus 20% Federal and 10% local taxes) and while cheaper ducats went clean at almost every performance, some customers wouldn't buy downstairs except on the weekend. Even the incoming "South Pacific" isn't going that high. It's getting $5.85 only Fridays and Saturdays, with a $5.20 top other nights.

Pretty fair advance sale for the current final week of "Blondes." Nixon goes dark after Saturday night's (5) performance until "SP" comes in April 21 for four weeks.

'Remains' Launches Tour With Mild 13G, Detroit

Cleveland, April 1.

"Remains to Be Seen," launching a road tour last week at the Hanna here, grossed a mild $13,000. Jackie Cooper and Janis Paige are co-starred.

Howard Lindsay-Russel Crouse comedy, produced by Leland Hayward, moved to the Cass, Detroit, this week before going into Chicago for a run.

Plays Out of Town

The Chase

Philadelphia, March 31.

Jose Ferrer production of melodrama in three acts (nine scenes) by Horton Foote. Directed by Ferrer; associate producer, Milton Barron; settings and lighting, Albert Johnson; costumes, George Backman. Stars John Hodiak, Kim Hunter; features Eugenia Rawls, Murray Hamilton, Kim Stanley, Ralph Theadore, Sam Byrd. At Locust Street, Phila., March 31, '52.

Sheriff Hawes	John Hodiak
Rip	Richard Poston
Tarl	Lin McCarthy
Ruby Hawes	Kim Hunter
Edwin Stewart	Sam Byrd
Mr. Douglas	Ralph Theadore
Anna Reeves	Kim Stanley
Mrs. Reeves	Eugenia Rawls
Knub McDermott	Lenny Chapman
Bubber Reeves	Murray Hamilton
Hawkes Damon	Ted Yaryan

For a good part of Act One (first of three) it looks as if Jose Ferrer has once again hit the jackpot he has been cracking so consistently. After that start, however, Horton Foote's new play, "The Chase" shows signs of uncertainty. Acts two and three, as now written, directed and played, have moments of high dramatic excitement and, very often following directly after, scenes that offer cliches reminiscent of such oldies as "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "Girl of the Golden West."

From the start, the audience is alerted to the idea that Sheriff Hawes has one deadly enemy, a certain Bubber Reeves, whom he has been responsible for putting behind bars. When it is learned that Bubber has escaped in a particularly vengeful mood for the sheriff, the audience has every right to expect a showdown right in the sheriffs office. Every time the phone rings or the door opens, the natural expection is that "Bubber" has arrived.

This suspense is all to the good, but isn't borne out by the action that follows. Sheriff Hawes—plus a good-size posse—finally corner and overwhelm Bubber in his squalid cabin and Hawes shoots him down cold-bloodedly as he comes out.

It is impossible to feel the sympathy here that one did for Sidney Kingsleys cold-blooded but inwardly warm-hearted "Dick" in "Detective Story" because after the first act, despite adroit and admirable playing by the films' John Hodiak. The character of Sheriff Hawes is neither sympathetic nor believable. The business of his shooting a pet dog in a moment of tense (we might say hysterical) emotion in Act Two is perhaps the first piece of business tending to alienate audience feelings from this character who should have them eating out of his hand from the first. The deliberate killing of Bubber, granted its full justification as far as the man's crimes are concerned, continues to lessen the onlookers sympathy for the sheriff.

For analogy with plays of the present era, "The Chase" presumably comes closest to Sherwood's "Petrified Forest." Unfortunately it doesn't hold its suspense as that one did.

In addition to Hodiak's reservedly good performance as the sheriff, Kim Hunter gives a glowing and magnetic portrayal of his wife and credible jobs by a shrewdly selected cast highlighted by Eugenia Rawls (as the killer's mother), Kim Stanley as his frightened wife, and by Sam Byrd, Murray Hamilton (Bubber) and Ted Yaryan.

With all the inherent melodramatic merit in the script of this play, it so far hasn't completely clicked and it's going to take a lot of work to make it come off.

The Brass Ring

Wilmington, Del., March 27.

Donald Wilkin (in association with Donald Flamm) production of drama in two acts by Irving Elman. Features Sidney Blackmer. Directed by Stanley Gould. Settings, costumes and lighting by Elfi Von Kantzow. Incidental music by John Burrows. At Playhouse, Wilmington, March 27, '52; $3.60 top.

George Westman	Sidney Blackmer
Margaret Westman	Carol Goodner
Herbert Westman	Douglas Watson
George's father	Charles Thompson
George's mother	Margaretta Warwick
Joan Westman	Bethel Leslie
Conductor	Joseph Leberman
Rosemary Adams	Patricia Benoit
Charlie Butler	Conrad Janis
Spence	Fred Irving Lewis
Cora Potter	Helene Dumas

Irving Elman has written a play of considerable charm in "The Brass Ring." It's big-league stuff all the way—script, physical production, acting—and as such impresses as having a better than even chance.

The plot embraces 24 hours in the life of George Westman, a successful, but frustrated business executive whose basic conflict involves the rosy dreams of his youth and the hard-headed realism of modern life. His mate is a down-to-earth housewife, whose life is wrapped up in her husband, son and daughter. The son also is on the realistic side, while the daughter is a dreamer like her father.

Not too much happens in the way of action. Westman makes a futile attempt to shed his shackles, even to the point of making a plane reservation for Paris, where he hopes to pick up the threads of his dreams, but in the end decides life must go on as usual. At the end he makes it possible for the daughter to follow her will-of-the-wisp trail, while the son settles down to a business career.

The play's main appeal, however, is the way the fragile story is told, and the succession of scenes which build audience interest in Westman's dilemma. All the characters are carefully defined, emerging as flesh-and-blood people.

Brilliant staging and direction are definite assets. A revolving stage permits quick changes, as the incidents making up the plot move from bedroom to kitchen to commuter train and business office. Shown in bold relief is a modern city skyscraper—the real villain of Westman's life. The dream sequences are admirably presented as an expression of the hero's subconscious yearnings. Incidental music by John Barrows heightens the effect.

Sidney Blackmer is an excellent choice for the Westman role. Always believeable as the tortured executive, he gets across the inner conflict of a man who finds that business success cannot erase boyhood dreams.

Carol Goodner is fine as the wife who takes life as she finds it. Bethel Leslie doubles as the daughter and the dream sweetheart of her father's youth who kicks over the traces for a "free life" in Paris. She is attractive and competent in both roles. Douglas Watson also impresses as the son. Conrad Janis steals the office scenes as an irrepressible but jaded junior executive. Others rating bows in the topnotch cast are Patricia Benoit, Helene Dumas and Joseph Leberman.

Elfi Von Kantzow's settings, lighting, and costumes are all in the A-I division, and Stanley Gould's direction is sympathetic and well-paced. As for films, this one is right up Hollywood's alley.

The Great Highway

Pasadena, March 28.

Pasadena Playbox production of drama in seven scenes by August Strindberg, translated by Arvid Paulson. Directed by Bobker Ben Ali. Settings by Christine Dailey. At Pasadena (Cal). Playbox, March 27, '52; $2.40 top.

Hunter	Simon Scott
Hermit	J. Rogers Wood
Wanderer	Charles Calloway
Miller A.	Lyle Kirk
Miller E.	Christopher Manos
Wife of Miller A.	Lois Lindley
Girl	Fran Lindsey
Schoolmaster	Charlie Martell
Smith	Charles Buchinsky
The Nation	Gene Minney, Thomas Grimm, Sheila Cameron
Waitress	Sheila Cameron
Photographer	Donald Meyer
Eufrosyne	Betty Flint
Gotthard	Heber Hogan
Klara	Emily Keery
Old Japanese	Ward Wood
Murderer Moller	Paul Gartelz
Blind Woman	Kathie Hayes
Tempter	Grosvenor Glenn

Classicists will hail this translation of Strindberg's last play, but there's nothing here for the commercial theatre. An absorbing allegory, it is too abstract for regular U. S. presentation. The sheer weight of its physical production would make it a dubious venture, even if the theme and dialog were defined in the crisper structural blueprint of contemporary dramatics.

"Highway" is called a drama of a pilgrimage, with seven road stops. As brilliantly translated by Arvid Paulson, it is a script of exceptional verbal beauty. It is part prose and part blank verse—and studded with lengthy flights of rhetorical fancy that are perfectly in keeping with Strindberg's crisscrossed map of the road of life.

As presented here at the semi-invitational Pasadena Playbox (a wing of the Pasadena Playhouse), it emerges as a compelling theatre evening. It has been excellently directed by Bobker Ben Ali, whose feeling for the lines and understanding of the allegorical basis for the play shine through in a series of highly competent performances.

He has skillfully led his actors away from the pitfalls of scene-chewing to give each role the necessary reality to underline the allegory. In keeping with the symbolism of the play, virtually none of the characters is identified by name. Chief protagonist is called simply The Hunter, and his peregrinations provide the action.

Role is a tour de force for Simon Scott, an actor of feeling and sensivity who commands interest even in the sometimes lengthy soliloquies that stud the script. His encounters with such human frailties as stupidity, hypocrisy and intolerance are made vivid and meaningful to pinpoint the allegory. There are other good performances from Charles Calloway, Charles Buchinsky and Ward Wood, among others, and the level of the ensemble work is far above average.

Symbolistic skeletal sets by Christine Dailey enhance the production.

Assembly Call

Hollywood, March 25.

William Jarvis (in association with Glen F. Hardin) presentation of drama in three acts (12 scenes) by John Preston. Staged by Jarvis. Incidental music by John Lee. At Harout's Ivar Theatre, Hollywood, March 25, '52; $2.40 top.

Jeanne	Madeleine Holmes
Albert	Malcolm Peters
Noel	Wade Hamilton
Jim Taylor	Bill Erwin
Zeb	Louis Johnson
Kathleen	Lois Austin
Sola	Mary Scott
Annie	Cynthia Newby
Marla	Tara Summers
Leland	Chester Darbee
Bob	Douglas Yorke
Silvio	Ted Sannella
Elias	Walter Chilsen
Provost	Douglas Wood
Eric	Carl H. O'Bryan

There's no chance that either the stage or the screen will respond to this "Assembly Call." The Tuesday Night Players of some smalltown church group might essay it, but even their audiences might find it unpalatable.

Plotless, pointless and puerile, this interminable three-acter was written in 1943 after author John Preston's only son was killed in a wartime bomber crash. A similar incident serves as the springboard for some philosophizing about after-life. Incidental organ music lends an additional lachrymose touch to the discourse, which ranges from the ridiculous to the revolting.

Staging by William Jarvis relies on trick lighting in a futile effort to build interest, and an apparently embarrassed cast wanders through the 12 scenes as quickly as possible. There's nothing about the production that can be singled out for favorable mention.

Plays Abroad

The Same Sky

London, March 19.

Tennant Productions' presentation of drama in three acts by Yvonne Mitchell. Stars Frederick Valk, Thora Hird. Directed by Daphne Rye. At Duke of York's Theatre, London, March 18, '52. $2 top.

Momma Brodsky	Thora Hird
Poppa Brodsky	Frederick Valk
Reeny Brodsky	Joy Rodgers
Esther Brodsky	Frances Hyland
Manny Brodsky	Alaric Cotter
George Smith	Robert Dickens
Doreen	Betty McDowall
Sammy	Peter Hutton
Jeff Smith	Vernon Greeves
Porter	Bertram Shuttleworth
Old Woman	Margaret St. Barbe-West

Film and stage actress Yvonne Mitchell has now turned her hand to writing and this first effort deserves commendation. It is a human story of the breakup of a Jewish family through intermarriage, and was successfully tried out at the Lyric, Hammersmith, before it was transferred to the West End. Traditional problem of the hide-bound orthodoxy of the old, clashing with the modern, freer attitude of the younger generation provides adequate scope for pathos and humor. Although somewhat disjointed, the story proceeds in an interesting form, tugging at heartstrings and public conscience. Its appeal looks limited.

Frederick Valk and Thora Hird share equal honors as the doting parents of three children, living in London's East End during the hazardous period of the recent war. They are heartbroken at the refusal of their elder daughter to accept a Jewish boy friend. When she marries a Christian soldier, her father disowns her, although allowing her to shelter in their home while her husband is overseas, but refuses to speak to her. The prospect of a grandchild gradually softens the old man's heart and when the tragic "killed in action" telegram arrives, coinciding with the baby's arrival, a general reconciliation occurs with both families.

Frances Hyland and Vernon Greeves win sympathy and understanding as the defiant young couple while Joy Rodgers registers breezily as the adolescent younger sister. Alaric Cotter gives a simple, endearing performance as the kid brother and Peter Hutton makes the most of the self-effacing role of the unlucky suitor. Bertram Shuttleworth turns in a gem of a characterization as a subway attendant. Play is capably directed by Daphne Rye. Clem.

Le Moulin de la Galette

Paris, March 18.

Yvonne Printemps production of three-acts (one set) comedy by Marcel Achard. Directed, Pierre Fresnay. Stars Yvonne Printemps and Pierre Fresnay. Set by Wakhevitch. At Michodiere, Paris.

Isabelle	Yvonne Printemps
Auguste	Pierre Fresnay
Olivier	Renaud-Mary
Charlot	Pierre Mondy
Sophie	Melina Mercouri
Lulu	Francette Vernillat

Except for the wonderful draw of the Yvonne Printemps and Pierre Fresnay team, local equivalents of the Lunts, this play would not have had a chance. Two very boring acts follow the brilliant first one, evidencing once more that the current crop of French playwrights is running short of ideas. However brilliant a writer Marcel Achard may have proved himself, a few sparks in the last two acts do not suffice to kindle a fire that appears extinguished after the first curtain. Nothing likely here for either Broadway or Hollywood. The charming middle-age couple of Fresnay and Printemps live in a Montmartre apartment. He is a musician, she makes art ashtrays. They have a real friend and a rich but nasty cousin whom they ask to lunch with his frivolous wife, in playing up to him. Unknown to them, he overhears what they really think of him and he seeks revenge by trying to make Miss Printemps. They throw him out. Balance of the play turn into a cheap meller, resorting to all sorts of corny tricks.

Fresnay and Miss Printemps, as a team, have never been better. She has never been more alluring. The way they handle not only the well-paced first act but manage to keep the audience attentive during the dragging remaining portion is a wonder. As the faithful pal, Pierre Mondy is topshelf support. Renaud-Mary and Melina Mercouri give a very good account of themselves in very unsympathetic parts. As the Bohemian couple's little slavey, Francette Vernillat, has vivacity and charm.

The title refers to one of the old Montmartre windmills, now a cabaret. The Wakhevitch set, showing the couple's cheap living room with a window opening on a balcony revealing the distant roofs of Montmartre, is a thing of beauty. It is in keeping, too, with the rest of the production for which the Printemps-Fresnay couple have spared nothing to give the play a chance. Fresnay's direction often is a lifesaver for the script.

Under the Skin

London, March 5.

Desmond O'Donovan production of drama in three acts by Hurford Janes. Stars Louise Hampton. Directed by John Sykes. At Embassy Theatre, London.

Ella Jessop	Louise Hampton
Thomas Jessop	Oliver Johnston
Bonny Jessop	Anne Hayes
Joss Kimber	Rory MacDermot
Mrs. Barnes	Diana Johnson
Letty Nicholls	June Petersen
Willy Chapman	James de la Mare

This is a variation of the current teenage delinquency trend in stage and screen entertainment, involving seduction during alcoholic amnesia resulting in perpetual blackmail. It is a well-knit, moralizing story, good enough in itself, and natural in treatment and portrayal. As a candidate for wider audiences it is doubtful.

Locale is a farm house run by grandparents of a young girl. She is led into mischief by an older friend who takes her dancing with mixed foreign servicemen at a nearby town, where she passes out through unaccustomed drinking. She confesses to her grandmother that she is going to have a child. The old folks stand by her and arrange to have the infant adopted right after birth. The son is a colored infant. The foster mother demands extra money and from then on bleeds the pair of their entire savings. The girl, ignorant of all this, marries her grandpa's young partner, and is grieved to learn that she can give him no children. Driven to ruin by the blackmailer, the grandparents are forced to confide in the husband, who forgives the deception and offers to adopt the child.

Louise Hampton makes a moving figure of the self-sacrificing old lady while Oliver Johnston supports her as a typically forthright farmer. Anne Hayes earns sympathy as the betrayed youngster and Rory MacDermot enacts her loyal husband with touching sincerity. Diana Johnson is excellent as the foster-mother. June Petersen makes a brash impertinent figure of the older girl. John Sykes directs the play with intelligent insight.

The High Bid

London, March 10.

Armada Production (by arrangement with Peter Cotes Productions) presentation of play in two acts by Henry James. Directed and edited by Barry Ashmore. Settings, Kenneth Lawson. At New Boltons' Theatre Club, London.

Mrs. Gracedew	Hermione Hannen
Chivers	Gordon Phillott
Cora Prodmore	Jenny Laird
Young Man	Dennis Goacher
Mr. Prodmore	D. A. Clarke-Smith
Captain Clement Yule	Hugh Burden

Regarded as one of Henry James' unactable plays, "The High Bid," which survived four matinee performances in 1909, has been taken off the shelf and an edited version staged at this intimate club theatre. It is an enterprising venture which will have appeal to a very limited audience. It could not hope to survive as a normal commercial production.

It has the filmsiest of plots, with its charm and entertainment derived from the wordy and flowery language in which James indulged. Story describes the attempts of a businessman to exchange his daughter for a mortgage he holds on a country mansion. He is, however, outbid by a wealthy American widow who just loves everything English.

The cast does excellent work. Hermione Hannen plays the widow with all the airs and graces of the period. D. A. Clarke-Smith is the hearty, plain-speaking businessman, while the not-so-meek daughter is played pleasingly by Jenny Laird. Hugh Burden is too diffident as the radical thinking owner of the mansion.

Tartempion

(John Doe)

Paris, March 5.

Dollie Fairlie & Andre Puglia production of comedy in three acts by Frederic Dard and Marcel E. Grancher. Stars Jeanette Batti. Directed by Pierre Valde. Set by Aime Bazin. At Theatre Fontaine, Paris.

Melodie	Jeanette Batti
Felix Legras	Jean Brochard
Colonel	Charles Dechamps
Jeremie	Jacques Dynam
Mrs. Legras	Germaine Risse
Napoli	Jean Claude Deret
Tartempion's father	Pierre Naugier
Postman	Pierre Naugier
Legras's daughter	Francoise Delbart

This comedy should have been written under a capsulized form as a curtain-raiser and it would then click. As is, diluted into three acts, it drags a lot and is unlikely for a long or profitable run.

The story concerns the cafe owner and mayor of a village who succeeded, with the help of a colonel, in obtaining an appropriation to erect a monument to the war dead of the village. There happen to be none. So he manages to claim as dead one Tartempion (Jeremie in the play), who was only missing and happens to turn up just as the monument is to be dedicated—bad political business for the mayor. Inevitable comic situations ensue.

Description of village politics is funny, as well as the antics of a prostitute and her "manager." But there is too much political talk, which leads Jean Brochard to the border on overacting. Jeanette Batti and Jean Claude Deret are fine, while other parts are good. Germaine Risse's part is unimportant, while her daughter is very prettily handled by Francoise Delbart.

Could be turned into an amusing graft story in a small U. S. town, with considerable sapolio on the prostitute's part. Maxi.

The Gentle Maiden

Dublin, March 25.

Irish National Theatre production of comedy-drama in two acts by Donal J. Gillinan. Directed by Ria Mooney; settings, Vere Dudgeon. At Abbey Theatre (Queen's), Dublin, March 24, '52.

Eileen ..... Maire O'Donnell
Tim Regan ..... Liam O. Foghlu
Mr. Clarke ..... M. J. Dolan
Joe Mullen ..... Harry Brogan
Julia ..... Maire Kane
Guard Geaney ..... Ray McNally
Guard Timmons ..... Philip Flynn

While this play hardly furthers the basic principles on which the Abbey Theatre was founded, it does prove to be an entertaining comedy-thriller. Two prisoners on their way to jail, under guard meet at a country railway station. The young girl aids the moderately-successful exponent of the art of larceny to escape and is, in turn, released on bail to a strange old gentleman whose pleasure it is to wait at the railway station for the return of a long-lost daughter who never comes.

Maire O'Donnell, as the girl, gives a fine performance and the other woman in the piece, Maire Kane, makes a believable character of the housekeeper. The comedy relief is provided by the stationmaster of Harry Brogan, which is a particularly clever characterization while Ray McNally and Philip Flynn are the two guards in charge of the prisoners. Liam O. Foghlu, criminal from the city, and the rather strange character of the train-meeter, played by M. J. Dolan, both give sound performances.

Vere Dudgeon's two settings captured the mood of the play which looks set for a run. It should attract interest as a possibility for production outside of Ireland. Mac.

La Mare Aux Canards
(The Ducks' Pond)

Paris, March 10.

Denise and Marcel Maurey production of three-act comedy (one set) by Marc Cab and Jean Valmy. Directed by Jacques Charon. Features Denise Grey. At Theatre des Varietes, Paris.

Barbara ..... Arlette Poirier
Maxime ..... Christian Alers
Antoine ..... Felix Oudart
Emilie ..... Suzanne Bara
Suzanne ..... Denise Grey
Stephane ..... Robert Murzeau
Gisele ..... Denise Provence
Maitre Tisserau ..... Jacques Morel
The Prince ..... Gregoire Aslan

This comedy, which has an amusing first act and slower action thereafter, has a few funny lines but goes over mainly because of the excellent acting. Story reveals a middle-aged woman whose life has been devoted to playing backseat to a impecunious prince. Latter's whole life has been devoted to marrying rich women. Her brother, nephew and the latter's wife all live on her and wonder when the divorced prince again will be in a position to support the family.

A crazy toy manufacturer, so rich and bored with life that he wants to commit suicide and offers to make the woman his heir if she will permit him to use her apartment as his final resting place. However, he meets a young airplane hostess there and takes a new lease on life. The arrival of the prince complicates matters.

Denise Grey, whose illness postponed the opening in Paris a few days after a successful tryout in Brussels, is fine as Suzanne. The family consists of fat good-natured Felix Oudart; the son, Christian Alers, and the latter's wife, Arlette Poirier. Robert Murzeau, as the wealthy top merchant, is sensational and underplays a difficult role. His love interest is the very personable Denise Provence, as the air hostess. Jacques Morel, as the Prince's business manager shows considerable ability. Suzanne Bara is excellent as a maid. The Prince, who appears only in the last act, is done by Gregoire Aslan, nee Coco Aslan of Ray Ventura's orchestra. Maxi.

The Grass Harp

Saint-Subber, in association with Rita Allen, production of drama in two acts (five scenes) by Truman Capote. Features Mildred Natwick, Johnny Stewart, Russell Collins, Georgia Burke, Alice Pearce, Ruth Nelson, Jonathan Harris, Lenka Peterson, Sterling Holloway. Directed by Robert Lewis; musical score, Virgil Thomson; scenery and costumes, Cecil Beaton. At Martin Beck, N. Y., March 27, '52; $4.80 top ($6 opening).

Catherine Creek ..... Georgia Burke
Collin Talbo ..... Johnny Stewart
Dolly Talbo ..... Mildred Natwick
Verena Talbo ..... Ruth Nelson
Dr. Morris Ritz ..... Jonathan Harris
Reverend's wife ..... Susan Steell
Reverend ..... Ralph Hertz
Barber ..... Sterling Holloway
Baker's wife ..... Gertrude Flynn
Postmaster ..... Jay Barney
Sheriff ..... Val Dufour
Judge Cool ..... Russell Collin
Choir mistress ..... Jane Smith
Big Eddie Stover ..... Anthony McGrath
Brophy ..... Jules Racine
Sam ..... Larry Robinson
Maude Riordan ..... Lenka Peterson
Baby Love Dallas ..... Alice Pearce

Truman Capote, whose stylistic stories of boyhood reminiscence have drawn marked critical attention and an intense following recently, has made a weirdie dramatization of his most recent one, "The Grass Harp." As esoteric sort of combination Tennessee Williams and William Saroyan, it lacks the vitality of the one and the effortless whimsicality of the other. Despite a few disarming touches, it appears to have limited Broadway potential, and is negligible screen material.

The play, reportedly adhering closely to the first half of the book but having a substantially altered second part, deals with an assortment of "characters." These include two spinster sisters, one grim and positive, the other shy and vague; a gabby family retainer who insists she's Indian, not Negro; a misfit cousin ward with a precocious enthusiasm for floosies and likker; an eccentric ex-judge; a timid, gossipy barber; a meek preacher and his pugnacious wife, and a giddy cosmetics peddler.

There are elements of fantasy and presumably symbolism in the yarn as one of the spinsters, rather than tell her domineering sister the secret formula of her dropsy nostrum, runs away with the maid and the young cousin to live in a treehouse. But after a fairly promising start the fable disintegrates in the second act, as a member of a comformist posse shoots the rebellious boy, a patent medicine hustler swipes the tough sister's $5,800 nest-egg and the meek sister turns down the ex-judge's proposal. Moreover, the piece as a whole seems self-conscious and precious.

The arty style of presentation hasn't helped. For example, Robert Lewis's humorless staging, varying from over-niceness to over-emphasis, tends to aggravate the specialized aspect of the script. That, plus the apparently inconclusiveness of the characters, appears to limit the individual performances.

Thus, even such an expert actress as Mildred Natwick doesn't quite succeed in resolving the diffuse part of the indecisive sister, but Georgia Burke has it easier with the better defined role of the servant, as do Alice Pearce as the cosmetic saleswoman, Jonathan Harris as the crook, Lenka Peterson as the boy's sweetheart and Sterling Holloway as the scandal-loving barber. Johnny Stewart as the boy, Russell Collins as the lonely ex-judge and Ruth Nelson as the determined sister, make admirable attempts to clarify difficult roles.

Virgil Thomson has provided the fragile theme music (for flute, harp, fiddle, viola and cello), and Cecil Beaton has designed the elegant decor, with Edith Lutyens executing the costumes. Hobe.

Equity Show

O Distant Land, & All God's Chillun Got Wings

(LENOX HILL, N. Y.)

At Equity Library Theatre's Lenox Hill Playhouse, N. Y., the actors score over the director and playwrights in a twin bill, "O Distant Land," a new play, and "All God's Chillun Got Wings." The former is Stanley Richards' stillborn "One Third of a Nation," the latter Eugene O'Neill's unrelieved and overlong scrutiny of miscegenation.

Composed of a frame and a series of scenes, "O Distant Land" is a choppy one-acter dealing with a young colored boy in Brooklyn during the depression. He dreams of studying playwrighting with Walter Prichard Eaton at Yale and going to live in the oft-repeated "distant land" of the title, Manhattan. Rosetta Le Noire brings variety and sympathy to the role of the boy's mother, and Frederick O'Neal is, as usual, topnotch as the lad's saloon-keeping father, who buys a bar refrigerator with the money the mother had saved for the son's education. Ed Cambridge; as the aspiring son, and Vinnie Burrows, as his steadfast girl, are both good. Reginald H. Fenderson is not very convincing as the family doctor.

The 30-year-old psychological and social tragedy by O'Neill seems to need more expert direction than that provided by Ella Gerber to be effective theatre and to avoid the ludicrous. Neither of these was achieved in this production, marked by heavy-handedness, slow pace and lack of restraint. Despite the direction, two outstanding performances were contributed by Earle Hyman as the sensitive Negro boy Jim and by Patricia Ferris as the white girl Ella, who marries Jim and whose mind is destroyed by the conflict within her between her love for him and her hatred of the colored race he belongs to.

Gertrude Jeannette reveals a much-needed restraint as well as understanding in the role of Jim's sister Hattie, and Cecil Scott plays his mother with dignity and gentleness. Andy Milligan overplays, but effectively, as Shorty the pimp, while Bert Remsen is somewhat stereotyped as the gang-leader who seduces Ella and then deserts her before she turns to Jim. Ed Cambridge has a good bit as Joe, the Negro who beats Jim for being too uppity, and Janine Chapman, appealing as young Ella, is the best of the moppets, most of whom act too much like stage children.

The play benefits by the rich singing voices of Don Felasco, Milton Barrows and Ed Cambridge. Roger Furman's realistic street-corner set cramps the actors in the first act. His second-act interior is more adequate. Vene.

All Around the Town

(BARBIZON-PLAZA, N. Y.)

Produced by Juliet Bridgman, "All Around the Town," a new musical revue which opened and closed at the Barbizon-Plaza Theatre last week, was ambitiously and perhaps naively announced as a "pre-Broadway tryout."

According to the program, the chief culprit for this tasteless potpourri seems to be Larry Parke, who directed the production, wrote most of the lyrics and some of the music, and assisted in the choreography. The songs and sketches, familiar and fuzzy fifth carbons of recent Broadway revues, strove to be amusing on such subjects as politics, suburban living, the subconscious and Mack Sennett bathing beauties.

Faintly humorous were the blackouts on expectant fathers and "Pre-Marriage Counselling," skits done often and better in burlesque. Among the unfortunate young people in this pallid pastiche, Frank Moore, Bob Christie and Ilene Lehrer gave promise of better things under happier circumstances. Vene.

BALLET THEATRE'S D.C. DATE

Ballet Theatre will commence its 14th tour of the U. S. and Canada next fall, with a full week at the National Theatre Washington, beginning Dec. 29.

This will mark the first time for a ballet company in a legitimate theatre in D. C., previous engagements being in Constitution Hall or film houses.

Five Shows New to Pitt In Al Fresco Opera Setup

Pittsburgh, April 1.

Five shows new to outdoor audiences here, and four repeats, will make up the nine-week series of the summer opera company at Pitt Stadium this season. Oldies are "Desert Song," which brings Edward Roeker back as the Red Shadow again; "Annie Get Your Gun," with Sandra Deel doing the title role she first played at the Stadium in 1950; "Rio Rita," which is to star Met soprano Brenda Lewis, and "Babes in Toyland."

Schedule opens June 16 with "Carousel," featuring Dorothy MacNell, followed by "Desert Song," "High Button Shoes," which will co-star Tim Herbert and Don Saxon; "The Firefly," "Rio Rita," "One Touch of Venus," "Annie," "The Student Prince," with the Met's Brian Sullivan as the prince, and "Babes in Toyland." William Wymetal, managing director of the Civic Light Opera Assn., expects to have the leads lined up for "Firefly," "Venus" and "Toyland" within next couple of weeks.

nection with arrangements by which Ezio Pinza was signed as original co-star), the total net profit came to $2,892,709.66.

No Ill Wind

"King" had an operating profit of $57,576.34 for the five weeks ended March 1, the net going as high as $15,173.40 for one week when Gertrude Lawrence was ill (as star, she gets 10% of the gross, so that $5,170 was saved when she was put out of the cast). That brought the total net on the production to $138,265.54 for 49 weeks' operation, less $6,913.28 paid to Miss Lawrence, representing her 5% share of the show.

Accounting for the week ended March 8 (subsequent to the above summary) reveals that the touring "SP" netted $15,101.89 on a gross of $52,476.50 at the Lyceum, Minneapolis. The theatre share was a straight 25% of the gross. Included in the $24,255.49 company expense were $7,190 cast payroll (the amount was reduced because co-star Janet Blair was on vacation), $1,735.54 for musicians, $1,750 for company crew, $339.20 for extra stagehands, $5,247.65 author royalties (including $1,049.53 to Rodgers and Hammerstein as "managers") and $1,311.91 director royalty.

The "South Pacific"-"King and I" anniversary party April 12 will be at the Hotel Astor, N. Y.

5 Little Frustrations And How They Grew

(Or The Bobbsey Twins at Menninger's)
By KEN ENGLUND

Oh, friends, what an exciting day this has been in Hollywood! Now far be it from me to violate a confidence, but Morty Hackmeyer, America's sweetheart of a screenwriter, told me personally that he has an idea! Not his own, of course, but he does show splendid initiative to have thought of taking and making something out of such a flimsy springboard as "War and Peace" by Leo Rolston.

His studio naturally doesn't want war in it and yet is afraid of a pacifist angle, but Morty, in the treatment he has knocked out between buffalo hunting trips to Idaho with Gary and Clark (he's a great shot you know) thinks he has the story licked. He assured me personally that everything would be done in good taste and will be tentatively titled "Ma and Pa Kettle in Mittel Europe."

And speaking of romance, what's with Morty and Countess Betty Von Sauerbraten? They were seen dancing together while his treatment was being typed. Oh, our boy does get around and not just on the typewriter keyboard. Believe you me, he'll have to work fast on Betty for he flies June first to Scotland to pick up his annual supply of Black Angus cattle. Morty won three ribbons at the Pomona County Fair last year, you know. He never lets any grass grow under his feet where cattle are concerned.

New Pocket-Size Mag

A pocket-size mag is planned by a new firm incorporated in Topeka, Kans., a fortnight ago. Firm is Now Publications, Inc., with mag to be called Now Magazette. It's due in April.

Incorporators include Henry Haldeman-Julius, son of the late E. Haldeman-Julius, publisher of the Little Blue Books. Other incorporators are Ray L. Newberrt and Martha N. Hennessey, Girard, Kans. Ben L. Humphreys, Girard, is resident agent for the new firm, with authorized capitalization of $50,000.

Publication is described as a current feature magazine. Firm expects to purchase the Little Blue Books from the Haldeman-Julius firm, and distribute them with the national magazine as a "free book of the month" feature.

Reuters Chief's Autobiog

Sir Roderick Jones, a former correspondent in South Africa for the news agency, and who took over Reuters and reorganized it in 1915, has written his autobiography, "A Life in Reuters," the news agency now owned cooperatively by the British press. Doubleday will publish.

When German refugee Julius Reuter first founded the press news bureau in 1848 he first used carrier pigeons and later the wireless to relay information from all corners of the world.

Ireland Bans Ilka Book

Ilka Clase's novel, "New York 22," and Paul De Kruif's "Life Among the Doctors" are among 33 books just banned by the Irish Censorship of Publications Board.

Two U. S.-published periodicals, American Photography and Popular Photography, were among four nixed at the same time.

Bill White's New Chore

On April 2, and on each Monday, Wednesday and Friday thereafter, William Chapman White's column, "Just About Everything," will appear on the editorial page of the New York Herald Tribune. For the past three years. White has written many of the Topics of the Times, which were published on the editorial page of the New York Times.

Boxtop Baedeker

Contests are a staple method for hypoing the boxoffice, whether it be in the filmeries (Council of Motion Picture Organizations, for example, has been been mulling a national contest that would bring more patrons into theatres) or on the air (Ralph Edwards' "Miss Hush" or more recent Mr. Dimes stunts are classic examples). Getting the customer to tear off a boxtop and write why he likes Wheat Treets in 25 words or less is a promotional technique that has been used with good payoff by companies of every type—big, little and in-between. But many a prize project has fallen short of its objective, or failed to realize its full potentialities, which is why "Successful Prize Contests" (Prentice-Hall; $7.50) is a welcome addition to the how-to tomes on advertising and selling.

Book is by a pair of knowing specialists, Lester M. Cone, Jr., merchandising account executive for McCann-Erickson ad agency, and Zenn Kaufman, sales and ad consultant now merchandising director for Philip Morris. (Ciggie exec, incidentally, yesterday (Tues.) addressed the Sales Executives Club in N. Y. on "Showmanship in Business.").

Manual, which runs to 567 pages, not only covers all phases of its subject but makes entertaining reading. It serves as an excellent guide to use of the contest technique—studying the primary and secondary objectives, selecting the theme, strategy of prizes, contest promotion, selection of judges, framing of rules, etc. One chapter, "Keeping out of Jail," is a top-flight summary of regulations and decisions of the Post Office, Federal Trade Commission, Federal Communications Commission and the various courts, advising those staging contests on legal pitfalls.

Especially valuable is a 200-odd page appendix, which gives the case histories of 44 contests. Latter will prove provocative to those looking for inspiration and practical experience. Inclusion of plenty of charts and illustrations and a complete index also help make this a sock boxtop Baedeker.

'Confidential' and the Trade

Skyrocketing from 12 to No. 2 bestseller, Jack Lait and Lee Mortimer's "USA Confidential" (Crown) is the butt and the envy of the trade. Most "reputable" publishers scoff at the legal involvements they fear the book will incur, plus also the ethical aspects born of the general squawks, but the more frank execs among these "old line" publishers wonder if they'd "act so superior if we were the lucky publishers."

Apart from local defenders, such as the Dallas and San Francisco press, some of the reviews have been on the favorable side. As for the sundry libel suit threats, Crown in N. Y. avers that, despite the repetitive reports of such actions, which may or may not come to pass, so far they have yet to be served with one suit. The book's four printings now total 180,000 copies. At the moment it's a phenomenal bestseller.

Prolific Max Shulman

Max Shulman is back at home in Westport, Conn., after having been in Hollywood since last January, writing the screenplay, "Steaks for Connie," for Metro. It's an original story by Shulman and Herman Wouk, and last year the former did the screen treatment at M-G.

While he was in Hollywood, Metro bought the screen right of Shulman's last book, "The Many Loves of Dobbie Gillis," and engaged him to do the screenplay. He also sold to Universal-International an original story, "Ivan's Left Hand," written by him in collaboration with Leo Lieberman. Paramount is negotiating a deal with Shulman to write one screenplay a year for five years.

Follett Award Winner

Chicago publishers Wilcox & Follett will announce in June the winner of the 1952 Charles W. Follett Award of $3,000 "for worthy contributions to children's literature," prize going to Reba Paeff Mirsky of New York for her novel, "Thirty Brothers and Sisters," about a young Zulu girl. Publication is set for late this summer. Writer's rep is Larney Goodkind.

Author teaches at the New School for Social Research, N. Y., her husband, Dr. Alfred Mirsky being a research MD with the Rockefeller Institute. Their worldwide travels resulted partly in this novel from Mrs. Mirsky.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Hollywood.

As long as people have to compete against animals for public attention, it's silly to talk about this being a man's world. In one of the publicity devices connected with the exploitation of "Blessed Mother Goose," it was thought it would be a smart tieup to bring in Hollywood Park's Goose Girl and her pet goose.

I didn't exactly leap at the idea because I know geese to be mean as snapping turtles. But the goose was brought into town anyway and proceeded to raise hell at the corner of Hollywood and Vine. She hissed, pulled at a rope that would have hung a horsethief, and snapped at children who sought to pet her.

A four-day-old lamb, which was the cutest thing seen on Hollywood Blvd. that day, had to be warned not to sniff the goose or he'd get his Levantine schnoz bobbed. I picked up the lamb and played with him, but the goose was something I wouldn't have touched with anything less than hot tongs.

I ran into Guy Bates Post, who on seeing how the goose was acting up feared the worst. Next year he celebrates his 60th year of trouping, incidentally, because he began with Mrs. James Brown-Potter (Cora Urquhart) in "Charlotte Corday" in 1893. He told of a gazelle he had in "Omar the Tentmaker." Richard Walton Tully, the author of "Omar," added the animal to the cast. It was one of those touches which an author thinks will add not only realism but an irresistible bit of charm to a play.

But, as most actors know, animals as part of a play are a great scene-stealing trial and not infrequently a nuisance. Trainers must be paid to handle them when they are offstage and in transit, and must rehearse them in their tricks so that their timing is not off when action calls for them to perform.

Persia, Before Oil Derricks

In "Omar the Tentmaker," which Post played 959 times without break just before World War I, the play opened with an elaborate prolog. The scene was set in a Persian garden. There was a balcony scene. It was the garden of the beautiful Shireen, Omar's love. The garden was enclosed by a high wall. There was a lily pond in the centre of the stage and a marble figure standing in the middle of the pond. Under Shireen's window was a creeping vine which Post used to climb to her balcony for their love-scene. There were roses blooming over the wall and large Persian jardinieres standing about as decorations. Beyond and over the wall were minarets, not oil derricks. As things went in those days, it was mighty romantic stuff.

It was one of the premises of the play that the greatest honor which can come to a Persian girl is to be called by the Shah to his court (slang for harem).

This, of course, meant her boyfriend would have to give up the love of his life, and vice versa. In "Omar" this meant that the tentmaker had to relinquish his love for Shireen so that some fat Shah could add her to his herd of heifers.

This idea was an oldie even when Tully wrote "Omar the Tentmaker," but you can find it in "The King and I," if you're still starving for this sort of frustration.

In "Omar," however, the Shah wanted to prove he was not without finer feelings. So he sent along a gazelle to Shireen as a token of his love. What he sent Omar I've forgotten. A beaker of hemlock, probably.

Emissaries, attendants and palanquin-bearers arrived with the Shah's gift. The royal train went up to Shireen. The Shah's emissary placed the gazelle at her feet. She was expected to embrace it and find that this token had softened the loss of her Omar. At least that was the author's idea of how it would all work out.

But Richard Walton Tully didn't realize that the search and purchase of a beautiful young gazelle would not be a matter of minutes. They are not common around New York. Africa, maybe, but not New York. It took weeks to find one. It was discovered in, of all places, Schenectady.

It had to be petted and fondled by the various members of the cast to get over its fear of strangers. Then it had to be included in rehearsals and cured of stage fright. Its needs had to be catered to so that no accidents would happen while it was on stage. And, being basically a wild animal, all this was not easy.

In time it became domesticated to Broadway. Then it was taken to Montreal, where the show was to open.

The Gazelle Goes Gaga

"We had a very big opening night," Post remembered. "The curtain rose on my prolog. It was my last night with Shireen and I played a farewell love scene with her. The royal procession arrived. Shireen was placed in her planaquin to be carried away and her little gazelle, whose soft brown eyes would melt the heart of anyone, was brought to her. She reached to pet him. But he scented an unfamiliar smell. He scented an audience. Not only an audience but an out-of-town audience. Instead of going to Shireen, he jumped over the lily pond to the footlights and stood there for a few seconds wondering what next to do.

"The gazelle sniffed and looked for an opening. Maurice Nitke, the musical director, was scared stiff the thing would leap over the footlights, crash into him and ruin his priceless Stradivarius. He began playing like a fighter trying to protect his jaw.

"One false step and the gazelle knew he would be in trouble up to his frightened ears. He stepped forward and, bang, went three electric light globes in the footlights. That made him leap back toward the actors. They scrambled for their lives. He kicked the Persian jardinieres all to pieces. He booted the statue out of the lily pond. He headed for Shireen, who jumped out of her palanquin, Shah or no Shah.

"Not even Omar, it appeared, saw this as an opportunity to seize her and escape to the hills with her. He, too, stood dumbfounded as the gazelle kept leaping around the stage. Finally some attendants tried to corner him. He dashed against the creeping vine and under the window. He broke the strap-hinge supporting the balcony and down came everything. By now the poor thing was frightened beyond control. The actors couldn't corner or hold him. Beautiful costumes were ripped to shreds. The stagehands rushed on stage and threw a net on him. Curtain."

By this time the audience was rolling in the aisles, and though he never planned to be a comedian, Guy Bates Post saw possibilities that night. After a lot of coaxing and petting and feeding the little fellow quieted down. The curtain was ordered raised again, and the play proceeded. This time, however, without the gazelle.

Even Birds Can Be Beasts

That ended the Shah's generosity. He never sent another gazelle. Post played "Omar the Tentmaker" nearly 1,500 times before he put the play on the shelf, but never again with a gazelle, and the animal was never missed.

As for our goose, she disappeared while Post and I were discussing birds and beasts in general. All efforts to find her failed. The Goose Girl was in tears. Since, to Hollywood Park at least, the quacking pest was a bird of paradise, the police had to be called in to find the feathered rattler. This in turn brought the matter to the attention of city editors.

"A plant, or we don't know Scully," they said as one man.

Nothing was further from the truth. If the pest had tangled with a tractor I wouldn't have called in an embalmer.

After hours of hunting, it was found. Some mean widdle kid had snapped a chain link on its beak and carted it off to fatten it for Easter. He cried and bit her on having to give her up. She's now back in Hollywood Park. Snapping at gazelles probably.

Bell-Ringers

belittled this mere ability to reach out and pick up the right bell. He pointed out that they once had a fellow hereabouts named William Tell who hauled off, with the sun in his eyes, a hundred yards intervening, with an audience tougher than a sponsor's wife, and bow-and-arrowed the core out of a crabapple which was riding squat on the cowlick of his towheaded son.

Booking offices which have been in business for years in Zurich and Geneva claim no knowledge of ever marketing this kind of musical novelty act to foreign lands.

Yodelers they know about. Flag-waving acts, too. And Alpine horn players.

But, Swiss Bell-Ringers, no.

"Dey vas nicht Suisse," said one oldtimer from the border Canton of Appenzell. "Dey vas uf Osterreich (Austria)."

He took another long swig from his stein, and then ventured a clue.

He allowed as how they might have come from Austria through Switzerland on the way to the boat and 20 consecutive weeks from Binghamton to Dubuque.

Come to think of it, that's about all that would have mattered to the guy who wrote up the three-sheet rosters of variety bills in those days.

well-informed individual characterizes it as "impractical." Lined up against it is booker George A. Hamid, New York, who returned from his South American trip too late to take concrete action.

Par Hearngs

lieved, may be more important than anything which has been yet brought out in determining the outcome.

Among witnesses to be recalled will be Par prexy Barney Balaban and Par veepee Paul Raibourn. It's expected they will be questioned regarding theatre acquisitions by Par prior to the consent decree. Also to appear for similar testimony will be UPT directors A. H. Blank and Robert B. Wilby, both of whom were associated with Par's theatre operations.

The commission will also hear testimony from Gordon Brown, owner of radio station WSAY, Rochester, N. Y., whose petition to intervene in the case was denied but who was allowed to appear as a witness. Brown who has been battling the so-called "monopoly" of the networks over advertising, will oppose the merger.

UPT prexy Leonard Goldenson was subjected to an exhaustive questioning yesterday (Mon.) by Morton Galane, counsel for DuMont, which is opposing the merger because of its effect on DuMont's competitive position in the network field.

Galane wanted to know if UPT is "giving ABC anything more than money." Goldenson admitted that the only person with TV experience whom UPT is supplying is John H. Mitchell, general manager of WBKB, Chicago, but he pointed to the caliber of UPT's management as reflected in its directors.

Under persistent questioning, Goldenson said he could conceive of no conflict of interest between theatres and TV for feature film because of Government requirements for competitive bidding picture by picture and theatre by theatre. On the TV side, he said, there will also be competition in sale of pix.

Galane also questioned Goldenson's reliance on legal counse to protect UPT against possible monopoly practices in TV in view of advice given Paramount, prior to consent decree, that it was not in violation of antitrust act. Goldenson had been in charge of theatres for Par previous to formation of UPT.

At request of Commission counsel Frederick Ford, Paramount put in the record an analysis of distribution of Par stock based on the dividend list of Dec. 1, 1949. It showed that 31,123 individuals, or 96% of stockholders, held 40% of stock, none holding more than 500 shares, while 1,500 individuals each, holding over 500 shares, held the remaining 40%.

pickups from the U. S. Naval Forces in the Mediterranean, Marines in Korea, GI outposts in Alaska, Air Force bomber groups in England, etc. Emcees would be rotated among such top stars as Bob Hope and Jack Benny.

Last fall Coca-Cola agreed to underwrite the first few programs, up to $30,000, but thus far the idea has not been picked up. Paul Warwick (& Legler agency), is enthusiastically behind the plan. Ted Repplier of the Advertising Council is also a strong backer and has written Paul West, prez of the Assn. of National Advertisers, who is circularizing his membership on the project.

Blueprint tentatively suggests that whichever network picks up the show should provide the talent, including staff orch, male chorus, producer and traffic control people who would work closely with the Armed Forces communications setup. Cost of network time would be borne by the sponsors. It was also suggested that a different sponsor pick up the tab each week.

Col. E. M. Kirby, chief of the Army's radio-tele branch, has been pushing the idea as a means of stepping up morale and public interest in defense problems. Main intent is to project to the at-homers that "this trip was necessary," i.e. to the war fronts. In turn, the at-home bickering on the whyfore of Korea, etc., and its attendant undermining of GI morale would likewise be handled to best advantage.

PIX AND SHOPS TEAM TO NIP TV

Only 7 B'way Shows Likely to Span Summer; Vacations, Politics Balking

Only seven shows are likely to run through this summer on Broadway, according to trade predictions. The unusually low number of hot-weather stayers is figured due primarily to several factors. One is the relatively low quality of the current season's shows, especially the dearth of high-voltage comedies. It's also reasoned that the generally uncertain boxoffice conditions will make it unusually tough for summer offerings (with the TV coverage of the political conventions supplying two weeks of rough competition). A final reason is that, as usual in recent seasons a number of stars are taking vacations, either to rest or for film or other commitments.

The entries rated most likely to span the July-August interval are "Guys and Dolls," "King and I," "Mrs. McThing," "Pal Joey," "South Pacific," "Top Banana" and "Wish You Were Here," the latter being the Leland Hayward production of the Arthur Kober-Joshua Logan-Harold Rome musical due to open June 25 at the Im-

Looks Like 'Who's on 1st' For A&C in Ownership Of 2 Warner Releases

Ownership arrangement behind the two new Bud Abbott-Lou Costello films looks like a financial counterpart to the comics' old routine which begins, "Who's on First?" Both pix are on the Warner Bros. releasing slate.

The first, "Jack and the Beanstalk," now swinging into distribution, is owned 100% by Costello. Abbott has full ownership of "A. & C. Meet Capt. Kidd," which goes out later in the year. WB has no part of the unique ownership setup other than releasing rights. This was a straight distribution deal.

In arranging the financing for "Beanstalk," Costello obtained a loan of $450,000 from Bankers Trust Co., N. Y. As a team, A & C were down for $250,000 as salary but deferred collection. The film was brought in at about $750,000, including deferments, with Costello putting up about $50,000 of his own money to provide the balance between the bank money and immediate cash required.

In lensing "Capt. Kidd," Abbott's deals were virtually identical, including the $450,000 banking arrangement and the $750,000 budget.

Phone Strike Disrupts Cleve. TV Transmission

Cleveland, April 8.

Local NBC television cables were cut here this morning, disrupting video transmission from the web's WNBK transmitter. Cut is believed due to the telephone strike here.

Since no network programming originates from Cleveland, there was no interference along the web. WBNK, however, was forced to switch to an emergency microwave link between its studios and transmitter, in order to get its signals on the air.

NBC's 'Situation Comedy' (TV) Kick

NBC-TV has embarked on a new situation comedy kick. Web to date has lined up both Joan Davis and Mickey Rooney to star in projected half-hour series, in addition to its recent buy of the William Bendix-starred "Life of Riley."

While NBC's top-name comedy shows are still among the rating leaders, CBS-TV's situation comedies have been taking considerable play away from them. Latter web's "I Love Lucy," the Lucille Ball-Desi Arnaz starrer, in fact, has swung into No. 1 position on the national Nielsens.

Miss Davis is now completing a picture and will turn to TV thereafter. NBC recently completed a long-term leasing deal with "Riley" packager Irving Brecher for the Bendix show, which is also slated for a fall teeoff.

Schnoz Bids Adieu to N.Y. Cafe Work After Copa

Jimmy Durante's closing show at the Copacabana, N. Y., Sunday (6) may mark his last nitery appearance in New York. The grind of three shows nightly, he stated, was too much for him and longtime partner Eddie Jackson. He might consider an appearance, in N. Y. at the Palace Theatre two-a-day, however.

The Schnoz was reluctant to play the Copa this trip. He took the 10 days to oblige his friends

PITCH TO GET 'STAY HOME' BIZ

By MIKE KAPLAN

Hollywood, April 8.

Pix and department stores—hardest hit by the "stay at home" atmosphere created by television—are teaming in a cooperative campaign designed to revive lagging business in both industries. Pitch to the hibernating housewife will be built around a "shop and see a picture" theme.

Plan is basically a switch on the "shop and park free" policy which has been worked with great success in most major cities. Details now are being worked out and the scheme will probably get a tryout in Pittsburgh next month in a tieup between exhibs there and Spear's Department Store. If it clicks, it will be offered on a nationwide basis. It has already received enthusiastic support from scattered members of the National Retail Dry Goods Assn., who see in the cooperative effort a chance to "get 'em out of their homes to where they might spend some money."

Crux of the scheme is a free ticket to a film house to purchasers of a stated amount of merchandise in participating stores. It can be keyed either to afternoon shopping and theatre matinee business, or adapted for those nights when stores are open. Exactly how the "ticket validation" scheme will be

ACLU Asks FCC Probe 'Blacklist' By Nets, 2 Outlets

Issue of blacklisting in radio and tele was placed before the Federal Communications Commission yesterday (Tues.) by American Civil Liberties Union which filed a complaint against ABC, CBS, NBC and DuMont networks and WPIX, N. Y. and KOWL, Santa Monica.

Demanding a general investigation of blacklisting and regulations to end the practice, ACLU asserted that blacklisting of writers and performers in broadcasting is against the public interest and that operators who condone it "lack proper qualifications to hold licenses."

ABC was cited for "possibly barring two outspoken anti-Commu-

FCC Thaws TV Next Week, Adds 2,000 New Stations; Educators to Get 230

Washington, April 8.

The three and a half year old freeze on new television stations will be lifted by the Federal Communications Commission next week with the issuance of the final allocations table providing channel assignments for approximately 2,000 stations in some 1,200 communities, VARIETY learned today.

FCC will announce the action for release Monday (14) in a summary statement listing the highlights of its decision in the TV rule-making proceeding the freeze instituted September, 1948. The decision will be embodied in a 600-page report carrying channel assignments for specific cities, policies to be followed in handling applications, reservations for educational stations, technical standards, etc.

With relatively few exceptions, the number of commercial VHF channels, approximately 550, provided in major cities under the proposed allocations issued a year ago will be retained in the final plan.

The report will provide for:

1. Reservations for approximately 230 educational stations, more than was specified in the proposed

Ball-Desi Soar 'Love Lucy' To Juicy 57G for Roxy 2

A striking example of television's ability to boost personal appearance salaries is reflected in the Lucille Ball-Desi Arnaz booking at the Roxy Theatre, N. Y., in mid-July. Team, heading their own layout, will be getting $57,000 for two weeks, plus overages on $100,000 weekly. It's their highest salary to date.

They have previously appeared in New York individually, but not as a team.

The couple's "I Love Lucy," a filmed series on CBS-TV, is now in top position on the tele ratings, having nudged out Milton Berle, who got more coin during his recent Roxy appearance.

Next A-Bomb Test May Be Telecast

The next explosion of the atomic bomb may be televised on an all-network basis, if certain technical problems can be worked out. In order to do the telecast, the networks may have to invest considerable coin to redesign some of the mobile equipment. Another factor entering into network consideration is the probability that the cameras will not be able to focus directly on the explosion, and a rigid schedule will have to be worked out for the cameramen so that they will not train the lenses on classified equipment.

The Government has offered the telecast to the industry, but network officials haven't fully ac-

Esther Williams Eyes Todd's Water Show

Deal is being negotiated for Esther Williams to play the water show slated by Mike Todd in the amphitheatre at Jones Beach, L. I., this summer. Todd has been to the Coast to talk to Miss Williams, and William Morris Agency's general manager, Abe Lastfogel, is handling it for her. . . . . .

Todd will run a water show in the afternoon, operettas and musicals evenings, and concerts Sundays.

Hospital Reports TV Helps Mental Patients Shed Nervous Tension

Detroit, April 8.

Television has so relieved tension for mental and indigent patients at the huge Wayne County General Hospital that attendants say they now whistle while they work.

The attendants were so encouraged with the results after TV sets were placed in some of the wards that they raised $2,000 at a recent party to buy additional sets.

"We, better than anyone else, realize the good television has done for our patients," Mrs. Marie Galloway, supervisor of attendants, said.

"The nervous tension and twisted tempers which we encountered so often before are seldom seen now. It's wonderful to see our patients smile and chatter. We only wish they all could have the benefit of television."

The hospital, one of the largest mental institutions in the country, bought several television sets 18 months ago to see what effect it would have on the mental patients.

Inflation Hiking All Lecture Fees, Agents' Take; No More Peanut Gabs

By KURT SINGER

The days of speeches for peanuts are over. Even the smallest Rotary, Lions and Kiwanis clubs can't get a speaker any longer for $25, as they could a few years ago. The minimum fee paid by America's service clubs for a 30-minute noon talk is now $50 and many of them pay up to $75 and $100. The average fee from women's clubs, town halls, colleges and industrial clubs for after dinner speeches now ranges between $100-$500, plus expenses. The expense account is a new item on the platform, as lecturers could not otherwise meet increased transportation costs.

Agents and managers have started to ask the newcomers for 35% commission. The big guns, however, still refuse to give more than a 25% cut. Ten-percenters are definitely out of the American platform picture. Smallest commissions are taken in California, as the state law sets 25% as the maximum. Wised-up eastern managers now lend their talent to the Coast and net a 7-10% "lending fee."

Even high schools pay more than ever for their school assembly programs. The old rates of $20-$50 have been boosted to $35-$60 for speakers, glass-blowers, snake charmers, dancers, magicians and other assembly performers. The musicians' union has tried to organize the school assembly talent but has received the brushoff so far.

Oldtimers Strong

Burton Holmes, the dean of all illustrated lecturers, is still leading the field, far ahead of all, with 10 programs going simultaneously in the bigger cities. He's retired, but co-workers show his films and give his talk. Thayer Soule is being groomed to inherit Holmes' production and leadership. Illus-

J. RAY'S $1,750 AT COPA, VS. 8G AT B'WAY PAR

While the Broadway Paramount gave Johnnie Ray a deal on which he can gross up to $8,000 weekly, when he opens May 28 and while the sudden disk flash has been garnering fancy fees on his recent personals, the Copacabana, N. Y., is paying him only $1,750. He opens there tomorrow (Thurs.). Jack Entratter, co-managing director of the bistro, could have had him at $300 but through one of those circumstances where the contract had been lying on his desk and it remained unsigned, a compromise was worked out at the $1,750 with General Artists Corp.

New show, including Jane and Betty Kean, the DeMarlos and Jimmy Nelson, is set for three weeks and may stretch to five.

Harry Jolson 'Resting'

Hollywood, April 8.

Harry Jolson was reported resting "as well as can be expected" at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital following amputation of the left leg above the knee last Saturday (5). He has been suffering from a circulatory ailment.

Seventy-year-old brother of the late Al Jolson entered the hospital shortly after publication of his book on Jolie's life.

NVA's Jolson Tribute

The National Variety Artists' 36th annual benefit show will be held Sunday night, April 27, at the Imperial Theatre, N. Y. It will mark the NVA's tribute to Al Jolson.

George Jessel is chairman.

Lunts, Soph Among Big Show Contingent Sailing for Europe

Seasonal upswing in transatlantic travel is reflected in the heavy list of showfolk who sailed for Europe from New York early today (Wed.) on the Queen Elizabeth. Among the contingent of 10 stage and screen people were Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne as well as John G. McCarthy, director of the Motion Picture Assn. of America's international division.

The Lunts are en route to a vacation in Spain. Later, they will star in Noel Coward's "Quadrille," which will be unveiled in London this spring.

McCarthy expects to be abroad about six weeks. He'll survey the market for Hollywood films in some eight countries including Britain, France, Germany and Italy. Another film exec abroad is Sam Eckman, Jr., Metro's managing director in Britain. In the U. S. for the past five weeks for homeoffice huddles, he also underwent treatment for an eye ailment at the Presbyterian Medical Center, N. Y. Condition reportedly is much improved.

Others heading Europeward are Sophie Tucker, film actress Gloria De Haven, British comedian Tommy Trinder, concert pianist Dame Myra Hess, photographer-scenic designer Cecil Beaton and Sir Alexander Aikman, chairman of the Electical & Musical Industries, Ltd.

Sailing today (Wed.) on the Ile de France are W. Ray Johnston, board chairman of Monogram-Allied Artists; Mike Levee, talent agency exec; actor Louis Jourdan and ballerina Yvette Chauvire.

'We Want You But Not At These Prices'—Bookers

Theatre bookers admit that names are scarce but still will turn down submissions because of price.

Warner Theatre, N. Y., bookers recently nixed Jerry Lester, who asked $18,500 and overages. Lester, of course, would have to pay the surrounding talent to be selected by him.

Froman Fingers Farber

Cincinnati, April 8.

Jane Froman, here last week to appear at a special $2.50 top showing in the Taft Theatre of her 20th-Fox biopic, "With a Song in My Heart," was so impressed with work of Burt Farber, WLW conductor and pianist, that he will be her accompanist for a two-week engagement at Bill Miller's Riviera, Ft. Lee, N. J., opening April 22.

Robert E. Dunville, Crosley Broadcasting Corp. chief, consented to the singer's request for services of the Farber fingers on that one date.

Top Firms Eye 'Songs for Sale' As Big Source

After an early brushoff from the major publishers and diskers, CBS' "Songs for Sale" video show is currently snowballing into a prime source of song material for the top firms. Since the outset of this year, a number of songs from the show have been etched on the top labels in addition to spurring competitive bidding among major pub firms.

Tipoff on the show's click with Tin Pan Alley has been the program's cessation of wires to publishers asking them to view the program. That has proved to be no longer necessary as a result

DEFER UNTIL JUNE 16 COAST COMMIE PROBE

Washington, April 8.

House Un-American Activities Committee postponed until June 16 its next scheduled Coast hearings on Red infiltration of the amusement industry. Radio and television will get careful scrutiny at that time.

Latest postponement was occasioned by reports from the Coast that current trial of Coast Communist leaders would stretch out another 60 days. Committee doesn't want to start its sessions until trial is completed.

Coast sessions were originally skedded for early part of the year, with few filmites subpoenaed to wind "odds and ends" of the film probe. Subsequent developments, however, indicate more filmites will be called although radio and video still will probably play a dominant role.

Apparently any decision on supplementary committee report on Red infiltration of the film industry will be held up until after the Coast sessions. Understood several radio writers and performers have already been subpoenaed; also doctors, lawyers and union leaders in defense and waterfront activities. As usual, committee is discreetly silent on the identity of those subpoenaed. Reportedly a full committee will go to the Coast; last fall only a five-man subcommittee made the trek.

Metro Pic Troubles Killer's Conscience; He Gives Up

Marion, O., April 8.

Credit a film with moving an undetected killer to confess.

Recently Paul Richardson, a steward on leave from his job at the U. S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, sat through two showings of "The Wild North" (M-G) at a theatre in Mansfield, O., and then came straight to the sheriff's office here and confessed a slaying committed on May 18, 1951.

Richardson said the pic's dialog troubled his conscience. Twice he heard the line: "The world is too wide to run away from sin." He then confessed the murder of Jimmy Keys, 40, whose body was found by hunters last Aug. 31. "The Wild North" involves a murderer who runs away from his crime, later confesses and is acquitted.

The Divine Sarah!

By JOE LAURIE, JR.

This is not Sarah Bernhardt's birthday or anniversary, so really have no reason to write this column about the Divine Sarah, except that the comeback of the Palace on Broadway as a two-a-day vaude house, has started discussions of the "good old days." The boys and gals put on their rose-colored glasses and write to the columnists about the old Palace and how they worked on the bill there with the great Sarah, and how tough she was to follow. It's an occupational disease to brag about knowing and playing on the bill with great names. They even brag about knowing gangsters. Why I knew Al Capone and—(oops, 'scuse me please). Some really did meet the great stars, and even played on the bill with them. But truth is, playing on the bill with stars of the Bernhardt calibre is like standing on line to shake the hand of the President who goes through the political motions and has forgotten you even before you let go his hand. The stars also go through being a good-fellow-artist motions, and may make a few friends on the bill that they remember, but in majority of cases, after the week is over, all is forgotten. Not by the act, but by the star.

And so I have checked with my records, programs, VARIETYs and newspapers and find there is no record of those who wrote in claiming to be "on the same Palace bill with Sarah." Maybe you don't care about this, but this column will save answering many letters and it may even come in handy to show any guy who makes those claims. He may holler, "That guy is all wrong, why I can prove I was there," etc., but I am sure they won't bother you again; which is something. So here goes:

First, would like to tell a few interesting facts about one of the greatest actresses of our time. She was born Rosine Bernard in 1844 and went "Upstairs" in 1923. She first appeared on the stage in 1862. She married a Greek actor, Jacques Damala, in 1882, and they separated in 1883. In 1889 she leased the old Theatre des Nations, Paris, rebuilt it and renamed it Theatre Sarah Bernhardt. She had her leg amputated in 1914, and was also made a member of the Legion of Honor in that same year. Her first American performance was in 1906. She was a fine painter and sculptress, also wrote a drama, "L'Aveu," and a volume of reminiscences. She was always "good copy" besides being truly a great actress. About 90% of her audiences in America couldn't understand a word of French, and she still jammed the theatres because they knew they were watching a great artist.

Chi Majestic Before Palace

Madame Bernhardt appeared in vaudeville in London, and also appeared at the Majestic, Chicago, before she made her Palace, N. Y., appearance. There is no doubt she put the Palace on the theatrical map. The few months that the house was open, before her appearance, it did very poor business. When she opened they raised the prices and on her first week she did $22,000, which was quite a vaudeville gross in 1913, for that is when she opened at the Palace, May 9, 1913. Frank Thompson was the house manager and Paul Schindler was the leader with 20 men under his baton.

For her act, Mme. Bernhardt had Lou Tellegen as her leading man (his first appearance in America), in two playlets. One sketch was "On Christmas Night Under the Terror" and she changed later in the week to "Thedre." To honor her and themselves, Laurette Taylor, Jane Cowl and Elsie Janis played the parts of Ladies in Waiting in this sketch (all bit parts without any lines) for one matinee.

The rest of the bill (not in the order of their appearance) comprised Joe Welch, the famed Hebrew comedian; Bartholamae Players in a sketch, "And They Lived Happy Ever After"; Ignatius Cardosh, a piano virtuoso; Val Harris, Rita Boland and Lou Holtz, in songs and dances (presented by Elsie Janis); McMahon, Diamond & Clemence in their "scarecrow" dance. Mlle. Fregosleska, a Roumanian nightingale, followed Mme. Bernhardt, who, in turn, was followed by Paul Seldon's "Poems in Marble." Mme. Bernhardt complimented Seldon on his act and he had ads in the trade papers quoting the words the Divine Sarah uttered.

The Madame's second week had (again not in order of appearance) Mr. & Mrs. Voelker, Vera Michelina (singing star of the Follies), Nat M. Wills, the great tramp comedian; Clayton White & Georgia Caine, fine sketch artists; Van Hoven ("the mad magician"); Millership Sisters, and Miss Bernhardt played "Lucretia Borgia," again switching to another act for the last part of the week. She did this throughout her engagement. She was followed by The Stanleys who, in turn, were followed by the Edison's Kinetophone. (Yeh, a moom pitcher.)

On the third week and a half (the Palace closed for the summer on March 27, 1913 and she had to catch a steamer to London where she had a previous commitment) the Bernivici Bros. opened, but because of a confliction on the bill were out after the first show and were replaced by Hopkins & Axtel, a travesty team. Lyons & Yosco were No. 2, followed by a pretty good comic juggler, W. C. Fields. Owen McGivney, in his great protean playlet "Bill Sykes," next, and then came Billy Gould & Belle Ahlyn; and a magic act, LeRoy, Talma & Bosco. By the way, Miss Talma did the canary cage disappearing trick that week. Miss Bernhardt played Borgia and was followed by songstress Bessie Wynn, while Robbie Gordon closed in a posing act.

The Divine's Return in 1917

On Dec. 17, 1917, Mme. Bernhardt returned to her vaude triumphs at the Palace. Her opening show then consisted of Gordon & Rica, bicycle act; Ed Gallagher & Bill LeMaire in "The Battle of Whatsthe-use?" [Gallagher later became part of the famous Gallagher & (Al) Shean team and Bill LeMaire was the brother of the famous George (Conroy &) LeMaire.] Lyons & Yosco (who appeared with her in 1913) came next, followed by the Cameron Sisters in their fine dancing act with Burton Daniels at the piano (Madeline Cameron is now Mrs. William Gaxton) who closed intermission. Frank Carter (who was Marilyn Miller's husband) reopened the second half and Sarah Bernhardt (now with her leg amputated) did "From the Theatre to the Field Of Honor" and "Camille". El Brendel & Flo Burt (doubling from the Colonial) followed and Mario Lo, posing act, closed the show.

The second week's show was opened by Hon. Francis P. Bent, a Brooklyn alderman, who had an illustrated lecture about the war; Ralph Dunbar's Mississippi Maids, a dancing and musical act; Eddie Borden & "Sir" James Dwyer (at the piano); Emmett Corrigan & Co., in a sketch, "War Ballads"; Robert Emmett Keane (who was doubling at the Lyric in the musical, "Grass Widow") told his great stories and recited, and Dorothy Jardon with Al Frankl at the piano, closed intermission. Al Lydell & Bobby Higgins reopened after intermission and Miss Bernhardt did "Field Of Honor," switching with "Camille." Belle Baker followed, singing "There's Millions of Heroes in Every Corner of the USA" and introduced "A Baby's Prayer at Twilight," and scored one of the biggest hits of her career. A posing act again closed the show, again Mario Lo (second week).

For her third and last week Parish & Peru opened and Donahue & Stewart deuced. (This was the same Jack Donahue who later became a great Ziegfeld star.) Miss Harnko Onuki sang ballads, Robert Emmett Keane (his second week) did war recitations, and Paul Dickey & Co. in his sketch, "The Lincoln Highwayman," closed intermission. Pat Rooney & Marion Bent reopened intermission in their new act, "Uptown," and then came the Divine Sarah (73 and with one leg) this week to play "Jeanne D'Arc"—the role of an 18-year-old girl and looked it. William Gibson read a short synopsis before the act. Harry Fox, with Lou Pollack at the piano, followed her and Mme. Jewel's "Circus Days in Toyland" (marionet act) closed the show.

A lot of actors claim they were on the bill with the Divine Sarah who weren't. It is just like the hundreds of actors and managers I have met who claim that they were the ones that got Will Rogers his talk in his act, which is another column.

PRESS FAVORS H'WOOD IN RED RAP

COMPO Pushes Campaign to 'Talk Up' H'wood in Drive Vs. Its Attackers

Council of Motion Picture Organizations is going on the aggressive with a campaign against industry maligners whose attacks center on charges of "Un-Americanism." The counter-offensive will be a part of the outfit's overall public relations program.

As the plan is now shaping up, trade execs on lecture tours under COMPO's speakers' bureau operation, and members of the "Movietime" troupes on hinterland treks from Hollywood, are all prepared to discuss the industry as a definite part of the American system—and that it is certainly not under any Communist influence.

Some film toppers are wary of continually denying charges of any Red taint, reasoning this would have the effect of allowing an old sore to fester. As a result, it's understood, the COMPO approach will be to talk up Hollywood and the trade in general as a capitalistic enterprise and an important element in the nation's economy. There would not be the direct denials anent subversives in the fold, per se, but rather the spotlighting of the film business as a wholesome operation.

First two industryites set to hit the gab circuit are Robert W. Coyne, COMPO's special counsel, and Maurice Bergman, Universal's public relations director. Coyne will tour Virginia and Bergman will cover Ohio, both next month.

Media other than the speakers' bureau and the "Movietime" treks likely will be used in the future for the job of building public good will and confidence, but these have yet to be decided.

In the past, COMPO has done some work in combating the trade's

GOP Convention This Yr. Makes Film Biz Wary Of Usually Choice July 4

While wary of next July in general because of the two national political conventions, some distribs now have all but decided that July 4, once every four years, will cease to be the choice date it has been in the past. In some instances already release schedules have been reshuffled so that big pix will not open around Independence Day. Feeling is that the Republican conclave, as covered by radio and TV, will take the fireworks out of the b.o.

The July 4 weekend expectedly will be big. In the past few years a substantial business climb started around that day after the traditional summer slump. But the new, adverse factor this year is that the GOP convention opens July 7 and promises to take the nationwide spotlight. Consequently, business could be as great as ever for the July 4 weekend but it would last only three days. Preeming a pic for the holiday could be hazardous, as a result, it's figured in some distrib quarters.

Politico conventions always have taken place about mid-summer, and radio coverage provided some theatre competition. TV is the big consideration this year as never before.

Marlene Wooed by RKO, UPT for 'Rancho' P.A.

Both RKO and United Paramount Theatres have joined in efforts to obtain Marlene Dietrich for a two-week personal appearance stint at the Paramount, N. Y., during the showing of RKO's "Rancho Notorious," in which Miss Dietrich stars. Pic is slated to bow at the Paramount May 15.

B.o. success of Miss Dietrich in a one-day, four-time appearance during the film's preem in Chicago prompted both companies to pursue the star for the p.a. stint. Miss Dietrich's asking price is held to be too high to consummate a deal.

'Won't Stop Picketing' Despite Suits, WEC Sez

Hollywood, April 8.

Wage Earners Committee will go right on picketing theatres, regardless of the Dore Schary and Stanley Kramer damage suits. That statement was made by Norman S. Smith, WEC prexy, who declared his group will picket any film house in which persons listed as subversives appear on the screen.

WEC members have been parading in front of several local theatres and carrying placards attacking Schary's loyalty.

Adolph Zukor Gets COMPO Eye As Next Prexy

While election of the next president of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations continues in a state of uncertainty, awaiting at least one more meeting of the nominating committee, Paramount board chairman Adolph Zukor is being talked up in top - echelon trade conversations as a likely candidate for the job.

Members of the COMPO nominating group, following a get-together in N. Y. on Monday (7), disclosed that "several industry leaders" had been considered and another meeting will be held shortly. The nominators declined to name names.

Others believed in the running for the role of COMPO's chief exec are Gus Eyssell, president of Rockefeller Center, and George J. Schaefer, prexy of Stanley Kramer Distributing Corp.

Zukor's name was introduced at a COMPO meeting some time ago but the idea of his taking over Indiana Allied Scores 'Vadis' Sales Policy In Tieups on Mdse.

Further charges that Metro's selling policy on "Quo Vadis," coupled with the merchandising tieups for the pic, were endangering exhibs' relations with local merchants were made this week by the Allied Theatre Owners of Indiana. Exhibs state that local stores, stocked with special "Quo Vadis" items, have been unable to promote and move the merchandise because the picture is still unavailable to many small situations.

Allied of Indiana's blast is based on three counts: "First, in creating a situation where an exhibitor loses the goodwill of important merchants of his community. This situation is created by Metro inspiring the manufacturer to promise the retailer that the local theatre will play the picture 'Quo Vadis' without any authority from the local exhibitor for such a statement.

"Second, creating a situation

Sues Gable for 20G In '51 Auto Crash

Tucson, April 8.

Suit for $20,000 was filed against Clark Gable here Thursday (3) as aftermath of two-car accident near Marana on Dec. 7, 1951.

Plaintiff is Mrs. Mary Lemme, operator of one of the cars involved in the smashup, who charges actor with driving his convertible in a "reckless" manner. Mrs. Lemme claims she suffered nervous shock, and abdominal, chest, leg and hip injuries.

AGREE PIX TRYING TO OUST COMMIES

In the midst of the current hullabaloo about Communism in Hollywood, a check on the trade's answer to the recent House Un-American Activities Committee report disclosed this week that the organized industry came off strongly on the press relations aspect of the report. Editorial writers across the country generally took Hollywood's side in the controversy. Additionally, numerous dailies carried the United Press' account of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations' comments on the House appraisal of Hollywood.

Following the last COMPO board meeting in N. Y., all member groups of the outfit pledged that they'd work for the big newspaper play as a means of building public good will. The hinterlands were well covered by exhibs aligned with either Theatre Owners of America or Allied States Assn.

COMPO toppers in N. Y. this week claimed the results were highly satisfactory and that a substantial segment of the public was reached via the pro-Hollywood editorials. Also, it was added, the widely published news reports doubtless served to stave off any uncomplimentary observations which some editorialists might have had in mind.

For instance, in a lengthy "think" piece, the Meriden (Conn.) Daily Journal asserted that while there might have been Reds in Hollywood, their influences "never have been strong enough to stain the product with their red dyes."

Science Monitor's Treatment

Christian Science Monitor, Boston, gave the squabble a straight news treatment. Excerpts from the House Committee's report on Hollywood's alleged inadequacy in coping with Communism were printed along with parts of the COMPO reply and statements made by Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, and Allen Rivkin, president of the Motion Picture Industry Council.

Citizen-News, Hollywood, spotlighted in an editorial that there "are few organizations of any size that haven't got some Communist party members on their payrolls."

Hughes' Commie Blast Viewed as Cue To Exit RKO; Mayer Report Up Again

RKO's 20 Pix Due

Hollywood, April 8.

Howard Hughes, RKO's controlling stockholder and studio head, and prexy Ned E. Depinet began huddles this week on setting a releasing schedule for 20 productions to carry the company until the studio resumes normal operations.

In addition to the releasing sked, the confabs also will take in other distribution problems, it's believed. In a statement last weekend, Hughes expressed confidence that the 20-pic backlog will be sufficient for operations until shooting resumes at the end of the summer.

Howard Hughes' announcement of curtailed production activities at RKO was viewed by trade hepsters this week as foreshadowing other major changes in the near future, possibly including a reported sell-out to Louis B. Mayer.

Persistent Wall St. reports have it that the former Metro studio head and a group of close associates have had conversations with N. Y. financial men looking to the acquisition of a production-distribution company. RKO, it is said, measures up to what Mayer has in mind.

Indicating that a deal is in almost immediate prospect is the fact that Louis A. Lurie, San Francisco realtor and one of Mayer's closest business associates, is due in N. Y. shortly to look in on arrangements so far. Mayer asked him to make the trek east, it is understood, and Lurie set quick plans to be in Gotham on April 24, following a Chicago stopover. Mayer, at the moment, is vacationing in Florida.

With a lensing lull at the Gower Street lot, it is figured that Hughes would be more amenable than ever to the idea of bowing out. His aviation, oil, and other industrial interests have been demanding more of his time because of the national defense effort and this was

Video Needs A Boxoffice, Sez Sidney

"Television will never come into its own until it has a boxoffice." That's the opinion of George Sidney, Metro director who's turned out "Annie Get Your Gun" and "Show Boat," among others.

When some practical form of "pay-as-you-see" TV is developed, Sidney observes, it will be the "greatest boon to the film industry," for producers will then gain a wider market for their product. Existing audiences will be augmented by shut-ins and a variety of others who are unable to attend theatres regularly.

"A 'pay-as-you-see' device," says Sidney, "will also lead to a new form of film distribution. But all this won't be realized for at least five to 10 years, because the entire industry will have to wait until science catches up."

Asked what will happen to exhibitors when science finds the answers, Sidney holds "that's a problem they alone will have to face.

Pre-Easter Trade on Skids; 'Apache' New Champion, 'Show' 2d, 'Queen' 3d, 'Snow White' 4th

Traditionally one of thoughest business weeks of year, key city trade as usual is feeling the influence of Holy Week this session. Only the very strongest pictures are breasting the downbeat. The few entries to do well currently are the exception rather than the rule. An added handicap is mild weather.

New champ this stanza is "Battle At Apache Pass" (U) despite the fact that this is first week to be in release. Playing in 10 representative keys covered by VARIETY, the Technicolor western thriller is fine to smash in most situations. "Greatest Show on Earth" (Par), which has been tops for six weeks in a row, is a strong second-place winner.

"African Queen" (UA), second last round, is managing to grab third position although now mostly on extended-run. "Snow White" (RKO), on relssue and playing in some localities for a third time, is roaring ahead to fourth spot, only a step behind "Queen."

Fifth money is going to "Quo Vadis" (M-G), which is nearing the end of current batch of top first-run engagements. "Five Fingers" (20th) is moving up from eighth to sixth spot. "Steel Town" (U) has perked up from runner-up category of a week ago to seventh while "Streetcar" (WB) is eighth. Ninth place goes to "Death of Salesman" (Col), with "Ma, Pa Kettle at Fair" (U) taking 10th. Some biz is being done by "Something To Live For" (Par) and "Wild North" (M-G), but most of it so disappointing that it will keep them from runner-up classification.

Some new product, launched this stanza, shapes promising. "Captive City" (UA), given a fine campaign, is doing nicely in Boston. But the real stalwarts are "Encore" (Par) and "Man in White Suit," (U) both being smash in N. Y. Latter is hanging up a new opening week record at the small arty Sutton. "Anything Can Happen" (Par) is only fair in N. Y.

"Jack and Beanstalk" (WB), which opened at N. Y. Warner Monday (7), is great in San Francisco on preem week. "Song in Heart" (20th) is doing big on first session at N. Y. Roxy.

"Sword's Point" (RKO) looks pleasing in Washington. "Bugles in Afternoon" (WB) is hefty in Toronto. "Young Man With Ideas" (M-G) looms lean in Frisco. "Marrying Kind" (Col) continues sock in N. Y. Victoria.

"Green Glove" (UA), okay in Washington, shapes nice in Toronto. "Lady Possessed" (Rep) looks fine in St. Louis. "Sailor Beware" (Par) is terrific in Portland, Ore.

"Room For One More" (WB) is sturdy in Toronto. "Girl in Every Port" (RKO) is fancy in Montreal. "Cimarron Kid" (U) is rated big in same city.

Theatre TV Facing Blackout On Coverage of Political Conventions

Chicago, April 8.

Theatre TV interests apparently are being by-passed as far as the video coverage of the presidential nominating conventions to be held here in July is concerned. Disclosure that big-screen tele has not been taken into consideration by the various committees rounding out plans for the event—billed as the TV industry's biggest show to date—came out during a panel discussion at last week's National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcasters' annual conclave.

The "what about theatre TV question" significantly was posed by Ben Cottone, general counsel of the Federal Communications Commission. Query was tossed at Sig Mickelson, CBS news director and chairman of the TV network's convention pool committee; Kenneth Fry, radio-TV director of Democratic national committee, and Edward T. Ingle, Republican counterpart. Trio tacitly admitted prospects of feeding the coverage to theatres looks dim at this time.

Both reps of the political parties expressed doubt their groups would okay the beaming of the show into places where admissions are charged. Mickelson was more explicit, saying there's been no provision for theatre TV pickups of the webs' joint telecasting of the powwows.

FCC legalite, however, warned there may be a question of monopoly involved if the telecasts are denied to the big-screeners. Three tele networks are setting up to spread the event cross-country to their affiliates and independent stations, via American Telephone & Telegraph's cable and micro-relay system. Cottone asked if AT&T, as a common carrier, might not have a responsibility to make the service available to other interests.

He was thinking specifically of requests from non-TV cities along the west-bound relay such as Denver. The World Series telecast last fall was tapped off the AT&T circuit and piped into Harris and John Wolfberg's Broadway filmery in Denver. But conceivably, tele-equipped houses along the AT&T route both east and west of Chicago might decide to put in a bid for the telecasts.

It's not believed likely the two political parties would turn down any concerted bids for admission-free big-screening. But at this late date, the complex financial arrangements that would have to be worked out with the networks who are bankrolling the joint coverage apparently preclude any significant theatre TV participation.

Projectionists Get 5-Year Pay Hikes From 4 Coast Chains

Los Angeles, April 8.

Theatre projectionists on four circuits in this area have been granted wage increases that will mean a top scale of $3.04 an hour in three years. Top scale for first-run projectionists up to June 30, this year, will be $2.77 an hour. After that it goes up 15c an hour for a two-year period. Another 12c an hour will be added for the two last years of the five-year agreement.

Deal was made by the Moving Picture Operators, Local 150, IATSE, with Fox West Coast, Warner Theatres, United Artists Theatre Circuit and RKO. Representatives of two other circuits, Metropolitan Theatres and Fanchon & Marco, ankled the meeting. They declared they were not empowered to grant the increases, as their circuits were economically unable to do so at this time. Understood they will have a separate meeting with Local 150 chiefs in two weeks.

Cowan Names Cook

Norman Cook has been named general manager for the production of "Main Street to Broadway," which Lester Cowan is to produce in N. Y. for the Council of Living Theatre.

Cook is due in N. Y. this week from the Coast, where he had been working with the Jerry Wald-Norman Krasna unit at RKO.

13 More '51 Foreign Pix Than '50 Got Breen OK

Sixty three foreign films received the American film industry's production code certificate of approval in 1951, an increase of 13 over the film imports approved in the preceding year and almost double the 33-picture average for foreign product during the past decade.

This is revealed in an annual report to Eric Johnston, prexy of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, from Joseph I. Breen, administrator of the industry's voluntary system of self-regulation. Report indicates that an overall total of 432 features received the MPAA's okay last year.

UPT Mulls Buying Big Hunk of Its Common Stock

United Paramount Theatres is considering reduction of its capitalization via buying a hefty chunk of its common stock issue on the N. Y. Stock Exchange, according to Wall St. reports. UPT issue on the Big Board was selling at $18 this week, generally regarded as a deflated price, and it's felt that a capitalization shrinkage program would have a bolstering effect.

UPT has about 3,260,000 shares outstanding, including some represented by certificates of interest. That's roughly the same number which the corporation started out with when independent operation, apart from Par production-distribution, began on Jan. 1, 1950.

Paramount Pictures, of course, began its independent operation with the same number of shares outstanding but subsequently cut these to 2,300,000. Largely as a result of this, according to financial observers, the Par stock has been strong at the Exchange, bringing a price of over $27. It's noted that UPT and Par each has been maintaining a $2 annual dividend rate, and both are in strong shape financially.

Warner Bros. continued its capitalization cutting over the past couple of weeks with an invitation to all stockholders to tender their holdings for purchase by the company at up to $15 per share. The outfit announced Monday (7) that the entire amount of $10,000,000, which had been allocated for the purchases, had been used.

WB is buying in 669,150 shares in the tender operation at a price of $14.99 per share and under.

An additional 31,035 United Paramount Theatres certificates of interest have been converted into regular shares of common stock, as permitted under Paramount's antitrust consent decree.

UPT's issue now comprises 2,888,290 regular shares and 415,641 interest certificates. Until they convert their certificates into the standard shares, investors have no voting privileges and collect only 50% of the dividends declared, with the balance held in escrow.

See K.C. Pic Censor Abolished by Council

Kansas City, April 8.

The action whereby the position of city film censor will be abolished is expected to take place in the public improvements committee of the city council here April 11.

As earlier proposed by the picture industry here and approved by the council for budgetary reasons, the change will relieve the city of reviewing films, most of which already have been censored by other agencies. The change will also relieve distributors of the expense of special screenings for the censor, but will not relieve them of a per reel license fee.

Gould Snares Rights To Sanders-Marshall Pic

Walter Gould, former foreign sales manager for United Artists who's now importing and exporting films on his own, has picked up rights to "Captain Jack Black," which he'll release through Classic Pictures.

Julien Duvivier produced and directed the film, which has George Sanders, Herbert Marshall, Patricia Roc and Agnes Moorehead in the leads. It was lensed at Majorca.

Loew's Reveals Receipts Cut At Home, Abroad

Loew's domestic and foreign theatre receipts have been on the decline over the past few years, while worldwide film rentals have been picking up, it's disclosed this week in figures made available by the company.

Theatre business fell to $43,600,000 in fiscal 1951, compared with $46,500,000 in 1950 and $50,000,000 in 1949.

Rentals climbed to $107,000,000 in '51, against $102,800,000 in '50 and $98,400,000 in '49.

MPIC Members Mull Outfit's Continuance Due to Its Ineffectiveness

Hollywood, April 8.

Continued existence of the Motion Picture Industry Council, recently weakened by the desertion of the Screen Directors Guild, is currently under discussion by its members.

Mary McCall, Jr., representing the Screen Writers Guild, pointed out: "The faults of MPIC are the faults of all its members. We have a limited staff and budget for a very large job. If we find our present operations unwieldy, then we must work out other methods of implementing and making MPIC effective."

At an executive committee meeting, with Gunther Lessing presiding, it was emphasized that MPIC had failed to take action against theatre picketing and unfounded charges of Communist influences in the film industry. Miss McCall said:

"If the MPIC is impotent in these matters, then we are wasting our time, but the SWG won't resign while there is real hope in such a council. Certain vexatious questions are before us. Our industry was the only one singled out by a Congressional Committee, and a recent report of that Committee was unfavorable to Hollywood. Still no effective action to counter it has been taken by MPIC. There is a certain amount of unwieldiness of procedure and divergent points of views involved, but we must take action. It must be demonstrated to us between now and June 1 that the MPIC can function in the field in which it was set up."

$304,305 QTRLY. HIKE FOR U OVER 1951

Universal's consolidated earnings for the first quarter of this year show an increase of $304,305 over the corresponding period of 1951. Net profit for the 13 weeks ended Feb. 2, 1952, was $411,435, after provision of $280,000 for estimated Federal taxes. For the corresponding period of last year, the total was $107,130, after provision of $55,000 for estimated taxes.

Following deduction of dividends on the preferred stock, consolidated earnings for the quarter just concluded are equivalent to 37c per share on the 960,498 shares of common stock outstanding. For the same period of the previous fiscal year, earnings equalled 5c. per share on the common stock. U noted that these figures are preliminary and subject to verification by independent auditors and to year-end adjustments.

Company reported that its annual stockholders meeting has been set for July 8, 1952, in Wilmington.

Giving Awards to Pix and Players Becoming More Popular Pastime

With the announcement of the Academy Awards, a temporary lull has set in during the film-accolade season. Although the Oscar derby is the climax to the award season, there are probably many more unheralded groups which have yet to bestow honors on individual pictures or players. To this group can be added the 50 or more organizations which have already announced their motion picture citations.

Granting an award to pictures appears to have become a popular pastime, with more and more outfits joining the honor-giving parade each year. To the film industry all awards are welcomed and treasured, but to the general public the plethora of "bests" can become confusing, especially when there is a wide divergence in the selection of films for placing in the awarding category.

The importance of an award, of course, depends on the popularity and influence of the organization or group making the presentation. However, accolades from small, generally unknown outfits can be valuable in that they serve as part of the overall public relations gimmick for the industry. Presenting an honor to a film or a player has also been used as a method to gain a degree of recognition for a special group by cashing in on the popularity of motion pictures.

To the industry, from a b.o. angle, the two most important awards are those of its own Academy of Arts and Sciences and of the New York Film Critics. Accolades from these outfits can be employed to hypo the b.o., and results over the years have shown that honors from these groups, when promoted and advertised, serve to draw added customers to the pictures.

In the award category may also be placed the "10 best" lists which more and more newspaper film editors are running each year. Further welcomed by the industry is the increase in citations from national magazines. Some of the latter have developed into bigtime affairs with dinners, the presentation of plaques and other hoopla.

Publicists' Mail Ballot Set for First Time

Hollywood, April 8.

Publicists Guild is holding its annual election by mail, rather than at the annual June membership meetings, for the first time. Guild changed constitution in hopes it would bring more balloting.

Deadline for voting is May 28, with results to be announced at June 16 meet. Steve Miller, Metro, and Dan Thomas, UI, are competing for the presidency now held by Kenneth Carter, UI. Nat James, RKO, and Marty Weiser, Lippert, nixed nominations.

FCC Forced to Defer Theatre Hearing Indef

Washington, April 8.

Pressure of other matters has caused the Federal Communications Commission to abandon its plans to hold hearings on theatre television next month. The hearings have been put off indefinitely since the Commissioners were unable to agree on a date. However, they plan to hear the ease in the fall. A series shortage of staff, aggravated by reductions in appropriations, is a contributing factor in the postponement.

Important problems connected with the lifting of the TV freeze and a heavy backlog of radio work which accumulated during the past few months of deliberations on the freeze made it impossible for the agency to meet the May 5 schedule for the theatre tele hearings. Because of the nature of these proceedings, which involve proposed changes in use of radio frequencies, it's required that the commissioners themselves sit in to hear testimony.

Relative quiet on the theatre tele scene and testimony of UPT during recent Paramount hearings that it sees only limited possibilities for the medium may be considered in deciding whether there will be a further postponement.

A major TV question which may get priority over theatre tele is the move to revise agency's monopoly rules and permit networks and others to have more than five o and o stations. NBC, ABC and DuMont have petitioned the Commission to raise the limit to seven, but to keep "rule of five" on VHF.

9 TOP COS. GOT $880,200,000

'51 Rundown on Major Cos.

Here's the rundown on the gross revenues raked in by the nine major film and theatre corporations in 1951, as compared with the previous year. Figures are from official sources, excepting Paramount and RKO Pictures, where Wall St. estimates are used:

	1951	1950
Col	$55,400,000	$57,200,000
Loew's	176,200,000	178,000,000
Par	94,500,000	81,300,000
UPT	117,000,000	107,300,000
20th	163,800,000	162,400,000
U	65,200,000	55,600,000
WB	125,300,000	135,300,000
RKO Picts	50,000,000	46,500,000
RKO Theatres	32,800,000	37,200,000
Totals	$880,200,000	$861,300,000

Rackmil Sees Top Merger Plan So Far Is For U to Buy Decca Assets

Purchase of Decca Records' assets by Universal Pictures is in the forefront of several plans being considered to effect a consolidation of the two companies. Decca stockholders were so told at the firm's annual meeting held in N. Y. yesterday (Tues.).

Advantage of one company acquiring corporate assets of the other, Decca prexy Milton R. Rackmil explained, is that such a move would require only 51% stockholder approval. On the other hand, an exchange of stock would necessitate an okay by two-thirds of the shareholders.

While the merger won't be effected "unless feasible from the standpoint of both companies," Rackmil declared, "I think it has a pretty good chance at present." Through purchases last summer Decca acquired 263,700 shares of Universal common and 32,500 of its warrants equivalent to a 26% voting interest.

Separate committees representing both Universal and Decca, Rackmil said, are investigating the various amalgamation plans under consideration. Ebasco Services, he added, has been retained in a consultative capacity and has already made a preliminary appraisal of Decca assets.

Just what the value of the appraisal is Rackmil declined to say. However, he noted that "within the next month or so" if the merger is possible at all a report on the situation may be made. Beyond this, the Decca topper said, "there is nothing more I can add."

Meanwhile, for the second time

Italy's Studio Labor, Materials Up 15% In Year, Moguy Reveals

Although wages for studio labor in Italy have remained fairly constant, costs of materials have risen from 15 to 20% in the past year, according to producer-director Leonide Moguy. Particularly affected by the upward trend in prices, he said, is raw stock and sundry other physical items.

Moguy recently turned out the Italian-made "A Hundred Little Mothers" ("Cento Piccole Madri"), in which Columbia Pictures has a 70% interest. He's now negotiating with Columbia in a deal whereby Col would back another of his Italo pix.

In New York for the past week, Moguy has been participating in a round of radio, tv and press interviews to help plug "Tomorrow Is Too Late" ("Domani e Troppo Tardi"), which is slated to preem at Loew's State, N. Y., Saturday (12). A sex-education picture, "To-

Lipton Back to Coast

David A. Lipton, Universal's v.p. in charge of publicity and advertising, left N. Y. Thursday (3) for Chicago, enroute to Hollywood, following 10 days of confabs with homeoffice execs.

He remained in Chi over the weekend for the preem of "The Battle at Apache Pass."

L.A. B.O. Up 7% For First Quarter of 1952

Los Angeles, April 8.

First quarter of 1952 in Los Angeles first-run theatres showed a boxoffice increase of 7% over the first 13 weeks of 1951. This is the first upswing in the de luxe houses since the downward swing began in 1948. This year's 13-week grosses were $2,417,100, compared with $2,239,400 last year.

An important factor in increased receipts was the showing, at increased admissions, of such pictures as "The Greatest Show on Earth" (Par), "African Queen" (UA), "A Streetcar Named Desire" (WB), "Quo Vadis" (M-G) and "Death of a Salesman" (Col).

Rackmil Defines '2 Lines of Mdse': For Exhibs, Vidpix

Decca prexy Milton Rackmil, who heads for the Coast next week to huddle with Universal Pictures prez Nate J. Blumberg, will further go into the Decca-U interlocking interests deal. It is no secret by now that the merged disk and film company interests have a big TV in their future, and Rackmil makes no bones about the fact any vidpix activities by U-Decca need not irritate the exhibitors who have long been Universal's customers.

He is committed to the ideas of "two lines of merchandise." So long as the personalities, budgets, craftsmanship and techniques are different, and the theatre product gets the 'A' treatment, there should be no vexation by theatre owners over vidpjix, made on budgets of about 10% of a feature cost and constituting a separate and distinct business.

"Once the pendulum swings in favor of TV," says Rackmil, "and we allocate the quality to video, then the exhibitors may be justified in squawking. But we all know that can't happen. If ad agencies, sponsors and independent

Ray Hendry Named V.P. of Intermountain

Salt Lake City, April 8.

Ray M. Hendry, associate general manager of Intermountain Theatres since 1950, has been named v.p. and general manager of the chain, following resignation of Sidney L. Cohen as the other associate general manager.

Hendry's appointment marks the first time the theatres have been under complete local management since the local interests were merged with Paramount-Publix in 1929. Hendry started in show business 32 years ago as an usher, and since that time has served as manager of a number of local theatres.

SLIGHT '51 GAIN OVER YEAR BEFORE

Fiscal 1951 brought the nine major film and theatre corporations a combined total gross revenue of $880,200,000, representing a gain of about 2.32% over the previous year. The total for 1950 was $861,300,000.

While the percentage is slight, the fact that there actually has been an increase is heartening to execs. Gross income had been on the decline since the peak years immediately following World War II.

Several of the outfits have yet to issue their annual statements for '51, and their precise financial status is not reflected in the amount of total income. However, adding to the upbeat is the fact that expenses continued to be lopped off by various of the companies, consequently operating profits on the overall probably were slightly ahead of '50. On the minus side were the increased corporate tax rates.

Universal's total of $65,200,000 was viewed as especially impressive. That's a record high for the company. U still was on the uptrend going into its 1952 fiscal year, grossing $13,400,000 in the first quarter, a jump of about $700,000 over the corresponding period in '51.

While its gross was off a shade, Loew's has been marking gains in operating revenue. This amounted to $163,500,000 in 1951, $161,700,000 in 1950 and $160,182,015 in 1949. Accounting for the dip in overall gross was the slight decrease in non-operating income, such as from investments, profit on sale of assets and dividends from affiliated companies.

United Paramount Theatres looks good to some observers in N. Y.'s financial area. They figure UPT will have better control over costs because of its consolidation of theatre properties, and this will mean a slight increase in operating profits. UPT's gross of $117,000,000 in '51, it's anticipated, may be exceeded by $3,000,000 in '52.

Twentieth-Fox's overall increase for '51 was due to gains marked in film rentals, which more than compensated for a decrease in theatre receipts. Rentals accounted for $92,500,000 in the past year, up from $90,800,000 in fiscal 1950. Theatre receipts fell to $58,100,000 in '51, compared with $60,100,000 in '50.

States Rights Deals For 'Latuko' After N.Y. Censor Snag

Producers Representatives, Inc., N. Y., the Irving Lesser-Seymour Poe outfit which has the distrib rights to "Latuko," documentary film owned by the American Museum of Natural History, is making deals for the pic with states rights operators throughout the country. Outfit has concluded pacts for almost every section of the U. S., the only territories still open being those controlled from Memphis, Washington, D. C., Milwaukee and Des Moines.

Present selling method was arrived at following talks with the established distribs of offbeat pix, who supply bulk of indie product to "states" franchise-holders. Lesser and Poe figured they could make better percentage deals on their own. Pic, which has run into censorship difficulty in New York, has been doing heavy biz in non-censorship areas. As a result, Producers Reps has been able to set more advantageous terms on its own with individual "states" operators than it would have obtained under an overall distribution setup.

Pic, a documentary on African tribal life, was turned down last week by the New York State Board of Regents. Basis for nix are scenes in the pic depicting completely nude males. Film is currently running in about 30 situations throughout the country.

State Dept. Taking Big Part in Film Negotiations Abroad for U.S. Cos.

Still Peddling

Samuel Goldwyn's N. Y. office encountered some surprisingly enthusiastic support in one instance when it undertook to have the mayors of numerous U.S. cities issue proclamations honoring Hans Christian Andersen, tying in with the producer's film on the Danish fairy-tale author.

Elmer Lux, acting mayor of Buffalo, quickly wired that he'd be "very happy to cooperate." Before he went political, Lux was a salesman for RKO and, as such, peddled Goldwyn product.

State Dept. cooperation on a high level is expected in forthcoming talks with foreign governments on renegotiation of pacts on American film imports. It's anticipated that Ambassador James Dunn will participate in confabs with the French for a new agreement to replace the one which expires on June 30. Other State Dept. officials are seen taking part in talks with some of the other countries.

Meanwhile, John G. McCarthy, Motion Picture Assn. of America v.p. in charge of international affairs, leaves today (Wed.) on the Queen Elizabeth on a six-week mission on foreign problems. Before he returns in the latter part of May, he will have conferred with officials in Spain, Italy, Austria, Germany, Holland, Norway, Belgium and France. There is a possibility that McCarthy will be joined in Europe early in May by Eric Johnston, MPAA prexy, and Joyce O'Hara, v.p. McCarthy and possibly Johnston and O'Hara may visit the Cannes International Film Festival. It's believed that McCarthy also will sit in on a meeting of the International Federation of Motion Picture Producers. Group, among other things, will discuss ways of reducing or eliminating taxation on films in various countries.

Meanwhile, preliminary talks on the British and Belgium situation have been held by Fayette H. Allport, MPAA's rep in London. Present pact with Britain expires in October.

See Banks Easing Indie Financing In 230G to Gottlieb

Strong suggestion that banks may be loosening up on indie film production financing was seen this week in a $230,000 loan arranged by film-maker Alex Gottlieb with Chemical Bank & Trust, N. Y. Chemical demanded collateral for only $50,000, which investor Elliot Hyman provided, and accepted Gottlieb's note for the balance, according to the producer. Borrowed coin covered the major part of the budget for "The Fighter," which United Artists will release. Richard Conte, Vanessa Brown and Lee J. Cobb have the leads.

An added and important factor, of course, is that the relatively new United Artists management under prexy Arthur B. Krim has the indie distribution outfit operating on a sound basis. Hard-headed banking men, who had adopted a wait-and-see attitude toward UA, apparently are growing confident that the company is now in good shape. A bolstering factor in this respect

Cukor Eyes British Locations for 'Rachel'

Director George Cukor, who recently completed the Katharine Hepburn-Spencer Tracy starrer, "Pat and Mike," at Metro, planes to Britain this week to scout locations and backgrounds for a film version of the Daphne du Maurier novel, "My Cousin Rachel." In a three-and-a-half week stay abroad, he also plans to visit Italy and the south of France.

Nunnally Johnson is producing "Rachel" for 20th-Fox release. A Metro contractee, Cukor was given studio permission to do the outside venture. It's tentatively scheduled to roll at 20th in May. Johnson is scripting. Cast not yet set.

'Movietime' to Double Teams, Blanket Country

Hollywood, April 8.

COMPO's "Movietime U. S. A." teams will be doubled in 1952, according to Marvin Schenck, chairman. In a letter to Ronald Reagan, Screen Actors Guild prexy, Schenck clarified a "misconception" concerning the selection of players for the tours. He said:

"If any players have been overlooked or bypassed, the oversight is unintentional. We are endeavoring to cover the entire field and not slight anyone. We expect to cover the entire country in 1952. Last year more than 125 stars and personalities made the tours. This year we will double that number. We are now forming groups to tour Atlanta, Albany, Buffalo, Richmond and Memphis in April and May."

'Fabiola' Being Released In Spanish, Italian By UA in 3-Hr. Version

"Fabiola," Italian-made epic which, in its English dubbed version, chalked up a surprising domestic distribution gross of $1,050,000 for United Artists last year, will now play for Italian- and Spanish-speaking elements in the U. S. in its original three-hour form. Dual-languager was made in those two tongues.

UA execs this week said they anticipate that the pic, which Jules Levey is presenting in the states, likely will run about six months at the Hispano Theatre (Spanish) in upper Manhattan. It opens at that house and the Cinema Verdi (Italian), also N. Y., on April 12.

Runs in other areas which have sizeable Italian and Spanish populations are now being lined up. Film company's sales department is eyeing the southwest for a big play with the Spanish edition. "Fabiola" had been cut to about two hours for its first time out last year.

Million Feb. Tax Rise In Amus. Over Jan.

Washington, April 8.

Uncle Sam took in $23,891,000 in collections on the 20% general admissions tax during February, an upward jump of about $1,000,000 from the January take. February tax receipts normally reflect January at the boxoffice and it is estimated that about 80% of the total comes from motion pictures.

The February figure also exceeded February, 1951, by about $900,000.

There was also some pickup in the nitery biz. The 20% bite on nitery tabs brought the government $3,965,000, more than $300,000 greater than the preceding month and about the same over the February, 1951, receipts.

MGM Tinting 11 of 18

Hollywood, April 8.

With 18 pictures slated to start in the next 14 weeks at Metro, a total of 11 will be tinters—two in the company's own Ansco color process and nine in Technicolor.

Belles On Their Toes
(Color)

Beguiling followup to the successful "Cheaper By the Dozen." Good word-of-mouth and b.o. potential.

Hollywood, April 3.

Twentieth-Fox release of Samuel G. Engel production. Stars Jeanne Crain; Myrna Loy, Debra Paget, Jeffrey Hunter, Edward Arnold; features Hoagy Carmichael, Barbara Bates, Robert Arthur, Verna Felton. Directed by Henry Levin. Screenplay, Phoebe and Henry Ephron; based on book by Frank B. Gilbreth, Jr., and Ernestine Gilbreth Carey; camera (Technicolor), Arthur E. Arling; editor, Robert Fritch; music, Cyril Mockridge. Previewed March 28, '52. Running time, 88 MINS.

20th-Fox has a good followup to its successful "Cheaper By the Dozen" of two seasons ago. Delineating further adventures of the remarkable Gilbreth family, as penned by two members of the large brood, it offers the same type of warm, clean entertainment and carries a good word-of-mouth and grossing possibilities.

This time Samuel G. Engel is at the production helm with Henry Levin directing. Both just as smartly project the humor and heart as did their predecessors on the original screen adventure with the Gilbreths. The script by Phoebe and Henry Ephron, based on the book by Frank B. Gilbreth Jr., and Ernestine Gilbreth Carey, picks up the family where the first ended right after the death of the father. It comes over in the same style, concerning itself more with punching delightful episodes than following a straight story line. There's rewarding hilarity in the humor, a touch of heart-tug here and there, and, overall, the warmth of genuine entertainment for mass appeal.

There are many repeats from the cast of "Cheaper" to be found in "Belles On Their Toes," although quite a number of switches in character assignments among the younger Gilbreths. Jeanne Crain is again seen as Anne, and Myrna Loy as the mother. New among the principals are Debra Paget as Martha and Robert Arthur as Frank, Jr. Barbara Bates delightfully repeats Ernestine, and Hoagy Carmichael has taken over the handyman character. Each one helps to make the film a solid round of fun. Others scoring include Jeffrey Hunter, very good as the young doctor who gets Miss Crain; Edward Arnold, elderly suitor of Miss Loy's; Tommy Ivo and Jimmy Hunt, two of the kids; Martin Milner, a wow as a slangy collegian, and Robert Easton, very funny as a courtly southerner.

Script problems are concerned with the mother trying to support her children after the father's death, (role was effectively sold by Clifton Webb in "Cheaper" and he is glimpsed in this through process footage), and the breaking away of Miss Crain to start a family of her own with Hunter. It comes to the screen by excellently used flashback via Miss Loy's remembrance of the family struggle in prior years as she is watching the college graduation of her youngest offspring.

Picture is loaded with a succession of risibility-tickling episodes. Remembered will be the bathroom sequence in which the Gilbreth kids start a family parade that successful rids them of Milner's presence. The beach picnic, in which Debra Paget, keeper of the family purse, arranges it so all will have free steaks has a round of group singing led by Carmichael and danced by Miss Paget that listens and watches excellently. The kids' stealthy visit to the hospital to see their mother, Carmichael brewing of cork-popping, forbidden alcoholic beverages in the cellar, family councils and the many little touches of healthy, happy living add to the film's charm.

Laughs are to be found in many of the femme, and male, costumes of the 1920's, and the period values are beautifully caught in Technicolor by Arthur E. Arling's cameras. Robert Fritch gives the film excellent editing, and there are nostalgic values to be found in Cyril Mockridge's music score. Brog.

Miss Julie
(Froken Julie)

"Miss Julie," Swedish import which preemed Monday (7) at the World Theatre, N. Y., was reviewed by VARIETY at last year's Cannes Film Festival. Writing in the issue of May 16, 1951, Mosk called this celluloid version of the August Strindberg play a "somber study of heavy passion and conflicting social mores on an estate."

Reviewer added that "brilliant technical assets and fine stylized direction by Alf Sjoberg make this a good entry for some art cinemas." Anita Bjork, cast in the title role, was described as a "striking actress" who brings strength to the part. Trans-Global Pictures is distributing in the U. S.

Jack and the Beanstalk
(SONGS-COLOR)

Abbott and Costello in takeoff on the old fairy tale. Slanted for kiddie appeal and generally oke b.o. where comics go well.

Hollywood, April 3.

Warners release of Alex Gottlieb (Exclusive Productions) production. Stars Bud Abbott, Lou Costello; features Shaye Cogan, James Alexander, Buddy Baer, Dorothy Ford. Directed by Jean Yarbrough. Screenplay, Nat Curtis; from story by Pat Costello; added comedy, Felix Adler; camera (SuperCinecolor), George Robinson; editor, Otho Lovering; songs, Bob Russell, Lester Lee. Previewed April 2, '52. Running time, 78 MINS.

Dinklepuss ..... Budd Abbott
Jack ..... Lou Costello
Giant Sergeant Riley ..... Buddy Baer
Polly ..... Dorothy Ford
Princess Eloise Larkin ..... Shaye Cogan
Prince Arthur Royal ..... James Alexander
Mother ..... Barbara Brown
Donald ..... David Stollery
The King ..... William Farnum
Johnny Conrad and Dancers.

This classic fairy tale gets the Abbott and Costello buffoon treatment in a version shaped for kiddie appeal and the A&C following, indicating an oke boxoffice response in the situations where the comics generally do business. Elsewhere, adult draw possibilities are thin.

Neither the production conception nor scripting is very imaginative, both following a rather standard course, but A&C antics are good enough to bring it off satisfactorily. Opening sequence, filmed in sepia, gets into fairy story when comics take a babysitting job. While Costello reads the fairy tale to his charge he falls asleep and the fable begins in SuperCinecolor. Latter's tints help dress up the production but aren't particularly good.

Costello is the dimwit Jack who trades his cow to Abbott, the village's avaricious butcher, for five magic beans. The beans are planted and overnight a stalk grows into the skies, where the cruel giant, played by Buddy Baer, lives with his statuesque housekeeper, Dorothy Ford; the hen that lays golden eggs and the talking harp. James Alexander, the prince, and Shaye Cogan, the princess, are kidnapped by the giant. Jack climbs his beanstalk to rescue the royal pair, followed by the butcher, who wants the feathered Fort Knox.

The adventures in giant land, sharpened by the antics of the comics, are the best part of the film and do the most towards developing fun for moppet viewers. Jack's outwitting of the giant and successful rescue of the royal pair with the help of the housekeeper rates broad chuckles. Costello also sings the Bob Russell-Lester Lee tune, "I Fear Nothing," while Miss Cogan and Alexander supply the other musical moments.

Alex Gottlieb's production and Jean Yarbrough's direction permit the film to meander slowly through the first half, but the pace pickup in the second half is good. Abbott and Costello rate acceptable support from Baer, Miss Ford and Barbara Brown, as Jack's mother. Miss Cogan and Alexander are adequate as the romantic team.

The Nat Curtis screenplay, from a story by Pat Costello with added comedy by Felix Adler, was independently filmed under the Exclusive Productions banner for Warners release. George Robinson's camera and other technical work help get over the fantasy. Brog.

Feb.'s Peak Pic Pay

Sacramento, April 8.

Workers on the motion picture lots collected weekly paychecks averaging $112.19 during February, according to the State Labor Statistics Bulletin.

This is a new high, compared with $110.90 for January and $99.69 for February, 1951.

The San Francisco Story

Strong entry for action market, with names of Joel McCrea, Yvonne de Carlo giving it lift.

Hollywood, April 7.

Warner Bros. release of Howard Welsch (Fidelity-Vogue) production. Stars Joel McCrea, Yvonne de Carlo; features Sidney Blackmer, Richard Erdman, Florence Bates, Onslow Stevens. Directed by Robert Parrish. Screenplay, D. D. Beauchamp; story, Richard Summers; camera, John Seitz; editor, Otto Ludwig. Previewed April 1, '52. Running time, 80 MINS.

Slade ..... John Boucette
Meyers ..... Peter Virgo
Palmer ..... Frank Hagney
Buck ..... Tom Johnson
Scud ..... Fred Graham

A vivid and expert glimpse of the Golden Gate city in 1856, during the days of the vigilantes when California was undergoing political growing pains, is provided in this fast-paced melodrama, with names of Joel McCrea and Yvonne de Carlo to act as draw for good returns in the action market.

Solid values are contained in the D. D. Beauchamp script, for an exciting series of events climaxed by a shotgun duel on horseback between McCrea and Sidney Blackmer, state political boss who is attempting to gain control of the state for his own selfish interests.

McCrea, as a wealthy miner who answers newpaper editor Onslow Stevens' plea to help him and the vigilantes whom he captains rid California of Blackmer's machinations, is strongly cast in one of his better roles. Miss de Carlo furnishes plenty of sex appeal and interest as Blackmer's girlfriend, who falls in love with McCrea, and principals are furnished with smart, brittle dialog which purchases attention for every scene.

With arrival in Frisco of McCrea and his sidekick, Richard Erdman, after five years' absence at his mine, Blackmer becomes immediately interested in the former vigilante and sets Miss de Carlo on his track, to learn exactly why he is in town. Blackmer is buying votes for his man, to send him to U. S. Senate, and he doesn't want his applecart upset by anything McCrea and Stevens may accomplish. Meeting between Miss de Carlo and McCrea leads to their falling in love, although femme has him shanghaied after he spurns her. McCrea manages to escape from ship before it sails, and throws in with Blackmer as his own means of helping Stevens.

McCrea delivers handily in a convincing performance, scoring particularly in his fight scenes, and Miss de Carlo parallels him in interest. Blackmer is smooth and persuasive in hefty footage, Erdman gives a good account of himself as the whisky-guzzling pal, Stevens makes his part count, Florence Bates is colorful as proprietor of a saloon who arranges for men to be shanghaied, and Ralph E. Dumke is good as Blackmer's Senator.

Howard Welsch's producer-helming is handled along showmanship lines at all times, and Robert Parrish's direction makes the most of his situations and characters. Technical credits are generally of high calibre. Whit.

Tomorrow Is Too Late
(Domani & Troppo Tardi)

"Tomorrow Is Too Late," Italian-made film scheduled to preem Saturday (12) at Loew's State Theatre, N. Y., was reviewed by VARIETY at the Venice Film Festival in the issue of Nov. 1, 1950. Leonide Moguy directed this Vittorio De Sica starrer. Joseph Burstyn, Inc. is distributing in the U. S.

"Touchy theme of sex education for children," Hawk wrote, "is handled frankly but with delicacy." Critic added that with "proper launching it looks good for European dates and perhaps will be okay for U. S. art theatres where De Sica's name should provide added ballast."

Both De Sica and Lois Maxwell, Hawk noted, appear to advantage" as the liberally minded teachers who teach the facts of life to Anna Maria Pierangeli and Gino Leurini. But, he emphasized, "it's the youngsters' picture mostly, for director Moguy, aided by De Sica himself, has guided them with considerable care."

Valley of the Eagles

"Valley of the Eagles," British-made film scheduled to preem tomorrow (Thursday) at the Rivoli Theatre, N. Y., was reviewed from London by VARIETY in the issue of Oct. 10, 1951. Jack Warner, Nadia Gray and John McCallum are starred in this Nat Bronsten production, which Lippert Pictures is distributing in the U. S. Original running time of 86 minutes has been trimmed to 82.

"Main feature of this adventure opus," Clem opined, "is its unusual background" of mountain scenery in Sweden and Lapland. Plot revolves around a secret invention stolen but recovered after a chase through the Arctic wilds. Critic felt that the entry was a fair supporting feature for the duals. However, it also has a wealth of exploitation values if exhibs are inclined to push them.

Sound Off
(Color-Music)

Mickey Rooney toplined in enjoyable musicomedy; word-of-mouth appeal will help b.o. considerably.

Hollywood, April 3.

Columbia release of Jonie Taps production. Stars Mickey Rooney; features Anne James, Sammy White. Directed by Richard Quine. Screenplay, Blake Edwards and Richard Quine; camera, Ellis W. Carter; editor, Charles Nelson; music, Morris Stoloff, Freddie Karger, Paul Mertz, George Duning. Previewed April 1, '52. Running time: 83 MINS.

Mike Donnelly ..... Mickey Rooney
Lt. Colleen Rafferty ..... Anne James
Joe Kirby ..... Sammy White
Major Paul Whiteside ..... John Archer
Sergeant Crockett ..... Gordon Jones
Tony Baccigalupi ..... Wally Cassell
Barney Fisher ..... Arthur Space
Vonnie Vanderveer ..... Pat Williams
Captain Karger ..... Marshall Reed
Mrs. Rafferty ..... Helen Ford
Evelyn Ames ..... Mary Lou Geer
M. P. ..... Boyd "Red" Morgan

Columbia has a bright filmusical in "Sound Off." It's filled with fun, songs and a dance or two, and boxoffice prospects look good, especially once word-of-mouth boosting gets underway.

The life-in-the-army gimmick has proven itself for comedy screening in the past, with majority of the big-name comics having been "inducted" at one time or another. This time around it's Mickey Rooney, who socks over his every line, scene and song.

Tale, neatly scripted by Blake Edwards and Richard Quine, spots Rooney as a nitery entertainer who suddenly finds himself in the army. Situation comedy mixed up with some songs dominates the footage, which has actor in one scrape after another. He's finally able to straighten himself out, however, and fadeout finds him headed overseas with a special service unit to entertain the troops.

Rooney, who sparkplugs footage throughout, gets good support from Anne James, femme interest who plays a nurse lieutenant, and Sammy White, as a 10%-er. Remaining roles are all minor.

Film shapes up as an especially good credit for Jonie Taps, who's stacked film with a top entertainment potential despite its limited budget. Richard Quine's direction is equally first-rate, especially in the way he's kept film at a fast clip. SuperCinecolor camera work of Ellis Carter is good, as are majority of the technical credits.

Among the tunes, "My Lady Love," by Lester Lee and Bob Russell, and Rooney's own "Blow Your Own Horn" make the best impression. Neal.

The Atomic City

Good suspense thriller for regular duals.

Hollywood April 8.

Paramount release of Joseph Sistrom production. Features Gene Barry, Lydia Clarke, Michael Moore, Nancy Gates, Lee Aaker. Directed by Jerry Hopper. Written by Sydney Boehm; camera, Charles B. Lang, Jr.; editor, Archie Marshek; music, Leith Stevens. Previewed April 3, '52. Running time, 84 MINS.

Dr. Addison ..... Gene Barry
Martha Addison ..... Lydia Clarke
Russ Farley ..... Michael Moore
Ellen ..... Nancy Gates
Tommy Addison ..... Lee Aaker
Harold Mann ..... Milburn Stone
Emil Jablons ..... Bert Freed
Weinberg ..... Frank Cady
Gregson ..... Houseley Stevenson, Jr.
Clark ..... Leonard Strong
Patliz ..... Harry Hausner
Peter Rassett ..... John Damler
Robert Kalnick ..... George M. Lynn
Mr. Fenton ..... Olan Soule
Arnie Molter ..... Anthony Warde

Taut suspense and an interesting setting are features that make "The Atomic City" an effective spy thriller for the regular dual market. Story is laid in Las Alamos, N. M., where atomic science is being advanced, and gives film an up-to-the-minute dateline for the runoff of tight action and a satisfactory plot.

The Las Alamos filming, plus scenes in Los Angeles and in New Mexico's ancient Indian cliff-dwellings, lend authenticity to the Joseph Sistrom production. Feeling of credence is further enhanced by a cast of unfamiliar faces and the hard-hitting direction of Jerry Hopper, who makes a topnotch megger debut on this Sydney Boehm script.

Story is concerned with the kidnapping by foreign agents of the son of Gene Barry, a nuclear physicist at Las Alamos. Price for the boy's return is the formula for manufacturing atom bombs. Drama is strong in that the first concern of the FBI is the capture of the spies, with the boy's safety secondary despite the parents' natural instincts.

Hopper's direction gets a tight grip on the plot and injects a continually building suspense as the FBI and the father grasp for clues that might lead them to the boy and the kidnappers. The hunt brings them to Los Angeles, where methodical and thorough police work turns up the first lead. Chase returns again to Las Alamos, after the gang successfully eludes capture, and a chance clue from tourists' tips that the boy is a prisoner in an old Indian hut atop a high mesa.

The kid's escape from his jailers and flight into a mountain crevice, the arrival of rescuers to save him after he dangles for long minutes from the side of the mesa are craftily developed into nerve-shaking tension that will have audiences, particularly femmes, biting their nails.

Performances are naturally delivered by all concerned. Barry shows up very well as the father, and Lydia Clarke is equally good as the mother. Young Lee Aaker registers strongly as the boy, Michael Moore, FBI agent; Nancy Gates, a schoolteacher; Milburn Stone, in charge of the hunt; Bert Freed and others portraying the spies are all effective.

Charles B. Lang, Jr., contributes excellent camera work, and the editing is tight at 84 minutes. Leith Stevens' music score is busy. Brog.

Oklahoma Annie
(SONGS-COLOR)

Judy Canova in broadly-played comedy for cornbelt trade.

Hollywood, April 3.

Republic release of Sidney Picker production. Stars Judy Canova; features John Russell, Grant Withers, Roy Barcroft, Emmett "Pappy" Lynn, Frank Ferguson, Minerva Urecal, Houseley Stevenson, Almira Sessions. Directed by R. G. Springsteen. Screenplay, Jack Townley; story, Townley and Charles E. Roberts; camera (Trucolor), Jack Marta; editor, Richard L. Van Enger; music, Nathan Scott. At Iris, Hollywood, April 2, '52. Running time, 89 MINS.

Queen of Cowgirls ..... Judy Canova
Dan Fraser ..... John Russell
Bull McCready ..... Grant Withers
Curt Walker ..... Roy Barcroft
Paydirt ..... Emmett "Pappy" Lynn
Eldridge Haskell ..... Frank Ferguson
Mrs. Fling ..... Minerva Urecal
Blinky ..... Houseley Stevenson
Mrs. Fudge ..... Almira Sessions
Bartender ..... Allen Jenkins
Tillie ..... Maxine Gates
Judge Byrnes ..... Emory Parnell
Skip ..... Denver Pyle
Tullett ..... House Peters, Jr.
Mayor ..... Andrew Tombes
Larry ..... Fuzzy Knight
Old Man ..... Si Jenks

Judy Canova's country drawl will enable "Oklahoma Annie" to play off satisfactorily in the cornbelt market. Broad hokum, several songs and slapstick action are dished out for the hoedown set in a Trucolor dressing. However, film could have used more spots of genuine mirth, and it is greatly overlong at 89 minutes.

Plot and players scramble frantically through most of the film, generating some chuckles along the way by virtue of the broadest kind of physical antics. Miss Canova is an asset, selling the corn in her familiar gallus-snapping manner and giving the country touch to such tunes as "Blow the Whistle," "Have You Ever Been Lonely" and "Never, Never, Never," written, respectively, by S. Sherwin and Harry McClintock, George Brown and Peter De Rose, and Jack Elliott and Sonny Burke.

Lightweight story finds Miss Canova, a rural shopkeeper, developing a yen for the county's new sheriff, John Russell, when he is brought in as a replacement for the old crooked official. She also has a yen to be a deputy herself and captures a bank robber for Russell so she can wear a badge. Pair go on a cleanup campaign to rid the county of its crooked politicians, who sponsor a gambling den and saloon operated by Grant Withers. When the crooks capture the new sheriff, Miss Canova rallies the county's militant femmes and leads a raid on Withers' place. The den is smashed and the crooks jailed. Miss Canova becomes sheriff while Russell moves up to take over county supervising from Frank Ferguson, the corrupt politician.

Survey Shows Canada on Upbeat, Added Houses in D.C., New Haven

Continuing check on exhibition's welfare over the past few years further shows that there have been relatively few theatre closings due to business failure, and in many areas the number of new houses swinging into operation has exceeded the shuttered spots. Exhibs may be having their financial difficulties but the fact remains that they're still in business.

D. C.'s Net Increase —

Washington, April 8.

Four D. C. theatres have closed in the past year, but half a dozen new ones have opened in the same period, to give the nation's capital a net increase of two flicker houses.

Thus, this area with four television stations, legit theatre and a wide variety of other entertainment, does not indicate that film business has suffered any sharp loss of patronage in the recent past.

In the last year, the local Kogod-Burka chain has unveiled three new houses—the Flower, Langley and Ontario, the last a first-run house despite its nabe location. The Sidney Lust chain opened the Allen; and exhibitor Sam Roth has given the town an additional art house, the Plaza, as well as a new nabe house, the Park.

Meanwhile, the Ashley, an old sub-standard theatre, folded. Warner Bros. withdrew two of its houses, the York and the Holmes, from white clientele because of neighborhood population shifts, and leased them to the District Theatres chain of houses catering to Negro clientele. In January, District Theatres felt neither house was doing too well and cancelled the lease. District Theatres also closed its Rosalia Theatre.

"None of these," says Morton Gerber of the District circuit, "was shuttered because of bad business. They were closed because of geographic problems—the continual changing of neighborhoods." Dis-

Paal Seeking U.S. Stars On Coast for 2 British Pix, 1 to Be Made in India

Indie producer Alexander Paal, who plans to roll two films in Britain this summer and one in India next fall, planed to the Coast from New York Friday (4) to line up American stars for the trio of ventures. He expects to be in Hollywood about two weeks on the talent search.

First to go before the cameras is "Hounded." Screenplayed by Paul Tabori from a novel by Ellis-ton Trevor, it's scheduled to start at a British studio June 15 with Terence Fisher directing. Lois Maxwell has been set as one of the principals.

Second British project will be a film version of the William F. Temple novel, "The Four-Sided Triangle." Tabori is also scripting this one and Fisher will direct. Shooting starts July 28. Both pix, said Paal, are privately financed, and Exclusive Films, Ltd., will distribute in the United Kingdom. Release deals elsewhere haven't been set yet.

Picture to be made in India will tell the story of the famed Taj Mahal. Lensing is tentatively slated to get underway Nov. 1 at a newly-completed Bombay studio. Paal will produce in association with Indian film-maker Bishu Sen. Budget has been set at $1,000,000 which the Govindram Bros., industrialists and owners of the studio, reportedly are financing.

During Paal's Hollywood stay, he expects to confer with Hedy Lamarr with a view to her assuming the top femme role. Likewise, he hopes to ink Fritz Lang to direct. George Tabori may handle the screenplay. Technicolor commitment has been secured for the venture, the producer revealed, and it's to be done in both English and Hindustani.

Nathanson UA Pub Chief With Tamarin's New Job

Formal announcement of Alfred H. Tamarin's appointment as assistant ad-pub director of United Artists is expected to be followed shortly by the naming of Mort Nathanson to succeed Tamarin as publicity chief. Tamarin's upped status was announced Monday (7) in N. Y. by Francis M. Winikus, head of the department.

Nathanson, formerly Paramount's eastern publicity topper, is now repping indie producer Sam Spiegel in the promotion of "African Queen."

'Unfair' Tax-Free Competish Gets Exhibitor Raps

"Unfair competition" in the form of screenings and theatrical shows of various types presented in "tax-free" institutions was vigorously attacked on two fronts this week by as many exhibitor organizations. Both Independent Exhibitors, Inc. of New England, an Allied affiliated group, and Allied Theatre Owners of Indiana are polling members to compile data on what they regard as a menace to their own operations.

"There are reports of an increasing number of public institutions going into the entertainment business," the New England org asserts. "There's a greater variety in the attractions they offer and more frequent presentations. It is one thing to match your experience, talents and efforts against a competitor in a contest where the same rules apply to both, but it is another matter if that competitor doesn't have to pay taxes, doesn't have to realize a profit, can afford to outbid you. . . ."

Returns to its questionnaire, states ATOI, indicates that competition from tax-free institutions is a problem to many exhibs. One theatreman complained: "We have a school gymnasium which seats about 3,000 people and which is available to professional promoters for a nominal rental fee of $25. I

20th-Fox, U Won't Allow Other Pacts to Serve As Model for N.Y. Publicists

With pacts already signed with United Artists, Columbia and Warner Bros., the Screen Publicists Guild, District 65, Distributive, Processing and Office Workers of America, is continuing negotiations with 20th-Fox and Universal. Entering talks at 20th, which resumed Monday (7), were two representatives from District 65.

Although it's anticipated that the Col and Warner pacts would serve as patterns for 20th and U, both units report that they are negotiating with their own individual problems in mind. Main issue at 20th revolves around the maintenance of the present staff, with ad-pub members seeking assurance that duties of the department would not be transferred to 20th's ad agency, a move the company was reportedly contemplating.

Truth Hurts

Hollywood, April 8.

Realism in battle scenes for "The Snows of Kilimanjaro" at 20th-Fox was too realistic to suit four players, who were doctored for cuts and abrasions.

Casualties were Ben Frommer, Dan Numez, Dick Chenney and Ray Demeron.

PROD.-EXHIB FUND WOULD FINANCE

Charles P. Skouras, National Theatres prexy, hopes to nab 10 of the nation's top circuit men for $50,000 each as part of a fund to be used in embarking on an all-industry sponsored scientific research institute. The exec, who's also board chairman of Theatre Owners of America, also wants film studios to contribute a total matching the exhib offerings; that is, $500,000 from exhibition and the same from production.

In relating this, Skouras' associates said that the NT topper has it figured that the projected research center would operate on a budget of $1,000,000 annually for a three-year period, at least. The initial $1,000,000 would cover the first year's expenses.

Skouras is said to feel there's a pressing need for scientific experiments looking to the development of third-dimensions films in sight and sound. Also, to look to all theatremen for financial assists would require too much time and likely would have doubtful results. As a consequence, it's said, he'll ask the limited group of circuit ops to invest $50,000 each to get started with the project immediately.

Skouras himself, in private conversations with intimates, pledged the initial $50,000 contribution. It's believed that he has 20th-Fox production chief Darryl Zanuck interested in the plan to the extent that 20th would contribute the same amount.

Idea for the ambitious undertaking was broached at a TOA board meeting on the Coast several months ago. Plan at that time envisioned a possible tieup with the California Institute of Technology. The industry would set up its own research building—Palo Alto, Cal., was mentioned as the site—but the Institute's facilities would be available under the proposal.

In addition to a probe of electronics for the key to third-dimension pix, the program also would include experiments in merchandising films and determining public tastes.

Office Help Need A N.Y. Problem

Obtaining and holding on to office clerical help has become an acute problem for film company homeoffices. Lure of jobs outside the industry, which pay on the average of $5 to $10 above film scales, has brought about a situation for personnel directors.

Although the film companies offer rates which have been established following negotiations with Motion Picture Homeoffice Employees Union, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, these salaries, especially those for newcomers, are below those offered in other fields. For example, union rates for stenographers are between $41 and $55.85 while those for typists range from $37.50 to $48. However, the film companies have found it almost impossible to obtain help at the $41 and $37.50 figures, even for beginners. As a result they have been offering novice stenographers $45 and beginning typists $40.

Even at these upped rates filmites are meeting wtih resistance since beginners on the outside have been able to obtain $45 (typists) and $50 to $60 (stenographers).

Lanza as 'Prince'

Rugoff-Becker Opens Beekman in N. Y.

Beekman, eastside 550-seat house in New York, officially opens April 28. House is part of the Rugoff & Becker chain.

Project, financed by the New York Life Insurance Co., has the latest equipment.

The Beekman, like its neighboring Manhattan House, swank new apartment building, is built of white brick with glass and stainless steel. Its entrance forms the centerpiece to a three-store unit facing on Second Ave. and running the entire block. Fellheimer & Wagner were the architects.

Col Talks Deal For 40% Control Of Cartoon Co.

United Productions of America, the cartoon outfit which releases through Columbia, may become a wholly-controlled subsidiary of the latter. If Col goes through with the deal, it has until next Tuesday (15) to buy sufficient UPA stock, on which it has first call, to give it about a 40% control.

Col has been UPA's main source of financing for several years and has been closely tied with Col in cartoon shorts production and with Col's subsidiary Screen Gems, in the production of animated spots for video. In fact, UPA maintains a N.Y. studio exclusively for Screen Gems' work, and the N.Y. office has been known as Screen Gems' division of UPA. Although most of UPA's work has been for Col or Gems, company has made animated pix for outside commercial firms and even has done an animated sequence for an upcoming 20th-Fox film starring Dan Dailey.

UPA has been interested for some time in entering the feature-length cartoon field, but has been balked by lack of financing. For some time it has had an option on a flock of stories by James Thurber, but has been unable to proceed on this project because of lack of coin. Col turned down the Thurber yarns as too "highbrow" for a full-lengther, but is willing to undertake a feature-length car-

COL HOMEOFFICE EXECS TO COAST FOR CONFABS

Wholesale exodus of Columbia homeoffice execs to the Coast took place over the weekend for confabs with prexy Harry Cohn and other studio toppers. Contingent included Nate Spingold, v.p.; Abe Schneider, v.p. and treasurer; Abe Montague, v.p. and general sales manager; Leo Jaffe, assistant treasurer; Joseph A. McConville, international topper; Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., N. Y. studio rep, and Ralph Cohn, head of Screen Gems, Col's vidpix subsid.

Discussions will center around Col's forthcoming product, with the toppers setting up a program for sales, distribution and exploitation. In addition, McConville will report to Cohn on the results of his recent four-week trip to the continental market, on which he was accompanied by his assistant, Harry Kosiner. It's understood McConville lined up several European distrib deals for Col.

Other matters reportedly on the palaver agenda include the contemplated buyout of United Productions of America, cartoon outfit closely associated with Col, and the possible financing of a full-length cartoon feature which would be made by UPA for distribution by Col.

Complete production of all Hollywood films in color, predicted on and off for the past five years, is nearing reality. Main drawback to a full switch to tinted product is the cost, the lack of sufficient raw stock for the color processes and enough laboratory facilities for handling many-hued films.

As soon as the prime manufacturers of raw stock are geared to turn out enough film for color and the costs take a notable decline, industryites feel the color bandwagon will begin in earnest. At the beginning of this year studios announced color schedules of between 20% to 40%. However, in four months the majors have upped their tinted product to almost 50% of their output, with one studio even announcing a color sked of 75%. Metro, for example, has set 11 productions in color to go before the cameras within the next three and a half months. During the same period, there will be seven black-and-white pix put into production.

In light of these increased color slates, insiders are predicting the complete switch to the spectrum in from one to three years, with the more conservative technical men more inclined to the latter figure. Meanwhile, there have been a series of developments which are seen hastening the changeover. Most significant has been the installation of processing facilities for color films right at the studios. Metro has constructed a processing machine for Ansco color films, Warner Bros. has facilities for developing and treating the recently-developed WarnerColor (Eastman)

Center (Par) (2,100; 40-70)—"The River" (UA) and "Her Panelled Door" (Indie) (2d wk). Down to $7,000 in six days. Last week, fancy $11,000.

Lafayette (Basil) (3,000; 40-70)—"Apache Pass" (U) and "Pool of London" (Indie). Socko $13,000 or near. Last week, "My Six Convicts" (Col) and "Forbidden Land" (Col), $10,500.

Century (20th Cent.) (3,000; 40-70)—"Lady Says No" (UA) and "Japanese War Bride" (20th) (5 days). Slow $6,500 in 5 days. Last week, "Five Fingers" (20th) and "Hold That Line" (Mono), $9,000.

'SNOW WHITE' PACES INDPLS., FINE $12,000

Indianapolis, April 8.

Pre-Easter lull is holding grosses to modest level at most first-runs here this stanza. Exception is "Snow White," playing reissue at Indiana, with sturdy takings via school kids on spring vacation. Will lead town. "Death of Salesman" at Loew's shapes okay. "5 Fingers" is disappointing at the Circle.

Estimates for This Week

Circle (Cockrill-Dolle) (2,800; 50-76)—"5 Fingers" (20th) and "Fabulous Senorita" (Rep). Slow $8,000. Last week, "I Want You" (RKO) and "Pace That Thrills" (RKO), $10,000.

Indiana (C-D) (3,200; 50-76)—"Snow White" (RKO) (reissue). Very nice $12,000. Last week, "Bugles in Afternoon" (WB) and "Jim in Forbidden Land" (Col), $9,500.

Loew's (Loew's) (2,427; 50-76)—"Salesman" (Col) and "First Time" (Col). Okay $11,000. Last week, "African Queen" (UA) and "Magic Carpet" (Col) (2d wk), neat $10,000 and $23,500 for run.

Lyric (C-D) (1,600; 50-76)—"Flaming Feather" (Par) and "Corporal Dolan Goes AWOL" (Indie). Fair $5,000. Last week, "Aladdin and Lamp" (Mono) and "Konga, Wild Stallion" (Col), tepid $3,000.

'Queen' Great $17,000, Port.; 'Sailor' Hep 15G

Portland, Ore., April 8.

City is just recovering from having a slug of transient name attractions and advanced priced pix. "Sailor Beware" is the terrific newcomer but "African Queen" also is big in two spots. "Ma, Pa Kettle at Fair" looms strong.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (1,890; 65-90)—"Ma, and Pa Kettle at Fair" (U) and "Treasure Lost Canyon" (U). Strong $12,000 in 9 days. Last week, "Streetcar" (WB) and "Street Bandits" (5 days) (2d wk), $6,400.

Guild (Parker) (400; 65-90)—"La Ronde" (Indie) (2d wk). Off to $2,000 in 5 days. Last week, okay $3,000.

Liberty (Hamrick) (1,850; 65-90)—"Sailor Beware" (Par) and "Lady Possessed" (Par). Terrific $15,000. Last week, "Quo Vadis" (M-G) (5th wk), $12,000—at upped scale.

Music Box (Hamrick) (900; 65-90)—"Native Son" (Indie) and "Gods of Bali" (Indie). Mild $1,500. Last week, "Salesman" (Col) (2d wk), $2,500 at upped scale.

Mayfair (Parker) (1,500; 65-90)—"Streetcar" (WB) and "Street Bandits" (Rep) (m.o.), popscale run. Good $4,500. Last week, "Snow White" (RKO) (reissue) and "Aladdin and His Lamp" (Mono) (3 days) (2d wk) (m.o.) $4,800.

Oriental (Evergreen) (2,000; 65-90)—"African Queen" (UA) and "Cloudburst" (UA), day-date with Orpheum. Smash $5,000. Last week, "Girl In Every Port" (RKO) and "Chicago Calling" (UA), $4,800.

Orpheum (Evergreen) (1,750; 65-90)—"African Queen" (UA) and "Cloudburst" (UA), also Oriental. Socko $12,000. Last week, "Girl in Port" (RKO) and "Chicago Calling" (UA), $7,000.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,400; 6,590)—"Retreat, Hell!" (WB) and "Whistle Eaton Falls" (Col). Okay $7,000. Last week, "Greatest Show" (Par) (3d wk), $14,000 at upped prices.

United Artists (Parker) (890; 65-90)—"Just This Once" (M-G). NSG $4,700. Last week, "Bright Victory" (U), $5,800.

'Apache' Bangup $9,000 Tops Cincy

Cincinnati, April 8.

No downtown harsh biz complaints for Holy Week. "Battle at Apache Pass" is the town topper with socko round at Keith's. "Phone Call from Stranger" shapes slow at Albee. Other new bills are "Red Skies of Montana" in Palace, "Just This Once" at Grand and "Return of Texan" at Capitol.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; 55-75)—"Phone Call From Stranger" (20th). Fairish $8,500. Last week, "Quo Vadis" (M-G) (4th wk) at 90-$1.25 scale, oke $12,000.

Capitol (Mid-States) (2,000; 55-75)—"Return of Texan" (20th). Thin $5,000. Last week, "David and Bathsheba" (20th), $7,000.

Grand (RKO) (1,400; 55-75)—"Just This Once" (M-G) and "Talk About a Stranger" (M-G). All right $7,000. Last week, "Hoodlum Empire" (Rep) and "Young Scarface" (Indie), $8,000.

Keith's (Mid-States) (1,542; 55-75)—"Battle at Apache Pass" (U). Socko $9,000. Last week, "Viva Zapata!" (20th) (2d wk), $5,500.

Lyric (RKO) (1,400; 55-75)—"Snow White" (RKO) (m.o.). Okay $6,000. Last week, "Okinawa" (Col) split with "Streetcar" (WB) (m.o.), $4,500.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 55-75)—"Red Skies of Montana" (20th). Moderate $7,500. Last week, "Snow White" (RKO) (reissue), big $13,000.

'Apache' Great $18,000 in Dull K.C.; 'Salesman' Sluggish 10G, 'Scandal' 6G

Kansas City, April 8.

Some moderately good product in town, but it is tough going with usual pre-Easter week slump and other distractions. "Battle at Apache Pass" is giving four Fox Midwest houses a lively time but "Death of a Salesman" at Midland is lightweight. "Scandal Sheet" at the Missouri looms slow. Fourth annual Home Show ended Saturday after drawing more than 90,000 attendance for week and hurting biz.

Estimates for This Week

Esquire (Fox Midwest) (820; 50-75)—"Gung Ho!" and "Eagle Squadron" (reissues) light $1,800. Last week, "Lost Continent" (Lip) and "Unknown World" (Lip) (2d wk), so-so $1,000 in 4 days.

Kimo (Dickinson) (504; 75-99)—"Quartet" (Indie) and "Salt of Devil" (Indie). So-so $1,500. Last week, "La Marie Du Port" (Indie), same.

Midland (Loew's) ($3,500; 50-69)—"Salesman" (Col) and "First Time" (Col). Sluggish $10,000. Last week, "African Queen" (UA) and "Big Night" (UA) (2d wk), $8,500.

Missouri (RKO) (2,650, 50-75)—"Scandal Sheet" (Col) and "Barefoot Mailman" (Col). Light $6,000. Last week, "Big Trees" (WB) and "Pardon My French" (UA), ditto.

Paramount (Tri-States) (1,900; 50-90)—"Hong Kong" (Par) and "Silver City" (Par). Average $7,000. Last week, "Streetcar" (WB), at popscale, $8,000.

Tower, Uptown, Fairway Granada (Fox Midwest) (2,100; 2,043; 700; 1,217; 50-75)—"Battle at Apache Pass" (U) with "Great Adventure" (Lip) added at Tower and Granada. Smash $18,000 or near. Last week, "Viva Zapata" (20th) $11,000.

Vogue (Golden) (550; 75-85)—"Little Ballerina" (U) and "Pool of London" (U). Medium $1,500. Last week, "The Titan" (Indie) (2d wk), $1,500.

'Snow White' Sock $8,000, Omaha Ace

Omaha, April 8.

Return of stage bands to the Orpheum, with Tiny Hill and revue on new show rekindled interest there. Paired with "Here Come the Nelsons," a good session looms. One of week's surprises was showing of "Snow White," here for third time. It is giving the Brandeis a sock session, and is standout in city. "Steel Town" looks fair at Paramount. With sudden influx of stage shows, ice show, indoor circus and opening of drive-ins, downtown houses look in for tough sledding.

Estimates for This Week

Orpheum (Tristates) (3,000; 25-90)—"Here Come Nelsons" (U) and Tiny Hill orch and revue on-stage. Fairish $17,000. Last week, "Aaron Slick from Punkin Crick" (Par) and "Hold Line" (Mono), $9,200.

Brandeis (RKO) (1,500; 16-70)—"Snow White" (RKO). Surprisingly fine $8,000, best at house in weeks. Last week, "I Want You" (RKO), $5,000.

Paramount (Tristates) (2,800; 16-70)—"Steel Town" (U). Fair $8,000. Last week, "David" (20th), only $8,700 at popscale.

Omaha (Tristates) (2,100; 16-70)—"Hunchback Notre Dame" (RKO) and "Cat People" (RKO) (reissues). Fancy at $9,000. Holds. Last week, "Bright Victory" (U) and "Her Panelled Door" (Indie), mild $6,000.

State (Goldberg) (865; 35-$1.25)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (4th wk). Fine $4,000, and holds fifth week. Last week, $5,200.

'Canyon' Lofty $14,000, Toronto; 'Bugles' Hefty 15G, 'Glove' Slick 12G

Toronto, April 8.

In unexpected exhibitor switch, "Greatest Show on Earth" has been yanked after setting house record for the Imperial, largest cinema in Canada. Third week saw continued smash business but "Show" has been replaced with "Bugles in the Afternoon," this currently topping the town but not approaching the "Show" biz even in third week. "Green Glove" is also hefty among newcomers, with "Treasure of Lost Canyon" big. Top holdovers are still "Room for One More" and "5 Fingers," both in fourth frames.

Estimates for This Week

Crest, Downtown, Glendale, Mayfair, Scarboro, State (Taylor) (863; 1,059; 955; 470; 698; 694; 35-60)—"Treasure Lost Canyon" (U) and "Stronghold" (Indie). Big $14,000. Last week, "Retreat, Hell!" (WB) and "Lady Says No" (UA), $16,500.

Eglinton (FP) (1,080; 40-80)—"5 Fingers" (20th) (4th wk). Good $8,000. Last week, $9,000.

Imperial (FP) (3,373; 40-85)—"Bugles in Afternoon" (WB). Hefty $15,000. Last week, "Greatest Show" (Par) (3d wk), $27,500.

Loew's (Loew) (2,743; 90-$1.50)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (8th wk). Nice $10,000. Last week, $13,000.

Nortown, University (FP) (959; 1,558; 40-80)—"Room for One More" (WB) (4th wk). Still swell $13,000. Last week, $15,000.

Odeon (Rank) (2,390; 50-90)—"Green Glove" (UA). Nice $12,000. Last week, "High Treason" (U), $9,000.

Shea's (FP) (2,386; 40-80)—"Girl in Every Port" (RKO). Satisfactory $11,000. Last week, "Streetcar" (WB) (2d wk), $12,000.

Uptown (Loew) (2,743; 40-80)—"Love Better than Ever" (M-G). Weak $5,000. Last week, "Steel Town" (U), $6,000.

'Beanstalk' Lofty 21G In Frisco; 'Snow White' Wham 20G, 'Texan' 12G

San Francisco, April 8.

The always reliable fog here is dissipating the summer temperatures, and biz is perking up all along the line. Both "Snow White" at Golden Gate and "Jack and Beanstalk" at Paramount are turning in sock sessions, former being particularly big for such an oldie. "Young Man With Young Ideas" shapes slow at the Warfield while "Okinawa" looms okay at Orpheum. "Greatest Show" still is sturdy in seventh St. Francis session while "African Queen" continues big in fifth week at United Artists.

Estimates for This Week

Golden Gate (RKO) (2,850; 65-95)—"Snow White" (RKO) (reissue). Big $20,000. Last week, "Mummy" (Indie) and "Mummy's Curse" (Indie) (reissues), 5 days, $9,500.

Fox (FWC) (4,651; 65-95)—"Return of Texan" (20th) and "Japanese War Bride" (20th). Thin $12,000. Last week, "Viva Zapata!" (20th) and "Hold Line" (Mono) (2d wk), $10,500.

Warfield (Loew's) (2,656; 65-95)—"Young Man With Ideas" (M-G). Lean $12,000. Last week, "Lone Star" (M-G) (2d wk), $11,000.

Paramount (Par) (2,646; 65-95)—"Jack and Beanstalk" (WB). Great $21,000. Last week, "The Sell-out" (M-G) and "For Men Only" (Lippert), $13,500.

St. Francis (Par) (1,400; $1.25-$1.50)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (7th wk). Sturdy $9,000. Last week, $11,000.

Orpheum (No. Coast) (2,448; 65-95)—"Okinawa" (Col) and "Thief of Damascus" (Col). Okay $12,000. Last week, "Ma, Pa Kettle at Fair" (U) and "Holiday Cruise" (Indie, $11,500.

United Artists (No. Coast) (1,207; $1-$1.25)—"African Queen" (UA) 5th wk). Held at $13,000. Last week, hefty $15,000.

Clay (Rosener) (400; 65-85)—"Isle of Sinners" (Indie) (2d wk). Held at $2,500. Last week, fine $2,800.

Larkin (Rosener) (400; 65-85)—"Rashomon" (RKO) (2d wk) (m.o.). Nice $2,800. Last week, $2,700.

Vogue (S. F. Theatres) (375; $1-$1.20)—"La Ronde" (20th wk). Oke $1,200. Last week, $1,400.

'Snow White' Terrif In Mpls., $17,000; 'Kettles' 12G, 'Apache' Hep 11G

Minneapolis, April 8.

Some boxoffice-powered newcomers are demonstrating vitamine qualities for the turnstiles. Out in front is the reissued "Snow White." But nearly as strong is "Battle at Apache Pass" with sock session at smaller State. "Steel Town" looms good at Gopher. "Ma and Pa Kettle at Fair" shapes good at Radio City. Tough opposition for pix are the "Ice Follies" and the Sportsmen's Show, drawing thousands nightly.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Par) (1,600; 85-$1.25)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (6th wk). Forte $7,000. Last week, $7,700.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; 50-76)—"Steel Town" (U). Well-liked picture aided by heavy exploitation. Good $5,000. Last week, "Viva Zapata!" (20th) (3d wk), $3,600.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; 50-76)—"Mutiny" (UA). Okay $5,000. Last week, "Green Glove" (UA), $6,000.

Radio City (Par) (4,000; 50-76)—

Det. Marks Time Albeit 'Snow White' Fat 18G, 'Skies' Dim 17G, 'Trees' 12G

Detroit, April 8.

Despite Holy Week, "Snow White" looks great currently at the Michigan. "Greatest Show" at the Madison and "Quo Vadis" at the Adams are slackening a little but both are still very strong on their longruns. "Red Skies Montana" is dull at the Fox; ditto for "Big Trees" at the Palms.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Fox-Detroit) (5,000; 70-95)—"Red Skies Montana" (20th) and "Stronghold" (Lip). Show $17,000 or near. Last week, "5 Fingers" (20th) and "St. Benny the Dip" (UA), $16,000 in second week.

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,000; 70-95)—"Snow White" (RKO) (reissue) and "Treasure of Lost Canyon" (U). Swell $18,000. Last week, "Bugles in Afternoon" (WB) and "Mr. Lord Says 'No'" (Lip), $10,000.

Palms (UD) (2,900; 70-95)—"Big Trees" (WB) and "Smith vs. Scotland Yard" (RKO). Slim $12,000. Last week, "Tembo" (RKO) and "Pace Thrills" (Mono), $15,000.

Madison (UD) (1,900; 90-$1.25)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (7th wk). Sturdy $13,000. Last week, $14,000.

United Artists (UA) (1,900; 70-95)—"Something to Live For" (Par) and "Fort Osage" (Mono) (2d wk). Down to $8,000. Last week, oke $11,200.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 90-$1.25)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (6th wk). Steady $12,000. Last week, $14,000.

Lent, Storm Slough Chi But 'Apache' Wow $32,000; 'North'-Vaude Slight 20G in 2d, 'Queen' Bright 17G, 7th

Chicago, April 8.

Loop houses are being stunned this week by the Lenten doldrums, with stormy weekend weather and threat of steel strike (many plants are near here) contributing to the gloom. Only saving grace seems the longrun pictures and the one new opener, "Battle at Apache Pass." "Apache" at the State-Lake benefited by world preem hoopla, bringing in Jeff Chandler and some Apache Indians to spark the preem. It was a new opening day high for U pix there, and week will be greatest for any Universal film there. Smash $32,000 looms.

"Quo Vadis" at the Oriental is staunch with $23,000 shaping for eighth week while "African Queen" at the Woods in seventh frame appears equally strong with $17,000. The Japanese import, "Rashomon," in fifth stint at Ziegfeld still is neat $3,000.

"Model and Marriage Broker" at Grand looks slight in second week. "Hong Kong" and "Dangerous Ground" at Roosevelt shape lukewarm. "Big Trees" and "Captain Blood" at United Artists, also two-weeker, is disappointing. "Wild North" at the Chicago, also in second, looms drab though backed by vaude.

Estimates for This Week

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 55-98)—"Wild North" (M-G) with vaude (2d wk). Blah $20,000. Last week, $32,000.

Grand (RKO) (1,500; 55-98)—"Model and Marriage Broker" (20th) (2d wk). Not too much doing here with $7,800. Last week, $12,000.

Oriental (Indie) (3,400; 98-$1.25)—"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (8th wk). Holding strong with $23,000. Last week, $25,450.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 55-98)—"Hong Kong" (Par) and "Dangerous Ground" (RKO) (2d wk). Minor $7,000. Last week, $11,000.

State-Lake (B&K) (2,700; 55-98)—"Battle at Apache Pass" (U) and "Here Comes Nelsons" (U). Premier here is helping to grab smash $32,000. Last week, "Girl in Every Port" (RKO) and "Sword's Point" (RKO) (2d wk), $9,000.

United Artists (B&K) (1,700; 55-98)—"Big Trees" (WB) and "Captain Blood (WB) (reissue) (2d wk). Weak $8,000. Last week, $12,000.

Woods (Essaness) (1,073; 98)—"African Queen" (UA) (7th wk). Award winner is still staying up there with lush $17,000. Last week, $21,000.

World (Indie) (587; 80)—"St. Matthew Passion" (Indie) (3d wk). Nifty $3,500 for final frame. Last week, $4,000.

Ziegfeld (Lopert) (480; 98)—"Rashomon" (RKO) (5th wk.) Picked up slightly from awards to fast $3,000. Last week, $2,800.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i. e., without the 20% tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include the U. S. amusement tax.

L'ville Lagging Albeit 'Apache' Lusty $13,000; 'Aaron' Slick With 9G

Louisville, April 8.

Current biz outlook at first-runs is for slow trade, with a few weeks. Holy Week is poorest stanza of year for film houses here, and this year likely will run true to form. One exception is the State, where "Battle at Apache Pass" is overriding the pre-Easter sag with a lively $13,000 in sight.

Estimates for This Week

Kentucky (Switow) (1,100; 54-75)—"Indian Uprising" (Col) and "Magic Face" (Col). Puny $3,000. Last week, "Red Skies Montana" (20th) and "First Legion" (UA), $4,000.

Mary Anderson (People's) (1,200; 54-75)—"Big Trees" (WB). Slow $5,000. Last week, "Streetcar" (WB) (11 days), $9,000 for popscale date.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (1,200; 54-75)—"Aaron Slick Punkin Crick" (Par) and "Wings of Danger" (Lip). Neat $9,000. Last week, "Greatest Show" (Par) (3d wk), big $13,000.

State (Loew's) (3,000; 45-65)—"Battle Apache Pass" (U) and "Finder's Keepers" (RKO). Nice $13,000 or over, in spite of pre-Easter dip at downtown houses. Last week, "African Queen" (UA) and "Man With Cloak" (M-G) (2d wk), $11,000.

Strand (FA) (1,200; 54-75)—"Return Of Texan" (20th) and "Waco" (Mono). Sluggish $3,000. Last week, "Ma, Pa Kettle at Fair" (U) and "Hold Line" (U) (2d wk), okay $4,000.

'City' Standout in Hub, Bright 14G

Boston, April 8.

Holy Week and bus strikes will combine to bop biz this stanza with first run activity, largely slow. "Captive City" at Boston looks best with solid session. "Steel Town" at Memorial is below hopes. "Big Trees" at Paramount and Fenway is slow. Return of "The River" at Beacon Hill shapes sturdy. "African Queen" in third stanza at State and Orpheum is skidding.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (B&Q) (1,200; 50-95 — "Something to Live For" (Par) (2d wk). Dived to $6,000 following oke $10,500 first-round.

Beacon Hill (Beacon Hill) (682; 50-90)—"The River" (UA) and "The Guest" (20th). Nice $8,500 shapes for second time around here. Last week, "The Medium" (Indie) and "Souvenir" (Indie), $3,400.

Boston (RKO) (3,000; 40-85) — "Captive City" (UA) and "Dark Man" (Indie). Solid $14,000. Last week, "Meet Danny Wilson" (U) and "Lady of Burlesque" (Indie) (reissue), $8,000.

Exeter (Indie) (1,300; 60-80) — "Rashomon" (RKO) (3d wk). Off to about $5,000 but still good. Last week, $6,000.

Fenway (NET) (1,373; 40-85) — "Big Trees" (WB) and "Hangman's Holiday" (Indie). Mild $4,000. Last week, "Bugles in Afternoon" (WB) and "South of Caliente" (Rep), $5,300.

Memorial (RKO) (3,000; 40-85)—"Steel Town" (U) and "Kisenga" (Indie). Moderate $12,000. Last week, "Flesh and Fury" (U) and "Waco" (Mono), $13,000.

Metropolitan (NET) (4,367; 90-$1.25) — "Greatest Show" (Par) (4th wk). With two days added shapes about $17,000 on final 9 days. Last week, $18,000.

Orpheum (Loew) (3,000; 40-85)—"African Queen" (UA) (3d wk). Off to about $11,500 for final stanza after nice $16,000 for second.

Paramount (NET) (1,700; 40-85) —"Big Trees" (WB) and "Hangman's Holiday" (Indie). Slender $9,000. Last week, "Bugles in Afternoon" (WB) and "South of Caliente" (Rep), $11,000.

State (Loew) (3,500; 40-85) — "African Queen" (UA) (3d wk). Final frame shapes about $6,000. Last week, fairish $9,000.

'APACHE' GREAT 11G, SEATTLE; 'OSAGE' 8G

Seattle, April 8.

Biz is not so strong here this session albeit "Battle at Apache Pass" is faring well. It is great at the small-seater Liberty. "Snow White" also looks big while "Fort Osage" is rated nice.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (800; 65-90)—"Streetcar" (WB) (m.o.). Big $5,000. Last week, "Steel Town" (U) and "Danny Wilson" (U) (2d wk), big $3,800.

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,829; 65-90) — "Ft. Osage" (Mono) and "Hold Line" (Mono). Nice $8,000. Last week, "Rodeo" (Mono) and "Jet Job" (Mono), $6,700.

Fifth Avenue (Evergreen) (2,366; 65-90) — "Something to Live For" (Par) and "Dark Man" (Indie). Thin $7,500. Last week, "Zapata!" (20th) and "Tony Misbehaves" (Indie) (2d wk), $7,400.

PITT WAY OFF ALBEIT 'SHOW' BIG $20,000, 2D

Pittsburgh, April 8.

Two holdovers, "Greatest Show on Earth" at Penn and "Five Fingers" at Fulton, are beating the customary Holy Week blues, but there isn't much doing elsewhere here. "Big Trees" is very slow at the Stanley. Harris is in the doldrums with dual reissue of "Laura" and "Snake Pit" and Squirrel Hill doesn't look for much from its new one, "The Last Holiday."

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Shea) (1,700; 50-85)—"5 Fingers" (20th) (2d wk). Holding up very well at $5,000 or over, best Holy Week figure here in years. Last week, fine $8,000.

Harris (Harris) (2,200; (50-85)—"Laura" (20th) and "Snake Pit" 20th) (reissues). Sad $4,000 or less. Last week, "My Six Convicts" (Col), nice $7,500.

Penn (Loew's) (3,300; 50-$1.25)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (2d wk). Still strong and will stick through Easter week, probably moving to the smaller Ritz then. Great $20,000 on top of $30,000 last week.

Squirrel Hill (WB) (900; 50-85)—"Last Holiday" (Indie). Thin $2,000. Last week, "Mr. Lord Says No" (Indie), $1,500.

Stanley (WB) (3,800; 50-75)—"Big Trees" (WB). Slight $8,000. Last week, "Aaron Slick Punkin Crick" (Par), only $6,000, poorest here in some time.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 50-85)—"Slaughter Trail" (RKO) and "On Loose" (RKO). House is merely holding its franchise, modest $4,000. Last week, "Flaming Feather" (Par), $6,000 in 10 days.

H.O.s Bop Philly; 'Fingers' Hot 12G

Philadelphia, April 8.

Near tornado last Saturday (5) and the usual downbeat of Holy Week are putting skids under trade here this session. An oversupply of holdovers also is clipping biz. Of the new entries, both "Les Miserables" and twin bill of "Tale of Five Women" and "Royal Journey" are doing well. "Rose of Cimarron" is rated okay at the Stanton. "Snow White" is holding very well in third round.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (WB) (1,303; 50-99) — "Streetcar" (WB) (3d wk). Oke $5,300. Last week, $7,000.

Boyd (WB) (2,360; 50-$1.50) — "Greatest Show" (Par) (7th wk). Held at $6,500. Last week, big $8,500.

Earle (WB) (2,700; 50-99) — "Wild North" (M-G) (2d wk). Fair $8,000. Last week, $12,000.

Fox (20th) (2,250; 50-99)—"Five Fingers" (20th) (3d wk). Good $12,000. Last week, $13,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,200; 50-99)—"Sniper" (Col) (2d wk). Nice $11,000. Last week, $16,000.

Mastbaum (WB) (4,360; 90-$1.50) —"Quo Vadis" (M-G) (9th wk). Held at $8,000. Last week, fine $9,500.

Midtown (Goldman) (1,000; 50-99)—"Tale of Five Women" (UA) and "Royal Journey" (UA). Oke $6,000. Last week, "Meet Me St. Louis" (M-G) and "Babes in Arms" (M-G) (reissues), $5,000.

Randolph (Goldman) (2,500; 50-99)—"Snow White" (RKO) (reissue) (3d wk). Off to $7,500. Last week, bright $15,000.

Stanley (WB) (2,900; 50-99) — "Big Trees" (WB) (2d wk). Down to $5,500 in 3 days. Last week, dull $10,000.

Stanton (WB) (1,473; 50-99) — "Rose of Cimarron" (20th). Okay $7,000. Last week, "Hoodlum Empire" (Rep) (2d wk), $5,000.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (500; 85-$1.20) —"Detective Story" (Par) (21st-final wk). Okay $5,500 in 8 days. Last week, $5,400.

World (G&S) (500; 50-99)—"Les Miserables" (Indie). Good $4,300. Last week, "Hotel Sahara" (UA), $3,000.

'David' Trim $14,000, Mont'l; 'Kid' Fancy 12G

Montreal, April 8.

Following success of bringing back "Streetcar," Consolidated Theatres has returned "David and Bathsheba" at popular prices to Loew's, and it is doing well. "Girl in Every Port" at Princess is fine but standout of newcomers is "Cimarron Kid" at the Imperial with big total.

Estimates for This Week

Palace (C.T.) (2,626; 34-60) — "Streetcar" (WB) (2d wk). Off to $12,000 following nifty $19,000 opener.

Capitol (C.T.) (2,412; 34-60) — "Something Live For" (Par). Fine

B'way Eyes Easter Upbeat After Lag; 'Song'-Vaude Big 90G, 'Happen' 14G, 'White Suit' Sock 18½G, 'Encore' 16½G

Despite five new bills, the current session at Broadway first-runs is feeling the effect of Holy Week as usual. The weather also has proved no help, with rain last Saturday washing out most of the matinee business. Mild temperatures also cut in Sunday (6). However, an improved tone is anticipated starting today (Wed.) when most schools start Easter Week vacations. Influx of out-of-town visitors and the end of Lent also are expected to perk up trade for the coming stanza.

Biggest money for a newcomer goes to "Song In My Heart" with Easter show headed by Bill Hayes and Divena at the Roxy. It is heading for big $90,000 in first week. "Anything Can Happen" looks like only fair $14,000 or less at the Mayfair. "Hong Kong," also new, shapes mild $12,000.

Limelight for new films currently is being taken by the arty theatres. "Man in White Suit" wound up its first week with a terrific $18,500 at the Sutton, a new opening-week record for house. "Encore" is finishing the initial session at the Normandie with a sock $16,500.

"Singin' In Rain" with annual Easter stageshow, is holding almost even with the first week's big total, with $144,000 in prospect at the Music Hall. Trade slipped last Thursday and Friday along with the rest of the Street, but the weekend soared. In fact, last Saturday's total topped the corresponding day of the initial week.

"My Six Convicts" dipped to a nice $17,000 in second Astor round. "Marrying Kind" continued to run ahead of it, with fancy $19,000 in sight for fourth week at the Victoria.

"African Queen" wound up its seven-week run at the Capitol last night (Tues.) with a surprisingly robust $28,000 for final stanza. "My Son, John" replaces today (Wed.). "Meet Danny Wilson," with Frank Sinatra heading stageshow, is off to okay $54,000 in second week at the Paramount. "Bend of River," with Billy Eckstine and Fran Warren topping stage bill, opens at Par flagship today.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,300; $1.25-$1.80)—"My Six Convicts" (Col) (2d wk). Second round ending today (Wed.) is off to nice $17,000 after great $23,000 opener. Stays.

Baronet (Reade) (430; 74-$1.20)—"Pardon My French" (UA) (2d wk). Initial session ended last Friday (4) very disappointing $3,200. "Passion for Life" (Indie) opens Saturday (12).

Capitol (Loew's) (4,820; 70-$1.80) —"My Son, John" (Par). Opens today (Wed.). Last week, "African Queen" (UA) (7th wk) wound up highly successful run with $28,000 after smash $40,000 for sixth stanza.

Criterion (Moss) (1,700; 50-$1.80) —"Sword's Point" (RKO). Opens today (Wed.). Last week, "Captive City" (UA) (2d wk) off to about $6,500 after mild $10,500 opening stanza.

Guild (Guild) (565; 74-$1.50)—"Royal Journey" (UA) (6th wk). Holding at about $5,000 after $5,300 last week. Goes seventh round.

Globe (Brandt) (1,500; 50-$1.80) —"Hong Kong" (Par). Initial week ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks mild $12,000. Holds. In ahead, "Red Skies Montana" (20th) (2d wk), $6,500.

Fine Arts (Davis) (468; 90-$1.80) —"Lavender Hill Mob" (U) (26th wk). The 25th round ended Monday (7) pushed up to $6,700 after solid $5,700 for 24th week.

Holiday (Zatkin) (950; 50-$1.80) —"Outlaw Women" (Lip). Week ending tomorrow (Thurs.) heading for $6,000, fine. Holds. Last week, "Lili Marlene" (RKO), light $3,000 and below hopes.

Mayfair (Brandt) (1,736; 50-$1.80) —"Anything Can Happen" (Par). Week ending today (Wed.) looks only fair at less than $14,000, reviews apparently not helping. Way below hopes in view of extensive advance ad campaign. Holds. In ahead, "Sailor Beware" (Par) (9th wk) $13,000, winding up highly profitable run.

Normandie (Normandie Theatres) (592; 95-$1.80)—"Encore" (Par) (2d wk). First session ended last night (Tues.) hit sock $16,500. In ahead, "Something to Live For" (Par) (4th-wk-5 days), $3,200.

Paramount (Par) (3,664; 80-$1.80) —"Bend of River" (U) with Billy Eckstine, Fran Warren, Bobby Sargent, Will Bradley orch onstage. Opens today (Wed.). Last week, "Meet Danny Wilson" (U) with Frank Sinatra, Frank Fontaine, Buddy Rich orch heading stageshow (2d wk), off to $54,000 after good $64,000 opening week.

Park Avenue (Reade) (583; 90-$1.50) — "Faithful City" (RKO). Opened Monday (7). Last week, "Just This Once" (M-G) (3d wk), held at $4,000 after big $4,200 for second round.

Paris (Indie) (568; $1.25-$1.80)—"The River" (UA) (31st wk). The 30th frame (fourth of continuous-run) ended Sunday (6) held at $6,500 after fine $7,000 for 29th week. Stays.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (5,945; 80-$2.40) — "Singin' In Rain" (M-G) with annual Easter stageshow (2d wk). Holding at great $144,000 or near. Last week, big $145,000. Stays indef. Starts using extra performances on Friday (11) to continue through Easter Week.

Rivoli (UAT-Par), (2,092; 90-$1.80)—"Viva Zapata!" (20th) (9th-final wk). Holding at $8,200 in final eight days after $9,000 for eighth session. "Valley of Eagles" (20th) opens Friday (11).

Roxy (20th) (5,886; 80-$2.20) — "With Song in Heart" (20th) plus Easter bill including Bill Hayes and Divena onstage. First week winding up tomorrow (Thurs.) heading for big $90,000 or close. Holds, of course. In ahead, "Deadline—U.S.A." (20th) with Gloria De Haven, Noonan & Marshall topping stageshow (3d wk), off to $50,000 despite previews of "Heart."

State (Loew's) (3,450; 55-$1.25)—"Flesh and Fury" (2d wk). Stanza ending today (Wed.) is off to around $10,000 after fine $18,000 opening round. Stays two extra days, with "Tomorrow Is Too Late" (Indie) opening Saturday (12).

Warner (WB) (2,756; 85-$2) — "Jack and Beanstalk" (WB) with Gene Nelson, Louis Jordan and his Tympany Five, Ella Mae Morse, Harvey Stone onstage. Opened stoutly Monday (7). Last week, Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet wound up two-week run on stage.

Sutton (R&B) (561; 90-$1.50) — "Man in White Suit" (U). First week ended Monday (7) terrific $18,500, new high for opening session here. Long lines over weekend. Stays indef. Last week, "Tales of Hoffmann" (Indie) (14th wk-6 days), $4,000.

Trans-Lux 60th St. (T-L) (453; 90-$1.50)—"Murder in Cathedral" (Indie) (3d wk). Second round ended Monday (7) dipped to $4,200 after okay $6,000 opening week.

Trans-Lux 52d St. (T-L) (540; 90-$1.50)—"Young and Damned" (Indie) (3d wk). Second round ended Saturday (5) held at $5,500 after nice $7,500 for first week.

Victoria (City Inv.) (1,060; 70-$1.80) — "Marrying Kind" (Col) (4th wk). Present stanza ending today (Wed.) is holding at fancy $19,000 after $23,000 for third round. Stays.

Prov. Perks to Normal; 'Town' Tall at $10,000, 'Young Man' Dull $9,000

Providence, April 8.

Week's takes are closer to normal again. Leading the list is Majestic's "Steel Town." State is in second place with "Young Man With Ideas," only moderate. RKO Albee's "Highwayman" looks fair.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (2,200; 44-65) — "Highwayman" (Mono) and "Aladdin and Lamp" (Mono). Fair $7,000. Last week, "Sword's Point" (RKO) and "Pace That Thrills" (RKO), good $8,000.

Majestic (Fay) (2,200; 44-65) — "Steel Town" (U) and "Waco" (Mono). Fine $10,000. Last week, "Bugles in Afternoon" (20th) and "Secret Flight" (Rep), same.

Metropolitan (Snider) (3,100; 44-65) — "Captive City" (UA) and "Stars and Guitars" (Rep). So-so $4,500. Last week, "Ft. Osage" (Mono) and "Newshound" (Mono), same $4,500.

State (Loew's) (3,200; 44-65) — "Young Man With Ideas" (M-G) and "Shadow In Sky" (M-G). Slow $9,000. Last week, "African Queen" (UA) and "Panelled Door" (Indie) (2d wk), oke $9,200.

Strand (Silverman) (2,200; 44-65) "Knock On Any Door" (Col) and "Tokyo Joe" (Col) (reissues). Opened Monday (7). Last week, "Greatest Show" (Par) (3d wk), still good at $8,500.

ONLY ONE COMPANY DOES IT!

Foreign Pix Spurt Toward Peak U.S. Dates; Play Half N.Y. Arties

Foreign product is getting an unusually strong play in American theatres. Of 29 New York arty theatres currently playing out-of-ordinary product, generally first-run, 15 are showing foreign fare. Of this total, perhaps 10 are rated a chance of getting additional bookings in key cities of the U. S., some on big circuits.

Hollywood product has always been able to find a market in foreign territories, but foreign pix have found it tough going in this country, largely because of their limited story scope. The swing to stories and pictures of American acceptability in recent years has met with a sharp upbeat in bookings. Probably the outstanding example of how far the pendulum has swung towards U. S. public acceptance of foreign films is "Rashomon." Fundamentally a melodrama understandable to most audiences, Japan-made picture is a long step from product formerly turned out by Nippon producers, when the staid, ancient form of drama was employed. "Rashomon" is being distributed in America by RKO and already has played well in numerous key arty theatres.

The old complaint of foreign companies that they were unable to get playing time in the U. S. was partially answered by the formation of the Advisory Unit for Foreign Films of the Motion Picture Assn. of America. This was created to wipe out the feeling that the U. S. was a field that could not be penetrated by foreign pix, as well as to make better relations in the world market. Group has tried to act as a guide on what will and won't go on the screen here.

This unit has aided foreign producers in obtaining outlets for their product or actual deals. It also has assisted them to study U. S. production methods as well as permit them to bring in films in bond. Latter has enabled them to attempt deals and, if failing, to be able to take their films back without paying duty here.

Besides "Rashomon," "Fabiola," distributed by UA; "Tomorrow Is Too Late," the N. Y. State's Easter picture; "The River," also UA; "Lavender Hill Mob" (U) and "Royal Journey" are examples of foreign product now getting a break here or about to get extensive playdates.

Insistence in turning out whatever subjects they want to and not following the cultural acceptance of most American audiences apparently put the brakes on "Los Olvidados," Mexican meller, which now is playing at N. Y. Trans-Lux 52d St. under the title of "Young and Damned." Pic was launched in several foreign-language houses about three months ago without creating much stir. A production code seal was never asked of the MPAA, and the brutality, moral aspects and generally sordid angles cited by crix, promise to give it tough sledding if ever submitted for PCA approval. It is to avoid repetition in the production of this type of films that the Mexican government now is insisting on screen vehicles which will measure up closer to Legion of Decency rules and make for stronger U. S. boxoffice.

The boxoffice for foreign pictures at these arty houses has been so consistently good in recent months that the old tag of "sure-seater" has been tossed into the discard. Simply because a patron no longer is sure of getting a seat.

Students Take Over Upstate N.Y. Theatre

Buffalo, April 8.

Abandonment of the May Theatre, only show place in the Mayville, N. Y. community, has been averted by the high school students of the Mayville and Chautauqua Central Schools, who have taken over the house on a year-round plan of operation.

Under a setup approved by the Mayville Chamber of Commerce, Community Theatre, Inc., a non-profit organization, has been incorporated to operate the house under the direction of 12 students elected by the student body, plus an adult board of directors. Blatt Bros. Corp. closed the theatre six months ago due to poor business. It is being reopened currently by two Mayville businessmen on an interim basis.

U Stars to Mex. City Fete

Mexico City, April 8.

Universal stars Ann Blyth, Shirley Winters and Piper Laurie and some top U execs are to feature the annual city government-sponsored Spring Festival, April 19-27, for the benefit of undernourished children. Tita Grey, local beauty, was elected festival queen.

Personals in top cinemas here by visiting stars have been arranged by Alfredo Holguin, local U manager.

Trans-Lux Optimistic Despite 1951 Loss; Economies Effected

Although operations of Trans-Lux Corp. and its wholly owned subsidiaries in 1951 resulted in a loss of $30,648, board chairman and president Percival E. Furber points out in the company's annual report that overall activities for the first quarter of 1952 have indicated a "favorable reversal" in trend compared to last year.

Report, released this week, informs stockholders that a number of steps have been taken to effect economics in the firm's theatre department. Trans-Lux Monroe Theatre, N. Y., has been leased to CBS for a five-year term on the theory that disposal of the Monroe would benefit the b.o. of two nearby T-L houses, the Colony and T-L 72nd St.

Company's consolidated statement of profit and loss shows that gross income from its theatre division amounted to $1,268,035. Operating expenses of $1,242,634 trimmed the total to $25,400. Provision for depreciation and amortization resulted in a net loss of $6,679. Outfit's ticker and newssign division fared better, racking up net income of $271,232.

Deduction of general administrative expenses, income taxes and various other charges resulted in the consolidated net loss for the year of $30,648. This compares with a net profit for 1950 of $50,350. Report also revealed that William M. Girden, presently a director, will not run for re-election. Board thus will be reduced to 14 directors, all of whom are up for re-election.

Company is also involved in a proxy fight which seeks to oust the existing management. Leading the group of minority stockholder dissidents is George G. Mason, a director of the Tuxedo, N. Y., National Bank. It's charged that the management is guilty of "waste of assets." Mason has set himself and six associates as nominees to replace the present board. Latter now comprises Harry Brandt, Milton C. Weisman and Lee Shubert, among others.

Rackmil Sees

the Universal annual stockholders' meeting has been postponed. Originally set for the first Tuesday in March, it was moved back to the last Thursday in April and is now slated to be held in Wilmington July 8.

Trade observers feel that by July the respective committees for Universal and Decca will have decided upon a practical means of effecting a merger of the two companies. If the plan is worked out it can then be submitted for stockholder approval.

In line with the closer relationship between U and Decca, Rackmil revealed that the companies are jointly producing a series of film programs for TV. Distribution and sales organization of Decca would be primarily used to handle such product to allay possible exhibitor enmity against Universal.

Stockholder meet, which lasted only 15 minutes, also saw re-election of the five-man Decca board. They are: Leonard W. Schneider, Decca exec-veepee; Major G. L. Lloyd, insurance consultant; Harold I. Thorp, investment banker; Samuel H. Vallance, an industrialist, and Rackmil.

Lichtman, Wolfson, Levy, Sullivan at Ga. Meet

Atlanta, April 8.

Al Lichtman, 20th-Fox sales chief, will be the sole rep of the production-distribution wings of the industry at the fifth annual convention of the Motion Picture Owners of Georgia to be held at the Biltmore Hotel here April 13-15. Among others scheduled to address the conclave are Mitchell Wolfson, Gael Sullivan and Herman Levy, respectively prez, exec secretary and general counsel of the Theatre Owners of America.

Meet is slated to start Monday (14), when both distribution and exhibition are to attend an open session. For the following morning a closed meet for exhibs has been pencilled in to discuss trade practices and elect new officers and directors. During the afternoon the first "grievance panel" meeting for the Atlanta area will be held. Convention will wind up in the evening with a banquet and dance.

Upstate N. Y. Ozoners Open

Albany.

Michael Zala, former New York circuit manager and a Johnstown exhibitor for several years, appointed manager of Harry Lamont's Overlook Drive-in, Poughkeepsie.

Clifford Swick, former Smalley Theatre manager, will have charge of Lamont's Vail Mills Drive-in near Gloversville this season.

The three area Fabian outdoor theatres, Mohawk, Saratoga and Auto-Vision, reopened. George Seed, manager of the chain's Cohoes Theatre, is supervising the drive-ins this year. He replaced Leo Rosen, now working on television for Fabian in New York.

Bank Financing

was Krim's announcement last week officially confirming that UA operated in the black last year, and he and his pards now pocket 50% of the outstanding stock under their agreement with co-owners Charles Chaplin and Mary Pickford.

Gottlieb's borrowing from Chemical also was seen indicating that the banks, in relaxing their previous demands of a 100% guarantee by indie producers, might now rely substantially on film-makers' records. Gottlieb, who formerly produced for Warners, Universal and RKO, consistently lenses low-budget product, such as "Fighter," and he claims an impressive profits record.

The producer switched to indie production, he said, because of "controls" at major studios. Indie filming, he added, provides him with full freedom of action and he finds this plenty desirable. Next on his sked is "Billy Rose's Broadway Tales," which will present four short stories by Rose, who also will appear in the pic. Gottlieb's wife is Polly Rose, Billy's sister.

Peck Hurt in Fall, Delays 20th's 'Snows'

Hollywood, April 8.

Production on Darryl Zanuck's production of "Snows of Kilimanjaro" will be delayed while Gregory Peck recovers from a torn ligament and ruptured blood vessel in his left leg, suffered when he fell while carrying Ava Gardner across a rough terrain. He's bedded at home.

Length of delay is not yet determined.

Portland, Ore., Censors Relax Toward Art Pix

Portland, Ore., April 8.

Portland's cinema censors have quietly remodeled their code. The Guild Theatre's current showing of "LaRonde," a French film, is the proof.

In June, 1950, the city censors got into a big fuss, when they ordered a scene cut from the Italian film, "The Bicycle Thief." The ensuing fight, supported by considerable public opinion and editorial support, was carried to court by the Guild Theatre manager, Marty Foster, and they ruled in favor of the film.

A resulting change in the attitude of the censors, particularly toward the "art" theatre is evident. "La Ronde" was banned from many cities, and was viewed by the local censor board three times. With a few slight adjustments, the film was passed for the Guild Art Theatre.

The censor board is still in existence, but will be more lenient for pictures showing at the Guild, due to the specialized patronage.

'If Moscow Strikes' Set For M of T Release

March of Time has re-entered the theatrical pix field with the company's announcement that it has set for release "If Moscow Strikes," a new feature-length journalistic film. Pic will preem at the Guild Theatre, N. Y., following the run there of United Artists' "Royal Journey."

MOT will handle sales and distribution of the film on its own, with National Film Service handling the actual physical distribution. Film and title have been tested by MOT in several situations.

According to Phil Williams, MOT's theatrical sales topper, Time-Life subsid is mapping an extensive national advertising and exploitation campaign for "If Russia Strikes."

Souvaine Names Tunick

Eugene Tunick has been appointed midwestern sales manager for Souvaine Selective Pictures, headquartering in Cincinnati. He had been Cincinnati's branch manager for Lippert.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

With ten personalities in New York for promotional activity for six pictures within a 10-day period, Universal's flackery had to adopt a Solomon complex to reap the greatest rewards from the presence of such a large contingent. Not wishing to wear out its welcome with its New York newspaper, magazine, radio and television contacts, department faced the task of spotting and spreading the players around the various media in order to obtain maximum number of breaks.

In New York during the 10-day period were Tony Curtis and Jan Sterling for "Flesh and Fury," Ann Sheridan, Howard Duff and John Lund for "Steel Town," Frank Sinatra for "Meet Danny Wilson," Susan Cabot and Jeff Chandler for "Battle of Apache Pass," Julia Adams for "Bend of the River" and Joyce Holden for "Bronco Buster."

Distributors' complaints that most tradescreenings, particularly in the midwest, have been poorly attended may be easing off shortly, at least in the northwest Iowa area. Exhibs in that section have come up with a plan which calls for mass regional screenings at regular intervals. Idea provides for three full-length features to be run off—one in the morning and the others after lunch. It was felt that in the past a screening of only one film wasn't worth a theatreman's time to travel a great distance. "Pride of St. Louis" (20th), "With a Song in My Heart" (20th) and "Sound Off" (Col) were tradescreened at the Uptown Theatre, Sioux City, last week, under the scheme.

Humphrey Bogart may walk off with one of the heftiest payoffs to a star for a single film in recent history, via his participation deal with the Sam Spiegel-John Huston indie, "African Queen," which is being distributed by UA.

Bogart is receiving 17% of the net distribution profit. On the basis of the film's current big b.o. performance, "Queen" is headed for a net of over $2,000,000. That's after negative, prints, distribution and ad-pub costs are recouped. Adds up to $340,000 for Bogart, whose proceeds are being aided, of course, by fact that he recently won the Academy Award for "Queen."

Heated protests in Congress recently that the Defense Dept. was wasting taxpayers' money in buying radio and TV time to help recruiting is indirectly benefiting the film industry. Squawks of several lawmakers resulted in cancellation of three radio shows bankrolled by the Government.

Loss of air time, plus the knowledge that good public relations must be maintained, has resulted in a greater spirit of cooperation between the Defense Dept. and the major Hollywood studios—at least as far as exploitation tie-ins are concerned.

Chorines are flocking to Hollywood again after an eastward surge for television. LeRoy Prinz, currently lining up dancing talent for "April in Paris" at Warners, reported that the westward movement is due to two reasons—one is that the major film studios are concentrating on high-budget musicals with plenty of song-and-dance numbers; the other is that eastern TV is already crowded with femmes established in the N. Y. musical comedy field.

20th-Fox's "David-and Bathsheba" has been offered at flat rental to two Iowa situations, current bulletin of Allied of Iowa, Nebraska & Mid-Central advises its membership. It points this out "just to show that sometimes it is only 'must' percentage as long as they (the distribs) can get takers." Bulletin goes on to assert that "no smalltown theatre can tie up any portion of its playing time with percentage pictures and show a profit."

"No small-town exhibitor should play percentage pictures" was the recent opinion reached at a Little Falls, Minn., North Central Allied regional meeting, attended by 35 of the surrounding territory's theatre-owners. There was no formal action, however, putting the exhibitors on record to boycott percentage deals.

process, and 20th-Fox is reportedly working on its own process.

In addition, Technicolor is increasing facilities for the treatment of its own as well as other processes.

While Techni continues to dominate the color field, some advancement has been made by the other color processes. This year will see an increasing number of films under the labels of Supercinecolor, Natural Color, Tru-Color, Ansco and WarnerColor. During 1951, 76 feature-length pictures were produced in color by Techni, as compared to a total of 70 in 1950. Despite an increase of color pictures by the other tint companies, it's estimated that Techni's output for 1953 will be considerably higher.

A prediction that all professional films will be in full color in the near future was voiced last week by John Nickolaus, superintendent of photography of Metro. M-G exec made the forecast following a visit to Rochester, N. Y., where he studied the latest color films developed by Eastman Kodak.

The interest and turn to color is reflected in the upbeat financial report issued by Techni. Report shows an operating profit of $5,958,583 for 1951 as compared to $4,258,822 for 1950. Report announces that Techni's expansion program is expected to increase the rate of the annual volume of sales of positive prints to about 440,000,000 feet by the middle of 1952 and to about 600,000,000 feet by early 1953.

Report notes that despite increases in cost of raw materials and labor during 1951, price reductions had been instituted during the year, most important being a drop in the base price for release prints of from 5.48c. to 5.33c. per foot. Techni's net sales for 1951 were $28,896,343, as compared to $23,454,250 for 1950. Report further points out that though income taxes had been increased approximately $2,000,000 over 1950, the net profit after taxes for 1951, as compared with 1950, had decreased by only about $300,000. Net profit for 1951 was $1,918,537, as compared to $2,216,173 for 1950. Net earnings per share of capital stock were $2.06; in 1950 it was $2.40. Dividends were $2 per share of capital stock for a total of $1,855,406.50.

Broader U. S. Market

Rome, April 1.

Arthur M. Loew, president of Loew's International, declared here this week that he sees a broadening market for Italian films in the U. S. "Certain Italian pictures must be treated the same as our own product and play the major circuits instead of art theatres," he stated.

Loew commented that Leonide Moguy's "Tomorrow Is Too Late," which has been booked by Loew's State, N. Y., plus the chain's metropolitan circuit, likely will be followed by other Italo pix in major circuit runs. The market is widening, but gradually so, he said. Loew viewed the establishment of Italian Films Export, N. Y. outfit designed to help market Italo pix in the U. S., as a "healthy development which will secure good results provided these are not expected at once."

Loew was here for the company's international convention at which sales and ad-pub plans were mapped for "Quo Vadis."

Roberts-Corum-Kase Nab Ray-Rocky Rights

Joe Roberts, film industry publicist, and sportswriters Bill Corum and Max Kase this week picked up theatrical filming rights to the Sugar Ray Robinson-Rocky Graziano middleweight championship bout from Chicago Stadium April 16. Trio formed the partnership about two years ago and since have been lensing sports events for telecasters, mostly horseracing.

Robinson-Graziano fight is set for telecast over CBS under Pabst Blue Ribbon sponsorship for all areas except Chi and the Coast.

Balto Boothmen's Local Eyes Indie Union After NLRB Disbanding Order

Baltimore, April 8.

Move has been started by Local 181, Projectionists Union, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, to take over the members of the former Motion Picture Projectionists Union of Baltimore City, Inc., which has been disbanded as a result of an order by the National Labor Relations Board. Latter, an indie group with 95 members, has been in the field for some 25 years and held bargaining rights in about 50 theatres.

Disestablishment of the indie group came as a result of a settlement agreement between the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland and the NLRB. Action stemmed from charge that indie outfit was a company-dominated union. An unfair labor practice charge, filed by attorney Marvin C. Wahl on behalf of Julius Gessin, a member of the union, alleged that the theatreowners' group had "interfered with and dominated the formation and administration" of the union, and was contributing financial support to it in violation of the NLRB act. In affidavits filed with the NLRB, it was alleged, among other things, that Harry Cluster, paid biz agent of the union, was also on the payroll of the theatreowners' association. According to Wahl, Cluster announced that he is now on the payroll of the exhib group as its fulltime labor advisor.

In the settlement agreement, the employers group agreed to disband the union and not to recognize a "successor" labor organization. It also agreed that it would not interfere with any employees in the exercise of their right to join a labor organization of their own choosing and to bargain collectively through their own representatives.

Wahl charged that an attempt is being made to reorganize the union under a different name. He termed the move a defiance of the NLRB order and said that he was gathering evidence to prove that "paternalism and cooperation have continued."

Meanwhile, the IA is attempting to clear the air by bringing in the disestablished group. Joe Basson, IA international representative, has made several trips to Baltimore to weigh the situation and to advise the local IA projectionists.

See Mpls. Strike

Minneapolis, April 8.

Unless an agreement is reached meanwhile, projectionists in all Minneapolis independent theatres, including three downtown (two of them first-runs), will walk out. Under the state law, all required efforts for a settlement of the wage dispute having failed, the AFL booth operators are privileged to start their announced strike now.

The union reached an agreement several weeks ago with the Minnesota Amus. Co. (United Paramount Theatres) and the two local RKO theatres, winning a substantial increase.

London Tent to Help Duke's Playing Assn.

London.

The London tent of the Variety Club is sponsoring a midnight gala June 12 to aid the National Playing Fields Assn., of which the Duke of Edinburgh is president. The Duke has promised to attend this function, which is being held a few days after the expiration of court mourning.

Film and theatre for the gala is being donated by Metro. The screening will take place in its main West End showcase, the Empire, Leicester Square.

Dubbing of Foreign Pix Still a Moot Point Among Distribs in U.S. Mkt.

To dub or not to dub foreign product appears to be a moot point among distributors of overseas films in the American market. Proponents of dubbing hold that the technique will tap new audiences that hitherto have been untouched, thus leading to a bigger gross potential for imports.

Perhaps the most successful foreign film to hit U. S. screens is the Italian-made "Bitter Rice," which is said to have grossed $1,250,000 to date in a subtitled version. Dubbed prints will go into release June 1, and a spokesman for the picture's distributors, Lux Films, is confident its eventual gross will exceed $1,500,000.

Other notably successful subtitled foreign pix are Roberto Rossellini's "Paisan," which reaped an estimated $1,000,000 U. S. gross. The Anna Magnani starrer, "Open City," and Vittorio De Sica's "Bicycle Thief" were slightly under the "Paisan" tally. All three were distributed by Joseph Burstyn.

In voicing his opposition to dubbed films, one distrib expressed the belief that a foreign-made picture would lose a great deal of its sensitivity and peculiar qualities that help mark it as a continental feature if it were dubbed. But, he added, the system of voice synchronization is a complicated one that can't be decided by rule of the thumb decisions.

It all depends, declared the distrib, upon whether the individual picture lends itself to the technique. He challenged recent assertions of others in the foreign film field that dubbing of imports would more or less automatically lead to a broader market.

Boosters of dubbing, it was charged, are partially motivated by intimations that Hollywood will sharply reduce its crop of "B" films. Theory is that dubbed foreign product will largely fill the void resulting from the trim in American secondary product.

But this is merely wishful thinking, say some observers, for American exhibitors play Hollywood films—good or bad—because no matter how thin the budget the picture invariably has one or more stars in its cast who are known to the filmgoing public. Few overseas pix have stars who can equal the marquee names which appear on the credits of an average Hollywood effort.

Meantime, an English subtitled version of the Italian-made "Tomorrow Is Too Late" is scheduled to preem at Loew's State, N. Y., April 12. Fact that this Joseph Burstyn release is gaining a major Broadway showcase is another indication of the steadily expanding market for the art film.

Set O'Donnell Award

Dallas, April 8.

"The O'Donnell Theatre Award" of $1,000 and other valuable considerations, to begin in '53, has been announced by Paul Short for Texas COMPO showmen. Award, in honor of exec veepee-general manager Robert J. O'Donnell, of Interstate Circuit, was voted by exec chairmen of Texas COMPO, Karl Hoblitzelle, Col. H. A. Cole, H. J. Griffith, Edward H. Rowley, Phil Isley, Claude Ezell, Henry Reeve and Julius Gordon.

Annual award will go to an individual making his livelihood in the Texas pic industry, for outstanding contributions and efforts to the film biz during the year.

Crime Groups All-Out For UA's 'City' Bally Via Josephy, Forsythe

Continuing the high tempo set by Max Youngstein, United Artists veepee, Fran Winikus, recently appointed UA ad-pub director, reaching for incisive material for "The Captive City" and other UA releases to crack both metropolitan and small town media (newspapers, TV-radio) hit the jackpot by harnessing Alvin Josephy, Jr., Time mag editor, who wrote "City," and John Forsythe, who stars, for barnstorming purposes.

Fast on the heels of crime headlines Josephy, on a one-man crime-busting crusade, quickly surpassed the original drumbeating objective and is now in demand by citizens crime committees throughout the U. S. Latest is invitation from the citizens crime committee in Cleveland, whom he was asked to address today (Wed.).

Hitting wire services and news pages in key cities, after special showings of "City" for crime reporters, editors, public prosecutors and citizens' committees, Josephy teed off in Washington with an AP dispatch resulting from questions posed during a D. C. press confab held by Senator Estes Kefauver, netting space across the country. (Kefauver, in reply to a query, said he received $2,000 for a two-minute bit in "Captive City" plus 2% of the net, all being donated to the Cordell Hull Foundation for World Peace.)

Josephy later moved into Boston, getting important city-side news coverage after talking with the Citizens' Crime Committee of Massachusetts, and was then set for Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Chicago and Cincinnati. Citizens crime committees in some of these cities have already asked for Josephy to address their members.

Further supplementing the crime-busting approach was a deal made by Winikus with John Scarne, gambling expert, who served as gambling consultant to the U. S. Navy and several foreign governments, setting a "Chumps Carnival" for the opening of "City" at the Criterion, New York, to demonstrate how the $2 bettor supports the national crime syndicate. Scarne demonstrated why suckers can't win, using loaded dice, marked cards, crooked wheels, etc., for this purpose.

Forsythe, after garnering important space in Boston, where he appeared in advance of the New England preem at RKO Boston, April 2, was followed up in New York with UP, AP, N. Y. Times and other big circulation interviews. Approximately 48 TV-radio plugs were set for "Captive City" in New York on network and indie stations with innumerable breaks in Washington and Boston, where the combined newspaper-TV-radio saturation coverage blanketed the New England territory, where "City" is now booked.

Pre-Sell Disney Pic

A 15-minute black-and-white film, "The Riddle of Robin Hood," is being employed to pre-sell Walt Disney's Technicolor all-live-action "Story of Robin Hood," which RKO will distribute early this summer.

Short, which discusses fables concerning Robin Hood, is being shown in schools and on TV.

the reins hadn't progressed to any extent until the past few days. It's said to have reached the point now, however, where the industry pioneer reportedly has indicated he would be available.

Important factor on Zukor is that he could have the added assistance of another Paramount-ite who's well backgrounded in industry organization work. He is Robert J. Rubin, assistant to Par president Barney Balaban. Rubin, prior to his Par association, was top counsel for the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers.

Both Balaban and Rubin sat in at last Monday's nominating meeting. Other participants were Jack Alicoate, committee chairman; James Mulvey, Harry Brandt, Gael Sullivan; Wilbur Snaper, Chick Lewis, Oscar Doob and D. John Phillips.

Rickard Seeks Unfreezing of Yank Coin in Arg.; Speeding Pix Permits

Buenos Aires, April 1.

Joaquin Rickard, Latin-American rep of the Motion Pictures Assn. of America, who has arrived here, is expected to iron out several headaches that have been bothering American distributors in Argentina. Outstanding one is the unfreezing of $1,000,000 of distrib rental coin due for transfer to the U.S. under the Johnston-Careijo pact signed last July. One clause in this agreement calls for that amount being transferred to America every year.

Rickard, who has been absent for six months, went into parleys with distribs about oiling cogs in the machinery of this pact which appear to need easing. He will discuss unfreezing with Ernesto de Oliveria, Entertainment Board chief, and Presidential Press Bureau Raul Apold.

The recent decree, to become effective April 1, which bans all imports of foreign newsreels, also will be taken up. This ban does not apply to nations which permit an equal number of Argentine newsreels into their country. This is regarded as a contradiction of the terms and spirit of the Johnston-Careijo pact.

Probably the most pressing issue is that of getting the Entertainment Board straightened out on handling American product releases. The board obviously has been dilatory in issuing release permits after the Yank pix have been passed by the censors. At the current rate of handling these permits, the U.S. distribs may have to fall back on reissues because the arrival of cooler weather will open up better playing time and possibly additional strong playdates.

Rickard also is expected to bring up the question of promised hikes in admission prices. Although the government has launched a new plan calling for greater austerity and freezing of prices, the wages of all state workers have been boosted again along with hikes in postal rates, rail fares and taxes. Hence, the argument will be that it is unfair to ignore the exhibitor pleas for increases in film theatre scales.

The "austerity" regime means saving on electric power, with exhibs told to watch their power consumption and some talk of changing theatre program times. However, exhibs have opposed all suggestions on changing schedules of playing time.

GERMAN FETE REJECTS MOSCOW STATE BALLET

Wiesbaden, April 1.

Moscow State Ballet offered to come to Wiesbaden's May cultural festival gratis, but the city's parliament voted against it. German officials announced that Russian talent would not be included at the fete, even if paying their own way. The reasons are that East Berlin recently rejected the (West) Berlin State Opera, and no cultural offering can be accepted while there are still German prisoners of war in Russia.

Berlin State Opera will open the Wiesbaden festival May 10 with "Salome." Vienna State Opera has three days of Mozart after which the Rome Opera takes over for five days with works of Verdi. Zurich City Opera is scheduled for Stravinsky's "Rake's Progress" May 28 and 29. Spanish Ballet of Barcelona is booked for May 31 and June 1.

Scot Canvas Strawhat Opens With Bridie Play

Pitlochry, April 1.

Scotland's canvas "theatre in the hills," tent season of drama by wealthy Scot John Stewart, tees off here May 17, opening play being James Bridie's "Tobias and the Angel," "Devorgoil," Scot oldie by Sir Walter Scott, will world preem here May 24.

Other plays in the repertoire are George Bernard Shaw's "Too True to be Good," J. M. Barrie's "Dear Brutus"; "The Witch," by H. Wiers-Jenssen and translated by John Masefield; and "Double Redoubled" by Ben van Eysselsteijn.

Warns Brit. Govt. Won't Ante More Film Coin

London, April 6.

Warning that no more government finance could be expected to support British film produc' n was given in the House of Lords last Thursday (3) when Lord Swinton moved the second reading of the bill which provides an additional $5,600,000 for the National Film Finance Corp. The government spokesman said this was definitely intended to be the last of sponsored finance.

It was the government's hope, he said, that they would not have to guarantee the additional coin although there was power for it to do so.

Elaborating on the measure of state aid provided to production, with the Eady fund yielding close to $10,000,000 a year, Lord Swinton added that the country "could not afford more dollars for foreign films."

Yoshida Slows Up Japan's TV Boom

Tokyo, April 1.

Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida put the brakes on the TV boom in Japan last week when he told the Upper House budget committee in the Nipponese Diet (parliament) that he thought it was too early to introduce video in Japan. Premier said he based his recommendation on the prohibitive price of TV sets here (about $450 for native makes) which would make home video available only to the wealthy few.

Yoshida revealed that the Radio Regulatory Commission, government control agency, is stalling on the video issue. The commission announced the adoption of U. S. tele standards for the embryo Nipponese industry in February, and indicated it would be ready soon to grant provisional licenses. This week, however, the RRC announced it would delay licensing.

Two organizations in Japan are ready to take the TV plunge as soon as they get the commission's nod. They are the 27-year-old Broadcasting Corp. of Japan, the nation's biggest, and the newly-formed Nippon Television Network Corp., which is backed by Japan's three largest picture studios and a trio of leading newspapers. BCJ presumably would have the edge in a TV race since it has been experimenting with the medium for several years.

Local radio manufacturers are reportedly tooling up for TV set production but are not yet turning out the new receivers. Only sets currently used in Japan, a couple hundred in the Tokyo metropolitan area, are U. S.-made ones.

Commons Told Brit. Govt. Can't Control Hypnotism

London, April 1.

Sir David Maxwell-Fyfe, Home Secretary, told the House of Commons last week that the government had no power to control stage hypnotism as a form of public entertainment. He affirmed that he was not satisfied it was desirable to have legislation, and it would be impossible to find time for such legislation during the present session. The Home Secretary had been questioned by John Rogers, Conservative MP, who asked for public protection in view of the fact that several people had been hospitalized as a result of hypnotism.

When the Minister was pressed to give facilities for a Private Bill on stage hypnotism, Sir David promised to consider the matter, but would not go further than that.

Questions were also directed to the Minister of Health in regard to the girl who was taken seriously ill after being hypnotized on the stage, but the Parliamentary Secretary said cases of this kind were happily rare.

Rep's 5th Far East Branch

Carrying on a policy of worldwide expansion, Republic Pictures International Corp. has opened an office in Singapore with Siegfried Weening as manager. New outlet, Malaya, Inc., marks the fifth Rep branch to be set up in the Far East in the last few months.

In revealing formation of the Malayan subsidiary, Republic International prez Richard W. Altschuler also pointed out that the company has established new branches in Japan, Philippines, Hongkong and Thailand. By the end of May, it will have one in Indonesia.

Cannes Film Festival Nearly Killed by Row Over Rooms for Guests

Cannes, April 1.

After near cancellation because of the reluctance of Cannes hotel proprietors to give free accommodations to festival "invitees," this difficulty has been overcome and the International Film Festival will open as skedded April 23. Early last month the organizing committee was informed by hotel keepers that this year they could only make a reduction in prices as a concession to the fete. Many other French cities were anxious to get this business so the Cannes town council after several meetings decided to contribute an extra 1,000,000 francs ($2,500) towards financing the festival.

The secretary general has announced the preliminary list of films to be shown. He said that this year there is an overflow of entries from nearly 30 nations, excluding, up to now, the Soviets. However, Poland and Yugoslavia are among the certain starters, and for the first time Japan will send entries.

The following countries have announced these films for the festival:

U. S.: "An American in Paris," "Detective Story," "Viva Zapata!" and probably "The Medium;" Great Britain: "Cry Beloved Country," "Encore," "I Believe in You," "Sound Barrier" and probably "Tall Headline;" Spain: "Sucros," "Maria Morena;" Mexico: "L'Absente;" Japan: "Romance of Genji," "The Wave" and "The Foghorn;" Poland: "La Jeunesse de Chopin;" Sweden: "She Only Danced One Summer;" Yugoslavia: "On Frontier" and "La Vie des Fresques;" Holland: "Panta Rhei," "Throw the Nets" and "Elle, Lui et le Port de Rotterdam;" Canada: "New Foundland," "The Bird man" and "Man in the Tower;" Argentine: "Paso en mi Barreo;" Brazil: "Tico Tico;" Germany: "Herz der Welt," "Die Stimme der Andern" and "Das Letzte Rezept."

ITALY'S POLL NAMES BERGMAN, PECK TOPS

Rome, April 1.

DOXA, Italy's Gallup Poll, has issued findings on its surveys on top film choices, Ingrid Bergman being selected as the No. 1 actress by both men and women. Alida Valli and Rita Hayworth follow in that order as femme favorites.

Italian women selected Gregory Peck as their favorite actor, followed by Gary Cooper, Italian actor Amedeo Nazzari and Spencer Tracy. Men voters picked Gary Cooper as tops trailed by Robert Taylor and Spencer Tracy.

Script Austrian Opera Strictly for Airwaves

Vienna, April 1.

"John Maynard," the first Austrian short opera written especially for the radio, was broadcast recently by the American sponsored Red White Red network. Music by Otto Walter and a libretto based on the ballad by the German poet Theodore Fontane were adapted by Hans Herbert. It is the story of John Maynard, who held courageously to the wheel of his burning ship on its way across Lake Erie.

The excellent cast included Julius Patzak, Alfred Jaerger and Alfred Poell, all from the Vienna State Opera.

Yank Sponsoring of British Film Prod. Spurts; 5 Majors Up Programs

London, April 1.

An upswing in Yank-sponsored production in Britain is forecast by leading local industry chiefs. Three factors are said to be responsible for inspiring this new development.

During the last two years, Anglo U. S. production has been maintained on a modest scale although there has been an increasing trend towards co-production. Majors as well as independents have seen the advantages of dividing the production costs as well as the territories.

During these last two years none of the majors have launched a big scale production program in Britain and filming has mainly been maintained on a spasmodic scale. Warner Bros. filmed two last year while Metro's main effort was its production of "Ivanhoe;" Paramount had only one joint effort with the J. Arthur Rank Organization. RKO has done nothing on its own volition but financially was interested in Walt Disney's live action "Robin Hood."

There is now evidence that this will be changed. After his New York visit, Sam Eckman, Jr., Metro's local topper, indicated that the British studios were contemplating five to seven pix in the coming year. The first is already under way and the second is being lined up for summer production. Robert S. Wolff, RKO's boss in London had confabs in N. Y. and Hollywood, and is expected to reveal an enlarged British film program in the next few weeks. WB is swinging back into activity late this spring, teeing off with Robert Louis Stevenson's classic "The Master Of Ballantrae," a technicolor opus with Errol Flynn as probable star.

20th-Fox To Resume Production

20th-Fox, which quit British production last year after it had filmed "A House on the Square," Tyrone Power-Ann Blyth starrer, plans to resume studio activity this summer. Two films are being readied. One is C. S. Forrester's naval story, "Single Handed."

Halting of production by 20th-Fox last year led to the closure of Denham Studios which has remained dark ever since.

In addition to the majors, a number of independents are also eyeing the local scene with a view to embarking on British ventures. Josef Shaftel has a program in preparation and Milton Sperling is giving the British studios the once-over with a European property in mind.

For the majors, there are three good reasons why increased British film activity is of extreme importance. Firstly, they can look forward to the Eady coin, which adds something like 40% to the distributors' gross. Secondly, an increased program enables them to reduce overhead, which may become inflated with limited output. In the third place, they feel that evidence of greater activity, coupled with the using up of frozen assets will help the American side when Eric Johnston and his associates come to London this summer for negotiations on a new Anglo-American monetary agreement. For the indies, the main draw, of course, is the extra Eady gravy.

Menotti, Weill Preems Set for Paris in May

Paris, April 1.

Works by Gian-Carlo Menotti and Kurt Weill, as well as Darius Milhaud, Henri Sauget and Mrs. C. P. Simon, will be performed at the Theatre de l'Humour for a special season arranged by Raymond Massiet, with Walter Macran as producer and Victor de la Fosse as artistic manager.

Menotti's "Amelia Goes to the Ball" and Weill's "Down in the Valley" will be done for the first time in France, opening May 19. The three 'Minute Operas" of Darius Milhaud will also get their first presentation, as well as Mrs. Simon's "The Marchand de Regrets" ("The Dealer in Regrets").

Menotti himself will direct his "Amelia." Wendy Toye will direct Weill's "Valley."

'Quiet' Scores On German Revival

Frankfurt, April 1.

Banned for 20 years, Universal's "All Quiet on Western Front" began an expected year's run here this week in some 4,000 West German picture houses. Revival of this war picture is being greeted here as an event by the press and the public, and also is being watched on its political impact.

"Nothing New in the West," as it is called here, was first shown in Berlin in 1931. Goebbels' men released white mice in the theatre in protest. It was banned soon afterwards, and remained on the ban list during the Hitler era.

Communists are officially publicizing the picture, purportedly for pacifist reasons. German reviews have been more than favorable, some calling the picture "cinematic history." Others claim it should be seen by all who may not have "experienced the first world war, knew the second world war, and now want to prevent the next world war."

A few months ago, High Commission officials turned thumbs down on "All Quiet" being shown to Germans, on the grounds that it was the wrong kind of picture to show during the wooing of Germans for NATO membership. Nixing by Hicog is merely an advisory ruling however, and Universal-International decided to show it after it was passed by the German Control office. So far biz has been excellent.

Scot Exhibs Cite Brit. Films as Unprofitable

Glasgow, April 1.

Scot exhibitors sent a deputation to the British House of Commons recently to explain about pix they can't show profitably. All were British. Exhibs pleaded for abolition of the film quota system, under which they are compelled to show British and U. S. pix in fixed percentages. They also cited how they are often forced to show films which audiences don't want to see. The quota system doesn't operate in northern Ireland, and Scot exhibs say this is unfair.

Films listed as being entirely unsuitable for Scot audiences included "Black Out," "Portrait of Claire," "The Vatican" (a documentary), "Let Us Have a Murder," "Quiet Woman," "Old Mother Riley's Jungle Treasure," "Talk of a Million" and "The Scarlet Thread," all British.

India Exhib Back to Bombay

Col. Geoffrey Boret, general manager of Globe Theatres, Ltd. of India, sailed from New York over the weekend enroute to his Bombay headquarters via London.

Col. Boret had been in New York for the last two months to negotiate product deals for the Globe loop.

SHAFTEL TEES OFF ON FIRST TV PIX SERIES

London, April 6.

Lensing started here yesterday (Mon.) on the first three in a series of 30-minute TV films sponsored by Josef Shaftel in association with a British syndicate. Series will have a Scotland Yard background, scripts being versions of real life cases. John Laurie has been inked to star in the series.

Under the financial setup, the series is being financed by the British partners in sterling with the American and offering a Letter of Credit based on dollar currency as its contribution.

Shaftel has arranged American distribution through Jules B. Weill while his British associates retain local rights, including theatrical distribution. If the films are booked as supporting features they will, of course, qualify for the Eady fund subsidy. Acting as production associate to Shaftel on this series is Henry Tauber. A permanent technical crew has been lined up.

French Think New Lighter Tax Law May Boost U.S.-Franco Film Production

Paris, April 1.

French and Continental co-production starring U.S. talent are expected to get a hypo from the new law exempting from taxation the earnings of U.S. citizens remaining abroad 17 out of 18 months.

Although most worthwhile actors hardly would be likely to expatriate themselves that long out of a year and half, it is felt here that this looms as the first step towards easing the tax bite for those who can not make the same amount in dollars here that they might at home. This goes double for writers, directors and others on the production end.

Even if production is cheaper as a rule in Europe than in Hollywood, consideration must be taken of the fact that film-making here is fraught with more difficulties. This is because U.S. producers have to get adjusted to local procedure.

But local producers agree that native production would get a bigger chance to break into the international market if getting the benefit of known American names instead of just locally known players. One of the great drawbacks that local product experiences in foreign sales is the lack of star names that mean anything on the marquee outside of their home country.

Also the Financial Hurdle

Another hurdle that stands in the way of international and especially U.S. co-productions is the financial one. While the dollar expense in the U.S. can be handled by a Yank backer and francs drawn here against his N.Y. bank guarantee, the problem involves the refunding of this guarantee after the picture has been made.

In addition, there is the export of necessary coin to pay for the amount originally paid for in dollars at home. Not only does this mean that the rate of exchange has to be considered (if it goes too much against N. Y., it might entail a big loss), but it also supposes that at the time the dollars are to be remitted the continental authorities will permit the transfer. The French Office des Changes, which is responsible here for such permits, can not give a guarantee that it will have dollars available at all times for transfers of this kind. Nor will it promise to give a permit for the transfer whenever it becomes desirable.

1 GERMAN PLAY CLICKS IN PARIS; 2D ONE NSG

Paris, April 1.

Two Germanic imports, opening in Paris this week, were received very differently. The first was the Erik Charell and Jurg Amstein operetta, "Fireworks," adapted for a Marigny Theatre presentation in French by Jean Boyer and Pierre Destailles. It stars Suzy Delair (Jenny Lamour). Although she is a Paris fave, the production opened inauspiciously.

The other is the Viennese play by Fritz Hochwalder, "On Earth Like in Heaven," adapted by R. Thiberger and Jean Mercure, who directed, for an Athenee Theatre production. It stars Victor Francen. The play, showing how the Jesuit Fathers in Paraguay had to yield to the Spaniards in 1750, is beautifully done and acted. There is a woman in the cast of 30, but the play grips the audience from start to finish. Advance sale is snowballing.

Crix Pick Miss Corona Top Mexican Actress

Mexico City, April 1.

The three toppers or the Mexican stage in 1951 were Isabella Corona, actress; Jose de J. Aceves, producer, and Rodolfo Usigli, playwright, according to the vote of the theatre crix. Miss Corona was selected by acclamation. There was one vote against Aceves and three against Usigli.

Winners will be awarded trophies at a special function April 12 in the Teatro Colon, newest theatre here. All won their awards for Usigli's "El Nino," "The Boy and the Cloud," a heavy drama. Srita. Corona is Mexico's top tragedienne, but also often plays in films.

Berlin Opera Dance Duo To Tour U.S. This Fall

Berlin, April 1.

First German dance team to visit the U. S. since the end of the last war is slated to leave here this fall for an American tour of at least two months. Liselotte Koester and Jockel Stahl, of Berlin's City Opera Co., will make a U. S. tour, including stops in about 20 cities in the U. S. and Canada. The tour will be sponsored by Alexander Parkson with the National Concert and Artists Corp.

German cultural authorities here have put their weight behind the tour project in the belief that it will "further cement the cultural ties between the U. S. and Germany."

Koester and Stahl are regarded here as Europe's leading dance team.

Emelco in Arg. Does Folderoo

Buenos Aires, April 1.

Emelco, one of Argentina's largest and best equipped film studios, has filed its petition in bankruptcy here after being shuttered for several months, excepting for leasing out to other outfits. This is the second shuttering of a major studio (San Miguel was the other) this year, and is symptomatic of the crisis in the industry here.

In its first four years of existence, Emelco paid 16% dividends on its common, but that was before the director and star fees soared so high that they made production unprofitable. Company owns fine studio buildings in the suburb of Martinez. This year, Emelco's lots have been under lease to Hugo del Carril for shooting of "Aguas Turbias" and to Interamericana-Mapol for sequences of "Deshonra." Originally this company was formed by German refugee brothers, Kurt and Fred Loew for the production of advertising shorts. Last year, Emelco produced few pix, and no successes.

Lumiton Studios also is in financial trouble, while government inspectors are probing the accounts of Argentina Sono Film, seeking out alleged black market dealings in foreign coin earnings. San Miguel Studios, which were also shuttered, have been leased by Electra, a new production unit, for shooting of "Death in the Streets" from the book by local novelist Manuel Galvez.

Berlin Does Rave Over Revival of 'Boccaccio'

Berlin, April 1.

Berlin crix, slightly more reserved than local patrons, enthusiastically applauded the preem of "Boccaccio," Viennese revival of a pre-World War II operetta favorite which in its initial performance here scored before a packed house.

Including an assortment of classic Italian love-stories taken from Boccaccio's naughty "Decameron," the Vienna production was described with many superlatives. The most enthusiastic strains of first-night writers ranged from "it was a wow . . . ! It pearls and foams like champagne" to "the City Opera need not worry about its boxoffice on this job . . ."

The reviewers freely admitted that the fans soaked it up. Even the lone slightly sour critic had to admit that it drew from the opening-night audience "much applause, many encores, and many, many curtains."

"Boccaccio" stars Switzerland's Erich Arnold alongside a fine array of Viennese singing and dancing talent. It is directed by Adolf Rott, to whom the umpires tendered the palm for the production's artful Viennese re-creation of the air and spirit of Renaissance Florence. Composer Franz von Suppe also was accorded generous praise.

"Boccaccio" concludes several months of doldrums during which no good operettas have been presented.

Wants U.S. Films Banned

Dublin, April 8.

Dollar-saving, biggest current problem of the Irish government, produced a suggestion in Irish Senate from Senator P. F. O'Reilly that the importation of American films into Ireland should be banned. His idea found little favor and was not further discussed by the senators.

Dollar payments for films exhibited in Ireland come out of a joint pool in Britain, all remittances being sent to London offices of distributors. Hence, no direct dealings in dollars arise from film imports.

Jooss Ballet Again Tours Europe; Makes Imprint In Visit to Switzerland

Zurich, April 1.

The Kurt Jooss Ballet, having been banned by the Third Reich, spent 14 years abroad, touring England, the U. S., Chile, Holland, Belgium and Switzerland. In 1949, Jooss decided to return to Germany to rebuild and reorganize the Folkwang Dance Theatre at Essen, where his first postwar performance on German soil took place last summer. Now he's touring again.

Troupe stars Ulla Soederbaum, Hans Zuellig, Roger George, Noelle de Mosa and Rolf Alexander and features Walter Kuhn, Beatrijs Vitringa, Wiga Schade, Alfonso Unanue, Kurt Paudler, Lydia Daniel, George Frosher, Franziska Tona, Michelle Nadal and Joan Turner. It appeared at the Corso Theatre here March 27 and 28.

This Swiss tour, starting in Zurich and skedded for several other Swiss cities, is the troupe's first here in years. They chose a mixed program of repertory and new ballets by Jooss and Hans Zuellig, with most of the male leads danced by the latter. Way on top of the list is still Jooss' famous ballet drama, "The Green Table," which was awarded the first prize at the International Dance Festival in 1932. It shows, choreographically, how wars are made by diplomats at the "green table" who only do the talking whereas, in the meantime, men go to war and are killed, leaving their kin behind in misery and want.

Of the remaining six ballets presented in two performances here, most impressive are "Big City 1926" (the only one done on both nights) and Colombinade." Former is the story of a poor girl in love with a young worker, but who is seduced by a rich dandy and goes away with him into the wild night life of the big city. When she is fed up and wants to return to her first love, it is too late; she has lost him forever. "Colombinade" has no story line. Contrary to some of the more symbolic and tragic Jooss ballets, it shows the gaiety and joy of living during carnival time. Excellently performed and full of light-hearted charm, this is one of the most enjoyable of the ballets shown.

"Dithyrambus," one of Jooss' latest creations, set to Handel music, fails to convince. Done in pseudo Greek style, it is little more than a pretext for a number of solos, pas de deux and ensembles which, however, are taken advantage of in grand style, technically as well as artistically.

"Phantasy," inspired by music of Schubert; "Le Bosquet," with Rameau music; and "Ball in Old Vienna," using the waltzes of Josef Lanner as musical background, are all standard, although equally well performed. "Old Vienna" stands out by its ironic undertone, distinguishing it from the usual "sweet and lovely" Viennese ballets. Mezo.

'Othello' Scores in Lisbon

Lisbon, April 1.

Metropolitan tenor Ramon Vinay scored in "Othello" at the San Carlos Opera House here. The two performances he gave were sold-out a week in advance.

Duarte de Figueiredo, manager of the San Carlos Theatre, is successfully putting this century-old opera house back on its feet via offering international type of entertainment. He plans to book a larger percentage of American and other foreign singers next season. The Sadler's Wells Ballet Co., headed by Margot Fonteyn and Rassine, will appear at the house April 15-25. Then it will give six performances in Oporto.

Gallic Hepsters Dig Bechet, Gillespie At 2d Int'l Jazz Festival in Paris

By GENE MOSKOWITZ

Paris, April 1.

The Second International Jazz Festival started March 29 with a jazz concert at the massive Salle Pleyel auditorium. The full house attested to the big Gallic jazz following which the Ministry of Industry was trying to tap in underwriting the fest. The jazz fete will run for nine days until April 6th. Coincident with the jazz concerts of selected international artists, there are also side industrial and commercial exhibits showing new disks, instruments, recorders and all the jazz publications which have grown considerably here since the war.

There is also an art exhibit inspired by jazz which includes contribs by stateside artist Testor with three canvases dedicated to old New Orleans style greats, and color photos by Robert Parent, of N. Y., featuring the top jazz names. There is also an amateur jazz tournament with prizes contributed by the leading music houses and Coca-Cola. The tourist biz houses are also in on the deal with specially conducted Paris-by-night tours of the assembled fans. Tour allows visits to three niteries for a flat 1500 francs ($5).

This year the organization is much better than the last fiasco and the two featured styles, New Orleans and bebop, are being kept apart for special concerts. Dizzy Gillespie is the top bop draw and rep, with Sidney Bechet, long a Paris resident and fave, doing the honors for the New Orleans way.

First concert opened (29) to a full stomping, spirited crowd, mostly the young jive set and the hep, appreciative oldsters. First part of show featured a Spanish band, the Cuarteto de Be Bop; a French band, the All Stars Francais; an English outfit, Ronnie Scott and His All Stars; and a Franco-American combo, Nelson Williams and the Art Simmons Trio. The European element showed themselves to be predominently imitative of stateside disks and thin in power, color and improvisation with a good soloist standing out here and there. Best sounding among them was the Ronnie Scott All Star with meatier rhythms and solos.

Noisy Crowd

Crowd was noisy and forward, hungry for good music and razzed mediocrity and mitted the good. Then came the Dizzy Gillespie outfit which he recruited here. On tenor sax was American Don Byas; Hubert Fol, alto sax; Bill Tamper, trombone; Raymond Fol, piano; Pierre Michelot, bass, and Pierre Lemarchand, drums. Though the outfit was still not completely smooth, the Gillespie horning, showmanship, hep clownery and warbling were big time. His good humor, fractured French and brilliant trumpeting had the crowd all the way.

The second night (30) had the Italian element repped by Nunzio Rotondo and the Colltette De Hot Club De Rome. They were competent but ordinary with no top players. Ronnie Scott All Stars definitely proved their top playing over the other smaller outfits. Bernard Peiffer Trio supplied some fine rhythming. Peiffer is one of the top Gallic keyboard men and a fave here.

Aime Barelli, one of the leading commercial outfits here, finished the first half of the show. This led to some incidents with vociferous youngsters hooting the commercial arrangements. Hooting finally led to some expulsions by the ever-present gendarmes. Second half again brought on the crowd-pleasing Gillespie for repeat sock results. However, one flaw was the complete repetition of the first show which gave what was spontaneous a stale air. Gillespie should have realized that a good part of the second night crowd would be the same as the first. Gillespie pulled some good showmanship in doing a couple of numbers with the Aime Barelli orch and making a big show of Franco-American amity. The crowd liked it.

April 3rd will have a special night devoted to film jazz shorts.

Col Takes Over Control Of Its Danish Branch

Copenhagen, April 1.

Three years ago the Danish branch of Columbia Pictures was taken over by Preben Philipsen, independent film distributor and head of Constantin Films, but this month it returned to direct Columbia operation. Personnel of the branch was kept intact and Hans Malmstrom continues as manager while being run on guarantee and percentage deal.

There were some difficulties with the Danish valuta commission over the renewal of the contract and therefore Columbia and Philipsen decided to return to the old setup. Malmstrom, who has been with Columbia since 1938, continues as manager. Some of the 1951 productions, not yet released here, however, will be brought out by Constantin Films.

BBC's TV Show For Films Clicks

London, April 1.

"Current Release," the TV fortnightly program boosting upcoming film product, which was launched at the start of the year on a trial basis, is to continue indefinitely. The British Broadcasting Corp. is pleased with the results, and the program has proved popular with viewers.

With the exception of Paramount, all the major companies are cooperating in the feature and offering extracts of their pix for inclusion in the program. In the early days, three companies were kept off the program by copyright and contract difficulties. Two of them, Warner Bros. and Metro, it is understood, now are able to submit their product, Paramount hopes to get legal clearance at an early date.

Launching of "Current Release" represented the one major success of the British Motion Picture Industries' "Better Business" committee. The preliminary talks extended over 18 months and several pilot scripts were prepped before a basis of cooperation was achieved. Now, in the words of a BBC official, cooperation between the corporation and the film industry has never been on a healthier footing.

NEW TV STATIONS PREEMING IN BRAZIL

Rio de Janeiro, April 1.

Three new TV stations are expected to start operations here soon, making a total of six television outlets in Brazil. The Emissoras Unidas network, of Sao Paulo, plans to get its outlet in work by end of April. The government-owned Roquette Pinto Broadcasting Co. will get under way within the next few months, while a third new station will operate at Belo Horizonte. Last-named is part of the Assis Chateaubriand's network which already runs two TV stations, one here and another in Sao Paulo. Radio Sociedade of Sao Paulo is the third station already operating.

Two other TV licenses have been granted, to Radio Maua of Rio de Janeiro and Jornal do Comercio of Recife. Latter is an indie, while Radi Maua is government-owned. Seven TV channels have been made available here, six in Sao Paulo and one each in the other 20 Brazilian states. Most advertisers restrict themselves to short commercials.

Vaude Acts Gotta Pay If They Play in Brit.

London, April 1.

American vaude acts playing Britain in the future will have to pay $11 for a six-month subscription to the Variety Artists' Federation. Extensions granted after the expiration of 26 weeks will entail a further $11 payment.

This decision was taken by the VAF at its annual meeting. It is in line with the general union policy on union dues by foreign artists.

British Look for Better Break In Film Pact Revise With Italy

London, April 8.

Discussions held in London during the past week on a revision of the Anglo-Italian film agreement may result in more favorable conditions for the export of British product to this Continental market. Tentative agreement has been reached dealing with financial aspects for exchange product which will need ratification of the Italian government.

Under the original scheme an arrangement was made whereby the dubbing tax of 2,500,000 lire (approximately $4,000) could be waived for each Italian film distributed in Britain. Last year 23 British pix were shipped to Rome and nine Italian films were shown in London. Although the market for Italian product is expanding gradually, distribs are still finding it an uphill struggle. The dubbing tax was paid to the Italian government and gave no practical help to them.

Italian producers and distributors are therefore proposing that instead of the payment of a tax in lire, a sum in sterling should be deposited with them in respect to all British films sent to Italy. This would be a virtual subsidy for the Italians and enable them to be more expansive in the handling and distribution of Italian pix in Britain.

The amount proposed in sterling is far below the dubbing tax and the idea has been favorably received by British producers. Italy is regarded as a good market with a potential earning capacity up to $120,000 per picture. There are no restrictions on the transference of earnings from lire to sterling, although Hollywood distributors have part of their revenue iced.

Despite Lent, Pix, HCL, Mex City Legit Perks; 'Merry Widow' Standout

Mexico City, April 1.

Despite heavy competition from pix, soaring living costs, and Lent, the legit theatre here is doing surprisingly well. The stage is supported by four theatres regularly.

Historic Teatro Arbeu is doing "The Merry Widow," first of a series of Viennese operettas twice a night. Produced in Spanish by Miguel de Grandy, it has a $1.38 top. Teatro Ideal, exclusive comedy house, is continuing with stock headed by Isabela Blanch, yet comedienne, with a top of $1.15.

Dramatic stock is being offered successfully by a company of the National Actors Union, directed by Luis G. Basurto at the Teatro Colon, former cinema house. It has a 92c top. Charles Rooner is producing Christopher Fry's "The Lady's Not for Burning" in Spanish at the intimate Sala Moliere.

Besides these houses, art plays are frequently presented at the Palace of Fine Arts (National Theatre) with $1.15 top. Exhibitors are watching this legit upswing with some alarm.

TV BOW DRAWS SPOTTY REACTION FROM SCOTS

Glasgow, April 1.

British Broadcasting Corp. has preemed its TV service in Scotland with routine ceremonies in Edinburgh. Transmission, from the new Scot station at Kirk o' Shotts, Lanarkshire, was reported seen in Belfast, 117 miles away. However, first-class reception was recorded only within a 30-mile radius.

Initial Scot reaction varies from boring to not so bad. Canny Scots are holding off buying TV licenses until they make up their minds. Film theatre trade was not changed, excepting in some wealthier neighborhoods.

First program included a British comic, George Moon, and actor-comedian Alastair Sim.

Mex Biopic on Nun

Mexico City, April 1.

Gen. Juan F. Azcarate, ex-diplomat, ex-commander of the Mexican army air force and now a newsreel producer, is making a biopic of Juana Ines de la Cruz, Mexican nun of the 16th century.

Maria Alba, Spanish actress, will star.

Edinburgh Film Fete Slated for Aug. 17-Sept. 7

London, April 1.

Sixth International Edinburgh Film Festival will be held Aug. 17-Sept. 7. Though no prizes or trophies are offered, a certificate is awarded all films selected for screening at the festival.

Since 1947 the event has been held annually in association with the International Festival of Music and Drama. Screenings will place special emphasis upon scientific, educational and children's films.

New Film Season Looms Big in Arg.

Buenos Aires, April 1.

With the new picture season started last week, both exhibitors and distributors anticipate better grosses, although biz has dropped below average during the past summer. Cooler weather and some rain, latter bringing relief to the parched-country which has suffered since early last fall, are expected to bring much better weekend crowds.

Experience over the last 75 days indicates that Argentine film patrons do not go for war-theme pictures. This was particularly pointed up by the small biz done by "Battleground" (M-G). While disk sales for Frank Sinatra are good here, but not up to Bing Crosby, his films fail to draw well.

Cinemas suffered during the torrid weather because of high cost of living, the heat, which sent thousands to the outdoors, and the lesser quality of product. While it is natural not to bring out the best films during the off-season summer period, patrons obviously were disappointed with some fare unloaded by distribs, especially after having to see old reissues for two years, because film imports from the U.S. were banned.

However, no fault could be found with "Father of Bride" (M-G), which was the top summer grosser. It did $89,125 in the 10-week first-run engagement. It probably would have gone higher if released earlier last year. "Hamlet" (U) was just behind with $83,950 in a first-run date of eight weeks.

Other top grossers included "Born Yesterday" (Col), seven weeks; "Male War Bride" (20th), three weeks; "The Window" (RKO), 11 weeks and still running.

Row Over Music in Pix Ended Quickly by Mex

Mexico City, April 1.

Exhibitors and the song writers division of the Mexican Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers of Music are at peace, and sooner than generally expected. Agreement was reached early in the 30-day truce period arranged by the Ministry of the Interior which intervened in the "war" which provoked the exhibitors into closing all the 115 operating cinemas here March 11. This was in protest against the tunesmiths causing the arrest of exhibitors for nonpayment of royalties on tunes and songs in pix they exhibited.

Agreement was based on the society's acceptance of a flat pay of $690 per film. Detail of just who would pay that amount was cleared up by Manuel Espinosa Iglesias, chain operator, arrested for nonpayment of royalties on two pix used in his first-run cinemas here. He said the producers had agreed to make the payment and to deliver all Mexican films for exhibition without that added cost. Tunesmiths waived their demand that payment of royalties on two pix claimed $1,150,000 for royalties over the past four years.

First Pix Canned by 'Group Three' Fail to Get Top British Playdates

London, April 1.

First pictures completed by Group Three, the production unit sponsored by the National Film Finance Corp., and financed with government coin from the film bank, it is understood are running into booking difficulties. Trio of film finished some weeks back and trade shown more than a month ago so far have failed to get circuit releases.

Associated British was reported prepared to take the films but was only willing to offer second feature billing. This was rejected by Associated British Film Distributors, which is handling the Group Three output. It insisted on top billing, although it may be ready to compromise on a co-feature basis.

The two circuits controlled by the J. Arthur Rank organization, the Odeon and Gaumont British, are reported to have given a direct thumbs down to the first films, and are unlikely to continue negotiations.

The Group Three product is strictly in the modest budget category. The company was founded mainly to give opportunities and encouragement to new technical talent. Average cost is between $80,000 to $130,000, and with that capital outlay, could not recoup negative costs on a second feature basis domestically.

The local industry is watching the situation with keen interest because of the government's stake in financing the program. If negotiations, which are still in progress, do not yield a more satisfactory outcome, it is likely the pix will be submitted to the Board of Trade Selection Panel which has statutory powers to order a circuit release.

German Ballet Set For 4 Weeks in Mex City

Mexico City, April 1.

The Haller German Ballet, now in Lisbon, has been inked by Felix Alarcon for a four-week date here with options. It will appear at the Teatro Margo, local vaude-revue theatre, doubling in at the El Patio nitery.

Opening date for the troupe of 14 femmes and six men has not been decided.

Arg. TV Makes Slow Progress

Buenos Aires, April 1.

Although TV programs were inaugurated officially here in October, '51, and for commercial purposes a few months later, backers of the new media are very disappointed with progress. Tele has failed to produce any advertising revenue, while costing a terrific amount of money to operate. The only break they have received is in getting talent for almost nothing, the government, which controls all entertainment matters, permitting the industry to get talent services cuffo thus far.

Trade is watching to see who will become leader in the TV-radio biz since the death of Jaime Yankelevich, operator of Radio Belgrano, which set up the first Argentine tele transmitter. Thus far, successor looks to be Pablo O. Valle, his nephew, who worked for nearly 30 years in Argentine radio.

Latest plan to make video pay, or at least distribute its heavy cost among all broadcasters, is to permit each big network to operate a TV transmitter a certain number of hours daily. This would force the various nets to break the cost of putting on tele programs, insure greater variety of shows and permit all of them to learn something about TV production. The main objective, of course, would be to force advertisers to pay for video time, something they have held out against thus far. They fight against paying for TV shows by saying the tele programs are too poor in quality.

EDINBURGH '51 FEST HIT BIGGEST DEFICIT, 119G

Edinburgh, April 1.

Expenses incurred in bringing over the N. Y. Philharmonic Symphony and the Yugoslav Ballet to last year's International Festival here caused the Edinburgh Festival Society to have its biggest deficit, $119,000, since this cultural arts junket was launched.

Loss would have been greater but for a contribution of $45,000 from the Arts Council of Great Britain and increased financial support from private donors. Festival exchequer now stands at $150,000. Engagement of the Philharmonic Symphony Orch cost over $150,000.

At the last Festival both drama and ballet were run at a loss, total deficit here being $18,000. But soldiers, sailors and airmen who took part in a spectacular military tattoo brought in no less than $45,000.

At the 1952 Festival opening here in August, nearly 30 ambassadors of nations throughout the world will be present for the opening. The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, under Sir Thomas Beecham, will open the Festival.

New Novello Musical Planned for Next Year

Manchester, April 1.

Plans are going ahead for a new musical plan composed of music written by the late Ivor Novello. It is set to open here in 1953.

The play will feature stars associated with Novello productions, including Zena Dare, Olive Gilbert. It is being pieced together from unpublished scores and librettos of the late actor-composer. Tom Arnold will tour the musical prior to a London opening.

Gallic Hepsters

Featured will be Don Byas and Roy Eldridge in "Around A Trumpet," Count Basie, Sarah Vaughan and Bessie Smith in "The St. Louis Blues," "Salute To Duke Ellington," and the brilliant Gjon Mili pic jam session with Illinois Jacquet "Jammin' The Blues."

April 5th will see the finals of the amateur tournament to be held at the Cite Universitaire. Wind-up will be April 6th with two concerts to follow each other at the Salle Pleyel. First will be the New Orleans night featuring Sidney Bechet and his leading disciple, Claude Luter and orch. Second concert is the Norman Granz Jazz Concert starring Ella Fitzgerald, Roy Eldridge, Lester Young, Filp Philips, Hank Jones, Oscar Peterson, Irving Ashby and Roy Brown. Tickets are already at a premium for the windup.

Jazz, which was one of the babies of a select intellectual sect (Le Hot Club De France) before the war, has gotten a big popular impetus here. Record shops have mushroomed and 12 record companies here turn out from 30 to 500 jazz records a month. Specialized niteries featuring known jazz musicians get a big play here. Le Sieux Columbier featuring Sidney Bechet is usually packed. Don Byas and "Fats" Edwards get good crowds at L'Harlequin.

The younger set are actively interested in the music and personalities and the welcome mat is out for stateside names. Many American players have stayed on here and a look-see shows such long time stayees as instrumentalists Don Byas, Sidney Bechet, Bill Coleman, Art Simmons, Nelson Williams, Mezz Mezzrow (whose recent book is a best seller here), Ernie Royal; warblers Inez Cavanaugh with her own club, Quentin Foster, Jimmy "Lover Man" Davis, "Fats" Edwards, and the recently gone home Honey Johnson and Eartha Kitt.

Small Scot Town Votes Sun. Pix

Whithorn, Scotland, April 1.

By 240 votes to 158, residents in this small South Scotland town voted in favor of Sunday cinemas.

Whithorn is Scotland's oldest royal burgh and is known as the "cradle of Christianity in Scotland." Result of public plebiscite came as a surprise.

"My Son John"

Here is a picture with a top potential that must be realized by showmanship ability and ingenuity of the theatremen who book it. On its own, it will do a great business, benefiting from strong word-of-mouth praise. But, intelligently sold in the community, there is no telling how tremendous the box-office results may be.

Built around a theme that is constantly front page news and the topic of conversation wherever you go; enacted by one of the finest casts ever assembled, plus the direction of a master craftsman like Leo McCarey, the showman can pull out all the stops and make "My Son John" the outstanding engagement of his movie season.

It is mighty rare that we develop the urge to look at a picture a second time, but since viewing this one we are eagerly awaiting the opportunity of seeing it again.

The theatreman need do no exaggerating when he builds a campaign around "My Son John." There is no advance praise that could be too enthusiastic in promising grand entertainment. It is a truly great picture and one in which the entire industry should take great pride.

Exhib Groups Seeking New British Tax Formula to Lighten B.O. Load

London, April 1.

Since the rejection of the industry's new tax formula, which aimed at the introduction of the American percentage system in calculating admission tax, exhibitors throughout the country have been submitting alternative schemes to the Treasuary, all of which aimed at providing additional relief for small theatre operators.

The proposals so far submitted are similar in principle, but vary in detail. For example, theatre owners in one area advocated that the first $168 should be exempt from admission taxation and the duty should be calculated on receipts above this figure. In another district, exhibs felt that the first $280 should be free of tax.

The original industry plan advocated tax free admission up to and including 14c., while duty on admissions in higher brackets would be calculated by deducting 8c. from the gross and imposing a 50% tax on the balance. This was turned down in last month's budget because it would have left exhibitors with an additional $3,000 and would have involved higher earnings by American distribs, with a consequent drain on dollar reserves.

Although the Chancellor is prepared to consider a new basis of taxation, his budget statement made it clear that he could not contemplate any additional relief for the trade. The two-way affect on the treasury could not be contemplated under present circumstances.

Bulgaria Must Pattern Pix After Red Setup

Sofia, Bulgaria, March 25.

Bulgaria, trying to build up its film production industry, must take the Soviet industry as its model and see that a strong brand of Marxist philosophy is included in the product, declares an officially inspired editorial in "Rabotnichesko Delo" here. Editorial also discloses that there are now 1,045 film theatres in the country compared with 213 in 1944.

"Our film workers," editorial says in part, "have been assisted and inspired by the Soviet film masters whose films are the pattern for the Bulgarian movie workers. But much still has to be done to improve our methods of work. Film producers must depict the success achieved by the farmers, the heroic efforts of the Bulgarian people, and the heroic struggle of the workers against fascism. "One of the main problems concerns the writing of scenarios. The Scenario Committee is responsible because it does not properly assist the authors. It is evident that without a drastic change in the work of the Scenario Committee, the problem will not be solved properly."

Japanese Radio Revives Beaming Shows to U.S.

Tokyo, April 1.

Broadcasting Corp. of Japan, recently reorganized into a semi-governmental "public service" corporation, has resumed its international broadcasting service halted by the Occupation order immediately after the Nipponese surrender. Web, which had its 26-year monopoly of Japanese airwaves broken last year when the government authorized the nation's first commercial radio, has started broadcasts beamed to the U.S.

Other one-hour daily programs are beamed to North China, Central China, the Philippines and Indonesia. The net broadcasts 90 minutes daily to India.

Teddington to Plane Co.

London, April 8.

Negotiations extending over several months were concluded here last Friday (4) when a deal was signed for the leasing of Teddington Studios to Hawker Aircraft Company. The lot will now be used for storage purposes under a five-year deal.

Official confirmation was accompanied by an announcement from Warner Bros. that in future it will use Associated British Elstree studios for all British production. WB likely will lens "The Master of Ballantrae" there in the summer.

Pascal Wants Bergman For Lead in 'Candida'

Rome, April 1.

Gabriel Pascal due here this week to discuss the production of George Bernard Shaw's "Candida," with Ingrid Bergman sought for the name role. Miss Bergman says that she is interested in resuming her career soon after the birth of her child probably this summer. Bergman and Pascal, who have been friends for many years, have discussed the possibility of making "Candida" for several years.

Robert Donat, Robert Newton and Paul Scofield are possibilities for the other main roles, but no deals have been set. Pascal would direct as well as produce. Robert Goelet, Jr., has been signed as Pascal's assistant.

Austrian Femme Played In Commie Pic, So She Has to Plug Soviet Gas

Vienna, April 1.

Marianne Schonauer, Austrian film player who recently played leads in several Soviet-made productions at local Russ-operated Rosenhugel studios, came in for raps from the western press when she helped in the promotion of a new gas station operated by Russian oil monopoly. It is on the property of the studio in Vienna's Soviet sector.

The situation reflects the dilemma some players find themselves in here when they choose to take roles with Soviet-operated pic or radio outfits. Once they are in the act, although parts they play may be entirely harmless politically, they are gradually pressured into more and more pro-Red activities on both cultural and commercial side. In this case resentment was especially marked because of the Austrian feeling over the fact that the Kremlin operated "Orop" oil monopoly has seized this country's oil wells and denies the Austrian state any income from the properties.

Miss Schonauer posed for pix at the gas station preem and pumped gas into the first customer's cars. Ads said: "If you want to talk with Marianne Schonauer buy your gas from Orop-Rosenhugel."

Old Vic Sets 'Athens' For Season Windup

London, April 1.

Current Old Vic season will wind with the presentation of "Timon of Athens" which opens May 28. Name role will be played by Andre Morell and the production will be directed by Tyrone Guthrie.

Succeeding the current presentation of "King Lear" will be a revival of "Othello." This will run for one week only and will be followed by James Forsyth's new play about Francois Villon and Katherine de Vausselles entitled "The Other Heart." This preems April 15 and is set for a five-week run.

'In Paris' Day-Dating In 7 Aussie 1st-Runs

Sydney, April 8.

Metro's Oscar prize-winner, "An American in Paris," preemed simultaneously in four Metro houses April 25, Liberty, St. James, Minerva and Manly here. It also opened day-date in three key Melbourne houses April 4, giving this musical terrific Aussie coverage.

"American" is expected to play longruns here, as it did in the U.S.

Harlequin Prods. Launched

London, April 1.

Harlequin Productions formed here as a new lensing outfit to concentrate on supporting feature product made on modest budgets. Company has a schedule of a minimum of three-a-year at a total cost of $170,000.

The new venture will be launched with "Appointment in Amsterdam," which is set for early filming. Max Anderson has been inked as director.

Sperling Scouting Site

London, April 1.

Milton Sperling, production chief of United States Pictures, has been touring the main European film producing centers to decide the most suitable location for a production with a marked European accent. After extended stays in Rome and Paris, the producer checked in here Monday (31), and is staying long enough to visit principal studios.

If the deal matures, the picture will be distributed on both sides of the Atlantic by Warner, and will have Associated British release in Britain. The film is budgeted at around $850,000. He will decide on the production setup before the end of April.

Eros Films Using U.S. Stars for Series of 4 Pix Being Done in Brit.

London, April 8.

Julian Lesser has returned here from Hollywood to finalize arrangements for a group of joint productions to be made in association with Eros Films. First picture in deal is completed and three others are scheduled to follow.

Initialer of series is to be known in America as "Suicide Smith," British title being "The Lost Hours." Mark Stevens came from Hollywood last year to star in this, playing opposite British actress Jean Kent.

Stevens is due to return here soon to play the lead in the next two productions based on the "Detective X" series.

John Rawlins, Lesser's business associate, who is on the board of Royal Productions, arrived last Saturday (5) and will stay to work on the entire group. The Lesser investment is mainly a dollar contribution for stars, story and other U. S. personnel. Although there is a division of territory, each partner shares in the other's profits. This deal does not follow the more conventional formula of a co-production pact.

London Legit Bits

London, April 8.

Joe Pole, publicity chief for U. A. pictures, whose play, "The Hungry God," was recently tried out by Jack de Leon at his "Q" Theatre, with option to produce it in the West End, has had the option picked up by de Leon.

Constance Cox's dramatization of Ivan Turgenev's "Fathers and Sons," which has been retitled "Spring At Marino," has been acquired for production in Copenhagen, Madrid, Amsterdam and Vienna . . . Actor-playwright Anthony Verney has completed new play, titled "Where the Mistral Blows" . . . Alfred Esdaile, who just completed repairs of the Court Theatre, Sloane Square, which are badly damaged by last war's air raids, and renamed it the London Theatre Guild, reopens with his new policy, with John Rusgin's old classic "Bride of Denmark Hill," sometime in June.

"The Mortimer Touch," new Eric Linklater comedy, starring Roger Livesey, with Pamela Brown, was originally known as "The Atom Doctor" and had its world preem at Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh, at International Festival of 1950. Play is now touring Britain, by-passing Edinburgh and playing to Glasgow audiences. Livesey has role created by Scot actor Duncan Macrae. Others in cast are Mervyn Johns, George Relph and Mollie Urquhart and George Devine directed . . . Citizens' Theatre of Glasgow will stage "The Highland Fair" at the Edinburgh Festival this fall.

Adult Rating of Films by British Viewed as Okay by Distribs, Exhibs

London, March 25.

In the 15 months since the introduction of the new "X" censorship category, which forbids the admission of persons under 16, eight Hollywood pix out of a total of 31 have been placed in this class. The remainder were continental films. It was mainly to facilitate the importation of these films that the new certificate was introduced at the beginning of last year.

The industry first reacted cautiously to the introduction of the "X" category. Exhibitors who offered product with this classification feared that it might result in sacrificing the normal family trade, but the view now current is that this new grouping has played an important part in elevating films to the adult class.

Of the Hollywood films that have been classed as "X," the most notable are "Quo Vadis," "Streetcar Named Desire," "Detective Story," "Murder, Inc." and "The Well." Two of these were seen in London as legit productions, both catering to mature audiences, and their transition to the screen is seen as an indication that the U. S. film industry is not shrinking from making controversial subjects.

The original exhibitor reaction of fighting shy of "X" films has now relaxed. Several recent films given circuit bookings have done substantial business, and both distributors and exhibitors believe there is a substantial market for "X" pix.

Prior to the introduction of the "X" category, the only method of barring juves from films was to impose an "H" (for horrific) certificate, but it was felt that many productions unsuitable for children could not fairly be classified as horrific.

During the past year, the British Board of Film Censors rejected five films and ordered cuts in 353 others. Altogether they passed 354 as "U" (Universal) and 257 as "A" (Adults).

London Exhibs Squawk On 'Don't See' Reviews

London, April 1.

Representations are to be made by London exhibitors to national press critics urging them not to use such direct phrases as "don't waste your time by seeing this film." The London branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Assn. took the initial step on this at its executive meeting last week. It now will be submitted by its two representatives on the joint industry committee to the Critics' Circle.

Arthur Taylor, secretary of the London CEA, said that several branch members had objected to the use of such phrases which didn't help the trade or the public. They were all in favor of film criticism, but felt it would be advisable to bring this up before the film scribes.

Buenos Aires Niteries Ready to Quit Business If Rules Get Tougher

Buenos Aires, April 1.

Niteries here are operating under handicaps which are enough to make some operators agree it would be better to become farmers. Apart from having to share out 65% of their receipts with their waiters and kitchen staffs and having to serve liquor off the cuff for union bosses and their friends as well as government tycoons, the operators are now faced with having to keep candles and paraffin lamps ready in case the city power supply fails. This already has happened several times as the power supply company cuts off electric power alternately in different sections of the city to relieve the tremendous overload on the antique turbines.

About five years ago the government nixed an import permit for new power generators, and now the people are suffering.

Because the authorities enforce severe regulations about nightclubs being fully illuminated to insure "prevention of immorality," the operators fear that the power shortage could hand them further penalties.

The regulation calling for over 60% music by national composers being played is rigidly enforced by the police, which has shuttered Goyescas for 30 days for not living up to the rule. This is one of the more popular cafe-concert type of nitery, which specializes in presenting Hispano acts which find it difficult to use the Argentine rhythms.

London Film Notes

London, April 1.

Film producer Mario Zampi undergoing minor eye operation . . . ABPC's "The Yellow Balloon," directed by Jay Lee Thompson, goes on the floor at Elstree early in May, with Andrew Ray, son of radio comic Ted Ray, signed for stellar role . . . Michael Anderson, who directed "Water Front" for Paul Soskin (J. Arthur Rank release) and "Hell's Sold Out" for Eros Films, given longtermer by ABPC.

Victor Saville due here from Hollywood to direct "The Director" by L.A.G. Strong, with entire location of pic in Ireland . . . Mario Zampi's "Top Secret" film for ABPC skedded for shooting April 21, with Oscar Homolka and George Cole costarring . . . Naunton Wayne, skedded to feature in Group Three's production of "Miss Robin Hood," being made by John Grierson and Donald Wilson, has had to give up the part due to previous commitment to star in touring revue. Richard Hearne has replaced him.

U.S. Films Dominate Burma

Washington, April 1.

While Hollywood pix represented about 75% of those shown in Burma during 1950 and 1951, there has been a steady increase in Indian and Chinese films shown, reports the U. S. Department of Commerce.

Last year, Burmese censors looked over 197 Indian pictures and 101 from China, as well as 99 produced in Burma. The combined U. S.-British total was 1,041.

Toronto Melody Fair Sets 2d Season Sked

Toronto, April 8.

Leighton K. Brill and Ben Kamsler have completed details for a second season of their Melody Fair theatre-in-the-round setup, which was a financial success here last summer at a $3.40 top with tax. Gold and blue tent in midtown Dufferin Park again has a 1,640 armchair-seat capacity.

With stage and front-office personnel set, plus 18 dancers and chorus of 12, musicomedy guestars schedule is: Week of June 23, "Merry Widow," with Irra Petina, Robert Shafer, Lois Hunt; June 30, "Kiss Me, Kate," Martha Errole and Ted Scott; July 7, "Great Waltz," Irra Petina, Lawrence Brooks, Lois Hunt; July 14, "Red Mill," Buster West, Lucille Page, Pat Rooney, Jr.; July 21, "Carousel," Dorothy MacNeil, Jack Kilty; July 28, "Finian's Rainbow," Kaye Connor, Fred Thomas; Aug. 4, "Where's Charley?," Gil Lamb; Aug. 11, "Naughty Marietta," Maria D'Attili, Iggie Wolfington; Aug. 18, "Wizard of Oz," Jean Rogers; Aug. 25, "New Moon," Ann Ayars, Clifford Horvuot; Sept. 1 (two weeks), "Annie Get Your Gun," Marylin Day, Earl Covert.

Arthur Lief has been inked as orchestral and choral conductor; Bert Yarborough as director; Bettina Rosay as ballerina and choreographer. Season resident players include Harold Brown, tenor; Carolyn Adair, soprano; Andrew Gainey, baritone; Gean Greanwell, basso-baritone; and Cynthia Latham, character woman.

1st Italo Tinter Delayed

Rome, April 1.

"The Golden Carriage," first Italian Technicolor picture, currently in production at the Cine-Citta Studios here, is running behind schedule. Anna Magnani, the film's star, was ill for two weeks.

More recently, the male lead, Michael Tor, was replaced by British thespian, Duncan Lamont. After seeing the first rushes, the producers had decided Tor was not suited for the part. This means that all the scenes with the former must be shot again.

Only mediocre response is indicated for "Strange World." A semi-documentary, pic contains several good action sequences but overall shapes up uninterestingly.

Lensed for the most part in the wilds of Brazil, Bolivia and Peru, film details efforts of Alexander Carlos, a youthful clerk-turned-adventurer, to locate statue of an Inca goddess which he last saw as a 10-year-old when he and his father accompanied an American scientist, latter's wife and 10-year-old daughter through the South American jungle in search of a gold image. Statue had been found, but a raft accident separated Carlos from the group. He was rescued but presumably other party members had been captured by angry natives in pursuit.

Now, having spotted pic of the idol while scanning recently-taken aerial photographs of the region, he's off to the locale believing his father is still alive. After the appropriate dangers, he discovers the idol, finds his father now only a strunken head and the young girl a semi-primitive woman. Idol is sacrified to save his life, and fade-out finds the femme serving as love interest.

Original story and sceenplay were handled by Al O'Camp, O. A. Bayer and Franz Eichhorn—who, respectively, also presented the pic, produced and directed. Unfortunately, trio played up the thin tale instead of concentrating on the jungle material. There's enough inherent action throughout, however, so that with judicious editing a better pic could result.

Alexander Carlos, in lead role, is a young blonde whose good looks are bound to impress more than his acting ability. Angelica Hauff is only fair as the femme.

Technically, film is at its best with Edgar Eichhorn's photography. Neal.

Laramie Mountains

Durango Kid sagebrush saga for program western market.

Columbia release of Colbert Clark production. Stars Charles Starrett; features Smiley Burnette, Jack Mahoney, Fred Scars, Marshall Reed, Rory Mallinson, Zon Murray. Directed by Ray Nazarro. Screenplay, Barry Shipman; camera, Fayte Brown; editor, Paul Borofsky. Tradeshown in N. Y., March 26, '52. Running time, 54 MINS.

Steve Holden The Durango Kid	Charles Starrett
Smiley Burnette	Smiley Burnette
Swift Eagle	Jack Mahoney
Major Markham	Fred Sears
Lieutenant Pierce	Marshall Reed
Paul Drake	Rory Mallinson
Carson	Zon Murray
Chief Lone Tree	John War Eagle
Mandel	Bob Wilke

"Lamarie Mountains" is a below-par entry in the Durango Kid series. Slim plot and routine thesping make it only so-so for the western trade.

Story revolves around a series of raids against U. S. Army personnel believed to be instigated by a neighboring Indian tribe. Washington officials, anxious to avert an Indian war, send a man to effect a peace treaty between the tribe and the U. S. troops. Army brass, influenced by a pair of Indian scouts, who are really outlaws anxious to get the Indians out of the territory so that they can claim the gold they've discovered on the Indian land, hinder the peacemaking efforts. The intervention of the Durango Kid, however, prevents the planned massacre of the Indians and brings the outlaw gang to justice. There's also a subplot built around discovering the true identity of one of the Indian tribe's leaders, who is a white man raised by the tribe since childhood.

Charles Starrett doubles in the roles of Steve Holden, the Washington peacemaker, and the Durango Kid in his familiar tight-lipped style. Jack Mahoney is okay as the white man adopted by the Indians but the other cast members fail to do much with their lesser assignments. Smiley Burnette offers his cactus humor for fair results.

Direction was unimaginative while other technical credits reflect pic's modest coin outlay. Gros.

Bellissima

(ITALIAN)

Genoa, April 1.

Cei-Incom release of Bellissima production. Stars Anna Magnani and Walter Chiari. Directed by Luchino Visconti. Screenplay, Visconti, Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Francesco Rosi; from story by Cesare Zavattini; camera, Piero Portalupi; editor, Mario Serandel; music, Franco Mannino. Previewed in Genoa. Running time, 130 MINS.

Maddalena Cecconi	Anna Magnani
Alberto Annovazzi	Walter Chiari
Maria Cecconi	Tina Apicella
Spartaco Cecconi	Gastone Renzelli
Photographer	Arturo Bragaglia
Alessandro Blasetti	Himself

A good entry for the sureseater trade, with the Anna Magnani name and film's behind-the-scenes look at Italian film-making as drawing cards. Although having a slight plot, film gets top-drawer handling in production, thesping and direction. Miss Magnani has rarely been better. Word-of-mouth should help this but some pruning would help.

Story was suggested to writer Cesare Zavattini (Miracle in Milan) during the casting of recent Italian films. In telling about the attempts by a Rome worker's wife to get her little girl a film role, it launches some sharp barbs at the Roman film milieu. A screen test is finally engineered via bribes, after the unknowing child has been coached, primped, and "beautified."

In one of the cruelest scenes ever filmed, mother and child secretly watch a screening of the test, in which all present double with laughter at the girl's ugliness and ineptitude. The mother interrupts the show and tells them off, leaves with her dream shattered, dragging the girl along. Though the studio later decides to hire the child for another role, the mother refuses to sign and returns to a normal life with her husband.

Magnani runs the thespian gamut in this one, in her colorful portrayal of the mother's role, with splendid support from comedian Walter Chiari. Latter here plays a straight part as a likeable studio profiteer. The scene in which he tries and fails to seduce her on an excursion is one of pic's highlights. Remainder of colorful cast of professionals and no pros is given a perfect blending under Luchino Visconti's sensitive direction.

The lighter-veined first half, more diffuse in embroidering on the simple story outline, gets film off to slowish start. Photography is superb throughout, with other credits measuring up. Production was shot in direct sound takes, an Italian rarity and resulting realism and depth are outstanding. Hawk.

Es Geschehen Noch Wunder

(Miracles Still Happen)

(GERMAN)

Vienna, April 1.

Styria Film Verleih release of Junge-Film-Union Rolf Meyer production. Stars Willi Forst and Hildegarde Neff; features Werner Futterer, Hans Leibelt, Marianne Wischmann, Lotte Klein, Ilse Bally, Sepp Nigg; Hugo Gottschlich, Theo Danegger. Screenplay, Forst and Johannes Mario Simmel; music, Theo Mackeben; lyrics, Hans Fritz Beckmann; editor, Rudolf Schaad; camera, Vaclav Vich; directed by Willi Forst. At Forum Theatre, Vienna. Running time, 125 MINS.

Underlying gimmick in the story with which Willi Forst anti-climaxes his sensationally erotic "Sinner," of last year is a cute trick, which might have amounted to something in more capable hands. This gag is that the young lovers (with an obvious 25-year age gap between them) are the only ones who can hear a haunting love melody that breaks out whenever they are near each other. One trouble is that the melody, moaned endlessly on an electric organ, does not amount to much. Another is that the surrounding screenplay and acting do nothing to make this believable. Not any hope for the U. S. market.

As usual with Forst starrers directed by himself, the camera spends so much time on his own face that many in audience wonder how much longer it can last. The film runs almost 90 minutes of slow-moving, jerky development of a story that succeeds in selling neither whimsy nor reality to the onlooker. And there isn't a chuckle in the whole thing.

Forst's own performance is of the slow, dreamy type that he outgrew soon after his prewar triumphs in the operetta style of which his large public believes him still to be tops. Hildegarde Neff supplies an unbelievable portrait of a synthetic girl with bedroom eyes. Supporting cast merely supports. Music drags like the action. Segments where an all-kraut jazz orchestra moans and blows in the best 1925 style will be painful even to 1952 ickies. Camera work is okay as are other technical credits. Isra.

Andre Gide

(FRENCH—DOCUMENTARY)

Paris, April 1.

Pantheon production and release. Directed by Marc Allegret. Commentary, Andre Gide; narrated by Gide, Jean Desailly. At Vendome, Paris. Running time, 98 MINS.

This offbeat documentary is the evocation of the work, time and personality of the recently deceased author, Andre Gide. Completed shortly before his death last year, the film is being released here on the first anni of his demise. A fine example of the recording power, the film will have an appeal here because of the cultism that has sprung up about his work since his death. For the U. S., the pic will be limited to a few small arty houses and some literary groups.

The first part traces his early life through photos, his books, and Gide's own readings of portions of his early works. It traces his growth from ascetic puritan to the budding author and his early sickness and realization of his senses and responsibilities. Early footage, on a trip to Africa, made by Gide and director Marc Allegret, is an interesting adjunct to the early passages.

Later Gide discusses his work with the new French literary movement in the 1900s with his friend Jean Schlumberger, the jury and justice with a magistrate friend, reads from his work and in general gives a full-bodied picture of his humanity and intellect. The socially active side of Gide is seen in his speeches to the German youth, his conversion to and final break with Communism. Mosk.

Press Favors

The paper said it agrees with Johnston and Screen Actors' Guild prexy Ronald Reagan that the House unit's report was "unfair." In a subsequent followup editorial, Citizen-News declared: "The Congressional committee is warranted in continuing its studies but is not warranted in failing to recognize the great improvement the industry has achieved."

The House probers took it further on the chin via comments in the Washington Post, which indited: "If any industry has been on guard against possible Communist efforts to use it, it has been the motion picture industry. Indeed, Hollywood went completely overboard in its zeal to prove itself anti-Communist after the 1947 investigation. It should have realized that even its excess of zeal would have no merit in the eyes of investigators seeking only more scapegoats." The 1947 "zeal" referred to was the dismissal of the 10 persons who refused to divulge their political beliefs before the House group.

Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press was diametrically opposed to the House observation that the film studios hadn't taken "positive and determined" steps to rid themselves of Communist influence. "Nothing could be farther from the truth," blasted the daily.

Scores of other papers joined the pro-industry camp. All, in one way or another, criticized the "unfairness" of the House report.

Related to the House committee's attack was a column by George Sokolsky of the Hearst syndicate. He said, in effect, that the elimination of Communists is handicapped in Hollywood. Some industryites countered this with letters quoting from the COMPO statement, which appeared in "letters to the editor" columns of their respective cities' dailies.

Canada on Upbeat

trict Theatres, which has 27 houses in D. C. and Virginia, also shut down one in Virginia last year.

One of the two Warner houses now dark could be leased to an indie exhibitor who would try it again as a "white" theatre, it is understood. However, Warners is seeking a package deal for the pair and has rejected feelers for just the one house.

New Haven's Upbeat

New Haven, April 8.

Survey of film house openings and closings in Connecticut over the past five years brings to light the following facts.

In the open category are a total of 10 houses in Black Roc, Burnside, East Hartford, Elmwood, Meriden, Niantic, Rockville, Stamford, Stratford and Waterville, having a total seating capacity of 8,609. Added to this list is a string of 18 drive-ins in Burrville, Canaan, Danbury, East Haven, East Windsor, Farmington, Montville, Newington (2), North Haven, Norwalk, Plainfield, Pleasant Valley, Stamford, Torrington, Waterbury, Waterford and Wolcott, with a total car capacity of 10,217.

On the negative side of the ledger are 18 closings in Ansonia, Bridgeport (2), Danbury, Meriden, Naugatuck, New Haven (2), New London, North Grosvenordale, Norwalk, South Norwalk, Stamford (2) and Waterbury (2), with a total capacity of 15,600.

Above figures include one house closed by federal authorities, one burned to the ground, one dismantled and two switched to legit operation. However, figures do not include a total of six houses in Devon, Hartford, Bridgeport, Middletown and New Haven (2), with a total capacity of 4,451, operating on an umbrella policy, open one month, closed the next, and repeat.

In estimating for rental purposes, exchanges figure 2.2 passengers per car for drive-in, which makes the statewide total of 10,217 cars a potential of 22,477 individual seats. Added to the standard house total of 8,609, gross increase in past five years has been 31,086. Deducting the 15,600 figure involved in the 18 shutterings, net increase shows a figure of 15,486 seats.

Omaha O. O.

Omaha, April 8.

Film houses in the Omaha territory now dark because of accident, fire or business include those at Weeping Water, Gretna, Ashland, Springfield and Shelby, all in Nebraska, and Macedonia, Emerson and Marcus, in Iowa. Situation in Omaha looks stabilized, Ralph Goldberg, who closed the 40th Street months ago, announced that he will now dispose of the house. The Tivoli, in South Omaha, is now remade into a store, while the Roseland fate is being mulled by store and real estate men. The Uptown appears definitely out.

Some of the closed situations will reopen.

Twin Cities Houses Falling Out

Minneapolis, April 8.

More Twin Cities neighborhood and suburban theatres are falling by the wayside. Latest to succumb is the comparatively new de luxe 800-seat Golden Valley, which is destined to be converted for commercial purposes. Still another local neighborhood house ready to cry quits, closing notice having been given, is the de luxe Alhambra, also a large seater.

Previously four Minneapolis and St. Paul neighborhood houses had tossed in the sponge and three of them are being dismantled so that the properties can be used as stores. Several others are also reported to be ready to shutter because of rising operating costs and shrinking grosses due to TV inroads on patronage and other reasons.

Independent leaders here, like Bennie Berger, national Allied States director, feel that as many as 20 Minneapolis theatres, the vast bulk of them in the neighborhoods and suburbs, may have to quit permanently. Many of these always have been considered marginal operations, it's pointed out. General feeling among exhibitors is that a considerable reduction in the number of theatres would make for a healthier condition for the survivors. In all this connection, there's lots of talk about "survival of the fittest" and it's recognized that all will hang on as long as possible, eating up their capital.

In downtown Minneapolis and St. Paul three firstrun houses are dark, with nothing to indicate they'll be re-lighted. The St. Paul theatres were "A" first-runs, and there's now a dispute about their ownership, with a court suit started to determine it. The ostensible owners have disowned this pair of houses and have started legal action to make the seller take them back. Trade opinion is that, unless the recent boxoffice trend is reversed, more downtown Minneapolis and St. Paul theatres will have to toss in the sponge.

At the same time, however, there's trade circle optimism regarding the drive-in theatres' outlook. Several of the ozoner circuits, including the Karatz chain, will raise their admissions from 60-75c. for the forthcoming season. Also, in the face of the impending spread of TV and the fact that the season for the outdoor houses is short in this territory and favorable weather is comparatively rare, it's known that there's plenty of capital available to build more of them as soon as the Government freeze is lifted on materials. In fact, five new ones, which received the green light, are now in the course of construction.

Cheerful Canada Scene

Toronto, April 8.

Despite the current defeatist reports of newspapers and magazines that film house attendance is slipping, it can be definitely reported that the Canadian segment of the North American film scene saw an 8% increase in boxoffice revenue in 1951 over the previous year, and that 1952 returns to date show a promising 10% tilt. Though there are military defense bans placed on structural steel supplies, there is continuing building of new theatres across Canada where a town can prove to the Federal Steel Controller the need of a community theatre.

The three big Canadian chains — Famous Players, with 402 houses across the Dominion; Odeon (Arthur Rank), with 143 coast-to-coast situations; and Nat Taylor, with some 70 theatres in Ontario — have closed no houses in the past year, unless to replace these in the same situations with more modern theatres with greater seating capacity. The Odeon trans-Canada building program has been completed to date on their blueprint plan; Famous Players and 20th Century (Taylor) have immediate plans on the architectural drawing-boards for further theatres, with pessimism non-evident.

For this VARIETY survey, Claire Appel, executive director of the Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Assn., reports a cheerful picture. Though the bans placed on the use of steel for theatre construction necessarily impeded new theatre building, community pressure saw 79 new theatres opened in Canada in 1951, as compared with 118 in 1950. This included 18 new drive-ins in 1951, as compared with 32 drive-ins the previous year. Eleven new drive-ins are under construction and will be open for business this spring.

In this gain in Canadian film attendance, Appel points out that part of it is due to a heavy immigration influx to Canada in recent postwar years. In 1941, there were 1,241 licensed 35m theatres in Canada; in 1951, these totalled 1,934. In 1941, there were 161,677,731 paid admissions in Canada for total receipts of $41,368,259; the figure for 1951 is estimated at $86,400,000; and it is believed that the 1952 figures will exceed this substantially, based on current b.o. receipts. Appel predicts a 10% gain over the 1950 figure, which would bring film theatre net recepits for Canada to close to $95,000,000.

On the outlook for 1952, correlative with this VARIETY survey roundup, J. J. Fitsgibbons, president of Famous Players (Canadian), reported that his company has opened several new theatres and drive-ins in Canada. "Television in itself will not only lift the quality of motion picture theatre entertainment," he said, "but is proving a great medium for the development of new motion picture personalities, just as many of the motion picture stars of today came up through radio.

DATE. RED BALL EXPRESS

for ARMED FORCES DAY (MAY 17) and JOIN THE ARMY

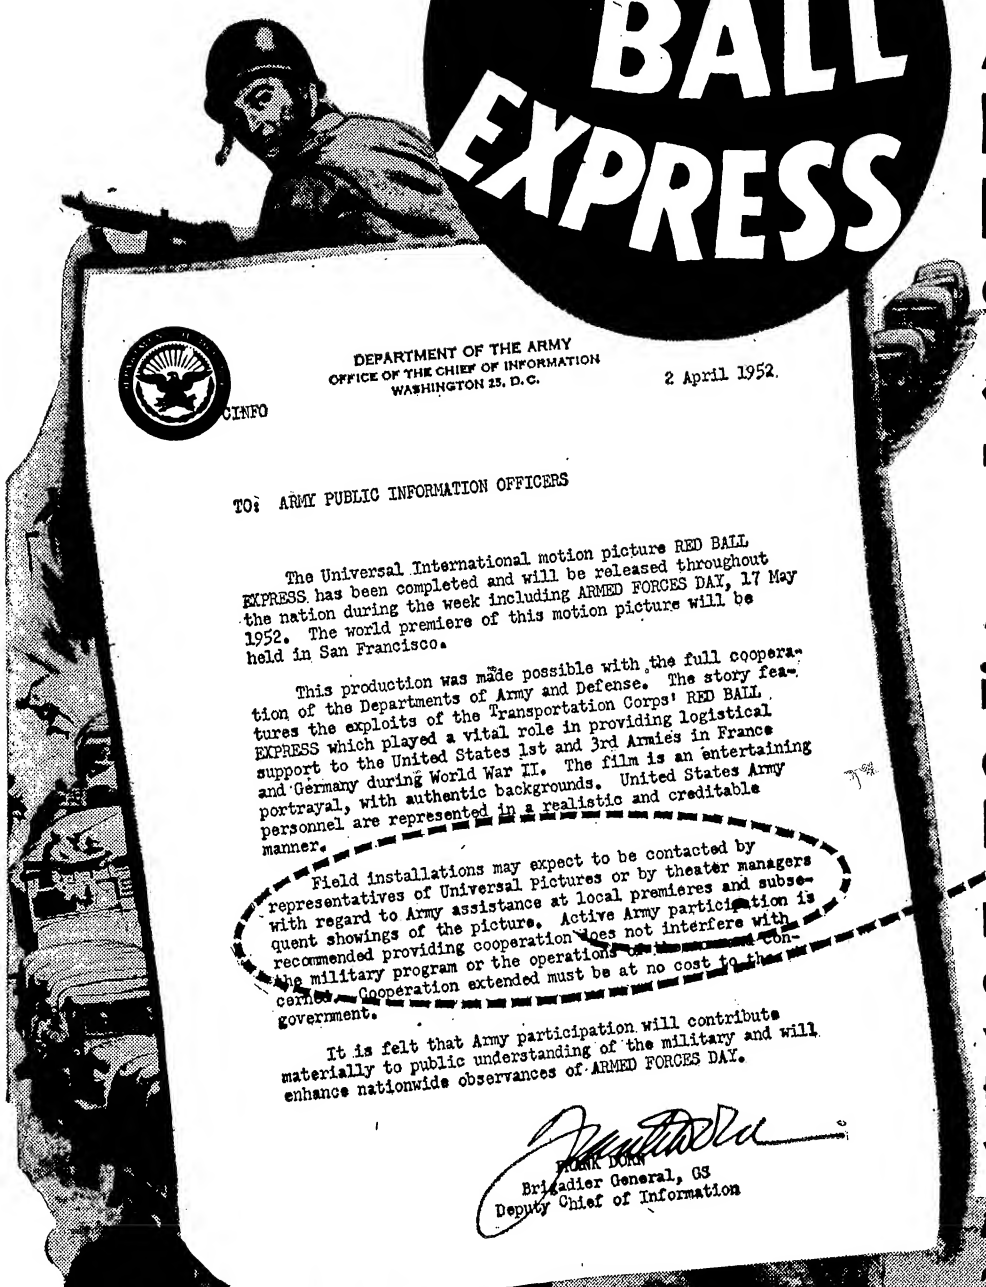
in setting up a rousing local premiere!

If you play the picture after Armed Forces Day you can still expect full cooperation from your local Army Post



DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF INFORMATION
WASHINGTON 25, D.C.

2 April 1952.

CINFO

TO: ARMY PUBLIC INFORMATION OFFICERS

The Universal International motion picture RED BALL EXPRESS has been completed and will be released throughout the nation during the week including ARMED FORCES DAY, 17 May 1952. The world premiere of this motion picture will be held in San Francisco.

This production was made possible with the full cooperation of the Departments of Army and Defense. The story features the exploits of the Transportation Corps' RED BALL EXPRESS which played a vital role in providing logistical support to the United States 1st and 3rd Armies in France and Germany during World War II. The film is an entertaining portrayal, with authentic backgrounds. United States Army personnel are represented in a realistic and creditable manner.

Field installations may expect to be contacted by representatives of Universal Pictures or by theater managers with regard to Army assistance at local premieres and subsequent showings of the picture. Active Army participation is recommended providing cooperation does not interfere with the military program or the operations of the command concerned. Cooperation extended must be at no cost to the government.

It is felt that Army participation will contribute materially to public understanding of the military and will enhance nationwide observances of ARMED FORCES DAY.

Pete Martin's New Post

Ben Hibbs, editor of Satevepost, has appointed Pete Martin entertainment editor of the mag. In the newly-created position, Martin will continue writing, in addition to devoting time to encouraging and developing article writers in this specialized field, which includes television.

Martin came to the Post as a manuscript reader in March, 1925. He was in charge of the humor department for a time, then served 12 years as art editor. Meanwhile, he also wrote fiction, contributing two serials and numerous short stories. Ten years ago, he became a full-time feature writer.

Martin's article production rose to 15 and 18 per year during World War II. His annual output now averages around 12, a figure which includes his Hollywood stories. Some of the latter were incorporated into his book, "Hollywood Without Make-Up."

N. Y. Post Lait-Mortimer Series

On the heels of the recent verbal set-to between N. Y. Post editor James Wechsler and Lee Mortimer, co-author of "U.S.A. Confidential" with N. Y. Mirror editor Jack Lait, on the "Author Meets The Critic" video show, it's understood that the Post is planning a series of articles on the Lait-Mortimer team, similar to the paper's recent series on Winchell.

Fern Marja, a Post report, is currently amassing material for the series.

Nitery Vs. Ft. Worth Press,

A $20,000 damage suit has been filed against the Fort Worth Press by W. D. Satterwhite, owner-operator of the Skyliner nitery there.

In his petition, Satterwhite pointed out that the Press news columns devoted much space to his club during last year's special grand jury investigations, making it necessary for him to close the spot for one year due to the "disastrous effect" of stories that "brought the club into disrepute as a gambling house."

'Have Book, Will Travel'

Joe Laurie, Jr. is hitting the road again directly after Easter Sunday for a literati pitch on behalf of "Show Biz," the Holt best-seller which he co-authored. Historian-comedian is on a ballyhoo trek to plug the book in Boston, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Pittsburgh, via TV and radio guest-shots and interviews.

"Show Biz" is in its seventh edition and Holt trade veep Bill Buckley finds that every time Laurie takes to the mikes, press and literary interviews the sales reaction booms.

Cincy Enquirer Pledges

Employes of Cincinnati Enquirer, attempting to head off sale of paper to Cincy Times-Star for $7,500,000, reported that a quota of $800,000 had been pledged among its 845 workers and outsiders would be approached for pledges to total $700,000 as initial payment in employe-ownership proposal.

American Security & Trust Co., Washington, D. C., is trustee for the holding in estate of the late John R. McLean. Two of his grandsons, John R. McLean II and Edward B. Jr., last week filed suit in U. S. District Court in Washington to refuse approval of Enquirer sale to Times-Star. Other heirs previously petitioned for the sale.

Hearing is set for April 28.

B.A.'s Cue Ban Puzzler

Ban last week of 14 more U. S. magazines in Argentina caused some speculation here. Buenos Aires newsdealers reported that municipal inspectors warned them not to sell the Satevepost, Collier's, Cosmopolitan, Life, Look, Vision, Business Week, United Nations World, Editor & Publisher, Cue, Quick, Harper's, New Republic and United States News & World Report. (Time mag was banned from newsstands in 1947).

Angle of Cue banning is puzzling, since while the other 13 are national magazines, Cue is strictly local (New York City) as well as non-political. Nearest explanation seems to be that Peron, on behalf of Buenos Aires, is jealous of a sister-city, New York, as bigger, livelier, more independent. Cue had 26 subscribers in B.A. before Peron, but these dwindled until there were none two years ago.

Dance Mag Shifts

Cover article on "Charles Chaplin and the Dance," by Arthur Knight, is set for the upcoming May issue of Dance magazine. Mag, which has undergone several metamorphoses since it was founded 26 years ago by Bernarr MacFadden as Dance Lovers, has a new editor in Lydia Joel, just upped to the post after five years as associate ed. Rudolf Orthwine is present publisher.

Miss Joel plans format changes, such as fewer academic pieces and more controversial news articles; pieces on niteries, copyright and legislation as they affect dancers, etc. Mag will aim to hold on to its teacher readership, while trying to popularize its scope as well.

Preserving Scully For 2052 A.D.

Frank Scully's "Blessed Mother Goose," published by House-Warven, is one of the cultural works to be placed in the special time capsule and buried Thursday (10) in Pershing Square in downtown Los Angeles. Capsule, weighing 225 pounds, will be buried under five tons of concrete serving as the base of the World War monument.

It will be reopened for the edification of future generations in the year 2052 A.D.

New Labor Deal

Rockford, Ill., printers who are on a work stoppage at the Star and Register-Republican newspapers, both owned by the Rockford Consolidated Newspapers, Inc., are offering what is considered a first hereabouts in labor relations.

Union, which has been picketing since Monday, March 24, has stated that it will pay full strike benefits to the other union, including the Newspaper Guild, if they will not cross the picket line.

ANPA Banshees' Guests

Guests of the Banshees luncheon April 22 in the Waldorf's (N.Y.) grand ballroom will be editors and publishers attending the American Newspaper Publishers Assn. convention.

Program will include Sid Caesar, Imogene Coca and James Barton, and excerpts from "Paint Your Wagon," Chief Banshee Arthur "Bugs" Baer will emcee.

Joey Adams' 3d

One thing is certain, "Joey Adams' Joke Book" is gonna please his vast army of friends, acquaintances, agents and sponsors—they all get billing. There may be some discussion over the relative merits of this or that joke, gag, quip, pun or bon mot ascribed to one or the other, but Adams is a thoughtful gent—he made sure nobody was overlooked. Some he made sure of in spades, like Al Kelly, Lee Mortimer, Maxie Rosenbloom, Al Kelly, Eddie Davis, Lee Mortimer, Morey Amsterdam, Al Kelly, Nick Kenny, Lee Mortimer, Jack E. Leonard, et al. Oh yes, Cindy Heller (now Mrs. Adams) also is not overlooked.

"Joey Adams' Joke Book" (Fell; $2.50) is by the author and via the publisher of "From Gags to Riches" and "The Curtain Never Falls." In actuality, it is a professional enough job. The gags are topical, many of them good, and not a few durable and above par. Adams has even subdivided them into categories and prefaced each classification with a semi-philosophic intro.

Arthur Godfrey is another pro who recently turned author with "Stories I Like To Tell" (Simon & Schuster; $1 and $2.50 editions), reprising 306 of the best jokes and anecdotes "I have heard in 20 years of radio and TV." Humor being the perishable commodity that it is, obviously the comedian-turned-anthologist is careful to (1), concede it's not original, and (2), spread the credits around. After all, be it Godfrey's 306 gags and Adams' you-count-'em-for-yourself, there's plenty of room for names and name-dropping. PS.—now if each name buys one, one dozen or 100 copies—you can't go wrong with a Feist song. Abel.

Heinsheimer's 'Pigeons'

"Fanfare For 2 Pigeons," by H. W. Heinsheimer (Doubleday, $2.75), is a lively, unusually interesting personal memoir on longhair subjects, and a highly entertaining, informal account of music in the U. S. today. Author is an exec of the G. Schirmer music publishing firm, with an unusual European-U. S. musical background. Of special trade interest are his chapters on the vagaries of copyright, here and abroad; royalty problems; growth of LP recording outfits; the two giant U. S. concert bureaus, and Hollywood's brushoff of serious U. S. composers for film scores.

All this is related in a charmingly urbane, witty and informed style. A sometimes lyric, almost poetic approach is mixed in with hard fact and shrewd comment, as Heinsheimer discusses the growth of longhair in America (attaining maturity in only one generation); and gives anecdotes or personal reminiscences of the great and near-great. There are lengthy tributes to Kurt Weill and Alban Berg, an amusing section on Sir Thomas Beecham, and a very touching chapter on Bela Bartok. Where the radio age made America symphony-conscious, Heinsheimer thinks that TV will make it opera-conscious. There's plenty meat as well as mirth here. Bron.

Eire Ban off Lewis' 'Gantry'

The Irish Censorship of Publications Board has raised its ban on Sinclair Lewis's "Elmer Gantry."

Similar greenlights has been given to two previously-banned books—"Antic Hay," by Aldous Huxley, and "Away From It All," by Cedric Belfrage.

Chet Shaw, executive editor of Newsweek mag, is being honored by the U. of Kansas, his alma mater. A distinguished service citation voted to him last spring by the K.U. Alumni Assn. will be presented May 9 at Lawrence, Kans. Shaw was voted the award last year, but was unable to accept at commencement time because of illness.

"Is Anybody Listening?", series of Fortune mag pieces analyzing the public relations job American business is doing, was published by Simon & Shuster Monday (7). Book was prepared by William H. Whyte, Jr., Fortune assistant managing editor, and other staffers. It includes the controversial article, "Company Wives," which Life mag already reprinted.

Happy Benway, VARIETY's longtime mugg in Saranac, writes his annual Easter Greeting: "Every time about now they tell me that I have one more year to live. This has been going on for the past 23 years. About this time every year I go to the cemetery and laugh at my grave. After that I call my dearest undertaker and cancel my yearly allowance of formaldehyde." Signed, "The Old Minstrelman."

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Hollywood.

The Gallus Poll Of The Scully Suspender Set has been canvassing voters on an issue far more important than "I Like Shrike." That is, are we men or are we mice? The early returns show a landslide in favor of the rodents.

Here and there comes proof of small protest against this overwhelming verdict. Dore Schary has stepped up his suit against some paid pickets (they call themselves Wage Earners, so somebody must be paying them) from a million to $2,304,531. Sen. Benton (D) has yanked some of the props from under Sen. McCarthy (R) by saying outside the Senate the sort of thing that McCarthy would say only under its protective canopy, thereby calling McCarthy's bluff and forcing a showdown in the courts.

But in the main people are getting slugged more and more into a state of the sort of submission one associates with concentration camps, not a free republic. Why, you can't even get your best friends to sign a petition for nominating papers for dogcatcher without a lot of pleading and coaxing. Nobody wants to sign anything. I just went through that. It was for a non-paying job in the lowest legislative body in the world. I've been in there for 14 years. Every four years one is required to get the signatures of 20 voters on a nominating petition.

One of my confreres said he had to give up canvassing signatures for his post this year because his accent made him suspect, and though he has been an active member of one of the two major parties for 20 years he was afraid he couldn't control himself when the next person asked him on hearing his accent, "Are you a Communist?" Only the other day on a TV show in Los Angeles George McLain had that thrown at him and promptly threw a glass of water in the questioner's face to cool him off.

Now, this at least was some proof against the general indictment that all men had become mice. But it is only the beginning and until all men fight for their rights under the same rules, with all congressional immunity holds barred, the decision still remains as a TKO against us.

Mickey The Mouse Strikes Back

It's amazing how few people are willing to step up to authority and tell it to stay over where it belongs. The whole mess we are in stems from these encroachments. We have a legislative, executive and judicial division of power. Somewhere along the line the legislative arm began taking over the judicial process. And so more and more we have committees setting themselves up with power to subpoena witnesses, throw unilateral charges around like drunk drivers and, protected by this unilateral congressional immunity, they get away with murder.

We don't hire them to then dragoon us to Washington to do their work. If they passed laws which are against our best interests, that would be a reason for firing them. But we don't give them a position as our representatives so that henceforth they can call us all sorts of vile names and clink us if we don't tell them why we voted for somebody else.

So if we are not mice, our job as men is to yank these powers away from those who have abused public trust and in any case make them amenable in every degree to the same laws we subscribe to.

Take this case of Rep. Richard B. Vail (R) of Illinois. He's the gent who recently sounded off against Judge Leon Yankwich of the Federal Court of L.A. He got double-bank eight-column streamers for demanding that the jurist be heaved out of office. He poured into the hopper every drop of scuttlebutt, gossip and hearsay, stuff that wouldn't even stand up in a kangaroo court in a hobo's jungle. Yet there it is all, protected by Vail's congressional immunity, and it will stand forever in the public record.

'Stop Quoting Me!'

Into the bucket of bilge that Rep. Vail poured into the Congressional Record I note reference to an affidavit which took words out of my highly volatile mouth and put them in Judge Yankwich's. More, they violated the first ethic of a free world—the right to sound off in your own home.

It was at a dinner in a private home in Beverly Hills four years ago that Judge Yankwich and I got into a hammer-and-tongs argument about the very issues expressed here. He had been a professor of law preceding his 25 years on the bench and, in fact, had once been an attorney for newspapers. Out of these experiences he wrote "It's Libel Or Contempt If You Print It."

He was trying to point out to me that if you took these investigating powers away from Congress and also took away Congressional immunity, you would more than likely bring down the whole house of cards of the American form of government. As a Jeffersonian I didn't think you'd do anything of the sort.

Another guest listening in thought he could make some capital for himself apparently by passing on to the friends of litigants a cockeyed version of this controversy. He gave all my lines to Yankwich, thereby permitting the party to the litigation to file an affidavit that on information and belief Yankwich was a pretty subversive character and likely to rule on a case before his court in favor of the plaintiff!

Had the eavesdropper himself filed such an affidavit he would have been clinked for perjury, but the guy who filed it and had got it second-hand obviously couldn't be so charged. Altogether it was a nice dodge to beat a rap.

As such it was nothing much as things go in litigations involving money, but when years afterwards these things get yanked out of bilge barrels and become a matter of permanent public record in the halls of Congress it's time for anybody with a grain of manhood and a sense of fair play to slug back.

Among the things Vail repeats is that "exhaustive preliminary investigations have disclosed that writers and directors have employed their highly compensated occupation to carry the Communist line into film representation, subtly inserted."

Millions For Scandal, Not One Cent For Correction

How often does this scandal-mongering have to be exposed as untrue in every detail? Not one picture has been shown to contain anything of the sort. It shows it about as much as plaster on the wall shows the political bias of the plasterer who put it on. And if there's anything more ludicrous than weaving bias into a pic so subtly that nobody but a megalomaniac can see it, I can't imagine what it could be.

That producers have accepted this kind of abuse with bowed heads is a disgrace to their high posts. They should have, from the very beginning of such headline-hunting Congressional committees, told them to get lost, and that one more peep from them and their campaign oratory would be clipped from newsreels for keeps.

The most outrageous angle on all this baiting of show biz is that not one piece of legislation has been passed to correct the evils these snipers insist are ruining the country.

All that was before Judges Yankwich and Harrison was a matter of contracts. Everybody knows that contracts are entered into after great deliberation, and where both parties are of sound mind and subject to no duress the courts almost invariably uphold the covenants.

More unscrupulous forms of a government may repudiate contracts at will, but our form of government does not permit unilateral cancellations and it may be news to people like Rep. Vail to learn at this late date that the demand that picture producers take such actions is not only un-American but likely to prove when tested in the court to be mighty expensive. The only change I would suggest is that the whole cost be passed on to such Congressional committees as cause the expense to be incurred in the first place.

Clips From Film Row

NEW YORK

Special screening of the Italian import, "Tomorrow Is Too Late," at American Museum of Natural History last night (Tues.) helped tee off Greater N. Y. Fund's 1952 campaign.

Jack Cohn, president of Motion Picture Pioneers and Foundation of Motion Picture Pioneers, has announced the appointment of David A. Bader, industry publicist, to the post of national publicity director of both organizations.

First returns from theatres in entertainment industry's participation in 1952 fund-raising campaign of the National Conference of Christians and Jews shows $1,000 turned in by Montague Salmon, managing director of the Rivoli Theatre. Expanded industry goal for 1952 is $150,000.

Si Lipson, former Detroit theatre operator and associated with Realart Pictures since the firm's inception, now headquartering in New York as assistant to company veepee Budd Rogers.

PITTSBURGH

Joel Golden resigned booker's berth with WB Theatres to join Monogram as salesman; replaces John Zomnir, who quit Mono to go with UA.

Bill Brooks, general manager of Bert Stearn's Cooperative Theatre Service, elected exalted ruler of BPOE Lodge No. 1090 in Coraopolis.

Ted Grance has added another drive-in, the Penn-Lincoln, to his string, giving him seven ozoners and one indoor house, in Everett, Pa.

WB moved Paul Williams, manager of the Enright, to the Etna, sending Jack Kiefer, Etna pilot, over to the Enright.

Jack Bartholic resigned as manager of WB Liberty in New Kensington to join staff of the Daily Dispatch there.

James C. Sanders quit as manager of the Manos in Tarentum and returned to Norfolk, Va., for a job with the Levine circuit.

Laskey Brothers Enterprises acquired the Rainbow Drive-In on Route 51 north of Uniontown.

D. F. Moore, Jr., son of district sales chief for WB here, now operating a nabe film house.

Columbia Pix stunt in Pittsburgh area of dualing two first-runs in 20 nabe houses was so successful that the exchange has set up three other bookings for next few months. Col decided on this to get its backlog in release since company has been finding it tough around Pittsburgh to line up downtown dates.

MINNEAPOLIS

In its large Minneapolis newspaper ads for "Battle at Apache Pass," playing at State here, Minnesota Amus. Co. is listing 12 other circuit towns where it will subsequently be shown, along with the theatres where it will play and the dates.

The 400-seater independent World here, which grabbed off "American in Paris" on competitive bids with United Paramount circuit for its first loop run, also has landed another big Metro musical, "Singin' in Rain" in similar manner.

Ivan Fuldauer, one of five appointees to newly created Metro press relations department, here to aid exploiteer Louis Orlove by taking over direct contacts with territory's newspapers.

Ralph Maw, Metro district manager, back after a week in Beloxi, Miss., for his health, with W. H. Workman, branch manager, going on month's Florida vacation.

Head booker Gertrude Guimont named Warner acting office manager and is expected to retain post permanently in addition to her other duties; succeeds Earl Perkins who resigned to enter other business.

RKO branch here has reissued "Snow White" spotted into 18 of the territory's key situations this month.

Republic's "Hoodlum Empire" into State here, one of the United Paramount circuit's ace houses.

Verne Skorey, former 20th-Fox Calgary, Can., branch manager, assigned temporarily to sales staff here.

Independent circuit owners Ben Freedman and Don Buckley back from Florida and California vacations.

Gilbert Nathanson, circuit owner, back from Mexico vacation.

Attesting to its confidence in "Song in My Heart," United Paramount circuit is giving it an entire circuit "saturation campaign," third time it has done this for any picture.

With a series comprising entirely documentary, "highbrow" and arty films, instead of the usual preponderance of name pictures, the U. of Minnesota Film Society is going into the red for the first time, according to Tremaine McDowell, chairman of the Program in American Studies, which presents the "seasons." The series is open to the general public as well as the student body.

Several local independent neighborhood and suburban exhibitors are contemplating a variable admission scale, basing the price on the film's boxoffice value, instead of adhering to a fixed schedule as at present.

Reducing admissions at Alhambra, local deluxe nabe, from 40c to 25c, and underselling the competition, increased patronage but not sufficiently to bring the theatre out of the red. So says Charles Rubenstein, co-owner of this theatre, who is being assailed by some fellow independent exhibitors for upsetting the Minneapolis clearance-admission applecart.

BOSTON

House Bill No. 961, which would prohibit issuance of original license for ozoners located within 2,000 feet of a recognized school, hospital or church, was defeated at rehearing in the Massachussetts Senate by a rollcall of 17-10 last week. Bill, previously defeated in the Senate, was forced into a rehearing when Senator Keenan moved for reconsideration. This action, however, kills its chances as far as this legislative session is concerned.

Martin J. Mullin, prez of New England Theatres and Children Cancer Research Foundation and trustee of Variety Club of New England, appointed Arthur Lockwood (Lockwood & Gordon) and Louis R. Perini, (Boston Braves topper) as co-chairmen of the 1952 Jimmy Fund Drive. Drive, conducted annually in the fall, is the pet charity of the Variety Club and Boston Braves.

Ed O'Neil, formerly assistant manager of Loew's Orpheum and more recently in same post at Loew's State, Providence, appointed manager of Guild and Norwood theatres. Located in nearby Norwood, the houses are operated by Smith Management Co.

Ray Feeley, executive secretary of Independent Exhibitors of New England, was featured speaker at last week's luncheon meeting of the Malden Rotary Club. Feeley's topic was "The Motion Picture Industry Today."

Annual Cinema Club dinner dance slated for May 17 at Hotel Bradford's Circus Room.

The Latchis Theatre, which was swept by fire at Milford, N. H., March 21, with a loss of $25,000, will be rebuilt as soon as possible, the owner Peter Latchis revealed. The Latchis was the only pic house in town. Blaze is believed to have started by a cigarette discarded by a patron.

CHICAGO

George Weinberg rejoined Warner Bros. sales staff.

March amusement tax receipts for theatres showed less than the usual decline with $93,900 reported against the $94,212 last year.

Judge Michael Igoe, Chi federal district court, last week gave the Government until April 18 to answer the motion for the release of Paul Ricca, now free on bond, who was paroled in 1947 after serving a sentence on charges of extortion from the film industry.

Lee Theatre in Three Oaks, Mich., reopened last week after being closed since last fall.

RKO Palace here has been redubbed Eitel Palace. Theatre reopens April 12 and will play only single features. It also will try to run Technicolor product only. Lucille Ballentine was named public relations director of the house.

DALLAS

Louis Novy, Harold C. Novy and Earl Podolnick granted a state charter to operate as Trans-Texas Theatres, with headquarters in Austin.

J. T. Jackson purchased the Eden Drive-In at Eldorado from Buster McKee. The ozoner is currently operating Friday through Monday.

The Strand at Frankston, formerly operated by Buddie and E. L. Harris of Dallas, bought by Tom Terrell.

Twin Palm Drive-In opened at Corpus Christi, being the only twin-screen ozoner there. Film is projected from a central booth onto two screens. John C. Blocker is manager.

A. M. Whitcher, former office manager at Columbia exchange, Dallas, promoted to salesman handling circuits in Fort Worth and Dallas. E. H. Smithson, former head booker, upped to office manager.

A. Benavides, house manager of National and Zaragoza theatres, San Antonio, recalled to active Army duty.

KANSAS CITY

Commonwealth Amus. Corp. reopened its Uptown Theatre in Carrolton, Mo., with some of the brass from the homeoffice here.

For the third straight weekend, Commonwealth also had a special sports event on its big TV screen at the Granada, Lawrence, Kans., University of Kansas hometown. Theatre has been a sellout each Saturday for the last two as the K.U. game was picked up via WDAF-TV from the Municipal Auditorium here. Ashland Theatre here carried the first two games, but dropped out last Saturday because big screen tele and basketball seemed to mean little to grosses.

Fox Midwest begins its art-film policy at the Warwick April 10 with "Navajo."

Personals are scheduled for Joanne Dru, John Ireland and Constance Smith at the Uptown and Tower here in connection with the opening of "Pride of St. Louis" April 17 in the Fox Midwest first-runs.

ALBANY

sue. There has been no indication whether the MPAA topper intends to meet with RKO chief Howard Hughes regarding the latter's recent statements on the Communist problem.

Johnston, in New York Monday (7) to attend a reception for Queen Juliana of Holland, will be in N. Y. April 22 to preside at the arbitration confab between exhibs and distribs. With the FCC hearing on theatre television indefinitely postponed, Johnston leaves for Europe in May to participate in negotiations with several governments on film import agreements.

MPAA Educ'l Unit Marks 15th Anni

Teaching Film Custodians, a nonprofit and little-known affiliate of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, marks its 15th anni this month. Although its activities have received scant publicity, TFC is the main tie between the motion picture industry and the nation's educational institutions. Purpose of TFC is to make available to schools commercial films which can be used as part of classroom instructional programs.

Bulk of the TFC library consists of shorts. However, since 1946 the companies connected with TFC have permitted the use of excerpts from feature pictures. Latter, for example, are used to show customs, manners and clothing of different historical periods or to present scenes from famous literary works.

A former Governor of Maine, Carl E. Milliken, is managing trustee of TFC. No footage is distributed by his organization until the films have been completely played off commercially. TFC product is selected by various committees that view the output of all the majors and determine which shorts or feature pic excerpts will be most useful for school audio-visual purposes.

Excerpts are cut to allow for their use within the usual 40-minute class period. Teacher guides have been prepared for some of the films, and are made available to school film libraries in quantity at a nominal charge. Individual teachers can obtain single copies at no cost.

TFC distributes its film through a licensing method to local, state and regional educational film libraries, which in turn rent the films to individual schools. Fees charged are inexpensive and aimed merely at maintaining the activities of TFC.

Officially Under Way 1939

The brainchild of Mark A. May, director, Institute of Human Relations of Yale, TFC officially got underway in 1939 although organizational activity had begun in 1937. May, now chairman of TFC board of directors, contacted the picture companies and suggested that many of the films lying idle in their vaults might be of educational value. Through the MPAA the organization was officially launched when Will Hays, former MPAA topper, appeared before the convention of the National Education Assn. in 1939.

Authorities connected with TFC read like a Who's Who of U. S. education. In addition to May, the board consists of Frederich H. Bair, education dept., State of New York; Karl T. Compton, former president of Mass. Institute of Technology; Stephen M. Corey, Teachers College, Columbia U.; Edmund E. Day, former president of Cornell; Royal B. Farnum, exec. v.p., Rhode Island School of Design; Willard E. Givens, National Education Assn.; Jay B. Nash, NYU; Francis T. Spaulding, commissioner of education, State of New York, and A. L. Threlkeld, superintendent of schools, Montclair, N. J.

TFC distribs the films of the following majors: Columbia, Metro, Paramount, RKO, 20th-Fox, Universal and Warner Bros. To mark its 15th anni and as a tribute to the cooperating majors, TFC is throwing a dinner on April 18 at the Hotel Biltmore. At that time TFC will present to the prexies of the cooperating companies and to MPAA's prexy, Eric Johnston, certificates of appreciation.

'WAC' Lenses at Disney, Studio's First Outsider

Hollywood, April 8.

For the first time in history an outside company will invade the Walt Disney studio to make a picture. This week Independent Artists Pictures, Inc., headed by Rosalind Russell and Frederick Brisson, will move in for pre-production work on "Never Wave at a WAC," starring Miss Russell.

Unit will occupy one entire wing of the Animation building. RKO will release the film, which starts June 16 with location shots at the WAC Induction Center, Fort Lee, Va.

*A SAMUEL GOLDWYN PRODUCTION

Picture Grosses

"Ma, Pa Kettle at Fair" (U). Playing one of this popular series here represents an experiment, house having gone in previously for different type of picture. Looks as though no mistake was made. Big $12,000. Last week, "Bugles in Afternoon" (WB), $8,000.

RKO-Orpheum (RKO) (2,800; 50-76)—"Snow White" (RKO) (reissue). Great $17,000. Last week, "Rancho Notorious" (RKO), $7,000.

RKO-Pan (RKO) (1,600; 40-76)—"Frankenstein" (Indie) and "Dracula" (Indie) (reissues). Nice $7,500. Last week, "Okinawa" (Col) and "Whistle Eaton Falls" (Col), $4,500.

State (Par) (2,300; 50-76)—"Battle Apache Pass" (U). Sock $11,000. Last week, "Girl in Every Port" (RKO), $7,000.

'Point' Sharp $10,000, D.C.; 'Journey' Fast 5G

Washington, April 8.

This is one of dullest sessions in weeks, due mostly to predominance of holdovers and partly to competition from town's Cherry Blossom Festival. Sole newcomer to make much impression is "Royal Journey," at Lopert's Dupont.

Estimates for This Week

Capitol (Loew's) (3,434; 55-95)—"Steel Town" (U), plus vaude. Fair $18,000. Last week, "Japanese War Bride" (20th) plus vaude topped by Johnnie Ray, wham $36,000 thanks to Ray.

Dupont (Lopert) (372; 50-85)—"Royal Journey" (UA). Fine $5,000 for this small house. Last week, "Rashomon" (RKO) (2d run), so-so $2,200 in 6 days, with Academy award not helping.

Keith's (RKO) (1,939; 50-85)—"Sword's Point" (RKO). Sharp $10,000. Last week, "Rancho Notorious" (RKO), so-so $9,500.

Metropolitan (Warner) (1,200; 50-80)—"Hong Kong" (Par). Okay $6,500. Last week, "Sea Hornet" (Rep), $3,000.

Ontario (K-B) (1,404; 44-74)—"Green Glove" (UA) (2d wk). Held at $5,000 after big $7,000 opener.

Palace (Loew's) (2,370; 50-80)—"Sailor Beware" (Par) (3d-final wk). Steady $12,000 after nice $15,000 last week.

Warner (WB) (2,174; 90-$1.25)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (4th wk). Good $12,000, especially considering day and date run with a Warner nabe. Last week, $18,000.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (654; 50-85)—"The Sniper" (Col) (4th wk). Okay $4,000 after $4,500 far third round.

SEATTLE

"Pace That Thrills" (RKO), slow $5,000.

Music Hall (Hamrick) (2,282; 65-90)—"Bugles in Afternoon" (WB) and "Stronghold" (Lip). Mild $7,000. Last week, "This Once" (M-G) and "Corporal Dolan" (Rep), $6,800.

Palomar (Sterling) (1,350; 40-70)—"Snow White" (RKO) (reissue). Big $6,000 or over. Last week, "First Time" (Col) (2d run), and Andrews Sisters onstage, sock $15,500 at $1.25 top.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,039; 90-$1.25)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (4th wk-9 days). Great $13,000. Last week, $14,000.

'SNOW WHITE' SOLID 15G, ST. LOO; 'LADY' 9G

St. Louis, April 8.

Usual Holy Week observance in this heavily Catholic populated city is sloughing biz generally this round. "Snow White" is going against tide to land a big total at Loew's. "Greatest Show on Earth" still is big in second round at the Missouri. "Lady Possessed" shapes fine in two houses.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (F&M) (3,000; 60-75)—"Streetcar" (WB) and "Woman Is Dangerous" (WB). Fair $11,500. Last week, "Aaron Slick" (Par) and "Flaming Feather" (Par), disappointing $10,000.

Fox (F&M) (5,000; 60-75)—"Jack and Beanstalk" (WB) and "Fort Osage" (Mono). Opened today (Tues.). Last week, "Hong Kong" (Par) and "Silver City" (Par), modest $13,000.

Loew's (Loew) (3,172; 50-75)—"Snow White" (RKO) (reissue). Solid $15,000. Last week, "Salesman" (Col) and "First Time" (Col), $10,500.

Missouri (F&M) (3,500; 75-$1)—"Greatest Show" (Par) (2d wk.) Held at big $17,000 after socko $21,000.

Pageant (St. L. Amus.) (800; 75-90)—"Lady Possessed" (Rep). Good $4,500 or close. Last week, "Rashomon" (RKO) (3d wk), fancy $3,000.

A-Bomb Test

cepted yet, pending solution of the problems.

One of the major problems to be worked out is the elimination of all oscillating equipment in the cameras. It's feared that any oscillations may interfere with electronic devices in or near the bomb, and may cause a premature or a delayed blast.

It's still to be determined how close camera crews are to be near the explosion. It's virtually agreed that camera crews will be housed in a gigantic pit fairly near the site. This is to insure maximum protection for the crew. Lenses will be trained on a series of mirrors and televiewers will get a reflected image.

Further details are still to be worked out between the networks and the Government. It's expected that a few weeks will be necessary to work out security details, once the networks agree to take on the show. Another detail still to be ironed out is the time of the explosion.

The first atomic explosion to receive full press coverage was at Bikini. Event was covered by radio, but interference was so bad that most stations were forced to jettison the show.

Seven L. A. Stations In Pool

Hollywood, April 8.

With a greenlight from the Atomic Energy Commission, seven Los Angeles tele stations will pool a telecast of an atomic bomb explosion at Las Vegas in late April. Despite the AEC greenlight, its contingent on a national telecast is the Las Vegas-Los Angeles linkup. Phone company nixed the project which, it's estimated, will cost between $50,000 - $75,000. Klaus Landsberg, KTLA topper, will direct.

Channels are also working out a pool on the arrival of Queen Juliana of the Netherlands April 19. Chief obstacle at the moment is the Nevada pool, which would be around the same time. It would tie up much equipment.

Rackmil Defines

TV producers want to utilize our facilities for video purposes, it doesn't cut any ice with the exhib who wants top product."

Rackmil accents that recording is still a solid business but that the Universal stock buy-in was part of the plan to "diversify" interests and "extend the scope of our horizons." The 78 rpm platter remains mostly in use, but Rackmil, like every diskery vet, roots for the day when "the industry will be back to one speed, be it 33 or 45 rpm. Fact that such major manufacturers like RCA continue to produce more and more machines to accommodate all three speeds, and also simplify the techniques for rapid interchange of all-speed platters to be played on the one instrument, is very healthy for the business all around, Rackmil feels. It will permit the 78 fans to retain their vast libraries and have them available for usage, at will and at the same time it expands the orbits for the newer speeds so that the swing-over to the LPs (33) or 45s is gradual and painless on the ultimate consumer."

know of one engagement there that grossed almost $2,500."

In sifting the replies, ATOI feels that two possible approaches can be made. "First," says the exhib group, "can the theatre work with some of these local organizations in a plan that will in the final count give the sponsoring group a better return than they get from the trick deals they make with professional promoters and thus make local sponsorship difficult to obtain?

"Secondly," ATOI asks, "can a group of local taxpayers who, so to speak, own shares in the public building protest to the authorities the inadequate rental they are charging? Considering rent, light, heat and cleaning it would seem that the taxpayers should be entitled to at least 15 to 20% of the gross. A fair charge might make the deal less attractive to some of these outside promoters."

Swarm of Antitrust Suits Filed During Past Week in Chicago

Chicago, April 8.

Undoubtedly spurred by interpretations of the Paramount decree, which limits the action against some of its defendants to April 8 of this year, a swarm of lawsuits were filed here during the last week. Seymour Simon, film attorney, brought five into Chi Federal court which total $2,085,000. Three of the actions name the majors, Balaban & Katz chain and the Warner Theatres circuit as defendants.

Glen, Glen Ellwyn, Ill. claimed it was held back to first-week general release from 1937 to 1948 and is asking $600,000 treble damages. Second, Tivoli, Downers Grove, Ill., said it was hurt from August, 1944, to January, 1948, by being forced to play in "C" week. It's seeking $330,000 treble damages. Third, Harvard Theatre, Chicago, wants $390,000 triple reparations for being held to first-week general release from 1937 to 1948. Eastside Theatre, Chicago, in addition to the majors and theatre circuits, also names the Commercial Theatre as alleged co-conspirator and is suing for $630,000 triple injuries for being forced to play behind the Commercial, owned by Manta and Rose circuit, James C. Coston, then head of the WB Circuit, and H&E Balaban chain. Period covered is from September, 1937 to January, 1948. State Theatre, Sycamore, Ill., wants $135,000 treble damages from the majors on the grounds they sold the Anderson Theatre, DeKalb, Ill., prior runs over the State from August, 1944, to September, 1947.

Richard Orlikoff, lawyer, also is seeking an injunction and equitable relief for Charles and Abraham Auerbach, operators of the New Strand Theatre, Chicago. In case filed last week in Chi Federal court, attorney said that house was forced to compete with theatres really not competitive and that the booking system was designed to favor B&K and Essaness chains. Case has been assigned to Judge Michael Igoe's court.

Attorney Simon represented five more plaintiffs in trust suits filed yesterday (Mon.) against the majors. First, filed in Northern Indiana Federal Court, is on behalf of Jerome Schimbach and wife, Lucille, operators of the Granada Theatre, South Bend, from 1935 to 1940. Schimbach, now division manager of RKO Theatres, Chicago, claims that because his spot charged 25c, Warner Bros. and United Artists refused to sell him product before the Bucklin, Orpheum and Elko, all in Elkhart, Ind. All these houses charged 35c. Granada was forced to play in first week general release and after Elkhart locations. Also named in the action were the Illinois-Indiana chain and Manta-Rose Circuit. Treble damages of $75,000 are asked.

In an accompanying action, the same plaintiffs are asking $150,000 from Loew's, 20th-Fox, Columbia and Universal, charging that the majors conspired with Great States and Paramount circuits to prevent them from getting product before first and second-run, general-release dates from 1935 to 1940.

Milton D. Levey and Bess Hesser, co-partners of the Music Box Theatre, Chi, say that they were forced to play in first week, general release, due to "conspiracy" that existed since April 1, 1945, among the majors, Warner Bros. Theatres, and the Balaban & Katz chain. Partners, in suit filed in Chi Federal Court are asking for $150,000 treble injuries. In a related action, Southport Amus. Corp, which operated the same house from 1920 to April 1, 1945, is asking from the same defendants $510,000 for similar damages.

Simon also filed in Chi Federal Court an action for the Lindy Theatre, Chicago, against the majors, Warner Bros. circuit, and Balaban & Katz, alleging that it was forced to play in third week, general release, from 1930 to 1943. Operators Elmer and Beatrice Benesch are asking $330,000 treble damages.

Tom McConnell, film attorney, slapped the major film companies with another antitrust suit yesterday (Mon.). Filed in Chi Federal District Court, the suit asks $1,950,000 in treble damages for Viking Theatre Corp., Appleton, Wisc. Lawyer claims that the theatre was forced to play in second and third week release through restrictions under the Wisconsin zoning system since 1942. Besides the majors, Warner Theatres of Wisconsin, which operates the Rio and Appleton, Appleton, is also named. McConnell won the Towne case, Milwaukee, in April 1950, upon which the present action is patterned.

5 Indies Sued by Govt. As Trust in Terre Haute

Washington, April 8.

Five indie theatre corporations were on the receiving end of an antitrust suit filed in Terre Haute, Ind., last week by the Justice Department.

The companies are Alliance Theatre Corp., Chicago; Fourth Ave. Amus. Co., Louisville; and the Grand Theatre Corp., Terre Haute Amus. and Tri-Theatres, all Indiana corporations.

Complaint says they eliminated competition by their pooling for operating and sharing the profits of the houses.

Hughes' Commie Blast

seen as further cueing the decision to relinquish the film operation.

Lurie, Ford, Keller

At this time last year, Lurie headed a syndicate which had a deal all but wrapped up for the purchase of Warner Bros. control from Harry, Jack and Albert Warner. Lurie's plans included the appointment of Mayer as studio boss as soon as he could sever his connections with M-G. Major part of the overall deal had been worked out when Harry M. Warner made an 11th hour decision scuttling the whole idea.

That Lurie is sufficiently well-heeled to buy out Hughes, in partnership with Mayer, is reflected in the fact that he and his associates apparently had little trouble in raising $25,000,000 for the projected WB acquisition. Hughes' 24% stock ownership has a market value of less than that sum. Mayer also has Henry Ford, 2d, and K. T. Keller (Chrysler) capital at his disposal.

N. Y. Reaction

Meanwhile, numerous N. Y. industry-ites let it be known in private conversations that they're plenty unhappy over Hughes' publicly-stated reasons for limiting production. He said he took the drastic step as a means of weeding out Communists. This, said observers, gives the impression that Hollywood is abounding with subversives.

Others take the more cynical view that Hughes, faced with a production dilemma, decided on the near shutdown in order to straighten out studio affairs. Another film exec said, "It looks like a move to make a virtue out of a necessity."

Mary McCall's Blast

"Howard Hughes has thrown a mantle of Americanism over his own ragged production record," Screen Writers Guild prexy Mary McCall, Jr., charged in commenting upon the RKO studio shutdown ordered by Hughes.

Miss McCall, whose Guild is engaged in a hassle with Hughes over screen credit for Paul Jarrico on "Las Vegas Story," said that "while what an employer does is his own business, if an employer can't screen his employees without suspending production and throwing 100 decent people out of work, the ineptitude he displays is his stockholders' concern, not mine.

"The American picture industry," Miss McCall emphasized, "can say to the American public that not one subversive syllable was ever uttered in a picture made in Hollywood. We are seeking an impartial arbitration of the labor dispute between the Guild and RKO.

"Arbitration is guaranteed us," Miss McCall said, "in a contract which came into being after an election conducted under the Taft-Hartley law, as the result of collective bargaining. We believe in the sanctity of contracts and intend to enforce ours with RKO."

Blast Hughes

Several other industry quarters blasted Hughes for attributing the studio layoff and production halt to a desire to weed out "Communist influence." It was felt that the RKO prexy placed too much emphasis upon Communism as the reason for the move.

Roy Brewer, Coast rep of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, declared that the "action and statement by RKO infers that there are not enough real Americans in the industry to make pictures. This is not true and never was."

Long one of the stauchest anti-Red fighters in Hollywood, Brewer said he was well aware that Communism is a serious problem, "but in my judgment it can be dealt with rather simply if people in control of the industry face up to it, deal squarely with it and meet it head on. I don't think it's necessary to close down a studio."

Gunther R. Lessing, prez of the Motion Picture Industry Council, board chairman of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers and Walt Disney veepee-general counsel, called the Hughes statement a "distinct disservice" to the industry.

While Hughes had every right to exercise prerogative of management, said Lessing, "I do not agree with his implications that there are many more Communists and disloyal persons in the industry than my investigations and knowledge of the situation lead me to believe.

"I believe that Hughes is doing the industry a distinct disservice in spreading the impression that it is infiltrated with Communists. This is just the sort of thing we seek to combat in the MPIC—the fallacious impression that Communists influence our industry.

"While I do not minimize the need for ridding the industry of any Reds within it, I cannot agree with Hughes that Communist influence is so great that it could actually contribute to the closing of a studio."

Hughes' recent statement that there are still "substantial numbers" of Communists in Hollywood, declared Lessing, "confuses me. I don't know what this means. I do know no one has ever been able to show Communist propaganda in pictures, past or present.

"I am sure there are Communists, whether a 'substantial number' or not, who are members of the American Legion or who are employed by our Government, but I don't venture to say that they have any influence on these groups.

Subversive's Under Control

"Are these subversive elements under control? The motion picture industry probably more than any other industry in the U. S. can affirmatively answer this question. I firmly believe also that Hollywood labor unions have successfully barred all subversive influence in our unions.

"I believe efforts of such men as Roy Brewer, Y. Frank Freeman, Cecil B. DeMille and many other fine Americans in our industry who have been fighting this battle for us under terrific obstacles should be commended by us all. They have done so despite a lack of appropriate legislation, despite quibbling by the courts, and irresponsible attacks by many persons outside our industry who wish only to gain momentary notoriety by their accusations.

"Apparently there are still many persons," Lessing said, "who still believe, or want the public to believe, that Hollywood is full of Communists, and that they are getting across their subversive ideas in our pictures and making their weight felt in various industry organizations. This is not true. Ours is a story of a fight against Communist infiltration, the winning of that battle, and continuous vigilance to expose and flush out Communism and Communists wherever they may be found."

attackers, such as the widely publicized all-industry answer to the House Un-American Activities committee's report on Communism in Hollywood. Also, some "Movietime" participants had been briefed on dealing with the "Un-Americanism" charges. Under the new plan activities in this field will be stepped up considerably.

At the last COMPO board meeting, exhib leaders showed active concern with the subject, whereas earlier the general attitude was that the problem of dealing with detractors was one for Hollywood to handle, via the Motion Picture Industry Council and the Motion Picture Assn. of America.

Active RKO Trading

Announcement by Howard Hughes of RKO's suspended studio activities was immediately followed by the most active trading in the film company's shares on the N. Y. Stock Exchange in months. Total of 13,500 shares was exchanged on Monday (7), a volume exceeded by only seven other Big Board listings.

The stock closed the day at 3¾ points, for a ⅛ gain. At one point, it was down to 3½, lowest for the year.

Col Protests Probe's List of Red Scribes As Unfair Implication

Hollywood, April 8.

Columbia Pictures issued a protest against what it termed "wholly unwarranted implications" in reports of testimony which named 38 former writers for the studio as Communist members or sympathizers. Studio spokesman said:

"Many of the 38 were employed in 1945, 1946 and 1947, before the nation was alerted to the threat and danger of Communism. Columbia must emphasize that each and every story and script made into a film was carefully scrutinized, and that in not one single instance has any evidence been discovered of any Communist propaganda in its content."

Flynn as 'Sea Rogue'

Hollywood, April 8.

Errol Flynn goes to England this summer to play the title role in "The Sea Rogue," a Warner production. Large part of the film will be shot in the North Sea and the English Channel.

Picture will be based on the Robert Louis Stevenson novel, "The Master of Ballantrae."

Theatre Hearings

in order to give UHF a boost. Sen. Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo.), chairman of Commerce Committee, urged the agency last week not to act on this question without full hearings.

Commission also has before it a petition by Zenith Radio Corp. to institute hearings on commercial use of Phonevision system of subscription TV. It's likely that agency will lump Phonevision with other systems of pay-TV but that theatre TV will get priority in hearing schedule.

Motion picture industry had planned all-out presentation, with 61 witnesses lined up, to back up exclusive channel bid at projected May 5 hearings. Those who had contemplated summer trips abroad will now be able to go ahead with plans.

If the agency is able to meet the new date it may require parties to the case to cut down number of witnesses to the minimum, submit much of the testimony by paper, and take other steps to save the Commission's time. As one official told VARIETY, the agency has no time for "a production" for theatre TV or any other channels.

Giving Awards

siderable disparity this year in naming the "bests," the choices in general centered around the films which gained the most attention in the Academy balloting. "An American in Paris" (M-G), "A Place in the Sun" (Par) and "A Streetcar Named Desire" (WB) received the most citations, although there were many other pix that received the top rating.

Foreign groups have also joined the award bandwagon, with press associations, magazines and festival groups taking special cognizance of pictures. Unusual aspect of some of the foreign awards is that films already played out in this country have been cited for awards abroad.

Among national magazines Red Book, Modern Screen, Holiday, Scholastic, Parents Magazine, Photoplay and Look are prominent sponsors of film awards.

Col Talks Deal

tooner on what it might consider more popular fare.

Meanwhile, in connection with the latter, Steve Bosustow, UPA prexy, met in N.Y. this week with Leo Jaffe, Col pursestring exec, concerning production of a full-length feature. Subject of talk, it was said, included possibility of converting the stage success, "Finian's Rainbow," to a full-length animated feature or a combination live-action-cartoon production. Under the deal, Col would contribute the major portion of the financing and supervise the releasing. Outcome of talks was not indicated. However, it's expected that subject will be more extensively discussed on Jaffe's arrival on the Coast this week for the annual palaver of Col h.o. and studio execs on forthcoming product and other company matters.

Tied up with UPA's contemplated entry into Col's official family are several other considerations involving Col's video subsid, Screen Gems. Latter, which has been reported entering TV production on a large scale, has been seeking increased office and studio facilities. SG is reportedly weighing the shift of all its production activities to the Coast and maintaining only a sales office in the east. Ralph Cohn, Gems' topper, is expected to take part in the studio confab, leading to the supposition that Gems and UPA biz will be on the agenda.

If SG decides to close down production in New York, it's expected that UPA will follow suit. Ed Cullen, UPA's sales chief, may become overall Screen Gems sales topper under the new arrangement.

Starrett Rides Away From Col and 'Durango'

Hollywood, April 8.

After 16 years with Columbia, Charles Starrett galloped thataway off the lot with the completion of "Kid From Broken Gun," in which he made his last ride as the Durango Kid.

NBC Mulls $2,500,000 Korda Deal for Exclusive Pix on TV

NBC-TV is mulling an offer by Sir Alexander Korda to put over $2,500,000 in financing of 26 feature films to be produced by Korda in England, in return for which the web would have exclusive video rights in the U. S. NBC execs this week confirmed that the deal has been presented to them, but said it has not yet reached the negotiation stage.

Plan, if it goes through, would mark the first time that a major TV network has combined with a name theatrical film producer to supply the net with good feature product. It's understood that some of the 26 films have been completed by Korda but that the remainder of his production schedule is contingent on NBC's signing.

Under deal being discussed, the web would put up $100,000 for each film, for which it would get the TV rights, while Korda would have the global theatrical distribution rights. It's reported the British producer figures to bring in the pix at around $300,000 each, and with the coin from NBC plus coin Korda would receive from the Eady plan, would be in healthy financial condition.

For NBC, on the other hand, it would mean a flow of quality first-

BRENT SETS OWN TV, PIC PRODUCTION FIRM

Hollywood, April 8.

George Brent has formed his own production company and, partnered with William B. White, will produce theatrical film and vidpix. Brent will star in some of the pix and vidpix, and direct others.

First telepix series on agenda of George Brent Productions is "Address Tangiers," by Robert Blees. Blees is now scribbling 26 scripts for the series, will turn in three by May 1. Brent is financing the company 50% himself, and plans to negotiate with Chemical Bank and Trust Co. of N. Y. for rest of the coin. He is negotiating with Jack Bachman for rights to the series, "Valerie Dean—Visiting Nurse," which he and White will produce for TV.

Brent plans to produce three low-budget exploitation pix within 18 months, will star in two and direct one. The indies will be made without a release, the company lining up distribution later.

Hour Glass Schedules Heavy Location Lensing

Hollywood, April 8.

Taking a leaf from the major film studios' books, Hour Glass Productions is planning four location trips during the next four months for vidfilms on its schedule. Project tees next month and will continue through August.

Hour Glass already has completed 13 13-minute vidpix lensed in 16m Kodachrome. Upcoming are "Huck Finn Day" to be made in Denver in May, "Ham Radio" in Nebraska in June, "Basque Sheep Boy" in Idaho in July and "Page Boy" in Washington in August. Pix are slanted at the teenage market by writer producer Wanda Tuchock and director George deNormand.

Already completed are "Road Runners," "Kid Rodeo," "Pet Show," "Hallowe'en," "Homing Pigeons," "Newsboy Story," "Camellia Parade," "Rock Hounds," "Soap Box Trio," "County Fair," "High Flyers," "Sailing Snowbirds" and 'Knuckles Down."

'Annie Oakley' Set For Vidfilm Series

Hollywood, April 8.

Gene Autry's Flying A Productions this week pacted Gail Davis, who's been the femme interest in a number of cowboy films, to star in a new half-hour vidfilm series, "Annie Oakley." With Miss Davis in the title role, the first in the series rolls next week and will be used as a pilot for pitching to agencies and clients.

Wallace Fox will direct, with Lou Gray producing. Initialer, "Bull's Eye," was scripted by Dorothy Yost. Series is the third to be produced by Flying A, with the Gene Autry show and the "Range Rider" series already on the air.

Transfilm's TV Readings

Transfilm, Inc., has completed the first in a projected new series of TV films in which name stars read well-known literary works, in line with the recent popularity of such readings. Initialer has Basil Rathbone reading Robert Louis Stevenson's "Sire de Maletroit's Door."

Coming up are Madeleine Carroll doing Guy de Maupassant's "Diamond Necklace"; Burgess Meredith in a selection from Melville's "Moby Dick," and Boris Karloff reading Edgar Allen Poe's "Tell-Tale Heart." Other actors inked for the series are Walter Hampden and Monty Woolley.

Jake Wilk Exits WB for TV Films

Jake Wilk, vet film story editor and longtime eastern studio rep for Warner Bros., has decided to exit the company and concentrate on story properties and story ideas having to do with vidpix. He already has network and ad agency interest in his consultative services on film series for television.

He will continue to work with the Warners. He grew up with all three Warner Bros. and was also an intimate of the late Sam Warner even during his (Wilk's) start with Lewis J. Selznick in the old World Film days dating back to 1914.

He was the first to visualize the value of TV rights, and about 15

Film Syndication Outfits Alerted To Unfreezing of TV Channels

With new television stations coming on the air when the FCC freeze is lifted expected to be in desperate need of good programming, the TV film syndication outfits have already launched a heavy push to get their product into the upcoming new markets. Since most of the new stations will not be tied down to network affiliation pacts, the syndicators figure such outlets will give them their first big chance to coin the heavy dough and some of them have already sold their shows.

Chief problem facing the vidpix syndicators is how to price their product for the new, untapped markets. United TV programs, for one, has set up a pricing structure under which each new market will be able to buy UTP packages at a certain minimum price. UTP deal permits the stations to preem each series within 90 days after they take the air and to re-run the films at no additional cost anytime within a year after the first run. According to UTP sales chief Aaron Beckwith, the minimum price is an arbitrary figure based on the price under which his outfit would lose money on a sale.

Making the top vidfilm packages available to the new stations as soon as they launch operations, Beckwith said, will give them an immediate advantage in building their audiences and lining up spon-

WCBS-TV's British Pix

New package of 14 British-made features never before shown on television in the U. S. has been bought for exclusive N. Y. video showings by WCBS-TV, flagship station of the CBS-TV web. Pix were produced by British National Films, Ltd., which went out of business in 1948.

Deal was set by David Savage, manager of WCBS-TV's film department, with M.&A. Alexander Productions, which is handling TV syndication on the films. First in the series, titled "The Common Touch," is to be aired on WCBS-TV's "Late Show" Sunday (13).

DuM Suit Settled; 'Royal' Resumes

DuMont network this week settled out of court the breach of contract suit brought against it by Bing Crosby Enterprises, with the result that BCE's "Royal Playhouse" series of vidpix has resumed on the web.

DuMont originally signed for the series on a long-term basis but, after playing 26 of them, cancelled out on the remainder, claiming exemption under the war clause in its contract. Vidpix had been sponsored by DuMont Telesets, with the web citing the restriction of materials for receiver manufacturing as the basis for its claim. BCE, as a result, brought suit.

Under terms of the settlement, DuMont reportedly is paying the Martha Hyer has the femme lead in the video series, tagged "Safari Bill." Irene Breakston is associate producer, John R. Carter technical exec. A United Artists TV release is set.

Les Mitchel will produce and direct "Guest Star Theatre," shooting skedded June 1 in Mexico City's Churubusco studios. Budd Lesser is working on scripts for the series. Mitchel is now contacting Andy and Della Russell, Lee Bowman, Ginger Rogers, Gloria Swanson, Bobby Driscoll and Constance Bennet for the series.

KTLA Gets 26 Rep Pix On 2 Year TV Deal

Hollywood, April 8.

KTLA has acquired 26 pix from Hollywood Television Service, Republic studio television subsidiary, shortly after leasing of 20 pix by the channel from Robert L. Lippert. Negotiations for the block of pix were finalized by Klaus Landsberg, KTLA v.p. and general manager; L. G. Muller, film director for the station, and HTS prexy Earl Collins.

Unlike the Lippert pix, which were releases of 1950-51 vintage, the new block of product, all Republic pix, and mostly whodunits, were released from 1938 through 1945.

While Landsberg did not disclose lease price, it's known the sum involved was not large, in keeping with the station's announced policy of buying modestly, not seeking pix which Landsberg feels won't pay off.

Will Cowan Into Telepix With 'Sgt. Nelson, USA'

Hollywood, April 8.

Will Cowan, Universal-International producer-director, who has handled the studio's series of musical shorts, has branched out into the Valley lot's television activity, directing tests of various unknowns. Studio is hunting a comparative newcomer for the title role in "Sergeant Nelson, U.S.A.," its first video project which rolls late this month.

Potential talent is first screened by George Bole, who heads U-I's TV department, and Phil Benjamin of the casting department.

VARIETY

SURVEY OF

SHOWMANAGEMENT

By GEORGE ROSEN

THE FOREST AND THE TREES

Radio in 1951 was a smooth running, highly tempered medium. America's broadcasters produced their shows, presented the news, took care of the nation's entertainment—just as though the TV Bikini had never exploded. Their know-how and technique, sharpened through the years, had permitted them to take '51 in their stride. Some, still zestful enough to get excited about radio, did more than this. And for their efforts, VARIETY has singled them out for acclaim and acknowledgement.

Television in 1951 could take its first breather, having set most of its patterns the year before. With the two coasts finally linked by microwave relay and major programming originating on both ends, TV began to ape its AM parent and settle for the status quo. Like radio, it was operated with a mechanical finesse which left no doubt that it had hurdled its operational problems. Program formulas were accepted, video practically became a round-the-clock operation, station profits soared to unbelievable heights, in most cases far surpassing radio. There was not too much imagination, very little experimentation. Certainly nothing startling. But then again, TV had been shelling it out for years, and if they were inclined to play it safe in '51, they were riding the crest and had no fears of the future.

Radio after 30 years is confronted with a dilemma. And it has taken television only five years to be faced with problems of equal magnitude. Both are at the same crossroads, and neither can see the forest for the trees.

Since TV came into view, radio has been steadily fashioning for herself a pair of blinkers to obliterate the monster. Instead of acknowledging the new competition and patterning its formula for the future, radio has been resorting to temporary palliatives. Throwing rate cards out the window by accepting deals was one way of pushing off the inevitable. Establishing lower rate structures was another. There were stations that kept faith and refused to concede a rate cut was justified. Some even went the other way and upped the ante, thereby demonstrating that in 1951 there was plenty of advertising coin around.

This same faith that won't sell radio short must plan for its future. Obviously radio, in the face of TV's emergence as a glittering, fabulously-priced medium, must inevitably embrace the low-cost kilocycle band. This doesn't mean bargain basement deals or leftovers; rather a medium that's provocative and exploits to the fullest extent its potentialities. The lush years of AM stopped its creative ventures. But the capacities of its operators are again challenged, and real faith in the continuance of radio's power will disclose new paths, methods of presentation and areas of concentration.

There was, for example, the small Hartford indie that made no attempt to ape a big station's methods but evolved its own TNT (time-news-temperature) formula and then wrapped it up with maximum showmanship. There was another Hartford station and a major league Chicago operation that assumed their responsibility to the community effectively, constructively and sensationally. Yet within the confines of a limited AM budget they established an important place for radio. There was the New York multi-lingual station, faced with the dual competition from radio and television in the world's largest market, that jumped the gun on all of them by making its own unique niche in establishing direct relationship with the homeland in serving its 2,000,000 listeners. Here was ample testimony that radio has its place, and the people with the know-how to maintain this place.

Despite its ascendancy into kingpin status, television is confronted with as important a decision. Stratospheric billings and profits in 1951 had hidden the portent of the future. Already TV was beginning to price itself out of the market for too many advertisers. Unprecedented fees for talent and shows began to frighten off even the big spenders. Programs were becoming too pat and stylized. Major personalities were startled to learn how quickly TV wore out their repertoire. The frenzied tempo of TV has brought the video enterpreneurs to the forest at a clip that's created an electronic puzzlement.

Yet, paradoxically, TV has just begun to scratch the surface. Education by television has limitless possibilities. New centres of program originations for local color and talent have just begun to pop up. The vast realm of news and special events has only been tapped. Television and its leaders must look over the top of the trees and plan and envision its future. Like radio, it must create its own pattern for this future, but it must have faith that its viewers will go along with the untried and the new, the unproven and the unfamiliar, and so broaden its scope and horizon.

Responsibility To Community

WTIC, Hartford

WBBM, Chicago

To deal effectively and constructively with so sensational a problem as the narcotic trade and drug addiction, and to tackle these headline problems without melodramatics or hokum, calls for rare maturity and perception. This year two stations did just that, demonstrating thereby a sense of social responsibility that reflects considerable credit on themselves and American broadcasting.

WTIC, Hartford, led the way by initiating and carrying through to a successful conclusion a campaign to have the State of Connecticut put on its books a new law which imposes stiff penalties for the sale of narcotics to minors. The campaign was integrated into the WTIC-produced and originated network show, "Mind Your Manners." Arrangements were made for Allen Ludden, who conducts the series, to visit a Connecticut correctional institution, where he recorded a moving interview with a 16-year-old girl who had been convicted of drug addiction. At the end of the program, listeners were urged to do something about the problem of drug addiction, to expose the dope peddlers, and to work for more stringent narcotic laws. A repeat broadcast added to the impact of the original program.

But that was only the beginning. Next, Paul W. Morency, the aggressive manager of WTIC, ordered a study of both Federal and state narcotic laws, which revealed that most state narcotic laws were woefully inadequate—particularly Connecticut's. As a result, he decided that "Mind Your Manners" could not effectively continue its campaign for better legislation throughout the country—until his home state of Connecticut did something concrete in the way of leadership.

Accordingly, Morency enlisted the aid of Governor Lodge and the State Police Commissioner in preparing, with WTIC, a long-needed revision of the state's Drug Act. But there was a big hurdle in the way: the State Legislature was close to adjournment. Could a new drug bill be written and passed in the short time left? . . . If the bill did not pass at this session, it would be two years before it could be brought up again!

So Morency and his staff, like all veteran radiomen used to fighting against time, got to work fast to beat the deadline. Morency sent urgent special delivery letters to every radio station in Connecticut, urging their aid in the battle to get the new narcotics bill through the legislature. Not only that—but he sent hard-hitting radio copy along with the letters . . . spot announcements which called upon listeners throughout the state to "Act now! Wire or write your representative in the State Legislature. Tell him to support the NEW AMENDMENT to the NARCOTICS LAW!"

WBBM

Still another station, WBBM, turned its attention to the narcotic problem, and did so in a way that demonstrated the immense power of radio, when given a challenging subject, superb craftsmen, and the will to do a real job. In "The Untouchables," WBBM investigated the problem from a different angle, using the documentary essay technique which this station has used before to such good effect.

It was another winner for producer-writer Perry Wolff, who last year won a VARIETY award and other top honors for himself and WBBM with his writing-producing of "The Quiet Answer." Wolff certainly has earned a place in the lists of radio's outstanding producers of documentaries.

With tape recorders and other members of the WBBM research and reporting team, Wolff spent six months gathering material for the series of six documentaries. It was not a once-over-lightly treatment, because Wolff probed deeply and meaningfully into all phases of the narcotics problem, including desire and addiction, supply and demand, treatment, police enforcement—and even alleged police shakedowns of junkies by Chicago cops.

In addition to interviewing Chicago addicts, Wolff also recorded grimly realistic first-person stories by inmates of the Chicago House of Correction, the Women's Reformatory, the Illinois State Prison and the Federal Hospital for drug addicts, at Lexington, Ky.

Indicative of the mature approach taken by Wolff was the fact that his attitude was always constructive, within the limits of the problem, and he brought to his microphones psychiatrists, law enforcement and judicial officials and others who are professionally concerned with the narcotics problem. At the same time, listeners were warned not to expect easy or quick solutions.

"The Untouchables" produced results.

Small Station Showmanship

WCCC, Hartford

The problem of a small low-powered indie making a firm place for itself in a tough, competitive market in this era of AM and TV is increasingly difficult. In Hartford, Conn., this past year an imaginative young man who manages just such a station, developed a fresh and effective way of building audience and revenue for WCCC, a 500-watt postwar daytime operation. Essentially, what Paul Martin did was to take an old formula, give it new dimension, and dress it up in a showmanly package that combined listener and sales appeal.

The idea was to take the news, time and temperature service that is the basic ingredient of early morning programming at most stations, apply this wake-up format throughout the entire broadcast day, with the exception of Sunday. Martin built his entire schedule around the challenging tag of "T.N.T." . . . "Time-News-Temperature." Quarter of, on the hour, and quarter after, WCCC broadcasts time, temperature and weather, and a 40-second news summary. On the half hour, the same service plus five minutes of news. WCCC's slogan is "Everything you need to know, when you want to know it."

Behind this successful new format, was this reasoning by Martin: In large markets like New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, the local independent usually can get enough for its air time to cover costs of comparatively high-priced talent. In the medium market and the small market, the chief advantage of the local indie is a $3, $4 and $5 spot. "Anything higher than that prices us out of the market," Martin claims. "Therefore, stations like ours in the medium and small markets must build station loyalty rather than 'program' loyalty accenting service rather than personalities."

In short, WCCC adapted the conventional music-and-news idea and gave it new vitality, new usefulness for small stations in small markets, by making a hard core of service as important as the music.

On the public service side, WCCC produced some outstanding programs, notably in an issue involving the state's civil service employees. As VARIETY reported at the time, "By seizing on an issue that has been footballed by both major political parties and pussyfooted by all the newspapers in the state, WCCC has added a new chapter to the treatise 'How to Win Friends and Influence People' and at the same time pointed out the extent to which radio stations can participate in affairs of public interest."

What WCCC did was to offer the members of the Connecticut State, County and Municipal Employees Union of the A.F. of L. an hour and three quarters of free time, provided all sides of the controversy were aired. For more than a year, these civil workers had been trying to get a cost of living wage increase, and were apparently getting a runaround from the State Legislature and administration. The newspapers, they claim, weren't even presenting their side of the issue.

Martin not only arranged for this special broadcast which brought the entire issue dramatically to public attention, but also lined up a statewide radio hookup for the event. To give the broadcast added impact, it was staged from the Hall of the House in the State Capitol itself. Largely as a result of WCCC's activity, the Connecticut state employees got their wage increase.

Showmanager Award

CARL HAVERLIN

In Carl Haverlin, president of Broadcast Music, Inc., the broadcasting industry has a leader of genuine stature. Haverlin has made a notable success of his assignment of building and strengthening BMI's importance in the music business. But more than that, he has used his position as BMI boss to advance the creative and cultural frontiers of American radio. He has done a unique public relations and public service job for broadcasters when they most needed it.

More and more, good programming has the answers to radio's problems. To spread the know-how of programming experts in all fields of radio, to share with broadcasters in every section of the nation the programming experience and ideas of the nation's best program men, from the networks, and from every type of smart station operation—Carl Haverlin conceived and initiated the famous BMI Program Clinics. He organized top men into traveling teams, which, during 1951, hit the road, and hit it hard, bringing BMI Program Clinics to 35 states, Puerto Rico, and Canada, covering all phases of programming as well as related subjects like news, sales, sports and station management.

At these clinics, radiomen got an invaluable chance to learn from each other, to swap ideas, to gain fresh inspiration, new drive for the even tougher competitive radio days ahead. For the first time little guys, the 250-watt operators, were able to get first-hand program info and guidance from some of the big network and major station experts—and not a few of the big-league programmers brought home with them from BMI Clinics some useful ideas picked up from their minor-league colleagues. The Clinics enriched radio, and gave long-overdue recognition to the importance of programming in station operations.

This was also a big business year for showman Haverlin—the year BMI-licensed tunes held first place in "Your Hit Parade" 26 times, with 24 times in second place.

Paradoxically, it was Haverlin, who likes a symphony as much as a hillbilly hit, who enlisted the force of BMI and its members behind a flock of important projects to advance the cause of longhair music in America. BMI started a "Young Composers Radio Awards" to encourage the original composition of concert music by students in high schools and colleges. To get more radio stations to use longhair music—or concert music, as BMI calls it—BMI began issuing a monthly "Pin Up Sheet" of new and outstanding symphonic record releases, a discount buying service for stations which wanted to increase their classical disk libraries, and a Concert Music Packet, containing scripts for 12 broadcast hours, plus other special scripts and service. Already these projects are paying off in increased broadcast of symphonic music by stations all over the nation.

Education By Television

WHAS-TV, Louisville

Where other television stations have attempted to teach home viewers via video, Vic Sholis and his WHAS-TV boys put their medium to a new purpose to raise the educational standards of their community. Tieing in with National Education Week last November, they took their cameras into classrooms throughout the city to televise teachers and pupils going through their daily study routines. Purpose was to punch home to parents and taxpayers, by bringing the schools to them, exactly how their school systems operate. That the idea was successful is proved by the fact that TV outlets in several other communities have since adopted it.

Idea stemmed from Life magazine, but WHAS-TV developed and staged the shows and bore the entire cost of the operation. For 14 hours that week, the station focused its lenses on the schools, pointing up teaching techniques, physical plants, school system officials, teachers, pupils and generally, the good and the bad in Louisville's educational sphere. Cameras roved from kindergarten to high schools, from white classrooms to Negro, from public schools to parochial. Pickups often showed the same subject being taught in two separate schools to point up the difference in teaching methods.

Letters from viewers, educators and civic dignitaries following the week's sessions indicated the series had accomplished its objectives in building a new sense of duty and alertness among both parents and non-parents on the conduct of their school system.

Advancing Industry

WELI, New Haven

When the story of UHF is finally inscribed, the role of Station WELI in New Haven toward making broadcasters UHF-conscious through persistent promotion and education, will occupy a prominent niche. Taking advantage of its close proximity to the RCA-NBC experimental station in Bridgeport, WELI decided to find out if all the theories against this new system were in effect true. It received a UHF converted receiver from RCA, installed this in a station wagon and went into the field to make tests. To its amazement WELI learned that UHF was in comparison to VHF on a par and in many respects superior to VHF; it learned that the original limitations were far too conservative. Even with the limited power of the experimental station it found that it was able to pick up the station with serviceable pictures at distances up to 40 miles. And it found that there were no man-made disturbances which would disturb the UHF transmission. Where shortwaves, diathermy, automobile ignition and neon signs deteriorated VHF transmission these same disturbances did not affect UHF. Furthermore, the station stayed on the air, it had no breakdowns of tubes and equipment as had been predicted.

All of this was too good for WELI to keep to itself. It decided to tell other broadcasters of what it had learned.

As a further service to the industry, WELI is conducting seminars around the country, sending its people to tell the story of UHF to broadcasters and prospective applicants anywhere in the country.

Television Originations

WCAU, Phila.

The graveyard reputation of a Philadelphia Sunday doesn't hold true for television. WCAU-TV's recent addition of its fifth and sixth network originations, both on the Sabbath, has virtually given the station exclusive property rights to CBS-TV's Sunday daytime schedule.

Activity from the staid Quaker City on the normally quiet First Day has the trade doing a double-take. Never much of a figure in network radio, Philly and WCAU-TV are now a serious challenge as a network telecasting centre.

Latest WCAU-TV additions to the CBS line-up are "Junior Hi-Jinx," a moppet show starring "Willie the Worm," and "Ranger Joe." "Hi-Jinx" came to the attention of CBS, when it constantly outpulled other network puppet standbys in the race to hold Philadelphia's juve audience. Program drew as much as 15,000 pieces of WSB, Atlanta—In a campaign designed to regenerate listener and sponsor interest in radio in the face of TV competition, this station launched a bold, aggressive approach to the problem by re-emphasizing local programming at a "point-of-home" level. Under the hep supervision of J. Leonard Reinsch and John Outler. WSB during the year introduced new station breaks, 18 new local shows tailored to the needs and wishes of its audience, special advertising to promote radio as "your best entertainment medium," realignment of network sustainers to develop block programming, etc.

With the emphasis on "people"—getting them into the programs, into the studios, into the entire campaign to build a new audience for radio, WSB topped its drive with a series of newspaper ads, for which cameramen went into listeners' homes to get shots of them listening to their radio for station endorsements. Final results aren't in yet, but early indications point to the campaign as a socko job of hep showmanagement.

WAAM, Baltimore — WAAM needn't ever take a back seat when it comes to enterprising public service-minded programming, for the record speaks for itself: the continuing impact of the Johns Hopkins Science Review, which has played a unique role in advancing such program projects as cancer, polio, heart, cerebral palsy and blood donations, and which so effectively illustrates the research being done to eradicate these diseases: station's creation of a $10,000 grant to Johns Hopkins University to be used during 1952 for further extension of television activities at the university and further development of the "Science Review." A new type of fellowship for a new industry, it was created in order that one mature person of high standing, and currently active in television work, may have nine months free from professional duties to pursue special studies of his own choosing.

KCBS, San Francisco—When Art Hayes pulled the big switch on its 10-fold power increase to 50,000 watts, it was not only an occasion for considerable Frisco hoopla as the station came within range of 4,000,000 Northern Californians, but it was the signal for an effective promotional job designed to woo customers for advertisers and higher ratings for shows that had already climbed. The results were more than gratifying, for KCBS is the most listened to station, leading nearest competitor by 11.1%, plus fact that KCBS has seven out of Top 10 daily shows.

WHDH, Boston—In a unique system of pitching a specific show to a specific bankroller, WHDH, the wide-awake Boston indie, lined up an entire year's promotion of the RCA Victor 45-rpm records to lure RCA into sponsoring its recorded "Vaughn Monroe Show"—which, naturally, relied also on 45-rpm disks. Station turned over 45 minutes of its four most popular disk jockey shows three days a week to the exclusive playing of 45's.

Idea was given fullscale on-the-air promotion via the deejays themselves, was pushed to radio and record dealers via mailing pieces and window-streamers and, for an added fillip, was suggested to other stations and their managers and disk jocks via direct letters to each. In addition, considerable paid space was taken in Boston newspapers and the trade press to promote the 45's.

Result: WHDH got the job, with RCA picking up the $35,000 tab for its "Vaughn Monroe Show."

WBAL-TV, Baltimore—Total of 12 universities in the Baltimore area have joined in the station's Sunday night "TV Campus" series. On Tuesday nights, in cooperation with the Univ. of Maryland, station presents "Live and Let Live" as the answer to WAAM's "Johns Hopkins Science Review." Radio adjunct's "Operations Chain Action" explored the merchandising field and the combined AM and TV adjuncts did a notable job on emergency service.

WAVZ, New Haven—This winner of a VARIETY Showmanagement Award last year continued its leadership in radio journalism, prompting queries from dozens of other radio stations on what is being done at the Newspaper of the Air. WAVZ operates on the assumption that a radio station can and should be a potent editorial force in attacking the problems of its community, particularly in a community where a monopoly newspaper ownership curtailed effective competition. Thus the station distinguished itself with a documentary, "The Story of a Boy, a Neighborhood and a Dream," which sparked a movement to rehabilitate a blighted area; it waged a campaign to eradicate an antiquated city charter; it squawked over gambling and vice conditions, and it stirred community action to remedy a serious shortage of off-street parking facilities.

WTRF, Wheeling, W. Va.—Management aimed to make station an even greater news force in the Ohio Valley region, and did so by adding new recorders, assigning additional men to local news and increasing special events coverage. Station was among few to do a real job of programming its FM affiliate, and emphasized local sports coverage on FM, plus symphony.

KMBC, Kansas City, Mo.—1951 was a big year in the life of Arthur Church, one of radio's real pioneers and top station operators. His station celebrated its 30th anniversary, and at the same time opened its new building and studios, which give it one of the best equipped setups in the region. Big-league promotion drive boomed both the new headquarters and the station's 30th birthday.

WMCA, New York—Provocative Barry Gray was a double-barreled asset to this N.Y. indie—an audience builder for the late hours, and a commercial attraction, which put the SRO sign on the usually-unprofitable midnight to 3 a.m. time slot. Station this year set up special mail-order division with special telephones and operators to attract additional revenue from sponsors who want direct selling and low-cost saturation advertising. Nathan Straus-owned indie also maintained its long-standing public service tradition with new series like "Inside New York" and revival of its famous "New World A'Comin'" program.

WCPO-TV-Cincinnati — Increasing success of station's TV deejay Paul Dixon is impressive evidence of manager Mort Watters' conviction that effective techniques for inexpensive daytime video can be developed. Dixon's pantomime platter-spinning techniques are now being copied by TV jocks all over the country, and the original himself is getting a good ride on ABC network.

KVOO, Tulsa—In an era when many stations even in the rural areas are brushing off service to their farmer listeners, this 50,000-watt clear-channel operation has paced the great southwestern agriculture territory with a farm service department which has become an institution in that part of the country. Department, under the direction of Sam B. Schneider, chalked up its 10th anni last year. Because of its standout work as liaison between the farmer, the aggie colleges in its area and its advertisers, the station has scripted a new definition for the word "service" among its listeners and advertisers.

WLIB, New York—How can a small daytime station compete successfully in the tough, crowded New York market with its dozens of radio stations? WLIB, managed by Harry Novik (with co-owner brother Morris doing some master-minding behind the scenes) was starting to find one of the answers—building a station designed primarily to serve a large Negro community. Station developed new commercial personalities in Nipsey Russell, Ruth Ellington James, Poppy Cannon, and won additional audience with special events and public service features also aimed at Negro listeners. Station prepared "City Within a City," outstanding job of sales promotion-research in a largely unexplored field.

WMGM, New York—Two major alliances solidified this Loew's-owned 50,000 Gotham watter—namely, the contract negotiated with Mutual Broadcasting System to provide the network with eight half-hour and two full-hour radio shows a week (MGM Radio Attractions), and the station's affiliation with Liberty Broadcasting System. Station can take a bow for its "American-Jewish Caravan of Stars," which recently celebrated its first anniversary. Sunday program has climbed high in the Gotham listener ratings and has done an effective job, aside from its entertainment quotient, in promoting greater interracial and Jewish cultural understanding.

WHLI, Hempstead, L. I.—"Community Service, A La Mode WHLI" is what Public Affairs Director Arthur E. Paterson, Jr., called his entry to VARIETY, and, indeed, the station's public interest programming during the past year represents community service a la mode. It shows the extent to which radio can be a monumental public servant in the strictest sense. The community service programs ran the full gamut from free-time religious broadcasts to representatives of all faiths, to roundtable discussions on matters of local public interest, interviews with Long Islanders in the news of the day and on-the-spot coverage of local events.

WXYZ-TV, Detroit—Always alert for new programming techniques and new ideas in entertainment, this ABC o.&o'er preceded NBC-TV's "Today" operation by instituting its own news-time-weather show from 7 to 9 a.m. cross-the-board last May. Titled "Flying Start," the strip was all the more imposing, since it originated via remote pickup from the Willow Run airport, 35 miles from WXYZ-TV's studios.

KNXT, Los Angeles — When CBS-TV bought KTSL from the Don Lee network last year, the station was last among Los Angeles video outlets in both audience and sales. Problem: How not only to retain the current audience but build a new audience, while changing the call letters to KNXT and the transmitter site from Mount Lee to Mount Wilson in order to provide a stronger signal. Station promptly launched a fullscale ballyhoo campaign, utilizing on-the-air plugs, newspaper ads, widespread publicity, billboards and point-of-sale merchandising, plus trade ads and direct mail, pegged to the theme, "Now Look at the New Channel 2." Entire pitch pointed to Oct. 28, the day of the changeover, when the station aired special programming all day, topped by a 45-minute all-star variety show, featuring a number of CBS Hollywood personalities. Result: The KNXT audience has more than doubled and the volume of national spot advertising increased 342%. It was an effective showmanship campaign.

KNBC, San Francisco — This NBC o.&o.'er is basing its claim to fame this year on the highly successful launching during 1951 of the "Judy Deane Show." Through a standout local promotion job, highlighted by its tie-in with the Frisco and Oakland Shopping News, the station has made Miss Deane almost a household word in the area and, more important, is dusting off its SRO sign for the hour-long cross-the-board music and chatter airer.

WNOE, New Orleans — Beverly Brown, station's program director, has excited considerable local attention with her "Ideal Girl Friend, Boy Friend" contest, now in its fifth year, and has garnered for the station reams of publicity. Briefly, a panel of four girls, chosen from four separate high schools, determine the 10 qualifications of the Ideal Boy Friend. In similar manner, a panel of four boys determine the 10 qualifications of the Ideal Girl Friend. They are sent to all participating high schools who nominate candidates. Over a period of weeks the candidates meet for interviews on the air, are featured at a dance, and then the candidates themselves vote for opposite sex. The winners are acclaimed and feted in various ways.

WLDY, Ladysmith, Wisc.—In a town of under 5,000, this 250-watt independent annually creates lots of local noise with its "March of Dimes Auction of the Air," using items donated by local businessmen for auctioning, with proceeds going into the polio fund bank. Staff announcer Jeff Evans talks for 10 hours, selling items to the highest bidders, and a crew of 20 works to handle hundreds of calls.

WQUA, Moline, Ill.—In an ambitious undertaking for a local operation, WQUA airs a 15-minute "Quad City Newsreel" each Sunday, presenting a week's roundup of the local news spotlighting the actual voices of the people who made the news. Show, produced via transcription, is a good example of a local station's public service programming with an emphasis on local events.

KLX, Oakland, Calif. — Station devoted a total of 22 hours, 48 minutes of air time to coverage of the Japanese Peace Treaty Conference. From Sept. 1 to 4, '51, the four days preceding the conference, a

CBS' 'Nation's Nightmare'

The Kefauver crime show on TV was a tough act to follow. But not long after the Kefauver, Costello, Halley troupe had left the stage, CBS Radio had the courage and inspiration to tackle the national crime problem through the medium of sound. Although the techniques employed were different and the format the radio documentary rather than a video pickup of a special event, the results in many ways were equally impressive, the impact as stunning. "The Nation's Nightmare," a series of six reportorial-editorial programs on syndicated crime and its political alliances, was radio journalism at its creative, crusading best.

It was public service of high order. For while the Kefauver hearings were still shocking the American public, CBS Radio saw an opportunity to keep up the momentum of this nation-wide battle against bigtime crime. CBS realized that there would likely be the usual "cooling off" period after the end of the hearings, during which crime conditions would return to a business-as-usual basis. So, in order to keep public interest aroused, and to uncover new evidence of organized crime, CBS assigned a team of radio researchers, investigators and reporters to produce "The Nation's Nightmare."

The series was in the great tradition of the radio documentary; what's more, it carried the documentary form to new levels of achievement. Here was a shocking, exciting, disturbing true crime story whose authentic drama far outdid the manufactured melodrama of radio and video crime shows. The recorded truth of the tape machines was stranger than the fiction of the script writers.

Here was the raw drama of the real underworld—the actual voices of hoodlums, gamblers, goons, racketeers, dope peddlers, and assorted other underworld characters and their stooges etched with unforgettable realism on the sound tracks of CBS. What made the voices of crime even more compelling was the fact that the CBS staff, headed by writer-producer Irving Gitlin, and chief reporter Dave Moore, did not use the microphone merely as interviewer, but as eavesdropper: recorder and mikes hidden in cars and under tables made it possible for radio audiences all over the country to listen in on the actual buying and selling of dope, payments for police protection, and even threats of murder.

This was sensational stuff. But it was never sensation—for sensation's sake. The impact of the programs was tremendous—so much so that CBS rebroadcast three of the programs several months after the original series. "Nation's Nightmare" fully rates the nod.

Year of the Merchandising

It's a cinch that 1951 will go down as the year in which radio saw the merchandising light; the year in which the stations throughout the country, groping for new formulas and patterns to meet the TV inroads and combat the growing situation where video-happy advertisers were siphoning off more and more coin into the new glamor medium, began keeping steady company with the local retailer.

Credit WNBC, the Ted Cott-piloted Gotham key of NBC, with setting the pace on the new merchandising concepts, parlaying a terrific job into $600,000 in additional billings and, more importantly, sparking carbon copies in more than 50 stations around the country. "Chain Lightning" was what WNBC called it, with the station tying up more than 1,400 supermarkets representing the cream of the crop (A & P, Bohack, Grand Union, Kings, Food Fair, Diamond K, Safeway, etc.). What WNBC got for its advertisers was guaranteed position promotion, end positions, basket displays, window displays, store posters, space in the chain newspaper ad. WNBC horse-traded for these positions with station break announcements, supermarket opening entertainment, and general promotion of the chains. Twelve advertisers paid $1,500 a week to qualify for Chain Lightning.

No Tennessee Waltz

In the forefront in the battle against AM rate cutting, was aggressive WNOX, the Scripps - Howard outlet in Knoxville, which took up the cudgels against the rate-slashers with a vigorous ad campaign which sounded out:

"WNOX—an outstanding CBS station announces Rate Increases!"

Station reaped considerable praise from other broadcasters, from reps, and even from agencies and advertisers—and helped swell the tide against selling radio short.

And WNOX's own sponsors? Not one complaint about the increases, not one went off the air because of upped rates. In fact, today the Tennessee station has more advertisers than before.

FM: Cantonese Style

Taking a cue from his successful New York City foreign language AM station, WHOM, Fortune Pope, who acquired the frequency modulation channel last spring, allocates about 50% of his FM time to language shows which have either no representation or very little on the AM band, thereby attracting listeners who can hear this language only on WHOM-FM.

A Chinese disk-jockey scheduled for an hour a week last June proved so popular with New York's Cantonese set that he is now heard five nights a week for an hour and a half. Not only has the show boosted FM set sales in Chinatown, but has paid off handsomely both promotion and sponsor-wise. Major advertising agencies with accounts seeking an Oriental market are regular clients.

five to 15-minute "Man on the Street" program was aired giving the public's views and ideas on the event. From Sept. 4 to 8, the entire news-gathering facilities of station were turned over to the Conference meetings.

WSRY-TV, Syracuse—When you get 15,000 pieces of mail in a one-week contest on a local show, that's news . . . on either AM or TV. And that's just what happened in Syracuse on WRSY-TV, in connection with its "Canyon Jack" contest run there recently. The object of the contest was to choose a name for a Welsh pony which would be the prize for the contest-winner. Station's promotion manager, Caley Augustine, exploited it to the hilt and it paid off handsomely for this basic NBC affiliate.

Pacific Northwest Broadcasters—Group of Coast stations, which includes KXL and seven other "XL" stations in Washington and Montana, is among most enterprising in developing and encouraging new sales tools for its staffs, and in using marketing and merchandising research as aids to programming and selling, particularly in convincing local retailers of selling power of radio. Under alert managership of Ed Craney, the "XL" group also came up with novel "American Radio Awards" gimmick to recognize long-term sponsors and generally promote U. S. system of commercial broadcasting. Another effective Craney project was continuing school in all facets of stations operation for personnel at all "XL" stations. Although group is not yet in TV, a camera chain and touring truck was purchased, and put on the road, touring the area, demonstrating video through closed circuits. Tours had potent triple purpose: to train personnel in video operations, to promote TV among its potential audience, and partly to pay cost of equipment by selling experimental commercials on closed circuit to local advertisers.

WQXR, New York—The nation's pioneer longhair music station, racked up its 15th year of operation, with its position stronger than ever before, since video can make no dent in the ranks of listeners who want serious music and plenty of it. In fact, more stations are beginning to pattern themselves after the WQXR format. The N. Y. Times outlet this year also advanced the cause of classical music programming by organizing and leading "Good Music Broadcasters," organization composed of more than a dozen AM and FM stations allied to sell advertisers who want to reach the symphonic music enthusiasts in key areas around the country.

WNAX, Yankton, S. D. — This Cowles station (one of the few left) was especially promotion-minded in '51. WNAX promoted itself and its programs with a variety of techniques, including a very effective five-state bowling contest, and hitting the road to cover all the country fairs in its listening area. Station also went in for plenty whoop-de-doo to publicize the big switch when it became a CBS affiliate last summer. Keeping in step with the merchandising parade, WNAX developed a standout project of its own in a "Sell With The Stars" that resulted in hundreds of groceries and drug stores in its area getting behind the station's merchandising campaign.

Mutual Network—Last year Mutual copped a VARIETY Showmanagement Award for its outstanding Mister Plus promotion. The animated trademark, apparently, is busier than ever today along Advertising Row, embarking on a full-scale project of audience promotion, in sight and sound at the local level. That it's paid off thus far is reflected in the fact that MBS closed '51 with a 12% gain in billings for the year—and in a year which saw network radio business tobogganing alarmingly. There's no doubt that Mutual's Mister Plus adds up to forceful, consistent promotion and the promotion boys at the network can take a deep bow.

WEW, St. Louis—Although it's the second oldest station in the nation, this university-operated outlet was a second-rater until this year, when it completely revamped its program format. Station bravely gave up its hillbilly shows, etc.—and lost lots of revenue thereby—and then built a completely new personality for itself as a music and news station, with emphasis on symphony music. This advisable venture is starting to pay off—for new format is winning new listeners, and sales are starting to climb. And St. Louis has a long-needed "Good Music" station.

KPQ, Wenatchee, Wash.—Good example of building promotion project out of local conditions and needs was this station's "Ski School." In a region where there's good skiing and flock of ski enthusiasts, this idea was a natural. Useful guide for other small stations might well be philosophy outlined in sales manager Pat O'Halloran's memo to VARIETY: ". . . Promotion is a staff enterprise for KPQ. We have no promotion department as such, and promotion ideas are developed by all of us on the staff."

WNEB, Worcester, Mass. — A music-news-sports block programming format has helped this postwar baby—only five years old—compete successfully as an indie against bigger and older stations. Ratings and billings are going up, even in face of TV competition, with Boston video stations putting strong signals into Worcester area.

KFH, Wichita—This station took a national campaign of National Conference of Christians and Jews and translated it into particularly effective local terms by cutting special spots in which 30 typical Wichita mothers of all races and creeds voiced pleas for elimination of prejudice. Spots were used on a daily schedule throughout the year.

WGAR, Cleveland — Westward rolled the course of radio merchandising this year, as techniques and gimmicks originated largely in East spread throughout the nation. WGAR was no exception, and cooked up a "MerCHAINdising" plan which tied up nearly 200 chain stores in integrated merchandising campaign.

KLZ, Denver—One of best radio news staffs in West, kept the Hugh Terry-managed station on top of every major newsbreak in its area. KLZ is only Colorado station ever to win four awards from Denver Press Club for radio news coverage, with staffmen Sheldon Peterson and Jim Bennett among major award winners in 1951. Although station has no TV—there are no video outlets yet in Denver—Terry conducted unique educational campaign designed to inform public, appliance dealers and local advertisers and agencies about TV problems, techniques, and spread latest info on when Denver might get video. Station booked program series answering listeners queries on TV, conducted closed circuit TV demonstrations and even published "Television News Letter" for listeners and trade.

WHK, Cleveland—Boosted, and boasted of its brand-new ultra-modern studios and building. Most stations promote through call-letter identification, but WHK also used campaign around its self-dubbed tag of "Radio Cleveland," name which was also given to its new headquarters. Station also went in for heavy promotion of its new deejay, Bill Gordon.

WQUA, Moline, Ill.—Setting-up full-time news bureau staff by two veteran newsmen and five correspondents, paid off with bigger audiences for station's newscasts. Tape machines and recorded telephone device were utilized to add plenty of voices of locals who made news to all news programs.

KGVO, Missoula, Mont.—Novel project to build good will and increase revenue was development of annual KGVO Better Homes Show, centering around new models of various home appliances.

CKOC, Hamilton, Ontario—One of most promotion-minded of Canadian stations, CKOC won station promotion contest sponsored

SEE IT NOW

There can be no question about the most original, informative and entertaining type of journalism now riding the video airwaves—that award goes hands down to Edward R. Murrow's "See It Now" on CBS-TV. At a time when not only viewers but most industry toppers had started to believe that video had exhausted all possible facets of programming, Murrow and his co-producer, Fred W. Friendly, jolted them into discarding that cliche with this entirely new approach to news reporting—an approach which uncovered a power in TV's ability to report the news which most of them had never even suspected.

Where it had been generally accepted that video could never equal radio's job of reporting, Murrow and Friendly exploited to the full TV's sight impact, projecting with unique showmanship the drama and excitement inherent in the news. Instead of attempting a spot reporting job, they ferret out the interesting feature stories, with Murrow's perceptive commentary tying the features into a lucid and penetrating whole. The subject range is a wide one, from the peacetime uses of atomic energy to the Brooklyn Dodgers' training camp and the problems of the West Virginia mine workers. Result has been an unbiased and enlightening type of editorial coverage, which delivers for viewers a new perception of the world in which we live and the general tenor of our times.

I LOVE LUCY

The Lucille Ball-Dezi Arnaz situation comedy on CBS-TV is more than good entertainment. It's no freak of circumstance that the series has, in the span of a few months, climbed to the top of the Nielsen heap. It merits that distinction, for week in and week out it has achieved a comedic quality all its own, with Miss Ball in particular bringing to the show some clownish attributes that are thoroughly refreshing and delightful.

But of equal importance, from a long-range viewpoint, is the fact that "Lucy" is already establishing a wholesome pattern for TV. To CBS goes the credit for patterning its video programming designed to achieve a warmth and intimacy, without losing grasp of comedy values. Thus in the network's "My Friend Irma," "Mama," "Burns and Allen," "Amos 'n' Andy," in the projected "My Favorite Husband," "Life With Luigi" and "Our Miss Brooks," CBS has hit on a formula that, given the same qualitative production that pertains to "Lucy," cannot but help enrich video's entertainment roster.

RED SKELTON

To Red Skelton goes the salute for ripping the lid off a whole new barrel of yocks to inject a much-needed new note of comedy into a medium almost satiated with comedians. Eschewing the "stand-up-and-belt-'em" patter technique and the lushly-produced sketches spotted on other TV comedy shows, Skelton parlayed his own socko ability to make like a clown (in the literal sense of the word) and his slapsticking facility into a half-hour of unadulterated hilarity. Fact that he bowed into TV a year or two after most of the other top-name comics didn't deter him from zooming into the upper brackets and cementing his hold there on NBC.

On the basis of his previous success in radio and films, Skelton preemed in TV under almost a handicap—that of living up to advance expectations. But the addition of sight values to his string of zany AM caricatures, such as Willy Lump-Lump and Cauliflower McPugg, made 'em even funnier. His ability to bring the human equation into comedy by spotlighting with telling satire its foibles and human characteristics, embellishing these with his own brand of pratfalls and mugging, also registered solidly week after week.

CELANESE THEATRE

In a season which saw television's hour-long dramatic shows come into their own, pushing aside the big-budgeted comedy shows as the best in qualitative TV programming, ABC-TV's "Celanese Theatre" quickly established itself as tops. Much of its success, of course, was due to its tie-in with The Playwrights Co., which made available the oustanding works of Maxwell Anderson, Eugene O'Neill, Elmer Rice and others. But it takes more than just a good script to stage a top video show. It takes imagination, plus production and direction know-how, and these qualities were handed "Celanese" in spades by producer-director Alex Segal and exec producer A. Burke Crotty.

Besides eliciting some top-drawer performances from film and legit stars to sparkplug his productions, Segal also embellished for "Celanese" the comparatively new concept of camera technique—that of shooting from all four sides of a set. The smooth and easy flow of his camera movements often compensated for static qualities in a script. Even more important, it traced a new pattern for TV drama, removing the last inhibitions of legit and motion picture technique to provide a type of staging unique to video. To Segal and his "Celanese Theatre," consequently, goes this salvo for turning out the best in a super-crop of TV dramatic presentations.

NBC TELEVISION OPERA

One of the more lofty attainments of television during the past year was the presentation last Christmas Eve of the Menotti one-act opera, "Amahl and the Night Visitors." Commissioned by NBC especially for TV, it brought a grandeur and a new accomplishment to a medium that had yet to achieve it culturally and artistically. It rated Page One critical appraisal in the daily press and brought to TV, and more specifically to the NBC Television Opera Dept., an acclaim which elevated video in the realm of the arts. That the Menotti work merits a place in the standard operatic repertoire is a tribute to NBC's faith and courage in commissioning a contemporary composer to create specifically for TV.

In all its ventures this year, the NBC Television Opera Dept., under the expert guidance of producer Samuel Chotzinoff and his associates, has proven that opera belongs on TV, when superior artistry is utilized to restyle and adapt for the more intimate medium. The imaginative productions, the flawless casting, the artistic settings, the overall technical perfection—all bespeak the serious intent of the NBC entrepreneurs to create for the connoisseur as well as the TV novitiate.

mail for one advertiser in response to a one-time announcement.

The two shows join three other WCAU-TV originations already on net's Sunday roster: "In the Park," another puppet offering with adult as well as kid appeal; "Candy Carnival," now in its 14th week on the web, and "What in the World," much publicized combination of education and entertainment aired in conjunction with the University of Pennsylvania.

Coupled with the fact that WCAU-TV is originating five web programs, four of them back-to-back in the 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. time slot, is the local simulcast of the city's largest live studio show at the same time, the Horn & Hardart "Children's Hour," which goes on here while three of the web shows are being fed to the country-at-large. Two of the live net shows are repeated later in the day for local consumption.

Man credited with this eye-opening Philly activity on its alleged day of rest is Charles Vanda, v.p. in charge of TV operations at WCAU. Vanda has no doubts about Philadelphia's future as production centre. With WCAU-TV's limited facilities, he has already proved station can match, or better, New York and Hollywood in the production of low-budgeted, top-rated TV shows. He is also convinced the day is not far off when stage and screen personalities will be glad to beam their talents from the Philly environs.

Cementing International Relations

WOV, N. Y.

The Ralph Weil-Arnold Hartley management - programming team clicked on all fours again in 1951 via their specialization in Italian-language broadcasting, which has put it in the forefront among multi-tongued U. S. stations. Truly WOV projected itself commendably in the realm of "International Public Service" with a three-ply thrust. This included: (1) "A regularly scheduled six-days-a-week broadcast of "La Grande Famigia" ("One Big Family"). This is transcribed "on location" in Italian towns and villages from which the principal emigration to the United States has come, with WOV tape recorder equipment spread throughout the length and breadth of Italy and Sicily; (2) WOV's instantaneous action in emergency fund raising during the disastrous Italian floods in the fall of '51; (3) WOV's bang-up job on collecting Christmas clothing for the maimed war orphans of Italy.

What, however, distinguished WOV's public service as distinct from other station programming was the manner in which the Weil-Hartley enterprise accomplished the penetration of American goodwill into areas in Italy and Sicily where the average person has never even spoken on the telephone. Handling production on the WOV transcribed series is Giuliano Gerbi, formerly of the Voice of America as the famous wartime shortwave commentator "Mario Verdi." The basic theme of the program is that of human interest. A preponderant portion is devoted to interviews with persons having relatives or acquaintances in the U.S.

Between March, 1950, and October, 1951 (to isolate a period for examination) Gerbi covered 944 centres in Italy and Sicily. For the most part the work has been carried on in small villages and in all cases he comes as a welcome visitor from America, one who revivifies ties of friendship, of kinship, or simply of interest, between persons and places in Italy and Italian-speaking radio audiences in America. Thus "One Big Family" has successfully developed a direct and intimate relationship between the two countries. This is not a "message" show, but a program featuring people whose lives, by their human sameness and difference, are of interest to other people. It is an emotional experience drawn from life, reflecting Gerbi's day-to-day rapport with grassroots attitudes and emotions. As such it is a show rare in radio experience.

CBS' TV City: 'Housing an Orphan'

Any reference to television's growth during the past year must of necessity include the precedent-making TV City now under construction by CBS in Los Angeles. Behind the venture, with its initial $12,000,000 investment—with an ultimate expenditure of $35,000,000—lies a basic understanding and realization of the fact that while TV is still a makeshift industry in its infancy and an orphan without a home of its own, new and greater standards for good programming within the framework of a sane economy can only be achieved by producing the best in entertainment at low operation costs.

Thus CBS envisions in its TV City (which officially preems on Oct. 1) a healthy development of the television industry whereby efficiency of the medium may constantly increase while costs steadily decrease.

Outstanding News Coverage

KSTP, KSTP-TV, Minneapolis

These twin stations in the twin cities of Minneapolis-St. Paul aptly defined with their news coverage during the last year what the FCC means by programming "in the public interest, convenience and necessity." With a king-sized crew of hep, imaginative newsmen who are armed with the best equipment and facilities available, the stations not only beat their competing broadcasters but scored several major news beats on daily newspapers in the area.

Under the alert guidance of Stan Hubbard, prexy of the two outlets, and radio-TV news chief Dick Hance, KSTP has built its news coverage system to the point where it can compete favorably with the networks. Staff operates much the same as a daily newspaper, covering local politics, civic organizations and the U. of Minnesota, etc. Each newsman, who spends his full time on the job of news coverage only, is a graduate of some university journalism school and is also required to attend Minnesota's "refresher courses in radio news" each year.

From this staff has come such spectacular news breaks as the St. Cloud reformatory scandal, in which the stations' spotlighting of the peddling of dope to prisoners brought on a fullscale investigation by the governor; the Bistrom brothers manhunt, in which reporters of KSTP and KSTP-TV were instrumental in tracking down a quartet of criminals, etc. Stations received nationwide publicity for their parts in such stories and enconiums from top government officials, the FBI and their competitors.

Newsmen are also almost always first on the scene to cover fires and other local disasters. And the long lineup of daily news shows pinpoints local interest by devoting a full 50% of each show daily to local events.

Outstanding Non-Commercial Station

WNYC, N. Y.

In 1951 WNYC maintained its reputation for being America's No. 1 non-commercial radio station. Operating with a limited budget, the municipally-owned station, under the guidance of its hep director, Seymour N. Siegel, parlayed its day-to-day, week-to-week operational pattern, its dramatic one-time presentations, into one of the unique broadcasting services in America—all for the benefit of its owners, the 8,000,000 inhabitants of New York City.

That's a tough assignment for a station bereft of any sponsorship spoils. But it's not a new role for WNYC. For years it's been the incubating ground for some of broadcasting's major operating brains today, and there is hardly a radio station in New York City today that does not have an alumnus of WNYC working in high level positions.

To solidify that standing, Director Siegel was on the ball in 1951, as witness the following accomplishments: With its 13th edition the American Music Festival, as one of WNYC's major showcases, crystallized itself as an American institution, rendering a distinguished service to American composers and contemporary music in general, an accomplishment for which it received the first annual Koussevitzky Award. In 1951 WNYC projected itself as a key station in furthering the cause of the National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters, sparked by the energies of its own Director Siegel, who is spearheading the NAEB movement. In 1951 WNYC became the showcase for British drama in America, picking up series of dramatic programs with England's foremost actors, writers and directors; it dittoed as Gotham's showcase for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., with full-length operas originating in Montreal and Toronto carried exclusively in New York by the station. As a companion series to the American Music Festival, WNYC went into a second edition of its American Art Festival, with 100 special programs originating from all the N. Y. museums, art galleries and art schools. With its own TV film unit, WNYC produced 12 half-hour programs on commercial television stations and turned out almost a dozen films on city government.

by Colgate with its hep use of on-the-air plugging, display space, printed media and other facilities. On the public service side, this alert Canadian operation utilized tape recording most effectively in the cause not only of local civic problems but of issues affecting Dominion as a whole.

WHAM - WHAM-TV, Rochester, N. Y.—Another station that really knew the score in knowing how to promote itself, its programs and its clients. Station did a first-rate job of program promotion, and integrated this with intensive promotion to the wholesale and retail trade, designed to give extra point-of-sale potency to air advertising.

KOTA-KOZY, Rapid City, S. D.—Fortunately for AM there are still stations, far from the big production centres, that don't rely solely on records or a network line for the core of their programming, and KOTA and its FM affiliate, are among them. They did more live shows in a month than some broadcasters do in a year, making good use of a mobile unit to cover such events as the annual West River Music Festival.

WSNY, Schenectady—Concept of the five-minute program as an effective and economical vehicle for local advertisers was developed here to new degree. Station built stable of more than 50 five-minute show formats of all types, and backed them up with hard-hitting sales campaign that boosted billings.

KFMB, San Diego—The "KFMB Editorial Page" series racked up an impressive success in local campaigns, under the scripting-editing aegis of Paul White, the ex-CBS news director. Station sticks in its oar whenever it feels it can serve the public interest, and such items as restoration of rent controls in San Diego; saving of a home for a Chinese-American war hero; participation in a professional golf tourney by Joe Louis; prevention of enactment of special legislation aimed at a State College professor, played a major role in contributing to San Diego's public maturity.

KEEN, San Jose, Cal.—Reflecting a sound and showmanly sense of public responsibility, this station rolled up a good list of public service

WBKB, Chicago—This pioneer video operation made its pitch to VARIETY primarily on the basis of its series called "Assembly," an across-the-board daytime sustaining feature in the interests of national defense and Armed Forces.

WFIL, Philadelphia—In one of largest single-station trade paper ad campaigns in the history of broadcasting, this Philly outfit spent plenty dollars to demonstrate its conviction that "radio is the most effective, most economical of all of advertising's mass circulation media." Campaign, which will run for at least two years, is intended to sell radio, and also the Philadelphia market and, of course, WFIL.

WLW, Cincinnati—To catalog the endless stream of talent that has emerged from Cincy's WLW would be a man-size job. Many of the greats of the medium were incubated at the "Vital Voice of the Big Midwest". WLW never knows when to call quits. It's still on the job, as hep as ever, and its "programmed" panorama of the Middle West," as reviewed for VARIETY Showmanagement, reflects a healthy awareness of the ever-changing, ever-growing needs and interests of its WLW-land audience.

KNX, Hollywood—A four-part programming plan was successfully launched by KNX during the past year to meet the changes in radio programming patterns and tastes. Specifically, KNX (1) made a bid to more strongly identify itself with the life of its community through more specialized use of News Bureau and Public Affairs programs; (2) developed KNX personalities as community entertainers as replacement for more costly variety-type program fare; (3) integrated recordings into programs that utilized KNX production experience; (4) developed such proven forms of radio entertainment as audience participation and mystery-drama into forms that would fit local station production budgets.

WWRL, Woodside, L. I.—Winner of a VARIETY Showmanagement Award last year, Long Island metropolitan area station continued to do a bangup job in selling the sponsor by helping to merchandise products, with accent again on the Negro market. WWRL disk jockeys were effectively tied in to promotional projects on behalf of advertisers.

WTMJ-TV, Milwaukee — The Walter Damm-operated station made a lot of noise in the public prints this year, getting the Fortune magazine treatment with a full-length exposition on how to successfully operate a video station. WTMJ-TV turned in a pretty financial statement, reflecting the managerial capacities of Damm and his associates.

KTFI, Twin Falls, Idaho — Through its "Let's Talk City Business," station did a fine job on advising the public of what is happening in the city administration.

KMOX, St. Louis—At a time when pessimists in the industry were worrying about the future of radio, KMOX last spring set out to see what could be done about bolstering its billings during the relatively weak summer quarter. Station found not only that its average daytime summer audience was as high as during the rest of the year, but also that retail sales in its area ran as high during June, July and August as in the other months. With these facts to work from, KMOX sent its salesmen out to blanket the territory with a series of bulletins and a well-produced presentation titled "The Good Ol' Summertime is a Good Time to Sell on KMOX."

'Richest Station in the World'

WNBT, the NBC New York owned-and-operated video showcase, grossed $10,000,000 in 1951, thus earning for itself the distinction of being the biggest and richest TV operation in the world. The figure represents a 130% increase over 1950 in a stepped-up competitive market with a full quota of seven TV stations.

The $10,000,000 gross for '51 points up anew the fact so well established in the industry—that as network operations become more and more of an economic problem, the gold lies in the o & o possessions. Thus NBC is in the enviable position of knocking the ball over the financial fence to the sweet tune of $40,000,000 through its strategically-spotted AM-TV owned-and-operated setups, with '51 profits for the o & o's totalling in the vicinity of $8,000,000. If the network, as such, took a beating in AM and just managed to hurdle the red ink stage in TV, the o & o bonanzas more than compensated for the network headaches.

Not So Amateur

Both the radio and TV versions of Ted Mack's "Original Amateur Hour" continued to pace the broadcasting industry in 1951, not only in providing showcase opportunities for tyro talent, but also in offering fund-raising and public relations opportunities to leading local and national organizations in behalf of charity and public welfare projects. In both fields, of course, Old Gold, which sponsors the two shows, receives a tremendous payoff in local, point-of-sale ballyhoo.

Program's weekly selection of an "Honor City," from which the radio show originates as often as possible, has led to the best in local exploitation. Such other stunts, as the annual VIP amateur show from Washington's Constitution Hall and the national amateur talent championship shows at Madison Square Garden, N.Y., have drawn tremendously for their respective charities. And the initial spotlighting of new talent under Mack's guiding hand, from which several currently standout show biz personalities have emanated, continues as a valuable service not only to the entire entertainment industry but to the public as well.

SPONSORS EXAMINE THEMSELVES

TV Code Just a 'Station Break'

Chicago, April 8.

The tightly-programmed National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcasters convention, which rang up a record attendance of over 2,000 delegates during its three-day stand here last week, was generally conceded to have been one of the best organized get-togethers in the trade group's 30-year history. The various panels and workshops covered most every major facet of broadcasting and, in the main, sent the conscientious conventioneer home feeling the expense account was justified.

But the TV code wound up as a serious casualty on the crowded agenda. The report from the review board was squeezed into practically a "station break" spot on the final day between the luncheon and the debate on the televising of congressional and courtroom proceedings. Final day's jampacked schedule left only 12 minutes for a discussion of the code, causing some daily press comment that the industry has already buried its highly-touted guardianship over program standards.

But, all in all, delegates agreed that convention chairman James D. Shouse and his committee, C. E. (Bee) Arney, Jr., and Bob Richards and crew of NARTB staffers, had put together a fruitful production.

NARTB Meet, While Not Cure-All, Helped Clear Air on Major Issues

Chicago, April 8.

Not all of the myriad number of problems confronting broadcasters in this transitional period, with television on the threshold of becoming a truly national medium and radio fighting to hold its own, were solved at the 30th annual National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcasters convention here last week. But a majority of the record number of 2,000 delegates checked out with the feeling that the three-day meet served to clear the air on several important issues.

Running perhaps one-two in the minds of the industryites when the parley kicked off were questions about the FCC's timetable for the lifting of the TV freeze and how to bulwark the AM side against further attacks on its rate structure.

Initial appearance of recently appointed FCC chairman Paul A. Walker before a trade gathering with his assurance that, baring last-minute snags, the channel thaw would start next week, served to kindle hopes that the video day will soon be dawning for the eager applicants. And the ringing "Declaration of Faith" for the future of AM broadcasting that came out of Paul W. Morency's affiliates group sparked a reaffirmation of radio's vitality that's figured to answer those who have been attempting to downgrade the medium.

The FCC chairman sounded a warning to the tele aspirants that the actual processing of the applications for the 2,000 stations incorporated in the final blueprint may be a long, drawn-out affair. Although Walker didn't say so in

Because it's impossible, under existing TV relay facilities, for Louisville to feed the network, viewers in N. Y. will actually see the Kentucky Derby before viewers in Louisville see the race. Difference in time, of course, will be only a fraction of a second.

TV pickup of the Derby, to be aired by CBS-TV, May 3 under Gillette Safety Razor sponsorship, will be fed from Louisville to Indianapolis, then to Dayton and from Dayton to N. Y. Show will then be piped from N. Y. out to the network, which includes Louisville.

'Mr. D. A.' to Take His First Vacation

"Mr. District Attorney," backed by Bristol-Myers on ABC radio, plans taking a hiatus this summer for the first time in its long history.

Reason is that in past years the sponsor was unable to take a summer layoff due to a policy of NBC, on which the program was berthed until last fall. NBC some years back had adopted the policy that no new laxative accounts would be accepted on the chain, although those then on the air would be allowed to remain. Since B-M was plugging Sal Hepatica on "Mr. D. A.," bankroller didn't take a hiatus on that series to permit the product's franchise on the web to continue in force.

Ironically, after B-M moved from NBC to ABC, the former relaxed its stand on laxatives, and Ex-Lax has bought a late afternoon soaper strip.

Televersion of "Mr. D. A." on ABC-TV may also take a hiatus. Sponsor and Young & Rubicam, the agency, are currently mulling the status of both shows.

Y&R Axe Falls On 12 in Wake Of TV Cutbacks

Young & Rubicam has notified about a dozen of its radio and tele staffers to start looking for other jobs. They are being dismissed as of June 1, although some have been given earlier and others later terminal dates. They're also getting hefty severance pay settlements.

Behind the moves is the fact that Y&R has lost several tele shows and the $6,000,000 Schlitz billings. Some new biz it was angling for (such as Blatz business) hasn't materialized.

Y&R personnel affected include several names with important radio-tele credits. Among these are Ed Duerr, who had been program supervisor on ABC-TV's Paul Whiteman show; Paul Franklin, in a similar spot on the same web's Herb Shriner show; James Sheldon, staff producer-director who most recently had been a troubleshooter for Nat Wolff; Bob Schuler, who had been working on the Schlitz "Playhouse of Stars"; commercial writers Bill Scudder, Dave Pollard and Dirk Van Slyk; and Felix Jackson. Latter, who had been exec producer on "Schlitz Playhouse," it's understood, may continue at the agency, but in a lesser position.

Bannister a Veepee

As originally anticipated, Harry Bannister, new chief of NBC's station relations department, was elected a veepee at the regular monthly meet of the NBC board Friday (4). Bannister, former chief of the three WWJ stations in Detroit, assumes his new NBC post Monday (14), succeeding Carleton D. Smith.

Smith, meanwhile, has been named director of operations for NBC's o.&o. department, under veepee Jim Gaines.

TV COMM'LS TO GET GOING OVER

There's a growing concern among the sponsors and agencies that TV commercials are still in embryonic stage and that the medium has much to learn toward achieving maximum efficiency in selling the clients' wares.

This concern, in turn, is already being translated into some exhaustive analysis and study which may have a far-reaching effect in bringing about the "TV commercial of tomorrow."

Kenyon & Eckhardt, for one, has made it one of the major orders of the day, having launched full-time researching on a continuing basis in an effort to determine the most satisfactory types of commercials and how best to incorporate them into a program. Every aspect of TV advertising is being carefully sifted and studied, with an eye toward analyzing cross-patterns of viewer likes and dislikes, in the agency's bid to find the right answers.

Similarly, Colgate, which has one of the major sponsor stakes in television, is undertaking one of the most intensive researching jobs to determine the impact of live vs. filmed vs. animated commercials, their length, manner in integration, etc.

Among all the major agencies and bankrollers, research staffs are being augmented at a fast clip with one motive—to ferret out qualitative analysis on what type of commercial sells a product.

The whole movement toward bigger and better research of commercials stems from the clients' growing apprehensions over mounting program-production-time costs on television. Now that they're committed to the medium with multi-million dollar budgets annually, such bigtime spenders as Colgate, Procter & Gamble, etc., are still unconvinced that such fabulous coin expenditure is paying off. Colgate, with a $6,000,000 annual investment alone in the Sunday night NBC-TV "Comedy Hour," wants additional evidence that one single hour per week is worth that kind of coin. P & G, the biggest spender of them all, radio and TV alike, has been engaged for some time in researching "the video picture" in its quest for answers and to determine just how far it wants to move into the newer medium next season.

Ed Chester's CBS Exit for Cuba Job

Edmund A. Chester, CBS Radio's news and special events chief, is ankling the web within the next two weeks to take over as general manager of Cuba's RHC-Cadena Azul (Blue Network). Web, which is the biggest competitor to Cuban radio magnate Gore Mestre's operation, was recently purchased by a syndicate of North American and Cuban financiers. Chester, in addition to serving as g.m., will also represent the North American capital.

Chester's replacement has not been set, but it's expected that T. Wells (Ted) Church, now editor-in-chief of the department, will take over. Chester, who will headquarter in Havana, was news director for the Latin American network conducted by the major U. S. webs during the war in conjunction with the Government. When that was abandoned at the war's end, he became CBS news chief. Prior to CBS' split-down-the-middle, he served as TV news and special events director, taking over the AM job when latter division was separated from TV.

Merle Miller's Chapter & Verse Appraisal of Radio-TV Blacklist

Godfrey Gets Earful

Columbus, April 8.

Arthur Godfrey fell afoul of a zookeeper here (and maybe the SPCA) after telling three little girls to whom he gave live Easter rabbits on his Wednesday night CBS-TV show that they should be picked up by the ears.

Earl Davis, superintendent of the Columbus Zoo, called Godfrey, and talked to Barbara Scott, his secretary.

"Rabbits," said Davis, "should be picked up by the nape of their necks. Picking them up by the ears will break the cartilege and will leave them with broken-down, floppy ears." (Davis didn't remark that Fletcher Rabbit on "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" has been having this trouble for years.)

Reason for trying to correct Godfrey's wrongie is that, in view of the number of his viewers, it could have a ruinous effect on hundreds of rabbits this Easter.

There has been a great deal of attempted private blacklisting, both organized and unorganized, in radio and television, it's reported in "The Judges and the Judged," a study by novelist-correspondent Merle Miller made for the American Civil Liberties Union and published today (Wed.) by Doubleday ($2.50).

Introduction by Ernest Angell, prexy, and Patrick Malin, executive director of the ACLU, declares:

1—Those publishing the lists have done a "woefully inadequate job of establishing the accuracy, fairness, relevancy and significance of their findings."

2—National security in AM and TV should be protected "by decision of government security agencies as to when the industry is 'sensitive' and who is a security risk."

3—"Loyalty" oaths or "clearance" plans are "ineffective," because a subversive will "perjure without hesitation," and are "unwise because the conscientious person will be outraged and the ordinary person will be intimidated."

4—"Best safeguard" for AM-TV is the "determination to hew to the line of honestly offering the best available talent."

5—Those who regard a performer as "obnoxious because of his real or alleged" pro-Communist associations should do "exactly what a Communist would not do—act in accordance with democracy and civil liberties."

Work on the tome was started by Miller in fall of '50 when the ACLU hired him to investigate Counterattack, the weekly anti-Communist newsletter put out by three former FBI agents, and "Red Channels," 213-page book published by Counterattack listing 151 AM-TV performers, writers and execs with the alleged pro-Communist organizations and causes they were reported as supporting or having

CBS Returns Sun. Aft. TV to Stations In Economy Move

In a move apparently dictated by economy motives, CBS-TV has decided to abandon temporarily network programming for its 2 to 5 hours Sunday afternoons. Local stations will assume their own programming through the summer, until the netork picks up the time again next fall.

Move means that "Quiz Kids" and "CBS Television Workshop," both sustainers, will be axed, at least until next fall, after next Sunday's (13) broadcasts. With Goodyear having pacted to air its "Greatest Story Ever Told" in the "Workshop" time slot for one Sunday a month during April, May and June, however, the web will recapture that time from its affiliates on those Sundays. Program veepee Hubbell Robinson, Jr., stated definitely this week that "Workshop" would return in the fall, and it's expected that "Quiz Kids," which CBS recently took over on a long-term deal from Louis G. Cowan, will also return.

In line with the move, the net is also reshuffling its early Sunday evening shows. "What in the World," "Man of the Week" and "Lamp Unto My Feet" will hold down the time from 5 to 6:30 p.m. "Mr. I. Magination," now aired Sundays at 6, moves back to the Saturday afternoon 1 to 1:30 slot. WCBS-TV, the web's N. Y. flagship, has not yet decided how to fill the Sunday afternoon hours.

CBS' 7½% PAY HIKE IF OKAY WITH WSB

CBS has decided to grant all employees a 7½% cross-the-board wage hike, retroactive to March 31 but subject to approval by the Wage Stabilization Board. Decision followed a special session of the web's employee-management committee, with the employee members having originally petitioned for a 10% boost.

If the WSB nixes the proposed pay hike, CBS will revive its merit plan, under which employees will receive the difference between the 7½% proposal and the amount of merit increase allowed by the WSB. Some 22% of the web's employees, however, are currently above the maximum wage in their classification and so would not be eligible for merit increases.

McCormick Exits WTAM in Cleve.

Cleveland, April 8.

Hamilton Shay, assistant to NBC Vice President James Gaines, has been named general manager of WTAM-WNBK, succeeding John R. McCormick, who resigned effective May 1. In announcing his resignation (4) McCormick said he is "resigning in order to make a change." He did not state his future plans, but he is severing his connection with NBC.

Shay, who had been with the advertising department of Emerson Drug Co., joined NBC three years ago, succeeding Charles Bevis, who now heads the NBC o.&o. station in Denver. Shay also has been controller of the o.&o. stations.

McCormick had been with NBC for 12 years, joining the network in Chicago, where he served with sales except for a brief stint as director of radio during the Republican convention in 1944.

McCormick was named general manager in Cleveland about four years ago, replacing Vernon H. Pribble.

JOS. KATZ CO. NAMED AS AGENCY FOR DEMS

Washington, April 8.

Joseph Katz Co., of New York and Baltimore, has been appointed advertising agency for the Democratic National Committee in the 1952 campaign. It will buy radio and television time and handle other media problems.

Robert Swan, Katz Co. radio-TV director, will work directly with the national committee.

the ratings are just as fancy

"The Egg and I" is now daytime television's fourth most popular program, with a 16.7 Nielsen, and a 78.8% share of audience. Procter & Gamble, who know a good egg when they meet one, sponsor the show twice a week... but you can buy it for Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. This might be a very good way for you to guarantee yourself a Happy Easter right straight through the year...

CBS' 'NO SOAP' TO P & G ON RATE CUT BRINGS MAJOR VICTORY FOR WEB RADIO

Network radio won its most heartening victory of the season last week with the decision of Procter & Gamble, pace-setter among AM's top-spending advertisers, to renew for another full year its three quarter-hour early evening strips on CBS—and with no rate cut involved.

P&G move, following by a week the decision of Jack Benny-American Tobacco to continue on CBS with no changes next season, staves off any imminent threat of a forced cut in time costs, which could have tossed the industry into a bargain basement category. It also bulwarks the nets' contention that radio, far from being on the downgrade, is still a potent ad medium and one that's necessary to an advertiser seeking full national coverage.

Three P&G shows involved are Lowell Thomas, "Beulah" and Jack Smith, which represent a yearly time and talent outlay of $5,000,000. CBS and the soap outfit had been locked in battle for several weeks over P&G's demands that the web, because of TV's breakthrough, pare its nighttime rates down to the daytime level. On the basis that capitulation would undoubtedly lead to similar demands from other bankrollers, which could have undermined the entire industry, CBS stood pat. And, last week, PG came through with its renewal order.

Web is making some concessions to the advertiser, including a readjustment downward on the client's Coast repeats. But the fight over rate cuts was the most important issue involved and, and on this count, CBS won a clear-cut decision. New deal, on a 52-week basis with the standard options, is effective June 30.

With Jack Benny also back in the AM fold now to anchor CBS' other Sunday night shows, web execs pointed to growing indications of a resurgence of interest among a number of AM advertisers in the medium. Several bankrollers, they said, are already dickering for next season's programs, a move which usually doesn't occur until late May or early June. Cavalier cigarets, for example, has already pacted to pick up the tab on the radio version of "My Friend Irma" for next fall. Ennds, which has "Irma" this season, is contemplating sponsorship of "Inner Sanctum" for next fall.

Such factors emphasize, according to CBS radio execs, that sponsors, in reassessing AM's value, now realize they need the medium and so are guaranteeing that they'll continue to be represented next season.

Goodrich Tags On To Burns & Allen

Hollywood, April 8.

CBS-TV's "Burns and Allen" show, now aired alternate Thursday nights, goes weekly next season, with B. F. Goodrich picking up the tab every other week to rotate sponsorship with Carnation Milk, the program's present sponsor. Goodrich has not yet decided whether to continue with its "Celebrity Time," also aired on CBS video.

B&A plan to film their show next season. Carnation renewal came through well in advance this spring, tying the comedy team for a full year, starting in October. In addition, plans have already been set for the summer of 1953, which will have Burns and announcer Harry Von Zell teaming for a light dramatic series for nine weeks while Miss Allen vacations.

Erwin, Wasey, agency for Carnation, is now negotiating for the filming, which is to be done before a live audience. B&A go through this summer under Carnation sponsorship on their regular alternate week schedule.

Norman KNBH Manager

Hollywood, April 8.

Don Norman, sales manager of NBC-owned KNBH, has been named manager of the TV station to succeed Tom McFadden, who moves to N. Y. as director of national spot sales.

Norman came to the Coast last July after heading up sales for NBC's radio and TV stations in N. Y.

WOR-TV Legiters Get Ciggie Coin

R. J. Reynolds is picking up the tab for half of "Broadway TV Theatre," stanza which will give five "repeat performances" of former legit hits on WOR-TV, N. Y., starting Monday (14). Sponsor will plug Cavalier cigarets, via William Esty agency. Previously General Tire & Rubber, which owns WOR-TV, had announced it would back the entire 90-minute show or share sponsorship with another advertiser.

Warren Wade, who is packaging the program, told VARIETY that he has been talking to some legit producers who would like to have their shows do their last week of tryout on the tele stanza rather than in Boston or Philly. Since the Broadway season is drawing closer to the end, there's not too much likelihood this will come to pass shortly, but the plan might evehtuate toward the end of summer.

Wade also said that he has received commendations from playwrights favoring his plan to televise the shows as written, rather than have them adapted for the medium. William Saroyan, Wade said, has offered some of his plays because of this factor.

Among the plays Wade plans doing after "Trial of Mary Dugan," kickoff vehicle, are "Jazz Singer," "Angel Street," "Angel in the Pawnshop," "The Noose," "Potash and Perlmutter," "The Bat," "It's a Boy," "Tiger Rose" and "The Fortune Hunter." All have had successful Broadway runs.

Producer expects to draw on Hollywood stars coming east to do summer stock. The series will give them a chance for a broad showcasing in proven vehicles, Wade said.

SEE SINATRA WINDING UP WITH AN NBC DEAL

Frank Sinatra, who recently parted ways with the CBS web, is likely to wrap up a radio-TV deal with NBC following current talks with RCA execs. An RCA Victor disk tieup, however, will not be involved since Sinatra has another 17 months to go on his present Columbia Records pact.

Sinatra is also going with the William Morris agency for bookings formerly handled by the Music Corp. of America. Meantime, Ava Gardner arrived in New York from the Coast yesterday (Tues.) to join Sinatra, who wound up at the Broadway Paramount the same day.

Pact Margaret Truman For NBC Guest Reprise

New contract signed by Margaret Truman last week with NBC calls for her to do a minimum of nine guest shots during the year on either AM or TV. While no minimum fee has been set, she'll receive from $2,500 to $4,000 per shot, depending on the budget of each show.

Miss Truman has no programs scheduled on the web in the immediate future, indicating she probably won't do another show until next fall. Her last appearance was as guest on Jimmy Durante's show on the TV "All Star Revue."

NBC Affiliates Cry 'Foul' on Weather Sale for 'Today'

Some NBC-TV affiliates are griping at network's proposal to sell the four weather reports in the Dave Garroway "Today" stanza to Armour for Dial soap. NBC wired outlets for approval on selling the 35-60-second temperature reports, with a mention of Dial at the start and a 15-second plug at the end. Armour would pay the cost of a five-minute segment daily, but stations would get one-third the quarter-hour rate. On outlets carrying only one hour of the two-hour show, these figures would be halved.

Those stations and their reps who object claim that NBC would be "getting into the spot-carrier business," which they feel properly belongs to the affiliates. In the original "Today" deal, complaining outlets say, stations were given the right to sell local and national spots in segments the web couldn't peddle. Further, it's said, they'll be getting about one-quarter of what they'd get if Armour bought the spots directly from the affiliates. Network, of course, answers that it is trying to sell as much of the show as possible, which is to the affiliates' interest.

Talk ABC-TV's Program Glamorizing Between Kintner-Jordan's Golf

ABC prexy Robert E. Kintner and Wally Jordan, head of the William Morris agency's radio-TV sector, are leaving Friday (11) for Ponte Vedra, Fla., for 10 days of golf.

Between niblicks, Kintner and Jordan are expected to continue talks on ABC's showmanship expansion plans, expected to be an outgrowth of the United Paramount Theatres-ABC merger deal currently before the Federal Communications Commission. Bob Weitman, UPT veepee, and Abe Lastfogel, Morris agency's general manager, have previously discussed showmanship possibilities inherent in the merger.

100,000 TV Sets a Week

Washington, April 6.

Television manufacturing industry is turning out around 100,000 sets a week despite cutbacks in supply of materials, according to preliminary estimates of the Radio-TV Manufacturers Assn. Production, it's reported, is being geared to demand for product rather than factory capacity.

Top 10 Femmes

Detroit, April 8.

The American Women in Radio and Television convention named the following 10 women for outstanding achievement in 1951:

Gladys Blair, radio-TV account executive, Young & Rubicam, Chicago; Kathleen Lardie, of the Detroit Board of Education's Radio Station, WDTR; Agnes Law, CBS librarian, New York; Elizabeth Marshall, assistant director WBEZ, Chicago; Christime Miller, of General Foods Corp., New York; Bette Doolittle, assistant to the director of TV, National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters, Washington; Joyce Smith, of WDSU-TV, New Orleans; Josephine Wetzler, director of education WLS, Chicago; Geraldine Zorbaugh, legal counsel, ABC, and Norma Young, of WHJ, Hollywood.

Alcoa Home Base Can't 'See It Now'

Pittsburgh, April 8.

Aluminum Co. of America, which has its headquarters here, is plenty upset because there won't be a home-town outlet for the Ed Murrow program, "See It Now," when that half-hour switches to CBS-TV in a 6:30 Sunday evening slot late this month. Impossible for Alcoa to get a clearance on that time here in this single-channel market because Wilkens Jewelry Co. has the 6-7 period on Sundays tied up solid for its Amateur Hour. That was the first live program WDTV ever carried, and is a fixture.

Alcoa's particularly interested in seeing "See It Now" continued in Pittsburgh since organization is almost entirely a local institution and is even right now completing an all-aluminum skyscraper on the site of the old Nixon Theatre, which will further plant its roots in this town. WDTV has been carrying "See It Now" in its current Sunday afternoon slot, but can't possibly give Alcoa 6:30 on Sundays.

Some sort of deal may be worked out for a delayed kine, but so far Channel 3 hasn't been able to come up with any choice half-hour A time.

FREEMAN SERIES ON 'SING SING SURGEON'

New television series based on the experiences of Dr. Charles C. Sweet, who served for 25 years as chief medical officer at Sing Sing penitentiary, is being wrapped up by Charles K. Freeman, legit producer. Freeman has exclusive rights to all Dr. Sweet's memoirs and is now scripting a story for Collier's based on some of the highlights.

Video package, to be titled "Sing Sing Surgeon," will dramatize the background of the doctor's work and, with the help of the prison chaplain and psychiatrist, stress the moral and physical rehabilitation of the case histories involved. Freeman, who's done TV work both in the U.S. and abroad, will produce and direct.

NBC Nearing Pact On MacDonald Carey

Hollywood, April 8.

NBC is reportedly near the inking stage with MacDonald Carey for the actor to star in a new radio series to preem this summer. Deal is also in the works for the actor to do a TV version of the same show next fall.

New series, titled "Jason and the Golden Fleece," is labeled a "modern adventure" show. Herb Ellis and Cleve Mermann will script, with Ellis also directing. Initial show has been taped and NBC is said to be ready to put it on the air this summer as a sustainer if no sponsor is forthcoming by that time.

Carey recently turned down an offer to star in NBC-TV's "Martin Kane, Private Eye," taking over the role to be vacated next month by Lloyd Nolan, in order to remain on the Coast.

Femme B'casters Assemble to Map Future in AM-TV

By FRED TEW

Detroit, April 8.

About 300 delegates to the annual convention of the American Women in Radio and Television, held here last weekend, picked up a flock of ideas of how femmes can increase their sphere of influence in radio and television, in an address by Dr. Hale Aarnes, chairman of the Department of Radio and Television at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo.

Dr. Aarnes, who delivered the principal address at the McCall's Mike Awards banquet Saturday (5), uttered a "new" idea or project for his listeners in almost every sentence. Most speeches go from one "point" to another, but his went from one "idea" to another.

From the way the femmes applauded, it would seem that Dr. Aarnes may have started the AWRT on an ambitious program of putting at least some of his ideas into practice.

Dr. Aarnes feels the AWRT should sponsor statewide contests to select a high school boy and girl who make the best speeches on American opportunities and a high school boy and girl who write the best essay on the same subject. The four winners from each state then would be brought together for three weeks during the summer for Americanism conferences, under Dr. Aarnes' plan. Near the end of this conference, business, union, political and entertainment leaders would be brought in to talk to and confer with the youths. He said he felt that sponsors of radio and television programs would be "glad" to help out with necessary funds.

'Operation Opportunity'

The conference, Dr. Aarnes said, would make women in radio and television a more vital force in helping a new generation carry on the American way of life. He called it "Operation Opportunity."

Dr. Aarnes also said the radio and television industries should support the FCC better than they do, so that the FCC would get enough money to expand. Three new FCC bureaus are needed, he said: (1) educational; (2) broadcasts for overseas use, and (3) a research bureau to serve the entire industry.

Dr. Aarnes said he thought there should be national, regional and local boards to discuss programming with radio and television stations. "They would act not as cen-

TV 'Immorality' Study Hits Snag

Washington, April 6.

A juridictional hurdle prevented expected action in the House last week on the Gathings resolution to set up a 15-man committee to investigate TV programs for immorality and offensiveness. The measure, introduced by Rep. E. C. Gathings (D-Ark.), had previously been reported favorably by the Rules Committee.

Rep. Gathings told VARIETY that the Interstate Commerce Committee, which has jurisdiction over the FCC, has indicated that it should decide on the merits of the resolution and wants to consider it before letting the matter come be-

'Aldrich' Back to Radio On NBC This Summer

"Aldrich Family," absent from AM since last season, returns to radio via NBC this summer. Web will start the show as a sustainer until a bankroller is inked.

It has not decided yet whether any of the present "Aldrich" video cast will double into the AM version. Show is now aired Friday nights on NBC-TV, under Campbell Soups' sponsorship.

TV'S RED INK RAP ON POLITICOS

NBC-Philco 'Preview' Conventions

Philco Corp. and NBC teamed last night (Tues.) to preview the web's coverage of the political conventions from Chicago this summer, which Philco will sponsor. In a coast-to-coast closed circuit transmission originating from NBC-TV's Center Theatre, N. Y., NBC prez Joseph H. McConnell and Philco prez William Balderston, along with other top brass of both organizations, filled in Philco dealers and distributors along the microrelay link on convention plans.

Show was aired from 6 to 7 p.m., with the dealers invited into NBC studios in all cities along the route to watch the proceeedings on TV monitors. Philco also took the occasion to unveil five new TV receivers it's putting on the market this month. NBC was able to get the microrelay facilities at the time, since the 6 to 7 hour on all nets is reserved for local, non-network programming.

TVA, AFRA Members Vote Merger In Event Five-Branch Tie Fails

Memberships of Television Authority and American Federation of Radio Artists have voted overwhelmingly to merge if there is no blending of the five eastern branches of Associated Actors & Artists of America by July 1.

Separate referendaums were conducted by AFRA and TVA on the draft constitution of the proposed American Television & Federation of Radio Artists. AFTRA setup was favored 1,254-269 in the TVA poll, with 82% of the membership voting affirmatively. In AFRA the results were 2213-79, or 97% in favor.

The AFRA poll approved, 2164-90, the proposal that representation for the next AFRA convention be on the basis of one delegate for every 50 members instead of one delegate for every 25 members as currently provided in the rules.

Commenting on the results, TVA exec secretary George Heller told VARIETY that video performers are for a five-branch merger, but feel that if there is no five-branch or large-scale merger by the July 1 deadline TVA-ers want a wedding with AFRA. He said the vote was significant in view of the opposition of some organizations to the AFTRA setup. Actors Equity and American Guild of Variety Artists had argued for a "no" vote as a sign that five-branch merger was desired. Heller said that the poll was a "challenge" to those opposing merger of the talent unions.

A. Frank Reel, AFRA exec secretary, said that the almost unanimous vote indicates that if five-branch merger cannot be achieved the radio performers feel there should at least be a complete wedding in the electronics field. He said that such a get-together would give AM and TV artists greater bargaining strength and permit organization of the entire U. S.

About 50% of those eligible voted in the AFRA poll.

Al Fresco Bouts For Pabst-CBS

Chicago, April 8.

With the assurance of a regular radio-television sponsor, the International Boxing Club has decided to extend its Wednesday night bouts through the summer. Pabst Brewing Co., which has bankrolled the IBC midweek fights on CBS radio and TV for the past three winter seasons, has signed with the boxing group for a series of 15 fights to be staged at the Chicago Stadium this summer. CBS will beam the cards via AM and TV.

Brewer is understood to be paying the IBC $16,500 for broadcast rights for each fight in the regular series with a chance to bid for any major outdoor contests on the summer docket. The Stadium is installing an air conditioning plant for the hot weather cards.

The summer schedule opens June 4 and runs through Sept. 24 but excludes the two weeks in July when the political conventions are holding forth in the Windy City. New arrangement gives Pabst an around-the-calender spread with the IBC.

Jo Dine to Ziv

Jo C. Dine, director of NBC's press department, has moved over to Ziv Television Programs as public relations director, and will head a newly-created department.

Dine had been with NBC for six years.

Radio Doubles Up On Personalities To Shave Costs

Radio networks, by doubling up on the work of their contract personalities, have come up with a new and inexpensive way of building new shows with name value. Latest to follow that path is NBC, which has set both Ralph Edwards and Meredith Willson for new shows in addition to those they already have on the web.

Idea behind the plan is that it's less expensive to build a show around a personality already under contract than to go out to sign a new name star. CBS Radio has adopted that course in the past by expanding Robert Q. Lewis' "Wax Works" into additional time periods each time a new late-evening half-hour has opened up. Art Linkletter has also spread out on both radio and TV for CBS via his "House Party" show, but his cross-the-board stanzas, slated for the dual route in the fall, have already been sold.

At NBC, Willson's "Music Room" has been aired all this season Wednesday nights from 10:35 to 11, at one time under RCA Victor sponsorship. Starting Monday (7), the web also put the Willson show into the 2:15 to 2:30 daytime strip. Edwards, who's been doing a cross-the-board show for NBC on both radio and TV, is slated to head up a new Saturday evening show starting May 3, which he'll do in addition to his other duties. Both the new Willson and Edwards shows so far are sustaining.

Edwards' new show will take over the Saturday night at 8:30 slot now occupied by the "Bob and Ray" show. Latter will move back to Friday nights at 8:30, as summer replacement for the Dean Martin-Jerry Lewis program.

Pitt Loves 'Lucy'

Pittsburgh, April 8.

The Lucille Ball-Desi Arnaz series, "I Love Lucy," which has heretofore been carried by WDTV in this single-station market only on alternate weeks, has landed a straight ride on Channel 3. With the cancellation of the Paul Whiteman program Sunday nights at 7, DuMont station here has allotted that slot to "Lucy" on a regular weekly basis.

"I Love Lucy," incidentally, is directed by a Pittsburgh boy, Marc Daniels, who was known as Danny Marcus when he went to school here. Another Pittsburgher, Herb Browar, who graduated from the Carnegie Tech Drama School, is also on the production staff.

WEBS DOUBTFUL OF BREAKING EVEN

Chicago, April 8.

The televising of the Republican and Democratic national conventions here in July looms as the most costly special event in the young medium's history. Now that actual details of the scope of the project are starting to jell with the preliminary surveys and blueprints already completed, network execs are becoming increasingly doubtful the sponsorship coin earmarked for the coverage will cover the final cost figures.

At this early stage they're talking in terms of a final tab hovering between $1,750,000 and $2,000,000 for out-of-pocket expenses for the networks involved. That's just the current estimates for the costs of putting the show on the road and does not include the pre-emption rebates to regular sponsors who will be dislodged by the special telecasts. Just what this will add up to depends upon the length of the conventions and the number of steady clients riding through the summer. However, both NBC-TV and CBS-TV are bracing themselves for at least $400,000 in rebates during the two-convention package.

These figures were brought out at last week's National Assn. of Radio-Television Broadcaster's annual conclave during a forum devoted to AM-TV's political plans. Taking part were Sig Mickelson, CBS news director and chairman of the webs' video pool committee; NBC's William McHenry, chairman of the radio pool; Kenneth Fry, radio-TV director of the Democratic national committee, and Edward T. Ingle, Republican national committee radio-TV director.

500G For NBC-CBS

NBC-TV and CBS-TV are now calculating their convention costs sheets at $500,000 each for the two shows. This includes their share of facilities' construction at the International Amphitheatre, pegged at $250,000; day-to-day production outlays, and transportation and living expenses for the myriad number of technicians, commentators and factotums who will take part in the affair. NBC-TV is figuring it'll cost $1,000 for each staffer assigned to the conventions.

ABC-TV and DuMont's costs are reckoned to run close to $750,000 between them. DuMont is not sending out its own feed but will help staff the pool coverage so its share will be relatively small.

NBC, ABC and CBS have long since inked bankrollers for their pool and individual coverage and now that their slide rule experts are really getting into the logistics of the convention telecasting it's recognized the sponsorship revenue may finally add up to only a partial subsidy.

ABC-TV'S 'STOP MUSIC' MAY BE PRUNED ½HR.

ABC-TV's "Stop the Music" may be cut to a half-hour shortly, occupying the 8:30-9 p.m. Thursday slot instead of the full 8-9 p.m. hour. Reason is the recent cancelling out of Hazel Bishop lipstick and Toni home permanents, which had alternately backed the first 30 minutes.

There has been some question as to whether Old Golds, which sponsors the second half-hour of the show, would renew. However, inking for another cycle is expected. OG would stay in the latter portion, which has gained higher ratings than the first segment (due to the latter's heavy opposition from CBS-TV's "Burns and Allen Show" and NBC-TV's Groucho Marx layout).

Radio edition will continue on ABC in the 60-minute 8 p.m. Sunday period. OG has the final quarter-hour of this series, with another portion being included in the web's "Pyramid Plan."

TV Tab, On Cost-Per-Thousand Basis, Dropping Sharply; Lower Costs Seen

The tab in television won't get too high—and, in fact, costs per thousand viewers are dropping sharply, the American Assn. of Advertising Agencies annual confab was told last week in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

In a study of what has happened to advertising costs, Melvin Brorby, veepee of Needham, Louis & Brorby, showed that the cost-per-thousand of all media went up in the past year—except for video.

Breakdown by media, Brorby declared, shows that cost-per-thousand circulation for consumer mags rose 7% in 1952 over '51, and was 18% higher than in '41; c-p-t for trade publications was up 1% over '51 and up 21% over '41; milline rate for daily papers was up 7% over '51 and up 18% over '41; outdoor boards c-p-t climbed 5% over '51 and 20% over '41; network radio c-p-t was up 16% over '51; and spot radio was up 20% over '51.

By contrast, tele presents a brighter picture, Brorby said. Time cost index was up 30% in '52 over '51. However, the circulation was up 50%, which means that cost-per-thousand viewers was down 14%. Similarly, the cost of TV spots was down 5% during the year.

These figures don't include talent and production costs. However, Brorby figures, there was no increase in the talent charges for Television Authority or American Federation of Musicians TV performers. Rising prices of name talent and other production factors weren't taken into account by the agency topper. However, he pointed out, production costs for composition, electro-typing, engraving and artwork in printed media have more than doubled in the last 11 years.

On an overall basis, he concludes, the cost of advertising products has gone up, but not as much as the products themselves.

J. H. E. Davis, v.p.-director of Foote, Cone & Belding, doesn't think the tab in TV is going to be too high. The reason, he told the agency man, is that "you and I will not permit it. We are the buyers.

4A's Elect Cunningham

John P. Cunningham, exec v.p. of Cunningham & Walsh, was elected chairman of the American Assn. of Advertising Agencies at the latter's annual parley in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., last week.

Henry M. Stevens, v.p. of J. Walter Thompson, was voted vice-chairman. Harold Cabot, of the Cabot agency, was elected secretary-treasurer. Cunningham succeeds Louis N. Brockway, exec v.p. of Young & Rubicam.

200G Wall St. Coin Behind AP Venture Into TV Newsreel

Associated Press moves into television for the first time next week with the launching of a weekly TV newsreel for sale to local stations throughout the country. AP is the third of the major wire services entering the TV newsreel field, since International News Service and United Press have been servicing video outlets with daily or weekly reels for some time.

Top AP execs are keeping their plans under wraps, but it's reported the first issue is scheduled for release Monday (14). AP is putting none of its own money into the project, which is to be bankrolled by $200,000 in Wall Street coin. Wire service, with its reps and stringers stationed throughout the world, will reportedly operate much the same as its competitors by providing subscribing stations either with a finished reel or material for insertion in their own productions.

New AP reel will be staffed by a number of former Telenews production personnel, with Jack Tobin, formerly of Telenews, as general manager. Tobin is heading up the newly-created Spot News Syndicate, which is to be the corporate name of the AP reel, which will both produce and syndicate the footage to video stations. Price structure has not been divulged.

INS was the first of the wire services to enter the TV newsreel business, and now services stations in almost every TV market, either with its daily or weekly reel or with its INP still photos. UP recently closed a deal with 20th-Fox for servicing TV stations with newsreel footage. Among the networks, NBC has its own newsreel setup, which provides footage for its cross-the-board "Camel Newsreel Theatre" and other shows. Number of local TV outlets, of course, also have their own newsreel cameramen, turning out footage such as that used nightly by WPIX, the N. Y. Daily News' station.

O'Connor Asks 25% Hike For Next NBC-TV Season

Hollywood, April 8.

Negotiations are being conducted for new pact for Donald O'Connor for next season on NBC-TV, with Jaffe agency asking a 25% salary hike for the young comedian. Fred Hamilton of agency reps O'Connor in the talks with net execs in N. Y.

While O'Connor hopes to continue next season's sked on teevee on a one-a-month basis, feeling this arrangement is ideal for video, his many pix commitments may preclude this. O'Connor is now winding a pic at Metro, then goes to UI, from there reports to 20th-Fox for "Call Me Madam," and then heads Hollywood way, for a pic at Paramount.

$8,000 Lopped Off Benny Radio Show

Hollywood, April 8.

All contracts for the Jack Benny radio show next season have been signed and Ken Yourd, director of business affairs for CBS, has planed back to N. Y. Show, which is an Amusement Enterprise (CBS-owned) package, has had its budget trimmed from the current $26,000 to $18,000 weekly. All hands took a cut, including Benny.

Next week either William Paley, CBS board chairman, or Frank Stanton, prexy, will submit the 1952-53 budget to Paul Hahn, prez of American Tobacco Co. It is believed the new price will be acceptable to Hahn, although there's the possibility he may ask for deeper cuts.

SACKS TO COAST TO FINALIZE DINAH DEAL

RCA veepee Manie Sacks leaves for the Coast over the weekend to sign Dinah Shore to a longterm exclusive deal for NBC radio and TV.

It's still undetermined whether Chevrolet, currently bankrolling Miss Shore's twice-weekly 15-minute show on NBC video, will repact for next season. Songstress, of course, is expected to bow off her early evening, cross-the-board stanza on CBS Radio for Procter & Gamble. Sacks expects to remain on the Coast about two weeks.

Television Followup Comment

To kick off start of its fourth year for B. F. Goodrich, "Celebrity Time" dropped the quiz format on Sunday (6) at 10 p.m. to go into a name parade gala on CBS-TV. By so doing, it racked a score both qualitatively and quantitatively that the regular frame seldom can reach under its rigid pattern.

Happiest in the processional seemed to be Conrad Nagel, who, separated pro tem from his regular quizmastering role, was quite at home in the romp. So was regular Herman Hickman, who bubbled over even more than per usual in pairing with guest Steve Allen to mike-greet "drop-ins" a la Hollywood preem.

Some of CBS' fanciest householders—and others—helped give an aura of festiveness to the half hour. These included (in addition to Allen) Clifton Fadiman, Irving Mansfield, Sam Levenson, Bert Parks, Marlo Lewis, Jarmila Novotna, Mel Torme, Paul Tripp, Ken Murray, Mike Wallace & Buff Cobb, and Jackie Gleason. Latter was spotted for informal comedy business with Frank Sinatra, who himself stinted via "Old Black Magic" on the way over from his Paramount, N. Y., chores.

Mary McCarty, who recently replaced Jane Wilson as chirping regular, did a salvo rendering of "Flaming Youth," complete with frantic terp. The big smash was Victor Borge, who took off on 88'ing "Happy Birthday" interpolations during classical and pop excursions and earned the equivalent of a video begoff. "Aside from "Polonaise," Brahms' "Lullaby" and Pilgrims Chorus from "Tannhauser," he cleverly worked in other kibitzing via "Moonlight Sinatra" by "Harry S. Beethoven" and slasticked "Shrimp Boats" and "Third Man Theme." Sammy Kaye came on to baton the Alvy West orch in the birthday song amid a giant horseshoe spread for the feedbag and cake-cutting.

"Celebrity Time" preemed in '49 as "The Eyes Have It" and went through a series of other labels before adopting current title. Richard Lewine is the producer and Herbert Hirschman directs.

Ed Sullivan collected one of his stronger displays on Sunday's (6) edition of "Toast of the Town" on CBS. The show indicated that the N.Y. Daily News syndicated columnist spared no expense or effort to get a prime batch of talent. The principal headliners were Sophie Tucker and elements of the Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet, which on same night played its farewell performance at the N.Y. Warner Theatre, and the Tuskegee Institute Choir under direction of William L. Dawson.

These three items seem sufficient to make any program both in name value, entertainment and variety content. Miss Tucker had previously appeared with Sullivan and repeated her strong impact on this occasion. She started with a number that should have come midway, but it didn't dim the reception. Theme of her appearance is her golden jubilee in show biz, which will be marked shortly. Her "Yiddishe Mama" and impressions of some of her better known show biz contemporaries and her "Some of These Days" were the stronger parts of her turn and brought a full-fledged mitt.

Presentation of Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet at the start of the show, was, as Sullivan explained, not in the best interests of routining but the crew had to make an 8:30 curtain at the theatre. This troupe gave a matinee and evening performance in addition to the shot on "Toast," which gave the kids a strenuous day. Every segment of their presentation was good. Especially good was the pas de deux by Elaine Fifield and David Blair, the "Coppelia" extract by Svetlana Beriosova and a Sailors Dance by a trio. The camera work during the corps de ballet presentation was not up to the level of the dancing. The long shots, while encompassing most of the scene, tended toward monotony.

The Tuskegee choir put over some excellent harmonics. The deep tone and impressive voices provided a rich vocal tapestry. There was appreciable pickup in camera work during this session.

Comedy by Mickey Deems hit a high laugh quotient and the acrobatics by Montes de Oca duo went off well.

"Songs For Sale" came up with a crackerjack session on CBS-TV Saturday night (5) when a hep panel of judges passed on a flock of competing tunes which had previously copped prizes on this series. Comprised of Celeste Holm, Meyer Davis, Howard Dietz and deejays Doug Arthur and Barry Gray, this panel was supplemented by emcee Steve Allen for a witty, breezy and ofttimes biting critical approach. At one point, for example, Dietz dismissed a tune by cracking: "Ireland is a great country—it's even survived the songs written about it." Dietz and Davis were hard to please but it was their tough standards that gave an edge to the panel's chatter.

One of the difficulties in judging the merit of a tune on this show is the superlative arrangements given them by Ray Bloch and the equally class productions in which they are framed. On the past session, Teresa Brewer, Eileen Barton, the Mills Bros., Danny O'Neil and Tex Beneke's orch gave the entries the best possible showcase. Added factors are the scenic ballet backgrounds, all contributing to some of the best song productions on video currently. The tune material on "Songs For Sale," despite the fact that no hit has been birthed on this series, is surprisingly good and, especially in the present market, are on the level with most of the numbers on the hit lists.

NBC-TV's "Lights Out," which took a week off for a change in sponsors and producers, returned to its regular 9 o'clock spot Monday night (7) but with a misfit show. Adaptation of Edgar Allen Poe's "Pit and the Pendulum" had none of the finely-scripted horror of the original nor the terrif suspense which has marked "Lights Out" in the past. Show emerged as only another adventure story, well enough produced but minus the interest and impact it should have had.

Pearson Pharmacal, for Ennds, is the new bankroller, having replaced Admiral. Caroline Burke has taken over production reins from Herb Swope, Jr., who ankled the series to start work on his own vidfilm package, "Fu Manchu."

Murvyn Vye starred in "Pit," turning in a solid performance as the Spanish nobleman sentenced to death in the pit by a court of inquisitors. Despite the inadequacies of the script, penned by Gene Hurley, he managed to make believable the sanity-shattering tortures he underwent. Norman Rose overplayed his role of the power-hungry inquisitor. Miss Burke and director Clay Yurdin put to good use a number of special effects to help depict the tortures, with the razor-sharp pendulum, swinging back and forth over Vye's body while he lay roped to a plank, coming off best.

Ennds commercials, playing up the anti-personal odor function of the product, were way out of line with the show's format, with the result that the middle plug jarred. Frank Gallop did his usual solid job as the spooky narrator.

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello came up with one of their better television stints of the season as stars of NBC-TV's "Colgate Comedy Hour" Sunday night (6). In the usual A&C idiom, the comics stressed their knock-about slapsticking while building almost an hour-long plug for the N. Y. opening this week of their latest film, "Jack and the Beanstalk." For once, though, the show had some entertaining moments for other than the rabid A&C fans, even though some of the skits and lines were played too long. Show originated in N. Y.

Charles Laughton, in the top guest spot, entered into the spirit by gagging it up with the comics, to the point of even taking a pratfall for his walkoff. He negated most of this impact, though, by swinging into a dramatically legit recitation of the Gettysburg Address in the middle of the sketch. He did a good job on it, but the buildup certainly didn't motivate its inclusion. A&C, on their own, scored with an ice-cream vending routine and in a satiric bit on how to borrow money from Jack L. Warner, in which an actor impersonated the WB chief. (Warners is releasing "Beanstalk") Best of their material was their skit on picking up a couple of blind dates, in which the fragility of a prop car helped draw laughs.

Isabel Bigley was only so-so in her rendition of "Our Love Is Here to Stay," probably because she was given no production backing. Johnny Conrad and his Dancers turned in a well-routined terp spot, which was almost lost because of some unwise camera placements. Al Goodman and his orch, who came on from the Coast to do the show with the comedians, did their usual top job of showbacking.

CBS-TV's "Suspense" hit a new low for cream evening time programming last Tuesday night (1) by attempting a remote pickup from the auto show at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y., as a salute to the car manufacturers who use Electric Auto-Lite products. (Auto-Lite sponsors "Suspense.") Perhaps the date of the broadcast had something to do with what appeared on the viewing screen, but it seemed actually unfair to inflict such a show on unsuspecting viewers who might have tuned in expecting to see the usual "Suspense" mystery meller.

With Ken Murray emceeing, idea was apparently to mix a variety show around the new auto display, with the "Glamourlovelies" from his own Saturday night show on hand to recite a little poem about each car. Deadpan songstress Virginia O'Brien and whistler Minda Lang were also on the bill but their talents were wasted. Not only did most of the gals fluff their lines and, while on camera, look desperately around for someone to toss them a cue, but Murray himself got caught in the middle. For most of the show, he trailed around the room in company with Auto-Lite prexy Royce G. Martin to talk about the cars and interview various execs of the different manufacturers. Their talk was of the lowliest non-sequitur type and, to top it off, the cameras missed the entire point by failing to give a good closeup of a single one of the autos displayed.

Ed Wynn has been one of the more amiable performers for the past half-century. He's been entertaining in virtually every media from live to film to electronic and has been an important personality no matter where he worked.

In recognition of his 50th anni in the business, the Lambs Club awarded Wynn a scroll which was presented by Pat O'Brien on the "All Star Revue" Saturday (5). Wynn is one of the preformers who has never been known to utter a blue line. He's a meticulous and clean entertainer who has earned the respect of the industry.

For his anniversary show, Wynn called on the services of Dinah Shore, who, as always, registered strongly. She provides considerable listening pleasure whether she's on her own show or enriches other displays through her guest shots. Other brief spots were by the Mandarins, who did some okay acrobatics, and Bud & Cece Robinson, who scored with a picturesque Charleston. Anthony, Allyn & Hodges were okay in a comedy ballroom number.

Wynnn's writing could have been stronger, but he can be forgiven this lapse on his anni display.

NBC-TV's "Martin Kane, Private Eye" offered a surefire drama Thursday evening (3), with Paul Dudley's script having some effective gimmicks. Story dealt with the head of a crime syndicate who rubbed out one of his henchmen and eventually was tracked down by Kane (Lloyd Nolan). There was good shock effect in the scene in which a milkman, who witnessed the murder, awoke after a beating in a hospital room and was urged to identify the killers by the cops. Latter, however, proved to be the fingermen in the police masquerade, and they coldly pumped him full of lead. Suddenness of the plot twist registered potently.

Another angle, somewhat farfetched but nevertheless intriguing, had Nolan knock out the racketeer (Bruce Gordon), truss him up and put him in a coffin at a funeral chapel, to get him to confess when he came to. Gordon's mobsters attacked the undertaker's place and in the gunplay their leader was hit—while still in the casket. It was corny, but it came over.

Nolan, who replaced William Gargan in the title role last fall and who leaves the show at the end of the current cycle for pix and vidpix work, handled the gumshoe assignment acceptably. He was given some excellent assists, particularly by Haila Stoddard as the racketeer's femme, Dennis Bohan as the milkman and Helen Baron as the latter's wife. Gordon, John Marley, Sal La Pera, Sam Gilman, Harold Gary and John Pavelko also supported well. Regulars on the show are Walter Kinsella, in whose tobacco shop some action takes place and who puts across the U.S. Tobacco commercials, and King Calder, as Lt. Gray.

Frank Burns' production-direction was good, and Charles Paul's music rounded out an entertaining mysterioso.

NBC-TV's "Philco Television Playhouse" came up with a sock script by Thomas W. Phipps on Sunday (6). Titled "The Room Next Door," it had some of the social satire and careful depiction of upper class manners that distinguishes F. Scott Fitzgerald's work. Incidentally, two of the thespers who were on "TV Playhouse's" production of Fitzgerald's "Rich Boy," Robert Pastene and Gene Lyons, were also in the cast of "Room."

Plot itself was slight. A wealthy couple grimly and with tense determination were priming their daughter for marriage into high society. They subjected her to lessons in French and etiquette, grooming by exclusive dressmakers and hairdressers and tossed a succession of lavish parties to which eligible bachelors were craftily invited. The girl, a pathetic figure couldn't land the well-heeled catches, but fell in love with a jazz pianist-singer. The snobbish parents, of course, turned thumbs down on this match, resulting in the tragic drowning of the lovers during a yachting fete.

What gave the airer its depth and impact was the penetrating view of Southhampton-Newport-Palm Beach set. Framework was the unfolding of the story by Pastene, as an actor doing freelance buttling at the coming-out and fancy-dress parties. The comment by Pastene and by Arthur Treacher, as a veteran butler who knows the foibles and limitations of his employers, put the events into a clear social perspective.

Both Pastene and Treacher turned in excellent performances, as did Jenny Egan as the daughter and Lyons as the musician. Dorothy Elder and Ben Lackland offered properly stylized portraits of the social-climbing parents. Fred Coe, doubling as producer-director, wrapped up one of the best offerings this series has presented. Treacher was charmingly witty in an after-curtain chat with announcer Jay Jackson. British star said he considers TV work merely "dusty dress rehearsals," because "I always feel I could have done better." He also remarked that he hadn't seen the Olivier-Leigh production of "Caesar and Cleopatra" (he had been in an earlier production of the Shaw play), "because the performer in my part might be doing a better job." He quipped that he had outgrown the youthful days "when I went to see better actors."

Maria Gambarelli lit up the "Kate Smith Hour" on NBC-TV Thursday afternoon (3) with her sparkling ballet technique. In the "A" spot (Miss Smith's classification), Miss Gambarelli worked through a pair of sprightly numbers that showed off her dance styling to best advantage. She opened with a charming item called "Belle of the Ball," in which she relayed an aura of simplicity and beauty. For a pace change, Miss Gambarelli segued into a lilting interpretive dance called "Banjo." Here she blended fancy classical footwork with a high stepping cakewalk for sock results. The shapely Gambarelli gams enhanced viewing appeal. Only flaw, in an otherwise standout turn, was the between-dance in which she had to make a minor costume change in camera view. Production setup should have allowed her some time off screen to make the change and catch her breath.

Rest of the hour was rounded out nicely with a discussion between Ted Collins and California Congressman Samuel W. Yorty; an aria from "Carmen" sung by Vera Bryner and David Poleri; and a musical session by the Dell Statten Trio. The Collins-Yorty gabfest offered some good inside stuff on party shenanigans in Washington. Yorty, a Democrat, cited several cases of Republican trickery that was enlightening as well as entertaining.

Miss Smith knit the show together with her relaxed intro gab and gave the flock of sponsors okay service.

CBS-TV's "Schlitz Playhouse of Stars," preeming in a new half-hour version last Friday night (4), indicated that it will run into the same scripting problems that have plagued a number of half-hour dramatic shows. With no basic peg on which to hang each week's yarn, such as is done on the murder mellers, private eye shows, etc., this one's going to have to rely either on adaptations of one-act plays or good, concise originals. And while "Experiment," an original penned by Joel Hammill, managed to hold interest in Friday night's broadcast, the string of events became slightly confusing at times because of the lack of more time to anchor the yarn.

("Schlitz" decided about a month ago to cut back from its original hour form to a half-hour, for economy reasons. There's

The TV Forum Shows

One of the more interesting and enlightening commentaries on present-day TV is the mental stimulation provided by the forum shows. The fact that these represent non-show biz facets of TV programming and the fact that each week finds their audiences growing is a healthy reflection of the intellectual curiosity of the nation's video viewers.

The "no holds barred" content and impact of "Author Meets the Critics," particularly since the program's switchover to DuMont's (as reflected in the recent Tex McCrary-George Sokolsky-Sen. Robert A. Taft set-to and the upcoming John Crosby vs. Theodore Kirkpatrick appraisal of Merle Miller's answer to "Red Channels"), have given that program a new zest and sense of importance as a sounding board in the overall realm of public affairs and enlightenment.

Similarly, George Denny's "Town Meeting of the Air" and "Meet the Press" offer further evidence of the exciting and provocative nature of these Page 1-slanted forum shows circuiting the video channels, particularly in a Presidential election year when so many vital issues are at stake.

Last Sunday's "Town Meeting" on ABC-TV was another exemplification of a spirited gathering of the minds, with the pitting of Doris Fleeson and Sen. Charles W. Tobey (ex-Kefauver colleague on the Crime Investigating Committee) in a slugfest on the harm and/or good effects of the multiple House-Senate probings into D. C.'s administrative conduct, political leanings, etc. Like other forum programs of recent vintage, it carried the desired wallop.

TV has brought the forum shows a long way—and they're responding in kind.

FOUR-SQUARE COURT
With Bertha Schwartz, Nathan Feder, Dr. Henry Drewry, Chris J. DeProspo; Carl Bixby, emcee
Producers: David Lown, Albert T. Knudsen
Director: Seymour Robbie
30 Mins.; Sun., 7:30 p.m.
Sustaining
ABC-TV, from New York

This stanza points up the fact that in spite of the large number of panel shows on the air the format has appeal when significant subjects are discussed interestingly. "Four-Square Court," which has been on for four telecasts, has a quartet of experts discuss various aspects of crime, crime prevention, penology and rehabilitation. An unusual aspect is inclusion of ex-convicts on the board, adding the experience of those who have broken the law and have a first-hand view of the way justice works (and doesn't work).

On the edition caught Sunday (6) the topic was mental retardation in children and juvenile delinquency. Panelites were N. Y. City Councilwoman Bertha Schwartz; Board of Education child guidance specialist Dr. Henry Drewry; Nathan Feder, father of a handicapped child and an officer of the National Assn. for Retarded Children; and "Mr. Lingo," a former prison inmate who wrote a dictionary of underworld jargon and who was masked to conceal his identity. Also masked was one witness, "Jack," a mentally backward young man who at 16 got into trouble with the police but who was put on probation after the Board of Education interceded. Second witness was Chris J. DeProspo, of the school system's mentally retarded children's division, who told how the understanding shown Jack had led to his successful readjustment with a good job and a happy marriage.

Discussion centered around the question of whether mental retardation (having an intelligence quotient under 75; the "average" is 100) leads to criminality. Councilwoman Schwartz and Mr. Lingo pursued the line that those with lower IQs were more susceptible to suggestion and thus might be pushed into lawbreaking. Others on the stanza stressed that the mentally weak were generally friendly and not vicious, and that with understanding and special training they could be guided to healthy adjustment to life despite their handicaps. Basically there was agreement that discovering "dull" children early and giving them special attention is necessary—and society's responsibility.

Broadcast was informative, but some of the questions could have been sharpened. Some unfamiliar words, such as "recidivist" and "permissive," with scientific connotations, should have been avoided. Carl Bixby, soap opera scripter, showed understanding of the problems but was overly formal and roundabout in his moderating chores. However, he was only pinchhitting for Norman Brokenshire, regular emcee. Bril.

GIVE AND TAKE
With John Reed King, Bill Cullen, guests
Producer: Jack Carney
Director: Frank Satenstein
Writers: Cullen, Jack Roche, Mark Humboldt
30 Mins.; Thurs., 3:30 p.m.
CANNON MILLS
CBS-TV, from New York
(Young & Rubicam)

"Give and Take" follows the general pattern established by radio and video giveaway shows and should have no trouble winning viewers who go in for this sort of entertainment. It has all the ingredients—an ebullient emcee, cooperative guests, lots of noise coming from both participants and studio aud, bountiful prizes and simple queries.

John Reed King hosts the quizzing shindig with an assist from Bill Cullen. King essays the role of big, loud-voiced buffoon and puts it on strong enough to help the contestants go through their paces with a minimum of reserve. The uninhibited gaiety which he projects seems to infect the guests (mostly femmes) who giggle and cavort in front of the cameras without embarrassment. It gives veiwers an uncomfortable feeling of superiority.

Questions aren't too taxing and the rewards for a right answer or even a wrong guess are generous enough to make the participant's stint before the camera worthwhile. King manages to keep the stanza in high gear via low comedy and boisterous tomfoolery. Commercials are pitched in a lighthearted manner for okay effect. Gros.

POLICE STORY
With James Gregory, Al Ramsen, Joe Helgesen, Leni Stengel, Sara Floyd, Maurice Schrog, Truman Smith; Norman Rose, narrator
Producer: Jerome Robinson
Director: David Rich
Writer: Jack Bentkover
30 Mins.; Fri., 10 p.m.
PEARSON PHARMACAL
CBS-TV, from N. Y.
(Harry B. Cohen)

CBS-TV, in "Police Story," has come up with one of the more intelligent and interesting entries in the long string of cops-'n'-robbers shows currently spread out over the video program logs. Packaged by Prockter Syndications, Intl. (PSI), the initialer last Friday night (4) evidenced that the show will be as well-produced as indie packager Bernard J. Prockter's "Big Story," except that this one is based on police files rather than on the crime-solving jobs turned in by working newspapermen.

Friday night's preem, dealing with a murder case in Nashville, Tenn., indicated the producers have wisely chosen to steer clear of the gunfights, on-screen killings and gore which have aroused the ire of so many viewers. Instead, the show was a factual display of how a bright detective sergeant and his assistant plodded along in their day-to-day routine with the available clues until they finally cracked the case. Story naturally was embellished beyond the original police record on which it was based, but the Jack Bentkover script stuck to the facts. Result was not only an entertaining half-hour but one that was interesting and informative as well.

Cast worked well under the skillful direction of David Rich. James Gregory, as the police sergeant, was not only competent but evoked the human qualities of such an officer. Al Ramsen was slightly flamboyant as the youthful killer, but Leni Stengel turned in a neat job as his mother. Joe Helgesen underplayed his role deftly as the young patrolman and Sara Floyd, Maurice Shrog and Truman Smith were good in lesser roles. Productionwise, the show was standout in all departments, from the opening film clips through the sets, music backing, etc.

Series is sponsored by Pearson Pharmacal, which picked this one up in place of its former "Hollywood Opening Night" vidpix series on CBS-TV. Plugs for Ennds, the new deodorant, were a little off base in that fractured-romance-due-to-b.o. routine. Stal.

RAIN OR SHINE
With Jim McKay
Director: Frank Moriarty
5 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 7:25 p.m.
Sustaining
WCBS-TV, N.Y.

Formerly a Baltimore sportscaster, Jim McKay came to CBS in New York last year and the net has attempted to build him into a TV personality. He's currently conducting a five-minute sports stanza at 11:10 p.m. across-the-board as well as the five-minute Monday-thru-Friday "Rain or Shine" weather airer.

Five minutes really doesn't offer anyone much opportunity to display personality especially when dishing out such vital statistics as the temperature and atmospheric conditions prevailing in a half-dozen or so eastern cities. However, McKay managed to inject an informal, chatty touch at least to Monday's (7) show.

After the camera faded from a rotating weathervane, its lens moved to McKay who pitched the breeze about golf over the past weekend and his forecast which called for inclement skies during that period. Although touching briefly on conditions out-of-town, he wisely concentrates on what the score is locally, for after all that's what the viewer is most interested in. Gilb.

HUMOR WITH CHARLES J. STEVENSON
5 Mins.; Tues.-and-Thurs., 9 a.m.
ALLEN'S APPLIANCES
WRGB, Schenectady

Charles J. Stevenson, veteran small-town publisher, featured for six years on "The Chanticleer" sunrise program via WGY, carries over his radio characterization into a new television capsuler. Shirt-sleeved, suspendered and bespectacled, Stevenson rocks a chair in a living room, as he reads humorous stories from a newspaper, tells jokes and cracks puns. It is a different, and homey, approach for local television, but the material registers as rather mild.

Twangy and nasal, Stevenson possesses a personality and manner that hold a particular appeal for rural and small-town folks. Stevenson also handles the advertising, illustrated live or filmed. Jaco.

TELEVISION NEWSPAPER
With Barry Gray
Producer: Buddy Allen
Director: Barry Shear
Writer: Gray
15 Mins.; Mon.-Fri., 11 p.m.
SEALY MATTRESS; MICHAELS BROS.
WABD, New York
(Getschal & Richard)

Barry Gray, WMCA's post-midnight gabber, has added an 11 p.m. cross-the-board newscast for WABD, Gotham key of the DuMont web. Gray makes a competent news spieler, although he'll need to grow into the reportorial format.

Airer kicks off with the late headlines and after a pitch for the sponsors Gray covers the top items. In keeping with the TV newspaper approach, sectional sub-heads such as "The Front Page," "Sports Page" are superimposed as Gray moves into the various departments. Preem on Monday (7) had only a few still photos as visual aids and more of these, plus charts, maps and other pictorial devices should be utilized. This would also give Gray a chance to read his script without the cameras trained on him.

As a newscaster Gray presents a pleasant personality. However, his delivery lacks sufficient variation in rhythm and intonation, a flaw he can overcome by ad libbing from notes rather than straight reading. He shows to much better advantage in the latter half of the stanza, when he uses two good features, a "letter to the editor" and an "editorial page." Letter on the initialer was from a father whose year-old child died and who had a strong gripe against the group medical plan because the docs didn't respond quickly. Editorial was a call for a sober approach to air safety, with Gray arguing against "hysterical" appeals for airports near big cities to be shuttered.

Commercials for Sealy mattress and Michaels Bros. stores were deftly handled. Bril.

CROSSFIRE
With Elmer Davis, Martin Agronsky, Bert Andrews, Henry J. Taylor, Gunnar Back; Sen. Richard B. Russell, guest
Producer: John Madigan
Director: Milton Komtio.
30 Mins.; Wed., 9:30 p.m.
CO-OP
ABC-TV, from Washington

ABC has brought in some of its big guns in a new simulcast that latches on to public affairs and the Presidential sweepstakes in an orthodox panel session. Regular question-firers are Elmer Davis, Martin Agronsky and Bert Andrews, latter also chief of the N.Y. Herald Tribune, D. C. bureau, with Henry J. Taylor as guest interrogator and Gunnar Back moderating. First name up for dissection was Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia, long since an avowed candidate for tapping by the Demos.

After quickie mood-setting questions by the group, the initialer took a curious turn by cutting in a spot plug (on N. Y. end) by Shasta Cream Shampoo that seemed to come from the outfield, and provided a sudden irritant before the block was on its feet. It recovered lost ground when the quartet shot leading questions at Sen. Russell, such as opinion of his chances for the nomination (good), whether he would accept second place on the ticket (no), whether HST's support would be an asset or liability (the former), and name value vis-a-vis nomination (Sen. Russell thought his chairmanship of the MacArthur hearings last year gave him marquee strength).

The most insistent pitcher was Taylor. Responding to questions on current Government corruption, Sen. Russell cited the Teapot Dome scandal in the '20s as not preventing the election of Republican Calvin Coolidge in 1924. Taylor rode hard on this, stating that some of those involved had committed suicide and others had been caught up with later through legal means. About midway, the Senator was caused to expound on states rights (violently for), compulsory FEPC (violently against) and other hot topics. His comment, albeit comprehensive, was too long in this area of questioning, particularly on the alleged invasion of Federal power. He stated that the FEPC is an emotional and political issue.

In being permitted a "parting shot," Sen. Russell got opportunity to express his chagrin at not being quizzed on his views of foreign policy, defense, inflation, steel crisis and other issues. Apparently, however, the quiz quartet preferred to take the more merchandisable Presidential line. Toward the finish, an inane jingle on Naval Aviation Cadet recruiting was good for selling blades or beer.

Next up, today (Wed.), is Sen. James H. Duff (Rep., Pa.), for the Eisenhower camp. Trau.

YOUR PRIZE STORY
With Patricia Remick, Richard Coogan, Julie Bennett, Scott Forbes, Rene Paul; Ted Brown, Anne Russell, announcers
Writer: Margaret Sangster
30 Mins.; Wed., 10 p.m.
HAZEL BISHOP
NBC-TV, from New York
(Raymond Spector)

Theory behind this stanza indicates shrewd advertising strategy, but the potentialities weren't realized on the preem Wednesday (2). Since the appeal of the product pitched, Hazel Bishop lipstick, is to femmes, the airer is wisely slanted to the distaff audience via tales of the true confession type. Viewers are asked to submit their own stories, for adaptation by Margaret Sangster, with yarns selected collecting a $1,000 prize. Contest angle should give the agency an idea of dialer preferences, a yardstick of the audience reached and also hypo tune-in from would-be winners.

Initial entry didn't show Miss Sangster, a veteran soaper scripter, to good advantage. Opus dealt with a femme incensed by her hubby's dancing with his secretary at an office party. There was an overlong argument in which the frau accused the spouse of neglect, philandering, not buying her clothes and finally dared him to slap her. Then there was the inevitable break, followed by her flirtation with an old flame (the husband's best friend), the husband's jealousy and eventual crawling back to ask forgiveness after canning the stenog. Characterization was on a superficial pulp level.

Within the framework of this cliche triangular plot the production was okay and thesping adequate, with Patricia Remick as the missus, Richard Coogan as the husband, Scott Forbes as the other man, Julie Bennett as the office siren and Rene Paul as a maitre d'. Commercials by Anne Russell and Ted Brown were effective demonstrations of the lipstick's no-smear quality. Bril.

MARGUERITE HIGGINS
Director: Walter Laidlaw
Producer: Sandy Spillman
15 Mins.; Sun., 8 p.m.
KPIX, San Francisco

Advance billing and listener anticipation of this news melange and commentary may have handicapped femme spieler who was jittery in her handling of text. Marguerite Higgins ranged major news events and devoted hefty attention to Gen. Eisenhower, called from a personal interview with the NATO chief in Paris, but shaky delivery reduced impress of facts and interpretation involved. This hurdle may be cleared on acquiring of further ease in the video medium as content indicates she knows whereof she speaks.

Her appearance is favorable, though the voice impact is of the femme bracket which may pose a problem of weight of material being understated by pulchritude. It's easier to look in this sense than listen.

Technique includes use of films as a step-off to chatter with personality concerned in brief flash. These included Pres. Truman and Eisenhower as a duo in Washington, and General Ridgeway in Korea. A telegram from General Van Fleet also paced a portion of the commentary.

As added appeal there is a play for inquiries from listeners. Setting is effective with Miss Higgins seated at a desk with notes at hand for reference.

A quarter-grain of phenolbarbitol would have helped the opener. Ted.

CAPSULE CLASSROOM
With Peter Miller
10 Mins.; Mon., 9:35 a.m.
WRGB, Schenectady

An arresting title has been chosen for a new program by Peter Miller, of the Schenectady public school system. It will briefly cover events and subjects of general interest, including those for which the video audience shows preference. Premiere telecast dealt with the first battle in history between ironclads—the Monitor and the Merrimac, during the Civil War. Miller gave it a current twist via a lead-comment that a large part of the money paid in our income taxes goes for national defense, including the Navy. He skillfully added two local angles; the plating for John Ericsson's Monitor was fabricated in Troy and the ship's revolving turret was made in Schenectady.

Miller employed a semi-classroom technique, with a blackboard (for sketching) and two books (showing pictures). He demonstrated a flexibility and a personality that should eventually fit him neatly into the video pattern. Jaco.

PRESIDENTIAL TIMBER
With Sen. Estes Kefauver; Robert Trout, moderator
Producer: David Zellmer
Director: Don Hewitt
30 Mins., Fri., 10:30 p.m.
Sustaining
CBS-TV, from New York

CBS-TV, in a commendable gesture, has opened up the Friday night 10:30 to 11 period for a weekly "Presidential Timber" series (with time and program cuffoed to the candidates), designed to permit each of the declared candidates for Presidential nominations in both major political parties an opportunity to present his case to the electorate.

How widespread an audience it will get is something else again, for the slotting of the program in so-called "station time" throws the onus on the affiliates on whether they wish to pick up the public service network series or preempt local sponsorship programming. A lot of stations resent the fact that the webs are showcasing such politico-public affairs programming in fringe period "station time," letting the affliates "hold the bag" on preemptions, and it would be regrettable if "Presidential Timber" were given a brushoff.

Not that the series would provide the viewing electorate with sensational revelations or even contribute immeasurably toward clarifying the issues involved. From that standpoint, last Friday night's (4) premiere was pretty much of a dud, with Sen. Estes Kefauver (who won the teeoff spot on a drawing of straws), saying little or nothing that will be remembered. But "Presidential Timber" has a virtue of its own which in a TV era, can play a major role in winning friends and influencing voters. That is in the personal equation, the ability of video to practically bring the candidate into the living room and vest him with a warmth, and revealing traits and characteristics heretofore denied the average American voter.

"Presidential Timber" has a sufficiently flexible format to permit the individual candidates to choose their own TV techniques and devices in making their presentations. As such, Kefauver's wasn't the happiest choice, simulating a bunting-decored rallying hall in miniature form which was rather pallid. The small audience's applause suggested, rather, county sheriff electioneering.

A more intimate TV framework to accent the "homey" qualities that Kefauver himself exemplifies certainly would have served him in better stead. Appearing with him were his wife and 81-year-old father, who were both an asset insofar as keynoting the Kefauver Americana background and ideals. It's to the crime-busting senator's advantage that he has a clear and warm diction, with none of the stigma of the politician's vocabulary.

Robert Trout is the moderator of the series and his ability to coordinate and highlight the important facets in a professional and unobtrusive manner is a definite plus factor. Rose.

THE FOUR QUESTIONS
With Rabbi Philip S. Bernstein, others
Director: Lee Polk
30 Mins., Mon. (7), 9:30 p.m.
DuMont, from New York

DuMont came up with a worthy if not altogether professional stanza in its religious programming schedule Monday (7). Program, produced in cooperation with the American Jewish Committee, helped kick off the Jewish Passover season which begins officially tonight (Wed.).

Session was a capsulized version of the Passover feast ("seder") beginning with "the four questions" concerning the Passover customs and winding with the saga of the Jews' flight from Egypt relayed in story and song. Although the program gave viewers good inside info as to what goes on and why at a "seder" affair, the slipshod production minimized overall effect. Script was loosely written and the "seder" participants seemed uncomfortable and ill at ease throughout the half-hour. Camera moved awkwardly through the various long shots and closeups and, at times, a videohand would destroy the illusion by letting an arm or foot fall into camera range.

Rabbi Philip S. Bernstein, president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, conducted the "seder" with authority and sincerity. He and the others on the show blended the Hebrew text with enough English patter to make the program understandable to all. The traditional Passover music was sung with zest and was the stanza's highlight. Gros.

Merle Miller

once supported. Due to the large volume of data collected, Miller's report was turned over to Doubleday for publication rather than being released immediately by the ACLU.

Muir Case Analyzed

Miller documents the existence of a blacklist. In an analysis of the case of Jean Muir, dropped from NBC-TV's "Aldrich Family," he cites a release from the sponsor which read:

"Such reaction (unfavorable criticism from viewers) injures both acceptance of our products and our public relations. General Foods advertising, therefore, avoids the use of material and personalities which in its judgment are controversial."

Reciting how Miss Muir answered the "Red Channels" charges and recalled her participation in anti-Red activities, Miller quotes an interview between the actress and the General Foods topper. According to Miss Muir, when she asked Clarence Francis, "Suppose I get cleared, would you give me a job?", the chairman of the executive board of General Foods replied: "Don't ask me a question like that."

However, "Judges" points out, after the furor over Miss Muir subsided, General Foods announced a policy change, saying it henceforth would not drop performers merely because they were "controversial" and that all complaints regarding their loyalty would have to be backed up by "proof."

Personal Consequences

Many "Red Channels" listees have suffered in personal ways as well as economically, the tome says. For instance, late in the summer of 1951 a large life insurance company tried to cancel the lease of a famous theatrical man and wife, both of whom are "Channels" listees. Couple was preparing to move into a building owned by the insurance corporation when an executive of the firm called the couple's lawyer to see if the two would agree not to occupy the apartment. When the lawyer asked why, the insurance official said, "Well, they're in that 'Red Channels,' and we don't want any trouble."

Miller cites a revealing statement from an actors' and writers' agent. (Latter's identity is not given, and the book deems it as a significant point that many blacklistees were afraid to permit use of their names lest there be further reprisals. "Judges" names only a handful of those mentioned in "Channels.") The agent said, "You see this list? There are 17 names, some of the biggest names in the business. Why, I don't even bother suggesting them any more. I know better. I've had too many turndowns. They're in 'Red Channels.'

"The other day I got a call from this producer, and he says he wants somebody for the lead in one of his shows. He asks me 'Who've you got like . . . (the name of a prominent Hollywood star named in the booklet)? I say, 'What do you mean, who've I got like . . .? I've got the boy himself. Why don't you use him?' And this producer says, 'We just can't do it, I'm sorry, but we just can't, and you know why we can't'."

Also given is the experience of a comic who suddenly was told his part had been deleted from a TV show and who was paid the full $500 fee, anyway. The comedian told Miller, "I just casually dropped into the producer's office and, just casually, I asked the secretary, 'Why was I cancelled?'

"She said, 'I don't know.'

said: 'Well, I do. It's Red Chan-

said: Well, I do. It's Red Channels. isn't it?'

"The secretary got white, and she said, 'My God, how did you find out?'

"After that, I didn't need to wait around and see the producer."

'Too Young or Too Old'

After the publicity which the Muir case received, Miller says, a frequent device of those rejecting "Channels" listees is to find some "excuse." The refrain, according to one performer, is "You're either too young or too old," but in either case you don't get work.

The plan to launch American Business Consultants, which published Counterattack, emerged from a meeting early in 1946 between the three former FBI agents, Miller reports, plus Isaac Don Levine, veteran anti-Communist writer and editor; Christopher Emmett, another anti-Communist writer; and, "most important, Alfred Kohlberg, the importer who has been one of Chiang Kai-shek's most active backers in the United States and was one of the principal supporters of the charges made against the State Department by Senator Joseph McCarthy, the Wisconsin Republican."

'Time Factor Ignored'

Miller criticizes "Channels" for failing to take into consideration the time factor and changes in public attitudes to Russia and Communism. He declares, "In 'Red Channels' the man who in 1939 signed an 'Open Letter for Closer Cooperation with the Soviet Union' or a petition condemning Nazi atrocities is listed side by side with the one who in 1949 signed a petition protesting the 'prosecution of Communist Party leaders' — not that the latter is necessarily a Communist or even a Communist sympathizer."

Noting that there are many "verifiable examples of clear-cut anti-Communist activity" by some of those denounced in Counterattack and listed in "Channels," Miller writes that in the latter, "of the 151 persons named, only two are credited with such activity," Alfred Drake and John Garfield.

Full cooperation was given Miller by the editors of "Channels," the author reports. He describes several "inconsistencies" between the "Channels"-Counterattack policies as given in the publications and in interviews with him and others. He finds "inconsistency" in the "Channels" attitude to "clearance." For instance "on the Tex and Jinx NBC radio program," Miller says, "Counterattack topper Theodore Kirkpatrick was asked by Tex McCrary, 'is there any other way in which people listed in 'Red Channels' can be cleared through Counterattack?' Kirkpatrick replied, 'Yes, positively so'."

On the other hand, Miller notes, Kirkpatrick had written in a letter to the New York Herald Tribune, "I should like to make it very clear that no one, including myself, has a right to 'absolve' or 'condone' anyone of Communist leanings. . . . I have never said that I have that right. . . ." A Tribune editorial had stated that Kirkpatrick had been "quoted as announcing that none whom he suspects will be absolved until they come to him with positive proof of their innocence."

"Judges" also goes into brief case histories of: Paul Draper, whose performance on CBS-TV's "Toast of the Town" was deleted from the kinescope recording; the barring of Rev. Clayton Russell from KOWL, Santa Monica; nixing by WPIX, N. Y., of a series of Charles Chaplin pix made in 1916-7; the resignation of William Sweets after six years as director of "Gangbusters" and "Counterspy"; disappearance from the airlanes of the tune, "Old Man Atom," written five years before the Stockholm peace petition with which some protesting listeners linked it; the attacks on the Weavers, folk-singing quartet; the attacks on the appearance of Lena Horne on "Toast of the Town"; the "loyalty oath" instituted by KFI, L. A., and KRNO, San Bernadino; and the CBS loyalty questionnaire.

Also discussed is the clearance plan adopted by AFRA, the broadcasters and agencies. Miller quotes the union's exec secretary, A. Frank Reel, as saying, "It is perhaps too early to tell, but in my opinion it [the clearance plan] has been a failure."

Sherwood Foreword

In his foreword Robert E. Sherwood quotes Fortune mag: "It makes all the difference whether our business world merely pays lip service to the Bill of Rights and to such words as 'freedom' and 'non-discrimination,' or actually lives by the principles inherent in them." Sherwood also tells of Elmer Rice's experiences on ABC-TV's "Celanese Theatre," when some of the playwright's casting suggestions were turned down because they were in "Channels." However, Sherwood adds, Rice has since reached an amicable agreement with Celanese, which "deserves honor for creating a precedent by repudiating blacklisting."

Miller also discusses rumors of a Communist or leftwing blacklist against rightwingers. He cites allegations that Lois Wilson, Maria Montez and Franklin Pulaski have been discriminated against because of their anti-Red sentiments. Latter, for example, said he was discharged by the United Nations radio division because "I'm fighting the Commies tooth and nail." However, Miller writes, Pulaski had only "suspicions." In the weeks which were concerned with this "Red blacklist" phase of the probe, Miller asserts, "not a single instance of such proof was uncovered. . . . Of course, if there is a Communist blacklist, it, like the Party itself, operates in secret."

WDGY Sale Tag Reflects Healthy State of Radio

Minneapolis, April 8.

Official announcement that the purchase price of WDGY here was $425,000 makes evident anew that, regardless of television, radio stations need not be a drug on the market, local trade circles point out. The sale netted a $100,000 profit for James Stuart, he having paid $325,000 for WDGY in 1946.

Fact that WDGY has an application for a TV permit pending undoubtedly influenced the Twin Cities group that bought it. However, the Twin Cities now have two TV stations and during the present defense emergency period it's unlikely that more permits will be granted here in the near future, at least until after the many non-TV station areas are accommodated and essential materials become less scarce, trade leaders point out.

These trade leaders believe that what made the buyers more anxious to acquire WDGY is the further fact that in this territory AM is more than holding its own in the face of TV and because, during the past year particularly, WDGY has made tremendous strides in this highly competitive radio and TV market. As a result of the past months' WDGY gains, the new owners come into a property with a large backlock of profitable advertising contracts and great potential earning power even without TV, it's pointed out.

Of course, the entire area, blanketed by the 11 commercial and one non-commercial Twin Cities' radio stations, along with numerous others in various towns, presently possesses only two TV stations, both located in Minneapolis and St. Paul. That may help to account for radio's continued local prosperity, some think.

In all this connection, the small likelihood of more TV station permits for the Twin Cities in the near future is thought to have been the main reason why CBS decided to merge its exceedingly profitable radio station WCCO with WTCN-TV, with the latter's owners getting the majority control in something like a 52-48% proportion. WCCO is without TV and was eager to have direct television representation along with its radio in this important market and to get a better break for its TV network shows. While WCTN operations have been highly successful they're believed to have trailed those of WCCO substantially. Now, as soon as FCC approves the merger, it will be both CBS radio and TV for the combined WCCO and WTCN-TV. On its radio end, WTCN has been an ABC affiliate, but it has been using CBS and some DuMont network shows for TV.

WWL Marks 30th Anni

New Orleans, April 8.

WWL, owned and operated by Loyola University of the South, marked 30th anniversary yesterday (Mon.). Station, a 50,000-watter, marked occasion with little fanfare on airwaves. However, it drew salutes from CBS and Arthur Godfrey, Art Linkletter, Robert Q. Lewis and others.

WWL grew from 10-watter in 1922 to 50,000 watts, clear channel, during period. Station is managed by Howard Summerville, with Larry Baird as commercial manager, and Ed Hoerner, program director.

Inside Stuff—Television

Stop-motion films using puppets and lensed in two studios in Munich, Germany, are being peddled by WOV, N. Y., multilingual radio outlet. The indie has been screening samples of the studios' work to prospective clients, and is offering them to American bankrollers and agencies at prices considered highly favorable when compared with animation costs in the U.S. The Bavarian studios have a capacity of 130 vidpic commercials a year, although this can be expanded if new capital is invested. Plan envisages the German outfits working from layouts, sketches and script provided by the American ad agencies, submitting photos of the completed puppets before lensing starts, and WOV footing the bill to fly an agency supervisor to Germany to approve work in progress. These steps would guarantee that the product would have the American flavor and specific action sponsors desire. Price would include music soundtracks provided by top German orchs.

Jackie Gleason's last-minute decision not to appear on CBS-TV's "Suspense" last night (Tues.) caught several metropolitan N.Y. newspapers with their captions down. N.Y. Times' Sunday (6) amusement section, for example, had a picture of Gleason in the role. When it was learned late Thursday that he wouldn't be on the show, the Times had no time to kill the picture but rewrote the caption to the effect that Gleason is starred in DuMont's Friday night "Cavalcade of Stars."

Comic, who was to have made his TV dramatic bow on "Suspense," explained that he was to have had script approval. He said he didn't see the final script until last Thursday and decided at that time that it wasn't right for him. Chester Morris took over as replacement.

In view of the current downbeat reports on the state of television's sponsorship picture, many of which have been exaggerated, the trade considers an ultra-smart piece of promotion the lengthy statement issued by CBS-TV sales veepee Fred M. Thrower over the weekend. In an attempt to lay to rest the ill-founded rumors, Thrower pointed out that CBS-TV's number of sponsored nighttime quarter-hours is the same this year as last, while the web has almost doubled its daytime business over last year.

Story was carried at length by most of the N. Y. daily newspapers in their financial sections and was also moved on the AP and UP wires over the weekend, for national newspaper coverage.

What was probably a new speed record for filming, developing and airing newscast film was clocked Thursday (3) when WPTZ's news unit in Philadelphia, lensed the new U. S. Attorney General James P. McGranery, between 7 and 7:20 p.m. and had the films on the NBC "Camel News Caravan" between 7:45 and 8 p.m.

President Truman announced Judge McGranery's appointment shortly before 4:30 p.m. He was not available for an interview and didn't return to his home in the Warwick Hotel, Philadelphia, until 7. News editor George Skinner interviewed the new attorney general on film until 7:20, at which time cameraman Carl Voelker raced back to the studios to develop and process the film. It was ready for use on the 7:45 network newsreel, a clean beat over the rest of the industry on the story.

"Blacklist" fact-finding committees of six unions in radio and tele had a joint meeting in New York on Monday (7) and voted to ask the guilds represented to okay establishment of a liaison group for the exchange of information on the question. Liaison body would consist of the chairman of the fact-finding group of each union plus one other member from each union.

Unions participating were American Federation of Radio Artists, Television Authority, Radio Writers Guild, Radio-Television Directors Guild, Actors Equity Assn. and Authors League of America. Chairman was George Heller, TVA executive secretary.

RCA will stage a closed-circuit demonstration of its all-electronic compatible color television system next week. Radio Corp., which has been quiet on the colorcasting front for some weeks, staged a demonstration of the big-screen color on Monday (7) at former RKO Colonial Theatre, N. Y. RCA execs attending said that there have been several improvements in the system.

Demonstration next week will be a show produced by Ernest Walling, color programming supervisor, with lyrics and a script outline by Norman Zeno and Bill Dernan. Latter, incidentally, have been added as writers on NBC-TV's James Melton stanza.

Reps from seven tele outlets which will present local "Inside Our Schools" series, in conjunction with Life mag, met in Gotham last week to view the "IOS" programs aired on WNBT, N. Y., and to confab on details of the project. They were briefed by Ted Cott, veepee-general manager of WNBC-WNBT, and Andrew Heiskell, publisher of Life.

Skeds for the various stations include: WEWS-TV, Cleveland, from April 11 to end of school year; WDTV, Pittsburgh, daily program, April 27-May 3; WJBK-TV, Detroit, April 28 to end of school year, with daily program week of April 28; WFBM-TV, Indianapolis, April 28-May 9, with remotes from a different school every day; and WCPO-TV, Cincinnati, May 5-11, with six remotes (each two hours long). Plans are still to be wrapped up for KNBH, L.A.; WPTZ-TV, Philly; WSPD-TV, Toledo; WTOP-TV, Washington, and WLW-D, Dayton.

Kate Smith used the preceding week's VARIETY as a prop on her past Wednesday night show, because last week's headline about "end radio-TV confusion" (NARTB convention story) might not have been generally understood by the at-homers. Frank Warner, as a vet stage doorman, foiling for Benny Fields in an effective nostalgic routine, topped by "Old Soft Shoe," utilized the paper as the prop.

"Tales of Tomorrow," George F. Foley, Jr., package on ABC-TV, is launching a talent search for "unknown" actresses. Hunt is restricted to 20-25-year-old thespers who have never had a speaking part longer than five lines on TV.

Winning gal will get the lead on "TOT" May 9 and four others will get roles in other productions. Judges will be Thomas Mitchell, Jessyca Landau, eastern talent head for Universal-International; and Charles Underhill, ABC-TV program chief.

Prelim auditions are being held at the Sherman Square Hotel from 7-10 p.m. Monday-Friday, through April 23. Foley said he hoped the project would "dramatize to others in the industry that there is a logical way of giving young talent a chance."

Scheff Exits WPTR

Albany, April 8.

Walter Scheff, who sang with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians and appeared in "Brigadoon" on Broadway, resigned effective Saturday (5) as operations manager of WPTR.

Brought to Albany three years ago as featured artist in the Rose Lounge of the Ten Eyck Hotel, Scheff had been heard on evening programs over the 50,000-watt station.

Det. Mattress Co.'s 30G Sponsorship of TV Pix

Detroit, April 8.

Sealy Mattress Co. of Detroit is spending more than $30,000 for once-a-week feature films over WXYZ-TV in a 26-week period. Sales pitch is directed at "friendly Sealy dealers" rather than the "Sealy Mattress Co."

Program cost is entirely assumed by the mattress firm.

NLRB Lumps Small Station Program Employees, Gabbers on Bargaining

Washington, April 8.

Over the strong dissent of one of its members, the National Labor Relations Board today ruled that programming employees should be lumped with announcers in setting up collective bargaining units at two small radio stations in the Norfolk, Va., area. Action was taken in two decisions ordering elections at WNOR in Norfolk and WGH in Newport News to determine whether announcers, continuity and traffic employees desire to be affiliated with the American Federation of Radio Artists. AFRA sought units limited to announcers while the stations wanted the units to include all employees engaged in any aspects of programming operations.

In its decision in the WGH case, the Board majority held that "in view of the small size of the radio station involved, the apparent multiplicity of duties performed by each of the employees and, on the whole, the integrated nature of the employer's broadcasting operations . . . the record establishes clearly, in our opinion, a strong community of interest between the announcing and programming employees which should not be disregarded in determining the appropriate unit for collective bargaining purposes."

However, the Board rejected the stations' contentions that the units should include receptionists, commercial employees and program supervisors.

In his dissent to the WGH case, which also applied to WNOR, Board member Paul L. Styles said that he could see "no warrant" for rejecting the AFRA position simply because "there is a fair amount of integration" in operations at small stations as in most small businesses.

In all stations, small or large, Styles asserted, "the functions performed by the announcers are particularly integrated with those of the other program department employees. But all of this does not . . . destroy the fact that the announcers perform a kind of work, requiring a kind of talent, experience, and background which is distinguishable from that of the other program employees, and which gives rise to interests in the terms and conditions of employment which are sufficiently different from those of other employees to warrant separate representation for collective bargaining."

Winchell Layoff Gives Carter-Pearson Option On Sun. at 9 Till Oct. 1.

Carter Products and Drew Pearson have the option to remain in Walter Winchell's 9 p. m. Sunday slot on ABC until Oct. 1.

Should Winchell, who has suspended his high-rated broadcasting activities because of illness and to await full recovery, return before Oct. 1 and Carter decide to keep Pearson in the 9 p. m. slot, ABC will have to find a new time for WW during the interim. Winchell may resume his daily column on Monday (14), although definite decision has not been reached.

Due to Winchell's desire for an extended vacation, Warner-Hudnut, which has been backing the stanza, is giving up the period. In the program reshuffle, with Carter's Pearson show moving from 6 p. m. to 9, George Sokolsky's 10:30 p.m. co-op newscast is being pushed up to the 6 p. m. opening. Web hasn't decided yet what it will do with the 10:30 hole, but the new show will not be a newscast.

Decision for Winchell's layoff was made by mutual agreement between the gabber, ABC and Hudnut. It's understood that Winchell's longterm contract with the network is temporarily suspended until the N. Y. Daily Mirror syndicated columnist can resume his broadcasts.

WW first discontinued his gabbing-column chores late in January, on medicos' orders, and the show was taken over by entertainer Stars. On March 9 he returned to the air, but had a relapse the following Sunday and the stanza was taken over in subsequent weeks by Erwin Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, Taylor Grant handled the spot last Sunday (6).

ABC's Sex & Corn

ABC is building a show with sex appeal for the hausfrau. Tagged "Valentino," it will feature Barry Valentino, a baritone who will also give out with romantic pitches "personalized" to the individual listener. It will be beamed in an afternoon half-hour strip.

Web is also scheduling a novelty hillbilly show, "Lone Pine Mountaineers." Program exec Ray Diaz feels that country-style musical airers have been limited to the south. For this series he's going north, picking up authentic mountain music from a Maine troupe on WABI, the chain's Bangor affiliate. Show will be heard Saturdays at 4:30-5 p.m., starting April 19.

Faye's Pepsi Fade; May Give Up Time

Pepsi-Cola future plans for television, in line with the outfit's decision last week to drop its Faye Emerson show on CBS-TV, were still unresolved as of yesterday (Tues.). Pepsi cancelled Miss Emerson's "Wonderful Town, U.S.A." on the basis that the show, competing against the top rating Sid Caesar-Imogene Coca display on NBC-TV, cannot achieve a sufficient audience to pay off.

Outfit is committed for the Saturday night at 9 slot through June 28, but is reportedly trying to work a deal with CBS either to close down in advance or else move to another time period. If no such arrangements can be worked out, it's expected that Pepsi will fill the half-hour with film until it goes off the air in June. CBS, for its part, is pitching up either "Quiz Kids" or "I've Got a Secret," a new Goodson-Todman package, to Pepsi.

Pepsi officials emphasized that they were well pleased with Miss Emerson's work, citing the fact that their earnings have doubled during the last year and that at least a part of the profit record is attributed to the show. They pointed out, in addition, that Miss Emerson's junkets to Pepsi dealer meetings around the country represent solid public relations. But, they said, the show's under-16 rating, compared with the 47s and 48s being racked up by Caesar-Coca, makes the investment too costly.

Cancellation of the show gives CBS a chance to step up its plans for a super-extravaganza, which it has been mulling as the only way to cut into the NBC Saturday night video audience. With Ken Murray holding his own against NBC's "All Star Revue" in the Saturday night 8 to 9 period, the web reportedly feels that a top-budgeted show in the 9 to 10 period might be able to turn the trick. "Songs for Sale" now goes from 9:30 to 11, but, it's still sustaining, CBS could trim it as it desires.

FRIGIDAIRE EXPANDS WITH 'SHOW OF SHOWS'

Frigidaire this week expanded its television bankrolling by inking with NBC-TV for the 10-minute segment of "Your Show of Shows" being given up by Libby, McNeill & Libby. With Libby committed for the remainder of this season, Frigidaire will move in on the show's summer replacement in June, which automatically guarantees its franchise on "Show of Shows" for next fall.

Speed with which NBC-TV wrapped up the deal was cited by web execs this week as further proof that there are plenty of sponsors available for a good program which delivers a good rating. Frigidaire currently sponsors "Pulitzer Prize Playhouse," aired alternate Wednesdays on ABC-TV, and is expected to continue with that.

Peck to Pilot Hearst Station in Milwaukee

Milwaukee, April 8.

Harry D. Peck has resigned as veepee and manager of WDGY, Minneapolis, to take over May 1 as station manager of WISN, the Hearst-owned CBS affiliate here. Peck will report to Gaston W. Grignon, WISN v.p. and general manager.

A veteran of 20 years in radio, Peck has been president of the Nebraska Broadcasters Assn. and a director of the Minnesota broadcasters group.

Major Campaign May Force Vote On Comm'l BBC

London, April 8.

With a considerable amount of kite flying, a new high level political campaign favoring sponsored radio and TV is being touched off in Britain. Concentration of political and business forces are being lined up in an endeavor to force a vote through the House of Commons when the British Broadcasting Corp's charter is due for renewal this summer.

In the year that has elapsed since the publication of the report of the Beveridge inquiry into the future of the BBC, reaction in favor of commercial broadcasting has undergone a subtle change. By a majority decision, the Beveridge committee rejected all forms of sponsorship, but a minority report was signed by Selwyn Lloyd, MP, who was then a back bench Conservative member.

Now, with the Conservative party back in power, Selwyn Lloyd has been elevated from the back benches to a Government post and now holds the important office of Minister of State. Around him, on the Conservative benches, particularly, is a group of influential MPs who have made known their preference for a break in the BBC's monopoly of broadcasting and TV, and who favor a direct competitive outlet which would be available to advertisers and other commercial interests.

CARSON VICE ABBOTT ON 'ROYAL SHOWCASE'

Jack Carson has been tapped as new emcee of NBC-TV's "Royal Showcase," sponsored Sunday nights at 7 by U. S. Rubber. He takes over this week (13), replacing George Abbott, who held down the spot during the show's first 13-week cycle.

With Carson co-starring with Paul Hartman in the legit revival of "Of Thee I Sing," which opened in New Haven Monday night (7), he'll be confined to an ultra-tight rehearsal schedule on "Showcase," being available only on Sunday afternoons. Comic is under contract to NBC but, with the legiter and "Showcase," he'll bow off the web's Saturday night "All Star Revue," on which he's been spotted this season.

'People's Choice' to Get ABC-TV on-Air Audition

Jack Barry-Dan Enright Productions will have a one-shot audition of their package, "The People's Choice," on ABC-TV tomorrow (Thurs.) at 9 p.m. Show features amateur talent impresarioed by members of Congress.

On the tryout Senators Charles Tobey, Olin Johnston and Harry B. Cain will intro talent from their constituencies. This is the second Barry-Enright project to get an on-the-air audition by ABC-TV in past few weeks, the first being "Stars and Starters."

WMRY's Rate Hike

New Orleans, April 8.

WMRY has announced a 15% to 25% rate increase both local and national, the first increase since May, 1950, when the station went into all-Negro programming.

Since that time, the station has increased its overall audience and feels the rate hike justified.

Radio, TV Hit in $45,000,000 Lopoff on U.S. Propaganda Budget

Washington, April 8.

Radio and TV programs will both be curtailed under the $45,000,000 bite which the House of Representatives took out of the budget for the State Department's overseas propaganda program. The House Appropriations Committee recommended $131,566,000 for the next fiscal year. However, the full House, in an economy mood, threw out the $20,500,000 recommended by the committee for new radio transmitter construction and also reduced the operating budget by $24,500,000.

There was no indication of where the $24,500,000 cut should be made in the program. Presumably State Department would have to spread it around in the various branches of "Voice of America" so that radio and pictures would both suffer.

Springboard for the reductions was the public disgust of the House with the way the program has been operating. Many members of Congress feel the State Department has been blundering and wasting money. They feel the Russians are much more effective.

Senate still has to act on the State Department budget. Normally, the Senate increases the amount approved by the House. Then the two chambers compromise the difference.

McCarthy-Less Derby

Sportscaster Clem McCarthy will be absent from the Kentucky Derby microphones this year for the first time in a number of seasons. Gillette Safety Razor, which is bankrolling both AM and TV coverage of the Derby on a nationwide basis via CBS, has tapped Fred Capossela, Mel Allen and Phil Sutterfield to handle the commentary for radio, with the TV announcing crew to be set next week.

Capossela, who will call the race itself, which is the job usually handled by McCarthy, has been official announcer at the three N. Y. tracks for the last eight years. Derby will be run May 3, with CBS scheduled to be on the air with the race for a half-hour.

Framer Strikes It Rich on Nielsens

Underlining the fact that it doesn't necessarily have to take a top-budgeted television show to win a heavy audience rating, "Strike It Rich" which costs less than $10,000 per week for five half-hours, has wound up at the top of the latest national Nielsen daytime TV ratings. Show is packaged by indie producer Walt Framer, whose "Big Payoff," which is also brought in for less than $10,000 for five half-hours, is in fourth place.

In coming up with a 17.3 to top the daytime TV parade, "Strike It" is almost two points ahead of the Kate Smith show, which is probably the most expensive pre-dinnertime program on video. And "Big Payoff," in fourth place, is ahead of such costly daytime entries as the Bill Goodwin and Bert Parks shows. According to Framer, the rating records of his two packages proves that his idea of producing audience participationers with "heart" pays off solidly.

All of the four soap operas aired cross-the-board on CBS-TV made the top 10, including "Love of Life," "Search for Tomorrow" and "First Hundred Years," and "Egg and I." Colgate, which bankrolls "Payoff" three days weekly on NBC-TV, is reportedly so impressed with the rating that it's now considering slotting the show Sunday nights this summer as replacement for its "Comedy Hour."

Top 10 lineup does not include kid shows. If they were included, "Howdy Doody" would be far out in front with a 26.3; and the Gabby Hayes show would be in second place, ahead of Kate Smith; with a 16.3. Following is the Nielsen top 10, covering the first two weeks in March rating period:

Strike It Rich (CBS)	17.3
Egg and I (CBS)	16.7
Love of Life (CBS)	16.4
Big Payoff (NBC)	16.3
Kate Smith (NBC)	15.4
Search Tomorrow (CBS)	14.7
Hawkins Falls (NBC)	13.5
Bill Goodwin (NBC)	12.3
First 100 Years (CBS)	10.2
Bert Parks (CBS)	10.1

ERNIE KOVACS EXITS PHILLY FOR WCBS-TV

Ernie Kovacs, Philadelphia comedian, whose early-morning show was bumped off Philly's WPTZ last week to make room for NBC-TV's "Today," is ankling that station to move his show to WCBS-TV, the CBS video web's N. Y. flagship. Kovacs preems on WCBS-TV April 21, taking over the 12:45 to 1:30 p.m. strip formerly occupied on the network by the Steve Allen show.

Move indicates that WCBS-TV, which has relied heavily on film shows to fill its local programming hours during recent months, is returning to live programming on a bigger scale. Station is pitching the Kovacs show to interested clients on a participation basis, at $200 per one-minute spot, its regular card rate fee.

Kovacs will import his entire show from Philly to N. Y., including vocalist Edith Adams and pianist Eddie Hatrack.

Henry Morgan Set By CBS-TV for Panel Show As Berle Competition

Henry Morgan returns to television as moderator of a new panel show, "Draw to Win," which CBS-TV will slot Tuesday nights from 8:30 to 9, starting April 22. Show, formerly titled "Draw Your Own Conclusions," will remain in that period until June, when it's expected to move over to Sunday evenings as summer replacement for Alcoa's "See It Now."

"Draw" will be back-to-back on Tuesdays with the Sam Levenson show, which moves into the 8 to 8:30 slot the same evening. Two shows are filling the hour formerly occupied by the Frank Sinatra show, which was axed after the April 1 broadcast following CBS' inability to find a bankroller. Web has filled the hour with film since Sinatra's checkoff.

New show was packaged by Win Elliott and Joel O'Brien and developed for TV by Marlo Lewis, CBS-TV's exec producer in charge of music and variety programs. Permanent panel will include cartoonists Abner Dean and Bill Holman, with the guest panel spot to be rotated among a number of name cartoonists.

CBS-TV, incidentally, is mulling the idea of giving its projected "Big Store" audience participationer a cross-the-board ride in the morning starting in May, as a showcase to interest bankrollers. Show, starring Lew Parker, was created by Irving Mansfield and also developed by Lewis.

MAGGI AND JOHNNY'S 'WALDORF' TV PACKAGE

Maggi McNellis and Johnny Johnston, who both recently left Music Corp. of America, have been teamed to head a video package by the William Morris Agency, labeled "Meet Me at the Waldorf." It is still to be sold.

Herman Hickman, the Yale football coach who has been a permanent panelist on "Celebrity Time," has also been added to the Morris talent stable for a show on his own.

Morris Office Agenting Universal TV Camera

William Morris office is agenting the Universal Focus Camera for Television, which is specifically keyed for presentation of TV commercials. Camera can spotlight the product being plugged while at the same time keeping all background subjects in universal focus.

Morris office is currently dickering with the Young & Rubicam agency to take over the camera on an exclusive basis for all Y&R clients.

BATTLE FOR THE SCHOOLS
With Dorothy Dunbar Bromley
Producer-director: Leon Glodstein
Writer: Mrs. Bromley
30 Mins.; Mon., Fri., 9:30 p.m.
Sustaining
WMCA, New York

Indie, currently airing an expose of crime and racketeering on the New York waterfront, has launched another documentary-type series. Objective of this group of five half-hour broadcasts is to probe recent local attacks on the public education system made under the guise of anti-Communism.

Editorial airer reported that in Pasadena, Cal., last year a small group of "super-Americans" succeeded in upsetting the local school board's policies of independent, progressive educations. They succeeded in ousting an official on charges that too much money was being spent, that Negro and white children were being taught together, that progressive education leads to delinquency, and that children were being taken away from their parents. Textbooks were attacked as "subversive," teachers smeared as "pro-Communists," etc. The result of these blasts, the broadcast stressed, was to weaken the schools.

WMCA's series is being conducted by Dorothy Dunbar Bromley, writer for the N. Y. Herald Tribune. On Monday (31) she interviewed Arthur Morse, author of "Who Is Trying to Ruin Our Schools?" in McCall's mag, and Richard B. Kennan, of the National Education Assn. Morse cited the background of Allan A. Zoll, whose National Council for American Education is reportedly behind many of the attacks on the schools, reporting that he was a Christian Fronter and member of the defunct American Patriots (organization listed as fascistic by the Attorney General). Dr. Kennan said educators welcomed criticism but not dishonest attacks, and cited the mushrooming of attacks on the schools all over the U. S.

Initialer was largely of an introductory nature and was overlong on straight gab by Mrs. Bromley. The interviews livened the program considerably, but more on-the-spot tape recording and a more down-to-earth approach would have sparked the show. That was evidenced in the finale, with brief excerpts from six critics and supporters of the schools in three suburban N. Y. communities—Scarsdale, Port Washington and Englewood—which have witnessed skirmishes in this "battle for the schools" in the past few months. All in all, this represents a worthwhile endeavor by the indie. The Gotham broadcasters' interest in the schools, as shown also by WNBC-WNBT's extensive series of programs is a healthy trend.

STRICTLY SPEEGLE
With Paul Speegle
Producer-Director: Speegle
30 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 6 p.m.
Participating
KNBC, San Francisco

Pitching an easy, mild and pleasant compote of chatter, this assortment of airy bon mots, incidental news bits, platter spinning and interviews, will win its listeners by reason of a liking for casual gabbing rather than impact of content. Speegle has a smooth style and a neat sense of humor which is rewarding in a minor key entertainment - wise. Whimsical twist is easy to take, if not of emphatic importance.

Range of items is a garden variety with platter interludes of pop standard. Interview caught showed a savvy insight in art of querying with local appeal highlighted for maximum listener acceptance. Subject concerned showboat sunk at pier, which headlined papers previous week.

Gabber has charm, delivery and intelligence but tempo of show has yesterdayish overtone in light of present popularity of copy which has pace and drive as well as measure of provocative content. This is acceptable if not outstanding fare which will need some added ballast and dramatizing to cut a swath.

Commercials well handled.

CBS Radio launched a new 13-week series on its "Invitation to Learning" discussioner Sunday (6), in "Man and Nature." A discussion of great books that lean to nature for subject matter or inspiration, the series (judged by the opener) has a timely subject, and should

CBS Radio Cuffos Time To Politicos for Brace Of Candidate Series

Realizing radio's public service duties, especially in an election year, CBS has programmed two half-hour series to acquaint its dialers with the 1952 Presidential aspirants. Between now and the political conventions in July, the public's interest in the credoes and platforms of the campaigners will be on a steady increase so the web has latched on to solid dialer bait with the two shows. And should build as the race for nomination goes into the final lap.

On "Candidates and Issues," aired Tuesday evening at 10 p.m. candidates are asked to voice their views on issues of national importance. Preem stanza (1) brought on Gov. Earl Warren, Sen. Estes Kefauver, Sen. Richard B. Russell, Sen. Robert S. Kerr and Harold Stassen for their answers to "Is Our Foreign Policy Working?" It was an enlightening session marred only by the absence of such other contestants as Gen. Eisenhower and Sen. Robert A. Taft. Series, however, promises to nab as many of the politicos as possible for one 30-minute session. It should get livelier as the race gets hotter.

On "Presidential Profiles," aired Thursday nights at 10:30, web allows contenders to address the public in any way they choose and on any topic relating to the campaign. Opening session (3) picked up an on-the-spot address by Sen. Taft to a Republican conclave at Springfield, Ill. Both parties and all aspirants will receive their turn at bat on this "Profile" stanza.

Both series are produced by the CBS Radio Department of News and Public Affairs, under the supervision of Edmund A. Chester. It's a commendable effort that rates plaudits from the political parties as well as the public.

BALTIMORE 1090
With Walter Linticum, David Connor, Joseph Croghan, Carl Skytte, Galen Fromme, Flo Ayres, Al Ross, B & O Glee Club, D. L. Provost, Gov. T. R. McKeldin, Walter Maloney
Director: William Rock
Writer: Katherine Tyson
30 Mins.; Sun., 10:30 p.m.
Sustaining
NBC, from WBAL, Baltimore

Half-hour airing marking 25 years of the station's association with NBC, taking a cavalcade-type of format, played well and built to a strong climax employing salutations from Gov. T. R. McKeldin and D. L. Provost, veepee and general manager of Hearst Radio and TV.

Breaking up dramatizations of the city's historical highlights and current importance as a world port, the well-timed musical interludes utilizing the B & O Glee Club as well as groups from the nearby Naval Academy in Annapolis made for a good change of pace.

Fed to the network, the program proved an effective buildup for the station and the city, as well pointing up the importance of WBAL's network affiliation. It was completely professional and smoothly played throughout. Burm.

LOUELLA PARSONS SHOW
With Verne Smith, announcer
Producer: Dick Diggs
5 Mins., Tues., 9:36 p.m.
COLGATE-PALMOLIVE-PEET
CBS, from Hollywood
(Lennen & Mitchell)

Louella Parsons was back on the air last Tuesday (1), as warmly and breathlessly as ever, to give her eager fans the lowdown and inside on what had been happening, was at the moment happening, or what was sure to happen, to a galaxy of film stars. It was surprising how many items and people were crowded into a five-minute stretch, and how sure Miss Parsons was of so many personal or intimate details.

Her first exclusive was that Walter Wanger would plead guilty to the w.k. shooting, despite an earlier reverse stand. Lana Turner, she added, was in "for a big surprise," and June Haver faces a serious operation. Miss Parsons discussed Clark Gable's alimony; the frantic film bidding for Whittaker Chambers' "Witness"; Darryl Zanuck's grandfathership (second time), and fact that June Allyson wants to do TV, despite studio policy. And Ginny Simms is not to marry the guy accused of beating up Ann Sterling.

Miss Parsons ended up with a reference to Ruth Roman's glistening hair, made so by Lustre-Creme Shampoo, which incidentally is a product of the show's sponsor. Program was breezy and interesting enough, and to Parsons fans must have been manna.

QUIZ KIDS
With Joe Kelly, Joel Kupperman, Pat Conlon, Naomi Cooks, Frankie Vander Ploeg, Gail Dytch
Producer: Larry Woolf
Director: Jim Ramsey
30 Mins.; Sat., 9:30 a.m. CST
Sustaining
CBS, from Chicago

Although presently being showcased in a rather awkward midmorning Saturday spot, this collection of mental marvels junior size, shouldn't long be without a sponsor on its new network. After more than a decade as an NBC staple, Louis G. Cowan's "Quiz Kids" are now wearing the CBS colors. Unlike the CBS video version, which is featuring a younger group of brainsters, the CBS AM edition is pretty much unchanged from the format developed over the years on NBC. But it still makes for an entertaining — if somewhat envious — half-hour for the setsiders.

Joe Kelly continues as the jovial quiz chief. Back on chapter heard (5) were "oldsters" Joel Kupperman and Pat Conlon, both in the high school category. Repping the kindergarten set was Gail Dytch, age five. Also on hand were Naomi Cooks and Frankie Vander Ploeg, sartorial star of the TV portion. Mental honors were about evenly divided, with Joel and Pat embarrassingly accurate with their mathematics and Naomi and Frankie scoring on the musical questions. Latter also displayed a knowledge of astronomy that shouldn't happen to anyone less than a college student. Little Gail was along for the ride and the laughs.

At midpoint there was a special cut-in from New York with James A. Farley coming on to plug the American Boys Clubs. Dave.

H. V.'s 30th Anni Salute

H. V. Kaltenborn, 74-year-old NBC commentator and acknowledged dean of the whole radio gabbing clan, was given a warmly human all-network salute Friday night (4), the occasion of his 30th anni in broadcasting. Although aired over NBC, such star commentators from other webs as Edward R. Murrow (CBS), Bob Trout (CBS), Mary Margaret McBride (ABC), Elmer Davis (ABC) and Bill Henry (MBS) joined in paying tribute to the man who made news analysis big business on the airlanes.

Via reminiscences of his confreres and recorded clips from his old broadcasts, Kaltenborn's role as the daddy of them all was delineated against a background of his beats and his boners. Among the latter, H. V.'s persistent wrong guessing on 1948 election night was reprised as well as President Truman's ribbing takeoff on Kaltenborn following his surprise victory.

On Kaltenborn's more imposing credit side of the ledger was his marathon chore during the Munich crisis when he made over 100 broadcasts in a week. Kaltenborn's audience impact during this period was the all-time high for the gab industry, not to be exceeded even by the broadcast reportage on the progress of World War II. It was this stint, morover, which put over the airlane commentators on a regular, solid and high-salary basis. Murrow's tribute to H. V. graciously pointed out this aspect of Kaltenborn's many-faceted career which antedates the invention of radio.

Kaltenborn closed the show with an intimate resume of his own biog as radio commentator. As he disclosed, he has been called every name in the political dictionary from Fascist to Communist and in the zoological lexicon from snake to pig. Those epithets, however, came from the crackpot fringe and bear no relationship to his monumental rep among his fellow craftsmen and his regular listeners, even though frequently disagreements with his controversial opinions.

Ben Grauer emceed the show in ingratiating style with Jack Gerber's production and direction rating a nod for avoiding the usual ceremonial air for this type of show. Herm.

Fifield Fall-Off

Hollywood, April 8.

Since he's been told he must work by a script which has been checked carefully beforehand, that ad libbing is nixed, and he can't identify himself with a church or religious group, the Rev. James Fifield, Jr.'s, TV b.o. draw has dropped to almost nothing on his KECA-TV shows.

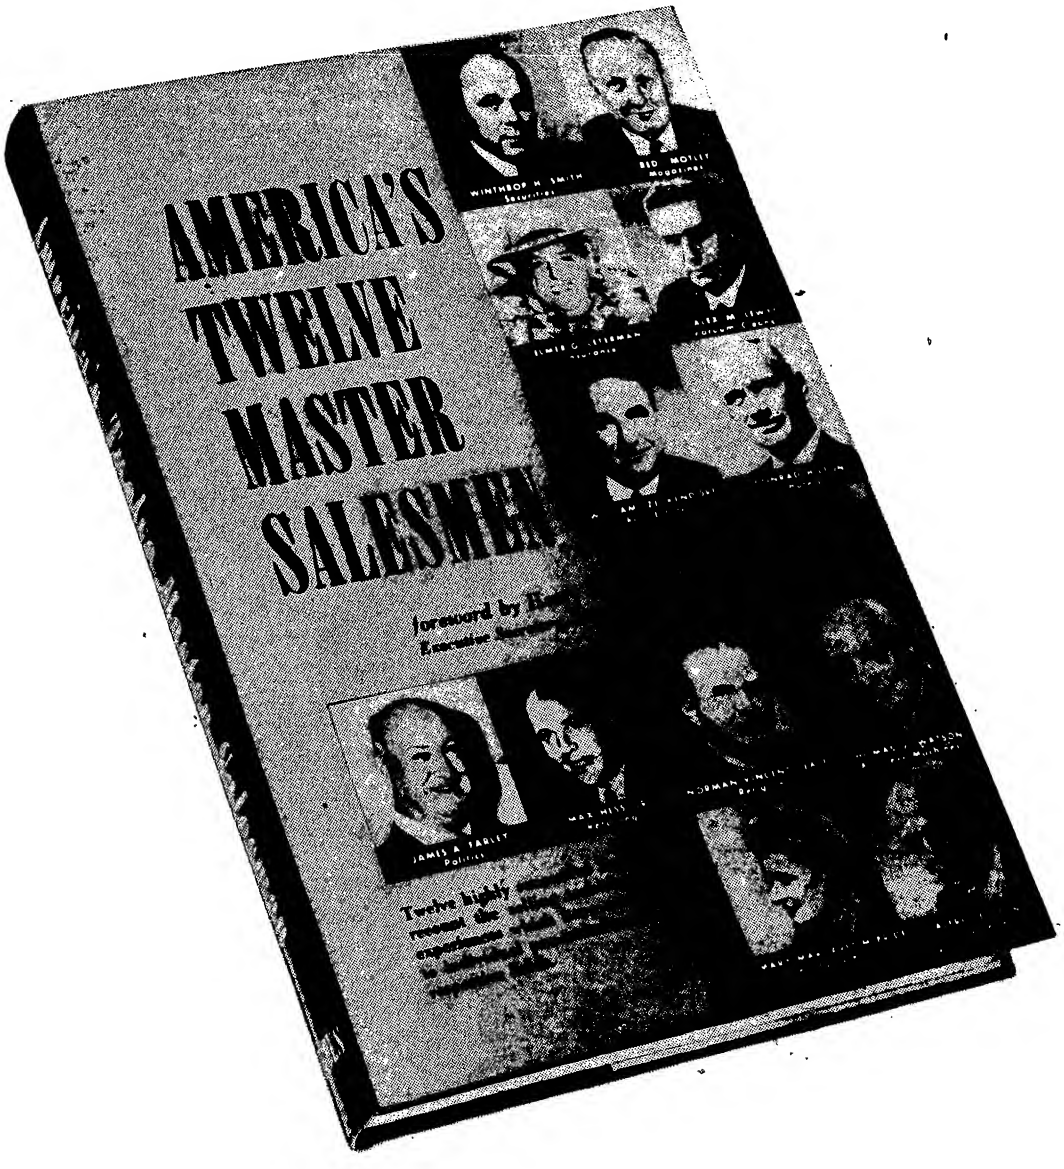
Channel put strings on the controversial minister because his "non-political" telecasts aroused considerable comment. First time Fifield was on, last Feb. 17, channel received over 350 letters. Last time around, he drew three.

U.S.-ANGLO 2-WAY TELECAST VIA FILM

London, April 8.

A filmed and recorded two-way exchange program between NBC and the British Broadcasting Corp., will be aired on the British TV network on April 30. This is the first time a program of this type has been teeveed in this country.

Program will be introduced by Romney Wheeler, NBC rep in London. It will include filmed sequences of Caledonian Market in London and recordings made in the lower East Side market in New York.



When it came to radio, there was only one choice

"Who is the top salesman in your field?" That was the question put to hundreds of executives by Forbes, distinguished publishing firm, in a recent informal poll.

The answers are now out, for everyone to read, in a fascinating new book, "America's Twelve Master Salesmen." Here, the greatest salesmen of our time — in real estate and retailing, cigarettes and securities—tell their secrets of getting results.

When it came to selling by radio. the master salesman turned out to be a woman . . . MARY MARGARET McBRIDE.

That's no surprise to Mary Margaret's millions of faithful followers . . . to her happy sponsors . . . or to ABC. First Lady of Radio, Lady Aladdin of Broadcasting, number-one miracle of modern radio—whatever she has been titled — Mary Margaret McBride is undoubtedly the greatest single selling force in radio history. She is believed and beloved as no other person in advertising.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if you could hire one of America's twelve master salesmen? It so happens, you can! Mary Margaret McBride is now available for sponsorship— local, regional or national—on all ABC Radio Stations except in the Chicago area! For details, get in touch with The ABC Cooperative Program Department.

Inside Stuff—Radio

Continuing its romancing of affiliates, NBC has come up with a plan for its exploitation unit to dispatch teams to help local outlets with the publicity-promotion problems.

Unit won't be able to guarantee that it will be available at any particular date, but where it can't send out staffers it will aim to work with the local operations to garner national press coverage, including wire service photos, trade press stories, etc.

New department, which is headed by Norman H. Pader, has just issued the first copy of an "Exploitation Bulletin," which includes news of program developments that lend themselves to local exploitation.

The New York State Radio Bureau distributed 1,667 spot announcements to 152 stations during the past year, the State Department of Commerce reported Monday (7). Covering 40 different State agencies, they represented "an estimated $1,000,000 worth of time" allotted by broadcasting stations as a public service.

One hundred fifty-nine scripts—4½ minutes in length—were distributed in the weekly radio packet. A total of 245 hours of program time was allotted by New York State radio stations to state government aircasts during the year.

Five Chi-area colleges have accepted the offer of WBIK, Balaban & Katz owned FM station operated by WBKB, to use the station for adult education programs. Institutions will each present 10 weeks of educational programs, starting next Monday (14) using WBIK's entire operating schedule from 3 to 9 p.m.

Each college will use the station one day a week for a specific course of instruction. Taking part are: U. of Illinois, Lake Forest College, Illinois Institute of Technology, Roosevelt College and Loyola.

WNBC, N. Y., has signed three new food chains to participate in its "Operation Chain Lightning," bringing the total of chains involved to 12.

"Lightning," which starts its second year May 1, has nine sponsors inked for the merchandising aids the NBC outlet gives them in the supermarkets. The participating sponsors are spending $1,500 weekly apiece.

Roger Wolfe, WDSU spieler, was elected president of local AFRA unit at meeting in St. Charles Hotel Thursday night (3). Other officers are John Kent, WWL, secretary; Irwin F. Poche, Jr., WDSU-TV, treasurer.

Board is composed of Foodrich Flowers, WTPS; Bill Elliott, WNOE; Betty Hugh, independent, and Lee Grevemberg, legal counsel. Wolfe succeeds Jimmy Steele, WNOE, as president.

ABC on Summertime Audience Participation Binge to Plug Holes

ABC program veepee Leonard Reeg is auditioning several audience participationers for insertion in the web's afternoon lineup, as part of the summer overhaul and due also to cancelling of some afternoon soapers.

Among the packages being tried out is "That's My Baby," wrapped up by Ed Wolfe. Strip would feature paired contestants, each vying for prizes for an infant in the family Johnny Olsen is handling emcee chores.

"Balance Your Budget" is a Louis G. Cowan production, with Todd Russell pencilled in as quizmaster. Prize-seekers will be competing for coin to "balance their budgets." Another participationer being mulled is Dick Lewis' "Postmark, New York." Strip would be set in a mythical department store in Gotham, with dialers choosing a friend living in the metropolitan area to represent them. If the friend answers all questions correctly, he keeps the smaller prizes when the letter-writer gets the big one. If he muffs the final query, the smaller prizes go to the letter writer.

Reeg is also considering a reprise of "Ladies Be Seated," an ABC series which formerly was on the web. Jimmy Blaine, who has been vocalizing on "Stop the Music," is being tabbed as emcee.

CHI'S STORMY WMOR INTO RECEIVERSHIP

Chicago, April 8.

WMOR, plagued by a recurring series of management upheavals since it went on the air in 1949, has gone into receivership. Station has been off the air for the past two months and the FCC has been investigating the situation.

WMOR was launched with a capitalization of $104,000 by a group of veterans with the partial backing of restaurant owner Dario Toffenetti. Last fall he and a couple other stockholders sold their interests to attorneys Nathaniel Revel and Abraham Tietelbaum, giving them controlling shares.

Attorney Arthur Morse has been appointed receiver and will seek a buyer, or failing that, will sell the equipment piecemeal.

WELI in Negotiation For WBIB Takeover

New Haven, April 8.

What is regarded locally as a step to strengthen its bid for a TV permit here is the announcement by Richard W. Davis, general manager of WELI, that his station has signed an agreement to take over WBIB, New Haven's pioneer FM station.

Move has been sanctioned by WBIB stockholders but final acceptance awaits an okay from FCC, as well as stockholders of WELI.

COAST CBS-TV TESTS 5 SUMMER SHOWS

Hollywood, April 8.

Three shows for summer testing have been put in the works by Harry Ackerman, CBS-TV program topper in Hollywood. Ready to go before the cameras within the next few weeks are an hour rodeo, "Passport to Danger" and "The Amazing Mr. Tutt."

Assigned to the rodeo in the south part of town are Jack Donahue as director and Danny Dare, producer. "Passport" will star Cesar Romero in a mystery-adventure series to be filmed by Hal Roach.

Radio and TV:

Arlene Francis Queen of TV; Godfrey King

By JACK O'BRIAN

ADORNED in our best prize-giving costume (polo shirt and slacks) we herein rattle off this department's preferences as the Best in Television for the TV fiscal year 1951-52:

QUEEN OF TV: Arlene Francis; not quite so celebrated as Godfrey, Arlene has the same sort of performing range. She is the best lady panelist extant, a polished and handsome mistress of ceremonies, an actress of major capabilities when sock or buskin beckons, a lady who can converse with rare intelligence and with without ham or hokey tricks, with glamor and grace to spare, a Queen in the best light-hearted theatrical tradition.

KING OF TV: Arthur Godfrey; nothing, including bad flying weather that keeps him aloft in his plane during telecasts, sta... this royal funster from the co... completion of his appointed... rounds. Arthur emphasizes... style superiority ever... cluding the weeks ... Navy proving th... over age, h... tion for... King...

Thank You

sorship boards, but to help the stations get the views of their consumers."

He advocated commercial sponsorship of public service programs. He asked the radio and television industries to provide funds to help schools and colleges to develop radio and television courses to better equip youth for careers in those media.

Dr. Aarnes suggested that radio and television stations sell colleges and universities time—in good segments—just like they would sell time to the regular commercial advertisers and help the schools prepare programs. "Then we will have real and effective educational programs," he added.

Need Public Relations

He said that both radio and television need to do an industry-wide public relations job" to inform people of the great job you are doing. You should tell your own story as well as you tell the story of the Red Cross or some other organizations."

Dr. Aarnes expressed the belief that "in the next few years we will find that 50% of selling on television will be done by women because they are better announcers than men—besides, they look nicer, too."

Other speakers at the banquet were Bette Doolittle, assistant to the TV director of the National Assn. of Radio and Television Broadcasters, who warned the audience to "work sincerely to make the new television code work so that we won't have censorship," and Geraldine Zorbaugh, acting general attorney and secretary ABC, who warned of the various legal pitfalls in radio and television.

A "Good Citizenship Project" was adopted at the business meeting Sunday (6).

The year-long project will be aimed at better informing the nation's women of their duties as citizens, according to Miss Henritte K. Harrison, radio-TV director for the YMCA, YWCA, ASPCA, and chairman of the special committee which formulated the project.

"The AWRT will furnish material that will enable our members to enlist active support and understanding of women in communities throughout the U. S. to better inform them regarding their citizenship responsibilities as women and how important they can be in the scheme of things," she said.

Texaco-Berle To Bypass 1 in 4

While new contracts haven't been signed yet for next season, Texaco will trim Milton Berle's "Texaco Star Theatre" to three weeks out of four on NBC-TV starting in the fall. NBC will consequently be forced to find another bankroller to come in with a new show for the fourth stanza each month. Because of the tremendous audience pull Berle has established for the Tuesday night at 8 spot, however, it's expected that the web will have little difficulty in selling the hour.

Texaco move is seen as an economy measure, in line with a number of similar cutbacks effected by other TV sponsors during the last few months in trimming their hour shows to a half-hour or switching from weekly broadcasts to an alternate week setup. Kudner agency handles the Texaco account.

Steel Strike Threat Snags 'Theatre Guild' Origination From Ohio

Youngstown, April 8.

Threat of the steel strike was seen as the reason for postponement of the broadcast of U. S. Steel Co.'s "Theatre Guild on the Air" from the Stambaugh Auditorium in Youngstown Sunday (6).

U. S. Steel executives and other personnel had been in Youngstown working on the show for several months, and the company had planned to bring nearly 100 persons, including a supporting cast and technicians, to this city for the broadcast. More than 5,000 tickets for the afternoon and evening shows already had been distributed.

Instead of coming from Youngstown, the play, "The Silver Whistle," starring Jimmy Stewart and Diana Lynn, was broadcast from its usual origination point in New York at 8:30 p.m. Sunday, over the NBC network.

Memphis—Jack Brooks, program director of WHHM, is leaving because of illness. Bob Jones, news director, takes over program duties.

Women B'casters Name Doris Corwith as Prexy

Detroit, April 8.

Doris Corwith, supervisor of talks and religious broadcasts for NBC, was elected president of American Women in Radio and Television at the group's second annual convention. She succeeds Edythe J. Meserand, of WOR, New York, the organization's first president.

Other officers named are Dorothy Fuller, of WBET, Brockton, Mass., veepee of the Eastern area; Alice Freiberg, of WCYB, Bristol, Va., veepee of the Southern area; Elizabeth Marshall, of WBEZ, Chicago, veepee of the Central area; Molly Morse, of KGB, San Diego, Calif., veepee of the Western area, and Jane Dalton, director of women's programs for WSPA, Spartanburg, S. C., secretary-treasurer.

KMTV, U of Omaha TV College Course

Omaha, April 9.

KMTV and the Univ. of Omaha have made a deal for a series of six-week college courses to be offered on TV. Announcement was made last Saturday (5) by President Milo Bail of the municipal university and Owen Saddler, general manager of KMTV. First of the series is skedded to begin about April 26 and will be conducted by Dr. Wilfred Payne, professor of philosophy and chairman of the university's humanities department.

The television classroom will be aired in a choice morning quarter-hour time segment, Monday through Friday. First agreement will be for a 52-week hookup. Saddler says this pioneering movement in the mid-west is an experiment in teaching and in furthering of TV.

University now preparing an enrollment plan whereby any KMTV viewer may receive credits for viewing the TV classroom and passing special examinations. Other credits plans are pending.

allocations, but provision for UHF rather than VHF channels for education in some major cities.

2. Preemption for education of the remaining unassigned VHF channels in Chicago, Boston, San Antonio, Birmingham and Dallas.

3. Reservation of VHF channels for education in the one-station markets of Pittsburgh, New Orleans, Memphis, Milwaukee, Houston, Tulsa, Nashville, Miami, St. Louis, Seattle, Albuquerque and Oklahoma City.

4. Provision for UHF educational stations in New York, Philly, L. A., Washington, Baltimore, Detroit, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Cincy, Columbus, Buffalo, Rochester, Norfolk, and many others.

5. Provision for four VHF and three UHF commercial stations and one VHF educational outlet in Denver, largest of the non-tele cities.

6. Provision for three VHF and two UHF commercial stations and one educational VHF channel for Portland, Ore., second largest non-tele city.

7. Handling of applications on a channel-by-channel basis and granting of permits without hearing where channel bids are uncontested, regardless of total number of applications from a community.

8. Resumption of processing of applications for new stations in 10 to 12 weeks following the thaw.

9. Shifting of channels by most of the 31 stations listed in the proposed allocations.

The plan represents a distinct victory for Commissioner Frieda B. Hennock, who aroused educational forces to organize in support of her demands for a set-aside of channels, VHF as well as UHF, for non-commercial outlets. The Commission's decision to reserve VHF channels in some 50 cities, despite protests by commercial applicants in some areas, reflected the FCC's dissatisfaction with the character of TV programming and its hope that educators will pave the way to higher standards.

nists," Ralph de Toledano (co-author of "Seeds of Treason") and Ben Gitlow (ex-Communist leader now a confirmed anti-Red), from the demised "Cholly Knickerbocker" (Igor Cassini) stanza on WJZ, N. Y. The other broadcasters were accused of "refusing to permit performances by persons allegedly pro-Communist."

Complaint was prepared by James Lawrence Fly, former FCC chairman now member of ACLU board; John F. Finerty, ACLU board member, and Herbert Monte Levy, ACLU counsel. It was based on Merle Miller's "The Judges and the Judged" (see separate story).

ACLU complaint argued that blacklisting is "against the public interest" because it denies the public "the right to see or hear artists or their works because of irrelevant considerations." It stressed that the complaint was not filed on behalf of any individuals mentioned and that the latter were not involved in preparing the action.

Ask 'No Blacklist' Pledge

FCC was asked to deny license renewals to the defendants unless they pledge not to "discriminate upon the basis of alleged or real associations and beliefs, whether past, present or future" or to permit such discrimination by any advertiser or packager.

WPIX was charged with cancelling a series of 35-year-old Charlie Chaplin films. KOWL was accused of barring Rev. Clayton Russell. NBC was listed for allegedly cancelling the Weavers quartet from a Dave Garroway telecast and permitting Jean Muir to be dropped from "Aldrich Family" by General Foods. CBS was accused of cutting a dance by Paul Draper from a kine of "Toast of the Town" and DuMont was said to have nixed pianist Hazel Scott's show after her listing by "Red Channels."

ACLU letter raised three legal issues: (1) whether blacklisting is against the public interest; (2) whether licensees have "improperly delegated programming power" and then "improperly acquiesced in or endorsed blacklisting"; and (3) whether conditional renewal of licenses is appropriate. On the latter point it cited the FCC case against the G. A. Richards stations.

At a press conference yesterday, question was asked whether the ACLU complaint wasn't "weak" because it didn't include affidavits or other detailed evidence. Attorney Levy answered that complaints don't contain evidence and that the "proof could be furnished if a hearing is held and the ACLU gets power of subpoena."

Pat Frank's 'Night' As Davis' 'Studio 1' Teeoff; Slates Future Stanzas

In one of the first instances of a novel being adapted for television within a few weeks after its publication, Pat Frank's "Hold Back the Night" will be staged on CBS-TV's "Studio One" April 14. Date also marks the first "Studio" show to be produced by Donald Davis, who's replacing Worthington L. Miner, with the latter moving over to NBC-TV under a new long-term pact.

Davis, who had been exec producer in charge of all CBS dramatic shows, disclosed this week that he's coming onto "Studio" cold, with no backlog of scripts to work from. On the theory that he'll have fewer worries if he can be at least four scripts ahead, he'll set a Paul Gallico story, "Lilly, the Queen of the Movies" for the April 21st show, and "Montana Incident," a mine disaster story adapted from a factual account of an actual disaster, for the following week. After that will be Charlton Heston starring in "Captain-General of the Armies."

Davis will retain intact the CBS-TV production unit built by Miner for "Studio," including Paul Nickell and Franklin Schaffner as rotating directors.

Columbus—Mack J. Gilbert, Cambridge University grad, and Jack Hansen, formerly with the American Theatre Wing in New York City, have joined the directing staff of WTVN here.

Dewey Signs N.Y. TV Educ'l Bill

Albany, April 8.

Gov. Dewey signed Saturday (5) an Assembly Rules Committee bill establishing a temporary 15-member state commission to make a "comprehensive" study of the use of television for educational and cultural purposes and to survey the feasibility of a proposed statewide TV educational network of 11 stations. The measure, strongly advocated by the State Education Department, is a followup to the Board of Regents' proposal for a non-commercial web costing $4,400,000 and covering about 92% of the State's 14,000,000 population. The Regents would supervise the chain and coordinate programs.

The study commission, which will work on a $25,000 appropriation and report its findings to the Legislature next February, is to comprise Senate and Assembly leaders, a Regent, a member of the State University board of trustees, the State Budget Director, State Commerce Department Commissioner, and seven persons appointed by the Governor.

Public and private hearings, within and without the state, are authorized by terms of the new law.

Summer Break-In For Goodson-Todman 'Secret'

The Mark Goodson-Bill Todman package team, which has made a specialty of panel shows, has come up with another entry in association with CBS-TV for a potential break-in on the web this summer. Titled "I've Got a Secret," the half-hour series will be pitched to bankrollers as a prospective summer replacement for about $9,500.

Format will have a moderator, not yet selected, and four panelists who will be divided into two two-man teams to compete against each other. Guest from the studio audience will whisper a "secret" into the ears of the moderator and the home viewers will also be let in on the secret, via a superimposition or some other means. Panelists must then ask questions, which can be answered by only a "yes" or "no," and the first team to crack the secret wins a prize.

Whiz Biz When 560 Hits WFIL-adelphia!

The "hard sell" boys know they have to talk loud to be heard in Philly's hotly competitive market. These wise birds are telling each other that WFIL's voice penetrates all the vast 14-County Philadelphia Retail Trading Area and reaches far beyond.

Two-thirds of the radio-equipped homes seem to have their dials stuck on WFIL, says BMB. WFIL, with 5,000 watts, yanks in more regular tuners than 50,000 watts in most of this $6 billion market area, BMB reveals.

Trouble is, say the market-wise, too many people think of Philly radio only in terms of the city. They forget that half the sales, half the profits show up in 147 towns outside city limits, but still comfortably within Philly's trade area—WFIL-adelphia.

Engineers, both sales and electronic, agree that WFIL—5,000 watts at 560—is worth 20 times the power at double the frequency in America's third market.

make a very interesting, informal and educational program.

Opener was a wise choice, in Thoreau's "Walden." With such literate but down-to-earth participants as Dr. Lyman Bryson, as chairman, and Joseph Wood Krutch and Edwin Way Teale, as guests, the book was used as jumping-off point for pertinent comments on present-day civilization, leisure, reading, education and philosophy.

Talk was always cloaked in plain language, never complex or erudite. Bryson made a hep, literate moderator, feeding questions well and guiding the discussion securely. Krutch, drama critic and Columbia prof, and Teale, author of "North With the Spring," had things to say and a way of saying them.

Guests discussed Thoreau's philosophy on nature, on civilization, on simplified living, on the encumbrances of a complex modern society, and branched off from there. Krutch thought Thoreau had had quite an argument, that there came a point of diminishing returns, when one paid too high a price for what we call conveniences. Teale thought that as civilization got more complex, nature got away from a man, and that it was necessary for us to get back to primary sources.

There was more of this, in intriguing fashion. A serious but deftly-handled subject, ideally suited for a late Sabbath morn.

Radio Followup

"Theatre Guild of the Air," U. S. Steel's hour-long NBC dramatic show, came up with only a mildly amusing program Sunday night (6). Evening's bill was an adaptation of Robert McEnroe's "The Silver Whistle," a 1949 Broadway presentation of the Guild.

Although film stars James Stewart and Diana Lynn attempted to inject some snap and dash into the comedy, it nevertheless emerged as a quiet excursion into a home for the aged devoid of real belly laughs. Supporting cast, which included Parker Fennelly and Eric Sinclair, among others, helped give the piece an authentic atmosphere.

Play of this nature, it would seem, depends more upon visual values than the voice alone. A quizzical expression, a leer, or a countenance of one of the aged, changed from a reflection of resignation to a feeling of joy, can only partially by transferred to the dialer by the spoken word.

Stewart did his customary good job in handling the role of a 40-year-old tramp who became an inmate of a welfare home under false pretenses. But even his excellent interpretation of the author's lines failed to get more than a chuckle out of the varied situations. Likewise, Miss Lynn tried hard in the romantic spot with only varying success.

Moreover, several announcements by gabber George Hicks that U. S. Steel prez Benjamin Fairless would make an address on the threatened steel strike immediately following program tended, to some extent, to make "The Silver Whistle" merely a stage wait for the Fairless talk.

New Orleans—Rick Adams, radio vet, Wednesday (2) assumed duties as new general manager of WJMR. He is now in throes of reorganization. Adams came here from Chicago. New staff additions include Dick Barron, announcer, from Don Lee network, and Harry Gage, Juilliard Music School grad, as disk jock.

Bill Protects Missouri Broadcasters on Libel

Kansas City, April 8.

The approaching political campaigns heighten the importance of a bill passed by the Missouri House April 2 to protect radio and television broadcasting companies from possibly libelous material of campaign talks.

Since the broadcasting companies do toot have the right, under regulations of the FCC, censor political material, and since they are required to give equal time to each party, relief from the threat of libel was sought and sparked by radio interests here. The bill was passed last Wednesday in a matter of minutes without debate.

The bill then went to the governor, and is expected to receive his signature in routine fashion.

Cleveland—Russ Carlyle started a half-hour show on WXEL, Monday-through-Friday, with show featuring his band, songstress Gloria Gale and Mike Caranda. Sidney Nadler has been named film director at WXEL . . . Danny Landau has been sold for a five-minute "Sports Scene," 11:05 p.m. sportscast on WNBK, for American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corp. with Axelband, Brown & Gardner handling the TV account.

MPLS. RADIO UPBEAT AS SPONSORS RETURN

Minneapolis, April 8.

While TV points a problem for radio here as elsewhere, station KSTP, which has television as well as AM-FM, reports that a number of important advertisers are "returning" to radio and several new big ones just have been lined up.

The fact that there are two TV station outlets in the Twin Cities hasn't prevented Sears Roebuck from just buying heavy AM saturation and from Hills Bros. Coffee from upping the number of its radio spots from five to 20, for example, according to Joe Cook, KSTP promotion and sales manager. Hills, he says, returned to radio last year.

Utah Baseball Coin

Salt Lake City, April 8.

For the fourth consecutive year Utah Oil Refining Co. and Utah Power and Light Co. have picked up the tab for broadcast of Pioneer League baseball games over Intermountain Network's KALL in Salt Lake, and KLO in Ogden. Deal was inked by Lynn L. Meyer, web sales veepee and Gillham Agency, with the nut running to about $46,000.

TV's Cost-Per-Thousand

And, as always, it is the buyer who ultimately sets the price."

Davis crystal-balled that the time-and-talent nick for a weekly nighttime half-hour in tele might soar to $5,000,000 a year. "But," he added, "we are not going to pay that price unless we get our money back, and a good profit besides." Only leaders in the mass-consumption field may be able to afford such a price tag, and others will use low-cost tele or other media with less coverage and less impact, he forecast.

Prices Will Come Down

However, if even the "big boys" cannot afford TV, Davis opined, they won't buy—and the price will come down. Nets will put the screws on the high-priced packages, and their tags will come down.

"But I'm sure this will not happen," Davis said. "Even if none of us are today certain whether TV is two, three, four or more times as potent as any other medium, and thus worth far greater cost, all of us before long will have conclusive proof from our own experience. Then we will be sure what is the right rent to pay for advertising greater shows. It's up to us to determine what is the right rent, because TV is the only medium where you can show them and tell them at the same time."

In other talks, Arno H. Johnson, J. Walter Thompson, v.p., said that advertising and selling are needed to build markets that can absorb increased production; McCann-Erickson, v.p. J. N. Reagan touted the advantages of Hollywood vidpix production over live TV; Benton & Bowles, v.p. C. A. Pooler urged merger of Standard Audit & Measurement Service with Nielsen Coverage Service; and L. O. Brown, Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample v.p., said radio is being "short-changed" by research services that fail to cover out-of-home and secondary set listening.

Peoria—John Leslie, presently assistant manager and program director of WDGY, Minneapolis, moves to WMDB, Peoria, as program director April 16, according to Charles Caley, g.m. of WMBD. Leslie joined WDGY five years ago, and previous to that was news director of WOW, Omaha.

TV Savings in New Plastic Props, Sets

New development in plastic manufacture, which is expected to save considerable money for television networks and their sponsors, was unveiled this week by NBC-TV, which has video rights, and Studio Alliance, set-building outfit which designed it. Web has already started to build sets, props and other items from the new plastic.

Besides being extremely light in weight, which in itself will cut down on trucking and handling charges, the plastic is also virtually indestructible. As a result, according to NBC staging services chief Ben Webster, props built with it can be used over and over. If a prop does get broken or marred, it can be repaired at a fraction of the cost of repairing those made of wood, papier mache and other compounds used previously.

Number of other advantages to be found in the new material, known as reinforced plastic, were cited by Wade. It's waterproof, fireproof and warp-proof and can also be repainted repeatedly in different colors. Props molded from the new plastic showed up in much greater detail on a TV monitor than similar ones made of wood. In addition, the plastic can also be flexible for use in costuming.

Material can be made translucent, with color impregnated as desired, or it can be made transparent for the building of "crystal" chandeliers, etc. As an indication of its uses, NBC has cast some antique vases in the plastic. To rent the original museum pieces would be exorbitant but the replicas look as well on the viewing screen and can also be stored for repeated usage.

CBS' 'Listen While You Work' Promotion Drive As Soap Opera Come-On

On the assumption that radio now needs round-the-calendar promotion, CBS this week launched a fullscale campaign to plug its daytime soap operas, pegged to the housewife-slanted theme of "Listen While You Work." In preparation is a campaign to boost summer listening, titled "Summertime—When the Listening Is Easy," which is slated to break next month.

Web's program promotion chief, Charles Oppenheim, pointed out that the networks usually saved up their ballyhoo for one big splash at the end of the summer to plug the new fall season. Now, however, it's realized that radio must be plugged 12 months a year. As a result, the CBS soaper campaign will run through the end of May, giving way to the summer listening pitch which will carry through August. At that time, the web will launch its usual fall campaign.

CBS has sent out to its affiliates a hefty promotion kit on the soap opera theme, including ad mats, photos, newspaper stories and suggested radio spots. Web finances the ad-publicity aids, but will not share in the cost of affiliates' advertising. Web will also promote the campaign via on-the-air plugs on sustaining shows, plus a series of recorded star spots on each of the 14 soapers now on the CBS daytime schedule.

so many words it's generally assumed that few, if any, new stations will get on the air this year. Fact that most of the applications will require city-by-city hearings and with the agency under-staffed with only seven examiners will cause the processing to move at a snail's pace, Walker said.

TV 'Confessions'

Television pretty much took over the final day of the convention, what with Walker's speech, and the preceeding morning "Confession Session" which featured 10 video veterans recounting the hazards and benefits of the sight-plus-sound medium. Such matters as amount of space needed, labor dealings, rate structures, programming schedules and equipment necessary for the embryonic station were given a full airing in one of the most productive "brass tacks" panels of the entire conclave.

That the arrival of video into a market has an effect on radio was candidly admitted by a couple of AM-TV operators. Walter Damm, general manager of WTMJ and WTMJ-TV, pointed out his tele plant grossed $2,196,000 last year as Milwaukee's sole station but AM biz is off this year. Local revenue is holding up but national spot is down 16%, while network coin is about 22% lower. Harry Bannister, who is departing his general manager post at WWJ and WWJ-TV, Detroit, next week to join NBC, pointed out that WWJ's revenue is down 20% in a three-station tele market.

Windup panel featured a debate between attorneys James M. Landis and Louis Waldman on the matter of whether congressional hearings and judicial proceedings should be televised. It was Landis' position that they should be, to give governmental and judicial processes the widest possible dissemination to inform the public. Waldman, as chairman of the New York State Bar Assn.'s civil rights committee, argued that the use of radio and TV in such hearings is a dangerous infringement of personal rights.

fore a vote of the House membership. He said he was hopeful, however, that the resolution will be approved soon. The House leadership, he said, is behind it.

Gathings said he has been studying the question of immorality of TV programs for two years. He is particularly concerned with films on crime which are shown on TV and their effect on children. Even though such programs have a "crime does not pay" theme, he said, they portray scenes of lawbreaking, shooting, thievery, etc., which have a bad influence.

Gathings said he has discussed this subject with FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover and that the latter has indicated agreement with his views.

The Gathings resolution provides for a committee composed of equal representation from the Judiciary, Interstate Commerce, and Post Office Committees (three from each) and three from the general membership of the House. The Committee would look into radio and TV programs containing "immoral or otherwise offensive matter, or place improper emphasis on crime, violence or corruption." It would also be required to determine adequacy of existing laws in eliminating such broadcasts and promoting higher standards for programs.

The Committee would be authorized to hold hearings this summer and make recommendations to the present Congress.

Felton's 'Ladies Day'

Happy Felton, who emcees two baseball shows on WOR-TV, N. Y., will produce "Ladies Day," a quarter-hour stanza which will follow his post-game "Talk to the Stars" airer. Indie hopes to get show on the air when the Brooklyn Dodgers' season starts.

Talent hasn't been selected yet, but WOR is considering Bud Palmer and Fred Robbins for the stint which will feature interviews with women athletes and femme viewers.

Emily Kimbrough As Margaret Arlen's Sub

Emily Kimbrough has been pacted as two-week replacement for Margaret Arlen on the latter's cross-the-board radio show via WCBS, flagship station of the CBS web in N. Y., starting Monday (14). Miss Arlen is heading for England and Scotland to tape interviews with British government dignitaries for playing on the show when she returns.

Sam Slate, WCBS program chief, accompanies her on the junket. During her sojourn abroad, Miss Arlen will do a two-way hookup from London with Harry Marble in N. Y. Jean Porter is to sub for Miss Arlen on her cross-the-board show via WCBS-TV.

Tele Followups

been some talk that the series may shift to film before the end of the season, but that hasn't been definitely decided yet. Sylvia Sidney starred in "Experiment," indicating the series can still follow its "star system" even in a half-hour version.)

Hammill's story dealt with a femme medico, who had come up with a serum to cure a new disease afflicting American soldiers in Korea. She worked a deal for a convict to volunteer as a human guinea pig to determine whether the serum was safe for humans but, when the prisoner turned out to resemble her own son, who had been killed in Korea, she couldn't go through with it and so took the serum injection herself. Naturally, it worked and she completely recovered.

Miss Sidney turned in a competent performance as the medico, with her tight-lipped method of acting a natural for the role. Alan Marshall was good as her colleague and Terry Becker came through with a fine thesping job as the convict. Larry Fletcher was equally good as the prison warden. Producer-director William H. Brown, Jr., carried the show off nicely, except for the contrived flashback technique which tended to be confusing. Glenn Osser's score backed the action neatly. Durward Kirby again handled the Schlitz commercials, which have been cut to one main blurb at the half-way point in the new half-hour version.

San Antonio—Pat Boyett is scheduled to join the staff of KEYL-TV here as chief announcer. He was formerly with KONO and KTSA and newscaster and announcer.

Talent Agencies Knocking Themselves Out Scouting 'Eccentric' Songsters

With an eye on the high-riding newcomers who've stepped into the bigtime via disclicks, talent agencies are double-alerting their staffers to be on the lookout for vocalists with unusual and eccentric styles. In an interoffice memo sent around one of the agencies recently, the record department head pointed out that "straight" singers are losing ground on all show biz fronts to the "voice with an odd sound."

Although record company artist and repertory toppers have managed, in the past, to create "sound" via waxing gimmickry, there is now little chance for a "straight" singer to nab a record pact. The memo pointed out that the a.&r. toppers don't want to gamble on anyone who doesn't fall into the "new sound" groove.

Agencies point out that it's just anther cycle in the recording field. Last year every agency and record man was looking for "a Mario Lanza type," while this year Johnnie Ray is setting the vogue. As long as records continue to build the earning capacity of a performer, one agency man said, we'll have to give the record companies the kind of singers they want.

Report Juke Operator Trying to 'Organize' Cincy Jocks for 'Fix'

Cincinnati, April 8.

VARIETY story last week about New York publishers and major diskers putting the finger on Cincy area payola situation created a big stir in music and radio circles at this end. All three dailies grabbed the story.

Payoff denials were general until Mary Wood, Post radio columnist, reported the trade rumor that a jukebox operator was trying to organize local disk jockeys for the fix, with himself in the in-between spot. She stated that one of two diskers who discussed the plan with her and "begged me not to use their names;" said "the guy behind this deal is tough. I don't want a bomb tossed into my house."

The femme columnist opined that if the "ugly story" had the remotest possibility of being true, "it is high time the radio stations do a little investigating."

Printed denials of the New York charges were made by officials of four stations and these jocks: Will Lenay, Jack Remington, Nelson King, Rex Dale, Paul Dixon, Don Davis and Walter Phillips. Other diskers were not contacted.

Charles Kanter, head of the Cincinnati Automatic Phonograph Operators Assn., was quoted as saying the payola reports "just aren't true." He also writes tunes, one of which, "Just Believe In Me," recently was recorded with "Goody, Goody," a revival, on the other side. Platter-spinners here gave the Kanter number a whirl and made varying reports on reaction of listeners.

Charles Topmiller WCKY manager, asserted that the station's music librarians, not the jockeys, line up the record shows.

CORNBALL MUSIC NETS STONE 74G IN YEAR

Hollywood, April 8.

Corn-off-the-cob capers of Cliffie Stone, who specializes in music played country style, have netted him about $74,000 the past year. Stone's breakdown of sugar shows he grossed $140,000 from his video program on KLAC-TV, netting $39,000 the past year; gets $15,000 for an hour-long cross-the-boarder on KXLA; his Central Songs pubbery grossed $25,000, netted $6,000; for personal management of Tennessee Ernie, the country singer, he drew $8,000; and his Capitol waxings brought in about $6,000.

Stone, who began with Stuart Hamblen in 1934, gambled his last $2,000 two and a half years ago by buying time for two programs on KLAC-TV; but before his first telecast he had nabbed Gold Furniture for sponsor of the show, and he's had the same angel since. Package price for the hour-long, weekly program is $2,700.

Shaw's 'Don Juan' Begins Disking By Drama 4

Cutting sessions on the First Drama Quartet's rendition of George Bernard Shaw's "Don Juan in Hell" opus are slated to begin this week in New York at the Columbia Records studios under the production aegis of Col exec vice-prexy Goddard Lieberson. The quartet comprises Charles Laughton, Charles Boyer, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Agnes Moorehead.

It's the first time, incidentally, that the Shaw estate has okayed a commercial recording of a Shaw work.

SPA, Top Pubs Resume Confabs On Problems

In an effort to clear up several persistent writer-publisher problems, the Songwriters Protective Assn. and a group of top publishers will resume their confabs next Wednesday (16) in New York. Previous conclaves, held early in March, were not productive of concrete results but SPA execs are optimistic that something positive will still come out. Meetings are being held in a wholly amicable atmosphere.

Two major problems facing the huddles are payments to songwriters for lyric magazine inclusions and how far back SPA should be entitled to go in its audit of the publishers' books. Several pubs have asked for a five or six-year deadline in a move to block SPA from combing through their entire histories.

All decisions made at these sessions will be of a recommendatory nature only, since the writers must get approval from the full SPA council and the pub reps must get an okay from he board of the Music Publishers Protective Assn. Latter then will request its member firms to follow the interpretations agreed on at the joint meetings.

M-G-M Packages Pops on Long-Play

In an effort to widen its long-play platter market, M-G-M Records has begun packaging its pop releases on LP disks. The LPs, which'll be compiled periodically, will include eight of the diskery's top pop sides. New series will be labelled "Pop Parade."

The pop packaging plan already has been initiated by Capitol, Columbia and RCA Victor. Companies expect to nab that part of the record-buying market which owns 33 rpm attachments only with the new LP records.

M-G-M's initial "Pop Parade" release includes etchings by Fran Warren, Bill Hayes, Art Mooney orch, Ted Straeter's orch, Tommy Edwards, the De Marco Sisters, Alan Dean and LeRoy Holmes orch.

Hub Jazz Spot Veers To Folksong Talent

Boston, April 8.

The solid biz pulled by Josh White during his recent stint at the Storyville Club has resulted in Boniface George Wein departing from his usual showcasing of jazz vocalists, progressive and Dixieland groups to spot several more exponents of folk lore.

Currently, Sam Gary, a protege of White's is splitting the bill with John Carradine and Johnny Windhurst's Dixieland band. The Weavers are slated for stanza starting April 20th with Shoshanah Damari inked for the following week.

U.S. Music Files 40G Antitrust Suit Vs. BMI

U. S. Music filed suit in Federal Court last week against Broadcast Music, Inc., charging violation of the Sherman antitrust act. Publishing firm, which had been a BMI member since 1949, alleges that BMI owes the firm more than $25,000 on performance payoff.

Pub is also asking for $15,000 in damages.

Small Pubs Set Own Deals With Indie Diskers

Problem of small publishers in getting their songs on major record labels has grown to such an extent during the past few months that many of the pubs are beginning to record their own tunes or make deals with the small disk companies to assure at least a single wax version. These pubs are willing to gamble their own coin for a platter because they hope they'll be able to hypo a disk jockey ride that'll force the major diskers to get on their tune.

Although the vet publishers are running into the same waxing difficulties, situation is confined to the smaller pubs only because their income is usually limited to the current plug number. With major diskers recording about 10% of the 100 new tunes that are submitted weekly, the indie pub has decided to buck the shutout by investing his own monies to get a recording.

In the past few months several pubs have cut their own tunes with pickup orchs and vocalists and have followed up with personalized disk jockey promotion to get the record aired. In some instances, the deejays have built so much interest in the tune in local areas that major company distributors have pressured their diskeries to rush out a release of the number.

Along the same lines, the pubs are using the indie disk label to get their tunes heard. They're making deals with the indies to pay for all or part of the recording session for a waxing of their tune. They figure it's worth the outlay because a platter still remains their most effective medium of song plugging.

Major companies, meantime, are becoming increasingly wary of distributor reports that a tune is breaking out on an unknown or small label in special areas. Before hopping on the song, they're investigating possibilities of an unnatural hypo which may have been caused by payola or favoritism.

CAP REISSUES SERIES OF STANDARD HITS

In a move to streamline record dealers' inventory, Capitol Records has initiated a special reissue series of its standard platter clicks. Cap disks, which are more than a year old and have had at least a 200,000 initial release sale, are put into reissue so that retailers will always have the diskery's hits available.

Although retailers are only asked to stock up with one 45 rpm platter and one 78 rpm disk of each reissue, Cap sales execs report that the plan has brought in at least 100,000 more sales on the reissued waxing. They've discovered that there's a steady market for etchings which were made several years ago.

Top sellers in Cap's reissue series have been Les Paul's coupling of "Lover" and "Brazil," Tennessee Ernie's etching of "Anticipation Blues" and "Shotgun Boogie," and Pee Wee Hunt's workover of "12th St. Rag" and "Charleston." So far Cap has reissued 72 platters which the sales department has cataloged as the "1600 series."

Among the flock of music industryites heading for Europe this month are Coast writer Harry Warren, publisher E. H. (Buddy) Morris and his attorney, Lee Eastman.

Jack Mills, Mills Music prexy, is going Coastwards this week.

Film Exhibs Veering to BMI For 'Lull' Music in ASCAP Brushoff

Efforts of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to collect a nominal fee from film theatres using intermission and exit music are being nixed by exhibs, who are switching to Broadcast Music, Inc., and public domain tunes. Under the antitrust consent decree, which bars the former seat tax on exhibs as performance fees for music synchronized on pix, ASCAP is entitled to ask for licensing arrangements on houses playing tunes aside from film exhibition purposes, such as live shows and incidental record music.

As part of its aggressive program of getting its catalog maximum showcasing, BMI has been cooperating with exhibs on drawing up programs for the incidental disked music used in theatres. BMI has made available a flock of its current hit tunes for this purpose without charge although permission has to be obtained. In addition, BMI has been drawing up musical programs composed of its own tunes plus the p.d.'s which are being made available to exhibs.

About 150 indie exhibs in the New York area are already taking advantage of the BMI offer and using the planned programs. Local exhib organizations, moreover, have been cautioning exhibs against playing ASCAP tunes since that makes them eligible for a licensing arrangement. New England and Indiana exhib associations are also listing the available BMI tunes in the monthly bulletins to members.

Special attention is being paid by these organizations to drive-in theatres that play recordings during the concession break.

Grean Sells Masters Of His Co.'s 1st Disks to M-G-M

Charles Grean, former RCA Victor pop artist and repertory chief now running his indie Comet Records label, has sold the masters of his company's first platter, "I Don't Mind" and "Smokin' and A'dreamin'," to M-G-M Records. "Mind," also written by Grean, has been breaking for a hit both on the Comet label and on the Trudy Richards' version for Decca.

M-G-M has also pacted Grean to produce four more sides with The Street Singers, vocal group featured on the Comet release. Combo is managed by Grean and Jimmy Leyden.

RCA Reported Breaking With EMI In Britain

London, April 8.

A further shakeup in the British disk industry setup is anticipated shortly in wake of reports that RCA Victor, which distributes here through His Master's Voice label, an Electrical & Musical Industries affiliate, is on the verge of breaking with EMI. Such a development would go a long way in undermining the position of EMI as one of the dominating British platter companies, British Decca being the other top company.

EMI has already lost important footing in the disk field with the recent exit of Columbia Records in the U. S. from its distrib and exchange deal with EMI. Columbia switched to a pact with the Philips Co., electronic equipment manufacturers of Holland, which has been making a bid in the European platter market. Once Col's deal with Phillips is put into the works, the latter company will enter the British market with Columbia's catalog, the largest in existence in the long-play field.

Lewis Plays Hometown First Time in 40 Yrs.

Circleville, O., April 8.

Ted Lewis, born in this Pickaway County community, whose name he seldom fails to mention, will come home to perform for the first time in 40 years on April 25. Lewis has agreed to bring his musicians to Circleville that day to play a benefit in the county fairgrounds coliseum. All proceeds will go to Berger Hospital and Ted Lewis Park.

This will mark the first time since he has become famous that Lewis has played in his hometown. In honor of the event Mayor Ben Gordon has declared April 25 as Ted Lewis Day, the town will be decorated, city council will hold a special session and the town's Ohio National Guard unit will take part in the celebration. Lewis is a lifetime honorary member of the council.

Special '51 Henderson Disk Gets Col Release

A recording of a special 1951 Martin Block show on WNEW, N. Y., in benefit for the then-ailing arranger-bandleader Fletcher Henderson, will be issued by Columbia Records on a 12-inch long-play platter this summer. Disk will feature the old Benny Goodman trio, including Gene Krupa and Teddy Wilson, and several members of the old Goodman band, for which Henderson arranged.

Except for the artists' royalties, which will go to Henderson, platter is being handled as a regular commercial enterprise, with publishers of the standard tunes used in the set getting the regular 2c rate.

Hub Hot for Hillbillies; Capacity Crowds Pays $1 For Cider Cutting Sesh

Boston, April 8.

An indication of the extent of folk music's popularity in the Hub area was demonstrated Friday (4) when a near-capacity crowd paid 75c and $1 to attend a recording sesh of WCOP's Nelson Bragg and his "Hayloft Jamboree" at the 2,700 seat Symphony Hall. Program is aired nightly over the station and affair was plugged almost exclusively via air mentions although a one-shot newspaper ad appeared in one of the local dailies.

While none of the barnyard units appearing had any national rep, the enthusiasm of the cornball music fans was comparable to that generated at the occasional jazz concerts held there. This was the second "jamboree" sponsored by the station, the previous one, held three weeks ago (resulting in a sellout) at the smaller 1,000 seat New England Mutual Hall. Another clambake is skedded by the station for April 25th, presumably at Symphony Hall.

PUB WAILS HIS 'CRY' INFRINGED BY 'TRY'

Hollywood, April 8.

Mello Music, publishers of "Cry," have squawked to Central Songs Co., Hollywood, for publication of its parody, "Try," written by Stan Freberg and Ruby Raksin and waxed by Freberg for Capitol Records, claiming the takeoff is an infringement, and "unfair competition."

Central publisher Cliffie Stone has offered Perry Alexander of Mello, in N. Y., a split down the middle for publishers' royalties on "Try," but hasn't been given a reply yet on his suggestion. Mello beefed at satire of Johnnie Ray's version of "Cry."

Hoagy's Ft. Wayne Date

Fort Wayne, April 8.

Indiana-born Hoagy Carmichael will be soloist for the pop concert by the Fort Wayne Philharmonic Orchestra next Tuesday (15) in Quimby Auditorium, under direction of Igor Buketoff.

Orchestra will play two of Carmichael's songs, and accompanied by a drummer and string bass, he'll present a half-hour specialty.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By HERM SCHOENFELD

Bob Eberly: "Tattle Tale"-"Anything That's Part Of You" (Capitol). Since his recent comeback, Bob Eberly has been saddled with mediocre material but in "Tattle Tale" he gets a solid chance to climb into the hit lists. It's a novelty rhythm item with a catching beat and clever lyric. Eberly swings it out brightly against a snappy background. Reverse is an okay ballad, also delivered neatly but with only moderate chances.

Mary Small: "A Beautiful Waste Of Time"-"Didja Ever" (King). "Time" is an okay ballad entry which could move out via Mary Small's slick piping. Miss Small, who steadily impresses as a top entry in the femme disk sweeps, gives this side a pleasing, relaxed vocal. Vic Mizzy's orch supplies a good production framework. "Didja Ever" has an attractive bouncy lilt and rates plenty of spins.

Eileen Barton: "To Be Loved By You"-"Wrong" (Coral). Eileen Barton has a potent side in "Loved By You." It's a driving rhythm number which she socks over with an infectious gaiety that enhances its jock and juke values. Miss Barton changes paces on the Coral flipover for fair results.

Lisa Kirk: "I Thought Of You Last Night"-"Look Up" (Victor). Lisa Kirk is another warbler who has needed only the right material to break through. "Last Night" could be it, a class ballad rendered in excellent style by Miss Kirk with a superb baskground by the Dave Terry orch. Flip is a mediocre tune in a folk format that's become over-familiar in the last couple of years.

Martha & Liz Tilton: "Am I In Love?"-"There's A Cloud In My Valley of Sunshine" (Coral). Coupling of tunes from the Paramount film, "Son of Paleface," by the Tilton Sisters has excellent chances for solid jock and juke spins. "Love" is a sprightly item which the Tiltons deliver with a captivating charm. Cute lyric and catchy melody should keep it high on the lists for some time to come. Reverse, a cornball grooved effort, fits into current market pattern. George Cates orch backs up snappily.

Georgia Gibbs: "Kiss Of Fire"-"A Lasting Thing" (Mercury). Based on a well-known tango theme, "Kiss of Fire" is a neat pop adaptation along the lines of "I Get Ideas." Georgia Gibbs rides it with plenty of steam and could drive it into a big etching for jocks and jukes. "Lasting Thing" is a slower-paced ballad with a fine melodic line that could build into an impressive entry.

Nellie Lutcher: "That's How It Goes"-"Keepin' Out Of Mischief Now" (Capitol). Nellie Lutcher gets the pulse of the current pop market with her dramatic delivery of "Goes," a number with standout potential because it's also designed to the going pattern for click tunes. Billy Daniels also socks across "Goes" with lots of power on the Mercury label. On the Capitol flip, Miss Lutcher gives one of her more typical workovers on the old standard, Harold Mooney orch backing up with suitable drive.

Freddy Martin Orch: "Am I In Love"-"Wing-Wing Tonight" (Victor). Merv Griffin, Freddy Martin band vocalist, socks over "Love" in surefire style with an important assist from the instrumental-choral arrangement. Tune, from the Paramount pic, "Son of Paleface," is a snappy rhythm novelty with a clever underlying idea. Reverse, also from the same pic, is in a more conventional groove with fewer chances although Martin's crew and Griffin give this tune an attractive commercial framework.

Cy Coleman: "In A Little Spanish Town"-"South" (Decca). "Spanish Town" gets a strong push toward a comeback click via Cy Coleman's topflight keyboard etching. Coleman hits the 88 with deft fingerwork and musical inventiveness. It's a solid cut which should get a good ride on the coinboxes. Coleman is equally effective on "South," again bringing verve and imagination to an oldie.

Gene Ammons: "I'll Walk Alone"-"Old Folks" (Decca). Riding on the click revival, "I'll Walk Alone," Gene Ammons offers a solid sax interpretation that should break away in areas where the instrumental is more important than the lyric. Ammons' smooth sax work hits with impact and builds the ballad into an exciting platter. Bottom deck displays more of his firstrate reed technique.

Platter Pointers

Capitol has packaged an excellent sampling of circus music as belted out by the Ringling Bros and Barnum & Bailey Band, batoned by Merle Evans, in a long play platter "Circus Parade."... Connie Haines has a good side in "It's So-Long and Good-Bye To You" (Coral)... Larry Fotine orch gives "Wonder" on the King label a rhythmic ride... Louis Jordan has a fair novelty item in "Never Trust A Woman" (Decca) ... Woolf Phillips orch creates excitement in "Dancing Bells" (Coral) Francis Craig, who clicked several years ago on indie Bullett label with "Near You," reprises the number for good results on Decca... Victor Young orch has a fine side in the theme music from the Paramount pic, "A Place In The Sun" (Decca).

Doris Day and Guy Mitchell team up with only fair results on "A Little Kiss Tonight" and "Gently Johnny," latter being an adaptation of an old folk ballad (Columbia). . . . The Balladeers, an appealing choral group, impress with their inital cuts for Victor, "I Wish I Was Single Again" and "Goodbye Little Girls". . . . On the same label, Ralph Flanagan orch scores with a solid instrumental on "Baltimore Rag" . . . Sarah Vaughan is in her best form on "If Someone Had Told Me" and "Corner To Corner" (Columbia) . . . Pete Daily Chicagoans beat out some fine jazz sounds in "North" and "China Boy" (Capitol) . . . Also in the jazz vein, Roy Eldridge's trumpet gets a fair workout on "Easter Parade" and "I See Everybody's Baby" (Mercury).

Standout western folk, polka, religious, blues, rhythm, etc.: Jimmy McPhail, "You Can't Imagine" (Victor) . . . Jess Willard, "Cadillac Blues" (Capitol) . . . Gene Parrish, "Screamin' In My Sleep" (Victor) . . . Carl Story, "When The Pearly Gates Swing Open" (Mercury) . . . Neal Burris, "There's No Reason" (Columbia) . . . Roy King, "Then You'll All Be Mine" (Mercury) . . . Faron Young, "Tattle Tale Tears" (Capitol) . . . The Carlisles, "Tennessee Memories" (Mercury) . . . Ray Price, "Talk To Your Heart" (Columbia) . . . Curley Williams, "We've Come A Long Way Together" (Columbia).

Serkin Digit Burn Snarls Philly Concert, Disking

Philadelphia, April 8.

Benno Moiseiwitsch acted as pinch-hitter for the injured Rudolf Serkin as piano soloist at the Philadelphia Orchestra's weekend concerts (4-5). Serkin, whose hand was burned in Montreal when a match-book ignited, was forced to cancel the engagement when a finger failed to heal in time.

Moiseiwitsch was heard with the Philadelphia ensemble in the Rachmaninoff Second Concerto, and conductor Eugene Ormandy had to make a quick switch of the entire program for the new guest star. Principal losers were the orchestra men, who were slated to record for Columbia Sunday (6) the Brahms First Concerto and the Beethoven Third Concerto, which Serkin was to have performed here.

Mpls. Symph Launches $250,000 Fund Drive

Minneapolis, April 8.

Minneapolis Symphony orchestra will pay less than half of its own $400,000 way next season and contributions will have to make up the difference. Orchestra earnings are estimated at $150,000 from ticket sales, record royalties and tours. The drive to raise the remaining $250,000 from contributions started this week.

During the past two years, costs have increased and revenues declined, according to orch officials. During the 1948-49 season, it cost $38,000 less, for example, to run the orchestra, and record royalties were higher and touring expenses lower. In recognition of the orch's problems, the Minneapolis Musicians Union has withdrawn a demand for a $15-a-week salary increase which would have added $34,000 to the 1952-53 season expense total.

CHUCK FOSTER ORCH (11)
With Eddie Allyn, Deloris Randall
Hotel Muehlebach, Kansas City

It's been a couple of years since Chuck Foster was seen in this deluxe dinner room of the Muehlebach. Biz during the pre-Easter season is moderately good, about all that can be asked under the circumstances. Crew is well rounded to the music in the Foster fashion and carried a good share of entertainment in its own right.

Instrumental setup features the reeds with alto lead, Foster sometimes chiming in to make a fifth reed with his tenor and clarinet. There are also a pair of trumpets, trombone, drums, piano and string bass, with Bobby Reed doing featured work on the ivories. As he has for several years in the midwest area, Foster goes in strong for the most dansable rhythms and a wide variety of tempo, with Latins, novelties, pops, and generous sprinkling of established faves and show tunes.

In the vocal department, he is well set up with Eddie Allyn doing featuring work in baritone stylings and blonde Deloris Randall to chirp on ballads and show tunes. Foster adds his own vocals now and then, and between the three of them a lively show is presented a couple of times during the evening.

The 20-minute show opens with some "Annie Get Your Gun" tunes, Allyn, Foster and Miss Randall giving the songs creditable treatment. Pianist Reed has an inning to lead out on "Cumina" with strong backing from the band for the only instrumental entry. Eddie Allyn warbles "As Time Goes By" and "I'll Get By" in his very listenable stylings. Foster takes over for a Ted Lewis routine, complete with top hat and clarinet and patter. Show is a pleasant interlude of the evening.

Following its three weeks here crew is off for one-nighters and then heads south. Quin.

Disk Jockey Review

BOB REID
55 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri., 8:05 p.m.
Participating
WGRC, Louisville

After hitches at local stations, and air spots at other midwest outlets, including a several months sustaining spot on CBS originating in New York, Bob Reid has completed the cycle and is back with his own disk show on WGRC, Mondays through Fridays, for just short of a full hour nightly.

Reid, baritone vocalist, has a well-rounded set of pipes for the vocals, which he intersperses between spinnings. Has a smooth way with a lyric, and comes over nicely with the recorded backgrounds. His chatter is friendly, and his ether approach to the home dialers is folksy but not too gabby. His previous activity as a band vocalist, and front man for touring bands, stands him in good stead as he gives interesting bits of info about the numbers, orchs, and his hep line makes for interesting listening. At show caught, Reid had Les Paul and Mary Ford as guests. Threesome had a nice time chatting about various angles of the record biz, all adding up to a sparkling air sesh.

Reid's choice of records is not slanted, he apparently selects waxings for good general listening, mixing the old with the new. Played a Glenn Miller record, sandwiched between newer numbers, to give the show a change of pace, notch level. [illegible] Wied.

Lack of Standout Song Hit Nationally Seen Key to Overall Lag in Sales

With music business way off for the past several weeks, trade execs are tracing the current sales lag to the absence of any standout hit to draw the customers into the stores. While several numbers are selling strongly, no single entry has stepped out as pacemaker on a national scale, a sure tipoff on a smash hit.

"Wheel of Fortune" is closest to meeting the bill as a cross-country click but even this tune is hotter in the east than it is in other regions where other tunes are favored. Such tunes as "Blacksmith Blues," "Anytime" and "Slow Poke" are also getting heavy regional play without being able to dominate the overall picture.

While other tunes such as "Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania" and "A Guy Is a Guy" are also showing sales strength, the rank-and-file numbers are being hit by the trade's failure to come up with a number like "Tennessee Waltz," which lifted business across the board.

Terps Into Trailers

Niles, O., April 8.

The Tri-Lan Ballroom at McKinley Heights, near here, built after World War II, has been purchased by the Fruehauf Trailer Co., which is converting the building into a factory branch.

Firm plans to move its Youngstown branch to the new quarters by early May.

Another Robbins Son Joins Paxton Pub Co.

Marshall Robbins, Jack Robbins' son, who has been working on the Coast recently as a disk jockey promotion man, joined George Paxton's music firm in N. Y. this week as a songplugger.

Another son of Jack Robbins, Howard (Buddy) Robbins, also works at Paxton Music as general professional manager. Both sons left the elder Robbins shortly after the latter's partnership deal with Ed Kassner.

Songpluggers' Extra Choruses

By VINCE WILLIAMS
(WJZ, N. Y., Disk Jockey)

Most commonly used "pleas" by songplugger to the disk jockey, musical director and bandleader:

"I need one more to make the sheet."
"The tune is breaking big in Fairbanks, Alaska."
"My boss will fire me if I don't get your plug."
"My song just made the rack."
"This song will make the artist."
"My song sold 1,000 copies today."
"This song is really selling in Cincinnati."
"Whatever you do, don't curve me."
"This song will make you a big man."
"You're the first to play this song." (Oh, Yeah??)
"The song finished No. 1 on the sheet last week."
"You don't know what this means to me."
"Your show is really great"...(Your theme song??...Oh, I missed that part.)
"This song will be a bigger standard than 'Stardust'."
"Would you like Joe Doakes for a guest...he does a great job on my song."
"When can we get together for dinner or lunch?"
"You told me you cleared my song, but it didn't show in the clearance."
"What show, fight, ballgame or movie would you like to see?"
"I know you don't like the song, but just this once, please?"
"We're going off the song...but...can you give it just one more shot?"
"Every label is covering this song."
"This song is so pretty...it makes me cry."
"I saw you on TV the other night...you were terrific."
"Let me tell you about the old days of songplugging."
"What do you 'Johnny-Come-Latelies' know about music, anyhow?"
"What do you mean you don't like the song...Joe Disk-Jockey picked it No. 1."
"This song is moving like a cyclone in the midwest."
"Sure the song's a 'turkey'...but I have to make a living, don't I?"
"Please play the song...help ease the pain of my ulcers."
"Let me show you what the trade papers think of the song."
"This is our 'Drive Week'...give the song a couple of shots, huh?"
"It isn't a drive, but we want to keep the song moving."
"This song will make the 'Hit Parade'."
"I know you don't have a lot of air time...and you don't like the song, but just play ONE CHORUS!!"
"If you can't play it...please mention the title!!"
"I also have another song...we're not working on it now...we're just experimenting with it to find its potential...but if you get the time and feel like it...give it a shot."
"I don't want to pressure you like the other boys, but this song will really make your show. By the way...how's the family?"
"You told me you'd have my song on your show, but you didn't play it, I figured you'd run out of time...so give it a couple of shots next week?"
"Everyone says you're the greatest guy in the business."

Gilbert Back to Coast

L. Wolfe Gilbert, chairman of the Coast writers committee for the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, planed back to the Coast yesterday (Tues.) after attending a series of classification committee hearings for the past couple of weeks. Main point on the committee's agenda is still a discussion of the proposals to amend the current 60-20-20 payoff plan.

Committee has been at work on a revised plan for more than a year-and-a-half without coming up with any specific recommendations. It's felt now among some ASCAP execs that the new payoff plan is here to stay despite sporadic squawks from the ranks.

Coast Palladium Mulls Switch To Vocalist Policy

Hollywood, April 8.

Hollywood Palladium, longtime dance band stronghold on Coast is mulling a policy change to add name singles, especially vocalists. Spot pitched a four-frame deal at Liberace, pianist, starting June 17, concurrent with the Benny Strong orch stand. Spot is also seeking Johnnie Ray for October and Frankie Laine for November.

Palladium toyed with the same idea three summers ago, but while using single singers along with orchs, did not use names of potency of those now sought.

Terpery Monday (7) inked deal with Tommy Dorsey for a five-week roost starting May 13 at guarantee and percentage. It's his first stand there since December, 1943. Since then he's confined local bandstanding to his own spot, Casino Gardens, Ocean Park, which he bought in 1944. He has sunk a total of $350,000 into Gardens, which was shrouded more than a year.

Jimmy Dorsey precedes T.D. into Palladium Tuesday (15), following current stand of Buddy Morrow. After Strong, Hay Anthony comes in for four frames, starting July 15, followed by Les Brown.

Disk Ives' London Concert

London, April 8.

A complete recording of Burl Ives' Royal Festival Hall concert tomorrow (Wed.) is to be taped.

Ives' recordings are normally distributed through Decca, which, it is understood, will be offered this complete version of his London show.

Coral Planning Own Branches

Launching a major expansion for Decca's subsid label, Coral Records, prexy Milton R. Rackmil is initially planning a string of Coral-owned distribution branches in key cities. The branches will operate in New York, Chicago and possibly Newark at a later date. New distrib outlets will also handle a limited number of outside indie labels, including specialized items in the kiddie and folk lines.

New units will be operated by Coral personnel, completely separate from the Decca setup. Frank Holland, eastern and southeastern division manager for the past two years, will head the N. Y. office while Charles Michaels, currently manager of the Tell Music Co., will act as Coral distrib in Chicago, with Al Oldrich operating as mid-west division manager.

Formed by Decca slightly more than three years ago, Coral has emerged as one of the leading labels in the pop field. Company now has more than 40 indie distrib agencies in the U.S., Canada, Alaska and Hawaii, plus distrib deals with foreign outlets. Greater independence to Coral was cued last year with the naming of Jimmy Hilliard as the subsid's vice-prexy over artists and repertory, with Mike Ross as veepee-general manager.

sors. He said that some potential station operators have already sold vidfilm packages they leased to local advertisers, who are anxious to stake out their time franchise. Broadcasters can then take such contracts to their local banks as collateral for loans necessary to get the stations on the air.

With network advertisers currently complaining about TV's skyrocketing costs, Beckwith said the potential new market for vidpix should be highly lucrative. Addition of new stations to a network lineup would zoom a bankroller's cost even more, whereas he can buy vidpix properties for the new markets at fraction of the cost.

In order to move UTP packages as fast as possible with the new outlets, the outfit has prepared a brochure listing its entire lineup of properties with a price-tag on each. Brochure is being distributed to all station applicants who are expected to get their C.P.'s without FCC hearings. In addition, Beckwith, UTP prez Jerry King and exec director Milt Blink plan to visit each station personally as soon as it takes the air to wrap up all deals.

Crosby firm $70,000, representing the money still owed on those films already played. In addition to resuming the series, the web also gets the right to sell "Playhouse" for a period of one month in the 13 markets in which the series had been bankrolled by the Telesets division. If the web fails to come up with a sale, United TV Programs, which syndicates the Crosby product, will take over.

"Playhouse," which is the original "Fireside Theatre" series aired originally on NBC-TV under Procter & Gamble sponsorship, takes over the alternate Thursday night at 9 slot on DuMont.

Southern Shuts Chi Office in Economy Move

Additional evidence of the music industry's tightening of its plugging setup, is Southern Music's decision last week to close down its Chicago office. Although Bob Cole, who headed the Chi branch, will continue to plug the midwestern territory for the firm, he'll headquarter from his home instead of a business office. Reason for the shift, according to Ben Selvin, Southern's general manager, is fact that most of that area's contact work is done on the road visiting local deejays. Upkeep of a business in Chi had become an unnecessary expense to the firm.

Along the same lines, other New York pubs are sending an increasing number of pluggers on special deejay treks to New England, the southern and midwestern states. Firms, which heretofore concentrated their plugs in a few key cities, have hopped on the hinterland bandwagon. Chappell and the Warner Bros. firms, for example, are now sending their pluggers on the road to push the plug tune.

Abel's 'David'

Walter Abel, who appeared on Broadway recently in "The Long Watch," will show up in a new guise next Tuesday (15) at Carnegie Hall, N. Y.

Abel will be narrator with the Philadelphia Orchestra in a performance of Honegger's symphonic psalm, "King David." Theodora Branton, Bevely Anne Wolff, David Poleri and Helen Colbert will be song soloists, and Eugene Ormandy will conduct.

Inside Orchestras—Music

Recent film short for the benefit of the polio fund, in which Richard Rodgers, Oscar Hammerstein 2d and singer Bill Tabbert appear, has kicked off the revival of "You'll Never Walk Alone," Tune, penned by Rodgers & Hammerstein for the legit musical, "Carousel," in 1945, was reprised by Tabbert in the pic short.

National distribution of the short has upped sheet sales and sparked new etchings by Fred Waring on Decca, Perry Como on RCA and Victor Marchese for M-G-M. Chappell Music is publishing. Incidentally, "Walk Alone," a 1941 oldie, is currently hitting the comeback trail via display in the 20th-Fox pic, "With a Song In My Heart."

Because some longhair critics contended that all the tenors on RCA Victor's new album release, "10 Tenors—10 Arias," sounded alike, the diskery conducted a blindfold test last week for a group of trained musicians to determine whether the charge was true. Critics' group, consisting of Rise Stevens, Mischa Elman, Regina Resnik and Marguerite Piazza, among others, were asked to identify various tenor voices on wax, including those of Mario Lanza, Jussi Bjoerling, James Melton, Jan Pearce and Ferruccio Tagliavini. Score for the whole group was about 75% accurate.

Don Cornell played the Twin Coaches near Pittsburgh several weeks ago at $1,000 for the week. Management asked the singer if he'd come back in a month or so at the same money. Cornell said that was okay with him. In the meantime, however, his Coral recording, "I'll Walk Alone," started to climb up among the bestsellers. When Twin Coaches contacted Cornell's agent the other day about returning for the verbal commitment, the ex-Sammy Kaye vocalist's asking price had gone up to almost double the previous salary—$1,750 to be exact.

A special program to mark the 25th anniversary of Bing Crosby's first recording to have been aired over the British Broadcasting Corp. network will take place next Thursday (17). The original disk, "Side By Side," recorded with Paul Whiteman's orchestra, will introduce the program. Recordings will be a selection of top recordings made with Johnny Mercer, the Andrew Sisters, Louis Armstrong and Bing's 19-year-old son, Gary Crosby.

In transmission, the Broadcast Music, Inc.'s "Grassroots" story in last week's VARIETY was garbled. One sentence read, "Haverlin reported his pet project—expanded airing of longhair music—is not paying off promotion-wise for stations, but is sound business." It should have read, ". . . is not only paying off, etc."

run features at a time when such film is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain in the pix-to-teevee market. Inasmuch as the net would get video rights from the pix, it's believed that the runs would be unlimited, and this is probably where the web would get off the hook financially.

Korda plans to import at least two American stars for each of his pix, to give the product b.o. value in this country.

If the deal is consummated, it would mark the first time first-run pix were ever shown on television. Both Korda and the net would escape any difficulties with the American Federation of Musicians or the talent guild on coin, since their regulations don't apply to films made abroad.

Night Club Reviews

Blue Angel, N. Y.

Les Freres Jacques (4), Queenie Leonard, Anita Ellis, Harry Belafonte; $5 minimum.

This class eastside boite has come up with an unbalanced and mediocre show currently. Layout is short on comedy turns, overboard on vocalists and snagged by language difficulties supplied by an imported French turn, Les Freres Jacques (New Acts). Queenie Leonard, a British songstress, is also reviewed under New Acts.

Most effective on the bill is Anita Ellis, who debuted earlier this year at La Vie En Rose, another eastside club. Miss Ellis is a solid song stylist with a bright delivery both on ballads and the rhythm items. A looker, she also shows considerable savvy in pitching up her numbers for this room's clientele. Her best, which she uses for a finale, is "Put The Blame On Mame," clever ditty.

Held over from the last few shows for another week, Harry Belafonte also impresses with his repertory of folk songs. Belafonte has a suitable dramatic style on such items as "John Henry," Calypso tunes and an Afro-Brazilian chant. Once a pop tune crooner, Belafonte has found a surefire format for class niteries with his folk tune pitch. Herm.

Ambassador Hotel, L. A.
(COCOANUT GROVE)

Los Angeles, April 3.

The Continentals (4), with Ivan MacIntyre; Walter Gross, Eddie Bergman Orch (16), with Bob Lido. $1.50, $2 cover.

One of the better new singing groups to come along in a considerable period, the Continentals are sparking Coast interest in this western bow. Initial reaction indicates they can develop a following although their current stand, spanning Holy Week, probably won't be a good indication of their draw.

Quartet works well, packing a load of entertainment into a 30-minute stint as topper of current bill. Harmonics are topnotch and they pace the stint effectively with good special-material stuff. There's nostalgia value in their "Wizard of Oz" and "Barbershop" medleys and the stuff is well sold. An occasional whistling solo by one of the lads highlights their orchestral effects to good response. Act hits a peak with a song version of "Casey at the Bat" that's acted out for added yocks, and though there's a resemblance to Red Skelton's familiar baseball player routine, it doesn't jar.

Pianist-composer Walter Gross is badly spotted as an opener. His initialer "Rhapsody in Blue," comes too soon after Eddie Bergman's house orch delivers "Swedish Rhapsody" and is vitiated by a full-length and somewhat over-orchestrated treatment. He scores, of course, with his own "Tenderly" to bow off and return to his regular chores in the hotel's smaller Casino Room. Opening-night stint was badly lighted to make it more difficult for him to showcase properly.

Bergman crew is, as always, impeccable in backing the Continentals and the well-stocked library of danceable arrangements insures pleasure for the terp-happy patrons. Kap.

Hotel Nicollet, Mpls.
(MINN. TERRACE)

Minneapolis, April 5.

Beachcombers (4), Cecil Golly Orch (9) with Mildred Stanley; $2.50-$3.50 minimum.

On their first Minneapolis appearance, the Beachcombers have no difficulty in establishing themselves among the top-drawer groups of their kind to play this chichi room. They deliver a fast and lively potpourri of song, fancily dressed up with accompanying business, that makes for solid entertainment. Customer approval comes easily.

Bringing new and original treatment to surefire numbers, they interject enough nifty dancing and clowning into the vocalizing to give their offerings the sort of production proportions which are essential for lifting such singing units into the higher brackets. Along with neat lighting and clever routining that provides change of pace, it all spells boff showmanship.

The three personable young men and the tiny, dainty Hawaiian miss lean toward songs of the island, but the performance includes sufficient musical diversification to avoid satiation. Their voices blend well, the high spirits and animation aren't overdone, and the introductory verbiage for the songs is meritoriously brief and pat. At show caught, they did "Sands of Waikiki," "Mandy," "Maui," "That Lucky Old Sun," "Skip to My Lou," "Hallelujah," "You'll Never Walk Alone" and "Hawaiian War Chant" without wearing out their welcome.

The Cecil Golly orch and its singer, Mildred Stanley, continue as prime local favorites. Rees.

Hotel St. Regis, N. Y.
(MAISONETTE)
(Followup)

The intimate class dining-supper spots are Yvette's metier, and her date at the St. Regis' Maisonette points up that factor strongly. The blonde songstress, singing better than ever and with ever-increasing showmanship, has been doing a distinctive job in her four-weeker here. Add to this her nifty gowning, overall attractiveness and good routining.

In a class spot such as the St. Regis there can be no room for the ordinary run of tunes by a songstress, especially when she is the bill's sole interest. Singling and playing the dinner show only, Yvette has been wise in doing practically all special material numbers, and she sells them strongly. Her opener, a paraphrased "You're Lovely to Look at," is a greeting to her audience and sets her solidly. She next does "Sur les Quais du Vieux Paris," which is done well and is important in that spot because it strengthens her Gallic billing. "Hotels Smarter Than People" is something from which she extracts the comedy inherent in the lyrics, always making it cute and never giving it the vulgarity that some singers elect. Her South African folk medley is a good change of pace, and so is the followup "Movie House on Park Ave." The latter, too, is something done with good taste and achieving the necessary lyrical comedy.

"Shall We Dance," from "King and I," is likewise effective, and her walkoff number is the amusing fractured-French polyglot of the girl who loved unwisely.

Russell Nype, doubling from "Call Me Madam," handles the solo spotting for the supper show (Reviewed in issue of March 12). Kahn.

Desert Inn, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, April 1.

Lou Walters' "Latin Quarter Revue," with Frank Libuse & Margot Brander, Darvas & Julia, Marilyn Ross, Collette Fleuriot, Andre Phillipe, Les Pabios (2), Geneve Dorn, Gay & Harry Wells, Enid Wallen, Mullen Sisters, Lyn Allen, Lee Perkins, Latin Quarter Line (20); Carlton Hayes Orch (11), conducted by Walter Nye; staged by Natascha Kamarova; costumes by Freddie Wittop and Elizabeth Adlon; no cover or minimum.

Lou Walters obviously spared no pains or moola to make this new "Latin Quarter Revue" his most lavish production to date. Potential audiences here will obviously spare no extra effort or moola to trek to the Desert Inn for the next four frames. What the magic name already doesn't lure, word-of-mouth will assure in ropes-up biz.

It happens with this revue that the local viewing is one of the rare instances where outlander audiences have first gander before New Yorkers—other than those who made Miami Beach their home during the recent season. This revue was the big money-maker at the Florida spa, with its combo of sock acts plus spectacular costuming, all in spicy Gallic flavoring.

Darvas & Julia are all that has been raved and more. Throughout the pair's amazing six-minute dazzler, each trick electrifies with segue into another even more outstanding. From Darvas' rapid whirling of his partner into some difficult warmups for mounting thrills, the act never stops. Darvas at one point holds Julia on extended arm while she contorts backward with torso at complete right angle to her gams. Flip-off and recovery are masterful bits of timing.

Tension from audience is evoked during the highspot, when the couple mount an elevated platform and Darvas holds Julia aloft via one arm. He gives her a fling into a parabola of 10 feet where she lands in a split. Deafening ovation greets showstopping team.

Frank Libuse takes over his customary role before showtime with zany mad waiter frantics for good warmup. Returns for closing slot aided by his excellent foil, Margot Brander. With latter's mock coloratura trilling broken up constantly by ribtickling Libuse slapstick, house is kept in constant uproar. Marilyn Ross is a fine addition to the revue. Her brassy tones etch production numbers as well as medley from "42nd Street," blending with "Place Pigalle," "La Vie En Rose."

Delightful Collette Fleuriot adds sexy zing with legit French music-hall color. Startles with her half-and-half sailor & girl terps, plus later near-nude parade and song duet with Andre Phillipe, "Mlle. Du Paris." She becomes a main focal point in finale with torso exposure while reining a papier-mache horse and chirping. Andre Phillipe clicks with warm personality while warbling "C'est Si Bon" and pairing with Mlle. Fleuriot.

Les Pabios offer offbeat terpery with male's mechanical soldier antics which allows for some knock-about of cute femme partner. Gay & Harry Wells dish up some clever footwork as intro to Collette Fleuriot's half-and-half exhibit.

Seldom before—at least not here—has a line been shown to such advantage. In spite of crowding 18 femmes on floor many times, display is tops. Opening "Artists' Ball" is eye-popping melange of gorgeous frames well revealed. Featured showgals—and draped to show fine points—are Lyn Allen and Lee Perkins. Traditional "Can-Can" features acro work of Mullen Sisters, squeals and flings of Enid Wallen. Finale of harlequin costumes, with added carousel effect beneath stroblighting, is magnificent curtain to a well-integrated 70 minutes of top-flight production. Geneve Dorn has her moments in this with some baton flinging among line terps with bells and still more revealing perambulations. Will.

Eddys', K. C.

Kansas City, April 2.

Helene & Howard, Charles Fredericks, Tony DiPardo Orch (8); $1 cover.

The Lenten season notwithstanding, the Eddys have gone ahead with their lineup of strong bookings and are giving the customers two-ply entertainment this session. The combination blends songs and comedy antics in generous proportion and holds a lively pace throughout.

Musical portion is ably handled by Charles Fredericks who goes right to work singing them straight, but good, with addition of good deal of personality and informality to his well-rounded baritone. He leads off with "I'd Like To Get Acquainted;" his own tune, offers a powerful "Because of You," and switches to a spiritual, "Glory Road," in a more conversational style.

Second set is at the keyboard where he vocals a trio of folk songs. Finishes with session of sweeter tunes, doing "Make Believe" from his Broadway "Show Boat" stand and "Loveliest Night of the Year."

As with Fredericks, it's a first club date here for wacky duo of Patrice Helene & Jan Howard and their sessions of satire and zanyisms. Their straight ballroom terp start quickly breaks away into pantomime and satire with femme taking the comedy lead. There's an inning of gypsy ribbing and toying with the ringsiders, and then a dialog bit in guys and dolls fashion which is good for hearty response.

Howard has an inning to kid Frankie Laine and Billy Daniels and gives the shock treatment a la Johnnie Ray. Two then swing into their new bit with gal in shaggy wig and male getup and store of gags which runs their tomfoolery to new highs. There's a session of takeoffs on Truman and Churchill, Barry Fitzgerald, "Detective Story" and a final terp in which they reel off some genuine rhythms and acrobatic work. Plenty of laughs in this one. Quin.

Palmer House, Chi
(EMPIRE ROOM)

Chicago, April 3.

Kay Thompson & Williams Bros. (4), Pierre D'Angelo & Ana, Martin Bros. (2), Merriel Abbott Dancers (8), Eddie O'Neal Orch (12); $3.50 minimum, $1 coner.

There's a show biz adage which is one of most over-used and obvious encore lead-ins that there is—it's the "I was on the way to my dressing room when I heard the applause and had to come back." The hackneyed and non-real bit has taken on new gloss here with the appearance of Kay Thompson & the Williams Bros. Swank charity crowd, normally a cold audience, cheered, stamped, and whistled, holding up proceedings on the opening night Thursday (3) for more than three minutes until Miss Thompson came back on the floor. It was not only a tribute to the chanteuse but also to the Williams Bros., who are more than ever an integral part of her act. There's nothing new in her stint this time around, except the welcome back of the freres and also Miss Thompson's new hair-do, which is less harsh and more feminine. She seems to have more vitality, if that's possible, cavorting for over 30 minutes with no apparent letup.

After the special "Hello" intro, she socks across the hilarious story of the poor little kept girl, who aspires to the ballet and makes it the hard way. Laughs are hard and heavy with blonde giving forth with the delicate bumps and rolls. Dance and choral backing on this and other numbers by the Williams Bros. is pretty close to the old Greek chorus ensemble idea. "Suzette," also the tale of a wayward miss and her numerous swains, ends in a jive session and hefty handclapping. There's a quick one about life and then a sharp cutting about various phases of show business with the males hawking chocolate bars at a burley show and finally acting as the underpining of a high wire act.

It's all clinched tightly by the Arena Managers Meet to Map Tours for Top Shows in Fall

Increasing importance of theatrical time on the arenas circuit is illustrated by the fact that the Arena Managers Assn. has called its first semi-annual booking meeting for April 22 in New York. Gathering will discuss a prospectus of attractions which AMA has lined up for fall and winter bookings.

It's expected that 32 members arenas will attend, and affirmative decision to buy the names being offered will provide the nucleus of a long tour. In addition, AMA routes for other auditorium owners and thus will be able to work up a juicy trek.

This month's powwow will be in addition to the annual AMA confab which takes place in August in Atlantic City. Theatrical bookings have always been discussed at the resort palaver.

Names of the shows being lined up for prospective arena tours haven't been divulged, but it's likely that a lineup such as the Frankie Laine-Patti Page show which opens the arena circuit Saturday (12) in Washington will be discussed. Shows accepted at this meet will probably get the cream AMA bookings.

Lillie Delays N.Y. Palace Stand Till Late in Year; Hutton Advance Near 40G

Beatrice Lillie, who was slated to follow Betty Hutton into the Palace, N. Y., two-a-day, has postponed her date at the theatre, and will appear there in the fall. No replacement has been set yet. Miss Lillie, who was to have started May 10, prefers to do video dates during the spring and summer and save her personal appearances for latter part of the year.

Meanwhile, the advance for Miss Hutton's Palace date starting Saturday (12) is expected to hit around $40,000. This would be more than the pre-opening sale of Judy Garland, who holds the house record for both grosses and longevity of run. Miss Garland's advance amounted to $29,000.

Rest of the bill will include Herb Shriner, Borrah Minevitch's Rascals, Skylarks, Dassie Bros., and Andre, Andree & Bonnie. Latter were slated for a previous bill, but were forced to postpone the date because of illness.

Palace has been closed for nearly three weeks after the run of the Jose Greco, Olsen & Johnson and Jackie Miles layout.

Booking Conflict Steers Johnnie to Pitt Stanley

Pittsburgh, April 8.

It's the Stanley, the WB de luxer, and not the rival Loew's Penn that gets Johnnie Ray, the "Cry" baby. Stanley had Ray originally set for early in May, but when that conflicted with an earlier booking for him at the Oriental in Chicago, rumors arose here that Penn had outbid the Warner house for his package.

That's not so, however. Stanley merely pushed the date back, and Ray's signed, sealed and delivered for week of June 20 with his regular unit, headed by Joey Adams and the Pickerts. Stanley has nothing set for its stage until he comes in. Penn, on the other hand, has one presentation—Les Paul & Mary Ford and Richard Hayes—set for May 3, and Four Aces and Margaret Whiting for June 6.

Pitt Ankara Returns Geo. Arnold Ice Unit

Pittsburgh, April 8.

Ice shows go back into the Ankara next Monday (14) for a summer and fall run. The last rink unit at Charlie Jamal's big room on Route 51 stayed there from Easter through New Year's—with frequent changes in personnel, of course—and the same thing's expected to happen again this year.

Units will be produced by George Arnold, who also staged previous frosted entertainments at Ankara, and he'll also be featured along with Phil Richards in the reopening revue. They've been big b.o. consistently for Jamal.

Tex. Circuser Out on Bond In Ex-Pard's Theft Rap

Austin, Tex., April 8.

Benjamin C. Davenport, a circus owner, was bound over to a Federal grand jury last Thursday (3) after his former partner, Harry Hammill, of Hondo, testified Davenport was the only one who could have stolen $83,750 from him in 1950.

Davenport was released on $10,000 bond following a preliminary hearing. The case will probably go before a grand jury which convenes May 5 in San Antonio.

The duo operated Austin Bros. Circus and Dailey Bros. Circus. Hammill now is owner-operator of a Hondo drive-in theatre.

Mastin Banned In Canada; Trio Shuffs to Buff

The Will Mastin Trio was prevented by Canadian immigration authorities from playing a nitery date in Canada last week. For undisclosed reasons involving Mastin, entry into that country was not permitted.

Trio was to have played the Chez Paree, Montreal. As a result, Larry Adler, appearing at Seville Theatre, was pressed into service for the first two performances and Blackburn Twins with Pam Cavan came in after Adler. The Mastin Trio went into the Town Casino, Buffalo, instead, although only the one member of the act was involved in the ban.

An ironic angle is that the Chez management two years ago booked the trio into the spot at $750 weekly for two weeks. As events turned out, the cafe was unable to play the act. Mastin Trio went to arbitration and Chez was forced to pony up $1,500. It's the management's feeling now that if they were able to play the act at that time, they would have saved the $1,500 since the performers couldn't have come in anyway.

Jan August to Preem Det. Cafe's New Location

Detroit, April 8.

Yeamans' Supper Club moves across the street from its present location in downtown Detroit next Monday (14), with Jan August headlining the housewarming show. Move was necessitated when lease ran out.

It cost $100,000 to refurbish the new quarters. Main dining room seats 180 persons, about the same as in old spot. Stage is attached to the bar. There are also a stag bar and banquet rooms.

Yeamans' will continue its policy of one-act name entertainment plus music for dancing, with three shows nightly.

Thugs Take 2 Cafes In Philly for $5,100

Philadelphia, April 8.

Bandits had an active weekend, knocking off two cafes in the Philadelphia area. At the Old Mill Inn, near Media, three thugs escaped with $1,800 in cash and jewelry valued at $2,100, early Saturday morning (5).

The Chimney House, in Pennsauken Township, New Jersey, was held up early the next morning (6) by a pair who got away with $1,200 in cash.

REY-GOMEZ RECITAL

Federico Rey and Pilar Gomez will give a dance recital at Central High School of Needle Trades, N. Y., April 19.

Rey designed all of the costumes for this recital.

April Stevens, vocalist, has opened a two-weeker at the Shamrock Hotel, Houston, supported by tapster Johnny Mack and Henry King orch.

Ethel Smith's N.Y. Cafe Debut at Pierre Hotel

Ethel Smith and Nelle Fisher & Jerry Ross have been signed for the Cotillion Room of the Pierre Hotel, N. Y., starting May 6.

It's Miss Smith's first cafe date in New York. Fisher & Ross, dancing regulars on tele's "Your Show of Shows," previously played the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y.

A.C. Awaits Key Easter As Winds Chill Palm Draw

Atlantic City, April 8.

Chills, winds and overcast skies cut the Palm Sunday (6) crowd considerably here. While the weather worked against the resort, the crowds were called "very good" by Chamber of Commerce officials.

Despite the gusts, the city's promotion of selecting the 10 best hatted women went forward as planned. Those picked by the judges appeared at Press Club headquarters in Convention Hall and were awarded diamond-studded gold bracelets.

Hotel reservations had been good for the holiday, the loss coming from influx of the one-day visitor who drives down to enjoy the Palm Sunday parade. Bad weather outdoors meant better b.o. for film theatres, bars and restaurants.

With a break in the spring weather, some indication of what kind of a season is in store for this resort will be on the books after next Sunday night (13) as the annual Easter parade is staged. For years a good Easter crowd has been indicative of a good summer season and in most instances the Easter forecast has been found to be very accurate.

Most businessmen here are watching the weatherman with one eye but meantime making plans for the biggest Easter of them all.

Top spot to open for the Easter weekend is George A. Hamid's Steel Pier, with Frances Langford headlining the stage show, supported by Berk & Hollow, Pat Hill and Larry Delma, Milt Douglas and Priscilla and the Ming Sing Stars. Tony Pastor orch plays the Marine Ballroom.

The best dressed woman in the Easter parade will be selected during the height of the promenade. Both nightclubs and hotel grills are preparing to capitalize on the holiday crowds, arranging special Easter Saturday night entertainment which includes late supper at prices ranging from $20 down.

Pic houses will offer usual midnight shows and there will be scores of private parties on the islands and in spots along the mainland.

Steel Pier will be the locale of the annual Absecon Island sunrise service, while off shore a similar service will be held at Reade's drive-in theatre.

AGVA NIXES WAIVERS ON ICER'S NAVY DATE

Hollywood, April 8.

Ice-show promoter George Arnold's request to American Guild of Variety Artists for waiver of salaries for eight performers in three-day show before U. S. Naval Base at San Diego was nixed last week, with Arnold ordered to post a $500 bond.

According to Eddie Rio, AGVA Coast rep, Arnold said he had been given $1,200 by the Naval base, but wanted to rent equipment for $250, use the rest of the coin to send for his own equipment in Miami, and his pitch to guild was that in this way he could provide work for the eight. But AGVA put the brakes on that plan, made him cough up for the performers.

Hamilton's Comeback

Halifax, N. S., April 8.

After being on the shelf as an entertainer for about 30 years, Ross Hamilton, of Great Village, N. S., has launched a comeback. He started acting as a professional while a soldier in the Canadian army overseas, his groove being femme impersonation. He was a member of a troupe which toured army camps.

Lou Walters' Pro-Nitery Torch, Decries 'Superiority' Stance

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

Perhaps I should pay no more attention to George Kaufman's stated aversion to night clubs than I would to any other uninformed person. I doubt if Mr. Kaufman has been in a night club in 10 years. I have never seen him in the Latin Quarter, the Copacabana or the Riviera. Apparently Mr. Kaufman gets his information from the reading of lurid, dated literature of the prohibition era when every back-door speakeasy, which Mr. Kaufman may have visited, was called a night club. Even in those days there were many fine establishments, with well-produced shows, which served good food, kept within the limit of every law, kept their self-respecting heads and showed a profit.

The Shuberts, Flo Ziegfeld, Earl Carroll, George White, Billy Rose and Michael Todd all ran and some of them got their starts in night clubs. Monte Proser, the producer of several shows, including "High Button Shoes," ran and is running a night club.

It is difficult to see a Broadway musical, a television or radio program, or a motion picture without seeing artists who received their start, schooling, became famous and made a pot of money out of night clubs: Jimmy Durante, Sophie Tucker, Beatrice Lillie, Betty Hutton, Martin & Lewis, Milton Berle, Sam Levenson, Martha Raye, Danny Thomas, Danny Kaye, Arlene Dahl, Virginia Mayo, Frank Sinatra, Paul Whiteman, Guy Lombardo, Jack Cole, Lena Horne, Carmen Miranda, Carmen Amaya and many others.

The night clubs have brought to America more stars than any other branch of show business: Maurice Chevalier, Edith Piaf, Charles Trenet, Jean Sablon, Victor Borge, Gracie Fields and dozens of others. The night clubs of New York are as necessary to the attraction of visitors as is any other one factor.

Bartender's Widow Sues St. Loo Cafe for 30G

St. Louis, April 8.

Alleging that a section of the floor behind the bar in the Cotton Club, midtown nitery, collapsed June 16, fatally injuring her husband who was on duty as a bartender, Mrs. Ruby Hursey last week filed suit in the local Circuit Court asking for $30,000.

Mrs. Hursey's petition claims that as a result of a broken ankle her husband's left leg was amputated and he died on May 2, 1951, while still under treatment. Frank Muchnick, operator of the club, and Pearl Gordon, owner of the building, were named defendants.

Equitable's 'Work Or Walk' Edict To Texas' McCarthy

Glenn McCarthy's battle with the Equitable Life Assurance Society, which holds the liens on the Shamrock Hotel, Houston, has reached the point where the insurance company has told the hotelier and oil magnate to concentrate on these two holdings or get out of the operation. McCarthy Oil & Gas Company is also involved.

McCarthy owes Equitable $34,000,000 and is in arrears on amortization payments. The insurance company stepped in and took over the properties which McCarthy is managing.

Recently, McCarthy started organization of a new company which was being underwritten by the Houston investment firm of Christie & Co. Equitable then told McCarthy that he couldn't devote full time to the holdings which he is now managing and the new firm as well. Ousting of McCarthy from the hotel and oil firm's management would be a prelude to foreclosure.

The Shamrock Hotel is one of the more important talent buyers in the southwest.

Jo Stafford a Smash In London Palladium Debut

London, April 8.

Jo Stafford, making her Palladium debut, scored a boffo reception and drew capacity business at her opening performance yesterday (Mon.). The singer received a mounting ovation for an 11-number routine of contrasting tunes. Accenting charm and style, she did a solid 40 minutes and begged off with customers clamoring.

Pat Henning, who was booked in almost at the last minute, clicked in a laugh-laden routine, while Frank Ross & Anita La Pierre got a nifty reception.

Bill also included Salici Puppets, Peter Sellers, Five Talo Boys, Pauline Grant Ballet, Louise and her Dogs and Pony, and the Palladium Tiller Girls. Layout is in for two weeks.

To Audit Canton Aud. Books on City's Request

Canton, O., April 8.

The municipal Memorial Auditorium here was reported about $15,000 ahead of expenses in its first six months of operation by Ralph Smith, manager, after City Councilman Herbert Buker asked that a three-man committee be named to investigate the financial condition of the million-dollar building.

Buker proposed an increase in auditorium rates, and suggested that the books of the L. C. L. Presentations, Inc., the auditorium's major booking agency, be examined. The latter is fighting any increase, and offered its books to Buker to bolster its stand.

Smith said an immediate audit of the auditorium's books would be made.

Jackie Kannon will make his N. Y. bow at the Latin Quarter May 11 following the run of Joey Bishop.

Tommy Trinder's Big B.O. Trans-Canada Rates Him Dominion Repeat in '53

Toronto, April 8.

With a fortnight's big gross of $43,560 at the Royal Alexandra here, plus a four-week whirlwind cross Canada tour of split weeks and auditorium one-nighters for $127,940, Tommy Trinder, cockney comedian heading his "Royal Command Music Hall Varieties," will be back next season for another Dominion junket. Meanwhile, after his first visit to Canada, Trindler immediately embarks on a six-month tour of Australia and New Zealand, set by Lew & Leslie Grade Agency.

Trinder tour was the brainchild of Ernest Rawley, manager of the Royal Alexandra. On a recent trip to London, he induced the comic to make a trans-Canada tour on behalf of Variety Village, the residential vocational school in Toronto financed by Tent 28 of the International Variety Clubs. With Trinder taking a 50% cut in salary, plus other British vaude acts, something over $30,000 will be turned into the Variety Village coffers.

Lent, Holy Week Give N.G. Complexion to N.O.

New Orleans, April 8.

Biz in niteries, theatres and other entertainment centres is way off this week due to Lent and especially Holy Week. Bourbon St., in the historic Vieux Carre, where the city's hot spot and swing places are as numerous as flies, is taking it on the chin as a result. Faring much better are top spots, but they too are way down.

Weekenders have been keeping most of the smaller niteries living, if not thriving, past few months. Most of the bistros are content to rock along minus outstanding attractions until after Easter.

Biggest draw presently on strip row is Kalantan, who has been more or less the magnet since the Mardi Gras season, attracting steady flow of male trade.

Night Club Reviews

Palmer House, Chi

usual English drawing room patter. Where Miss Thompson's act was characterized with more choreography last year, now it's a better, sharper and more commercial presentation, with the lads back again.

Pierre D'Angelo & Ana are tailormade for this room with the pair scoring on straight ballroomology. Duo is making its third visit here and cop lush hand with liking "Holiday For Strings." Team almost has the room down to a hush as they twirl to "Speak Low," and follow with "Clair De Lune." There's a little afterpiece done to a French medley for a neat bowoff.

Martin Bros. have some clever marionettes starting out with Conga dancers and skeletons, but a dejected clown is still the best crowd-pleaser of them all. Buffoon, whose broken balloon sets him crying, is almost lifelike. Abbott dancers repeat one number and have another which serves as an intro to the main act, with lasses wielding brooms and feather dusters. Eddie O'Neal ties the show together as emcee and does equally well fronting the orch. Zabe.

Steuben's, Boston

Boston, April 5.

Don Dennis, Laurette & Clymas, Neal Stanley, Chia & Somay, Tony Bruno Orch (6), Harry Fink Trio; minimum $2.50.

Current layout at this popular Vienna Room stacks as above average and should help offset biz doldrums synonymous with Holy Week when the word gets around. It's fast, bright and with no dead spots.

Bill tees off with the boy and girl Oriental duo, Chia & Somay, in a nifty sesh of hand balancing, lifts, back flips and acro tricks. Highlight of stanza is furnished by the lad, who dives through three hoops into which 24 knives have been inserted, barely missing the blades in flight. Trick grabbed neat reaction.

Neal Stanley, who quit show biz for a brief fling in the business world, is back, and uncorks a series of impreshes for neat results. Bypassing many of the hackeneyed subjects for carboning, he scores okay with Donald Duck, Red Skelton's "Little Boy," Akim Tamiroff, Groucho Marx and Frank Fontaine. However, at request of ringsiders, he includes impresh of conversation between Bette Davis and Jerry Lewis, winding with Cagney as George M. Cohan.

In closing spot are Laurette & Clymas, a satirical terp duo who poke fun at their more serious counterparts cavorting through a South American routine, the currently popular East Indian terping, and include their version of actions of a dance duo, newly married and after three years. (In circa '90 costumes), they enter on a wheelless bike frame for a zany panto bit while seated on a park bench, hypoed by the musical cues adeptly handled by the Tony Bruno crew. Gal's mugging and deadpan introing aid the overall impact with pair grabbing nifty mitt action throughout. Wind with a straight version of Viennese waltz, just to prove thay can be serious.

Bill is, as usual, slickly emceed by Don Dennis, who grabs the spotlight for vocalizing of "Swanee," "Wheel of Fortune" and "Babalu" for oke results. Backgrounding is neatly supplied by Tony Bruno who splits customer terping chores with subtle Latino rhythms of Harry Fink's trio. Elie.

Cafe de Paris, London

London, April 4.

Dwight Fiske, Sydney Simone and Winston Lee orchs; $5.50 minimum.

Current attraction at this chic nitery is American Dwight Fiske, a newcomer to the local scene with an act that breaks away from most conventional standards. Artist relies entirely on original material, has the stage to himself and provides his own piano accompaniment for routine of six numbers.

Humor and sophistication characterize the material. And each number is a separate and distinct performance with Fiske enacting all the situations. His timing and gestures are immaculate and the show receives an appreciative mitt from a receptive audience.

Pattern of the act is clearly set with his intro number, "Stella, a Pure White Mouse," a sad tale of a rodent who strays from home in search of romance. From there he follows through with other lyrics in the same key, including "Case 142," the story of a psychiatrist, and winds up with "Sunday Morning Hangover" and "Mrs. Pettybowl." Latter number has an indigo streak which is enjoyed by this smart sophisticated patronage.

Terping music is ably contributed by the two resident orchs maestroed by Sydney Simone and Winston Lee. Myro.

Le Ruban Bleu, N. Y.

(FOLLOWUP)

Tony and Al Mele have refurbished their show of long standing so that accent is now on comedy. In place of Ronnie Graham, who has left the proceedings to assume a role in the Leonard Sillman legit musical, "New Faces of 1952," Mickey Deems and Patricia Bright have come in with a vivid line of gab and tunes to continue the entertainment on an extremely high level. However, Graham has left behind his wife, Ellen Hanley, to continue in this bistro. Miss Hanley is a likeable singer and continues to score.

Miss Bright is a familiar on the intime circuit. Her material is excellently tailored to achieve yocks in virtually any setting. She's added some new numbers for this stint. Her recital of the southern gal is on the same high level as her other material. Rib of the Gallic chantooseys is still the highspot of her turn and it's just about reached the status of a saloon classic. She gets rewarding palms after her stint.

Deems, on his first date here, indicates that he can also make good in the intime inns. He highlights his efforts with dissertion on handling his brat on a day off. It's been his mainstay in theatres and it's similarly good for laughs here. He has some long and rambling routines, but they are so designed that interest is never lost. He throws in a fast line as soon as there's the slightest danger of an interest lag, and as a result walks off a hit.

Other performer is Ray Raydell, who was Rascha of the former team of Rascha & Mirko. He sells songs with his own guitar accompaniment and hits it off nicely with his multi-lingual offerings. The Norman Paris Trio showbacks and does the lull music, while Julius Monk, the room's artistic director, emcees affably and similarly works the ivories. Jose.

Bimbo's 365 Club, S. F.

San Francisco, April 5.

Mr. Ballantine, Day Dreamers (4), Jacques Cordon, Alan Cole, Dorothy Dorben Dancers (10), Ronnie & Jimmie, Derle Knox Orch (8); $1.50 minimum.

This spot has hypoed its entertainment policy since its moveover to new premises, and all to the good. Current bill is breezy and bright with sheaf of girls (six ponies and four tall stems) in peppery routines aided by borealis costuming. It's solid standard nightspot fare.

Opening item is gay "Easter Time" prance with balloon bedecked showgirls backing pony's carnival terping, and Ronnie & Jimmie in ballet bit at fade. Can-Can music in this provides sparky tempo.

Jacques Cordon, working unicyle on table, turns in a flashy juggling routine to perky kudos. This is clicky standard talent that shoves the specialties off to good start.

Second up are Day Dreamers, three boys and a gal, who offer a foursome of tunes, some of them in close harmony, that brings a good mitt. Stepoff is "Great Big Beautiful World," followed by "Sorrento" with operatic twist, "Nothing Like a Dame," and "A Wonderful Guy," which is smart chirping and strong bowoff. Encore "Old Man River" passes muster but is let down by contrast to previous items.

Mr. Ballantine is the main pitch in a smart, novel, gag-magician stance with a lot of bellylaugh content. Groomed in tails, comic tosses off routine of fast hoke which leads nowhere magico-wise, but combines a lot of Lindy chatter with pure corn for maximum impact. Lot of talent here which scores even over dinner dish clatter. Ballantine has mucho on the ballo and is grooving himself for an upstairs berth in the nitery circuit. Big hand rewards him for his stuff, and deservedly.

Finale, of gals, specialties and orch, is a punchy period to proceedings. Ted.

Flamingo, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, April 3.

Tony Martin, Pantomaniacs (2), Hal Borne, Flamingo Lovelies (8), Matty Malneck Orch (10); no cover or minimum.

Filling a brief span of four days between Gene Nelson and belated appearance of Vaughn Monroe & Co., Tony Martin stepped in to aid management. Weekend biz boomed.

The Martin pipes and presence are smoother than ever. With the greatest of ease, he purrs forth a collection of songs encompassing jump to ballads. His flagwaver start, "Great To Be Alive," is superseded by the applause-whipping "I Get Ideas." Another Martin air, "Domino," receives the velvet treatment as does a combination from his latest pic, "The Closer You Are," blended with "In Old Manhattan" and spiced with a bit of clogging. The w.k. "Enjoy Yourself" bubbles with extra fancy verses, while "Without a Song" is belted straight from the shoulder.

In a departure from customary lyrics of "I Got Rhythm," Martin indulges in repartee with accomper and conductor Hal Borne. "September Song" is tenderly depicted, and requests for "Bells of St. Mary's," "There's No Tomorrow" are answered for peak applause. Following casual invite for patrons to come up for dancing while he croons oldies the floor groans with its capacity of shufflers.

Pantomaniacs are held over with their miming of various recordings. Flamingo Lovelies under aegis of songsmith Sam Coslow bid adieu following the Martin filler, and maestro Matty Malneck takes a fortnight hiatus while Monroe handles all music chores.

Flamingo bonifaces are in hopes that Martin's pic commitments will allow his return for period encompassing Variety Club's 16th anni convention, April 28-May 1. Will.

Sans Souci, Miami B'ch

Miami Beach, April 7.

Alan Dale, Sacasas Orch, Herman-Magner Dancers; $2 minimum.

This room, one of the top earners on a comparative basis along hotel row, is doing okay with booking of Alan Dale. Youngster is a personable lad, who puts over a well versed and highly acceptable songalog via warmth of personality and delivery of special material. Includes the pops and standards for build to his toppers, vocal impreshes.

Standouts are his versions of "With A Song In My Heart" and, for change of pace, "Darktown Strutters Ball" and a recent recording, "Broken-Hearted." Works in special on "Oh Marie" to lead into vocamimings of Sinatra, Monroe, Tony Martin and Eckstine. From reception, looks a solid bet for the better spots.

Ann Herman & Magner dancers set up the Latin ballroom terps that a considerable element who come into this room look for, with Sacasas and orch, longtime holdovers, keeping them hip-swing happy and adding zing on the backings. Lary.

Riverside Motel, Reno

Reno, April 4.

Andy & Della Russell, McCarthy & Dale, Bernadette-Phelan Dancers (3); Riverside Starlets (12), Bill Clifford's Orch; no cover or minimum.

Although this show has only three acts, it ran an hour and a half opening night. It's since been trimmed and now makes a neat and tight package.

Riverside Starlets have two production numbers, a rain theme in transparent, short slickers, and a filmy, dream thing in white gowns, done with big white fans. Both are up to the usual George Moro production standards.

Orch's vocalist, Mary Marshall, is featured in opener and gals huddle and run around in a flashing rainstorm. Then, as Mary Marshall chirps "Singin' in the Rain," chorus settles down to pleasant little precision tap routine with twirling umbrellas.

Bernadette-Phelan dancers, two boys and a girl, terp to tone poem, "Vanity." Narration is by a scratchy recording which could be better produced. The males toss her around, she with an aluminum wheel which supports a supposed mirror. Act is smash at times, but all three participants seem to be at limit of endurance and a little unsteady in some of its more spectacular parts. The stint seems to be breaking in, and shows improvement with each show.

Gene McCarthy & Jimmy Dale were in this spot last summer with Frank Sinatra. They've added a lot of new material for their comedy routines, and have kept the best of last year's stuff. Act still opens with McCarthy and dummy singing "I'm Gonna Live 'til I Die." A duet here throws the customers until Dale steps from behind curtain with mike. Dale is a fine singer, and some of the material is built around his pipes.

Some new routines by Max Schulman have added to the act. "Great Moments in History" features a skit in Washington throw-

WALTER WINCHELL

"An orchid to Arthur Blake for his impersonations."

EARL WILSON

"Bravo!"

RADIE HARRIS
The Hollywood Reporter

"Not even snow and sleet, Lent and the imminent Ides of March (Income tax day!) kept a capacity crowd including Rosie Dolly and Irving Netcher, Phil Silvers, Odette Myrtil, Stanley Logan, Yul Brynner, Joen Baruch, Eddie Dowling, Portia Nelson, John Conti, Whit Cook and Verne Alves from overflowing the 'Blue Angel' for Arthur Blake's debut. Having seen Arthur at the Bar of Music in Hollywood, Cafe Society in N. Y., and the Colony, Astor and Empire Music Hall in London, I can attest to the fact that he is at his brilliant best here. Not only are his impresssions devastating, but his accompanying patter is equally clever. After the first show, Herb Jacoby quickly tagged him for a return bow in the fall, following his Palladium debut in London."

VARIETY

"This Herbert Jacoby-Max Gordon oblong intimery continues its pace of presenting one of its superior entertainments . . . Arthur Blake, a brilliant personator.

"Blake, a veritable darling of Coast bistros, is just about knocking 'em dead with his long line of pasquinades. His route of personalized portraiture covered some 45 minutes at show caught. He was evidently shooting the works in a tremendously biting one-man production that was sometimes staggering in realism.

"The Blake gallery is wide. What's especially special about it is that each etching is extensive, not a mere quickie that almost every impressionist has in his book. The key grimace or other physical reflection of a character he essays remains to continue the illusion when the establishing factor is dropped during the unfolding. That's possibly the secret of his power to create devastating portraits.

"Of the 18 or so characters up for caricature, a good dozen are femmes. The Laughton is precise, the Soph Tucker developed more on voice than manner, while the Clifton Webb is typically sardonic and the Gloria Swanson doing Norma Desmond is a throwaway that can be spared, along with Margaret O'Brien.

"About midway, the big fellow launches his big bertha, Tallulah Bankhead at rehearsal of her 'Big Show.' This provides opportunity for a long and surgical excursion into Tallu Guests. Series encompasses Jimmy Stewart, Beatrice Lillie, Sydney Greenstreet-Peter Lorre, Barbara Stanwyck; segueing into Ethel Barrymore as Nellie Lutcher, a real stiletto; and then La Bankhead's 'Good Lord' finale score in which each principal takes a lick at the lyric. Finely wrought is his Bette Davis on nursery rhymes, and follow-up Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is designed with sweeping liberties.

"For his closer, Blake pours the acid on Louella Parsons via a program being taped at Blue Angel. It's possible it can be improved upon—but by whom? Some of the stuff is brashly blue, but this is no kiddie playground. To show himself in the thesp range, Blake also manages to slip in Jose Ferrer as Cyrano, assisted by an offstage voice on dialog. The Gascon costume is perfection and the speech from the play done straight and surefire." Trau.

DANTON WALKER
New York Daily News

"For this week's Preferred List, the outrageously funny lampoon of Tallulah Bankhead and her 'Big Show' guests by Arthur Blake at the Blue Angel. In a long list of good mimics, including Sheila Barrett, Dean Murphy, Florence Desmond, et al, Blake takes the lead because he somehow manages to look as well as sound like his victims."

DOROTHY KILGALLEN

"Tops in Town"

"Arthur Blake's mad impetuous imitation of Tallulah at the Blue Angel."

BILL SMITH
Billboard

"Arthur Blake's talent for rapier-like mimicry puts him head and shoulders over his competitors. His take-off of the National Broadcasting Company's 'Big Show' with an uninhibited Tallulah, tho almost vicious in its aping, showed acting of a high order. Blake's best, however, is his Louella Parsons. At times it seems almost libelous, but there's no denying that it's funny."

ing a dollar across the Potomac. The boys still do some pantomiming to recordings—best being a holdover of Ezio Pinza and Mary Martin singing "Some Enchanting Evening."

Andy Russell bows in with "The One I Love," looking boyish and friendly. He medleys "Besame Mucho," "Amour," and "Cielto Lindo" to a good score and then, with a bit about the "Andy Russell Story," he brings on blonde Della for a "Thou Swell" duet.

Most their numbers are novelty. "You Could Be Replaced" finds him imitating Billy Eckstine, Tony Martin, and Mario Lanza, with some talk by Jimmy Stewart and Clark Gable. "Roaring Twenties" puts the Russells in costume, and brings on a soft-shoe. "The Honeymoon is Over," another novelty, gets good reception. They're a fresh and entertaining combo—putting over their act with warmness.

Starlets wind up the show with fan number which solos Marie Roe, a fetching dancer. Bill Clifford's orch is tops on the showbacks.

Chez Paree, Montreal

Montreal, April 5.

Blackburn Twins & Pam Cavan, Tom & Gerry, Don Dellaire, Boots McKenna Line (7), Palm de Luca Orch (8), Peter Barry Combo (5); 85c admission.

Current layout at Chez Paree took a few days to get going this week due to last-minute cancellations, substitute acts and replacements. Originally, show was to have opened last Tuesday (1) with the Will Mastin Trio starring Sammy Davis, Jr. (see separate story). Instead, on opening night, Larry Adler, playing at the Seville Theatre, doubled for two performances in socko manner while manager Jerry Taylor hurried in the Blackburn Twins, originally shedded to show April 15.

Despite poor Lent and pre-Passover biz, the present revue, sparked by the trim hoofing and vocal antics of the Blackburn duo with pert Miss Cavan, is drawing better than expected. The Blackburns, who appeared here several years ago at the now defunct Samovar, have improved immensely and the addition of a little femme interest has boosted overall impact nicely.

The Twins have added several new items with the emphasis on the song stuff since last viewing, but their old standby, the mirror routine, is still their best seller. Used wisely at the beginning of stint, this particular bit of business establishes them solidly and guys follow neatly with "Too Wonderful" which introes Pam Cavan and then a so-so interp of "Baby, It's Cold Outside" which starts big but fades to a tagless finale. "Movies Are Better Than Ever," with the gimmicked closer, shows threesome to best advantage and gets them off to a rousing reception.

Opening slot goes to Tom & Gerry, agile acrobats who wham over some nifties on the parallel bars, mixing the comedy and straight stuff with precision and finesse. This sight-type performance, although seldom used in this cafe, is a natural here and is a standout starter for any revue.

The Boots McKenna line, sporting several new faces, do well with all routines, looking best in the "Slaughter on 10th Ave." production with vocals by house singer Don Dellaire. Palm de Luca waves a firm baton over all music and is spelled by Peter Barry's Latin-mad Rhumbaists for the dansapation sets. Newt.

Ciro's, Hollywood

Hollywood, April 4.

Divena, Jackie Kannon, Los Gatos (3), Dick Stabile Orch (8); Bobby Ramos Rhumband (5); $1.50, $2 cover.

Last year, when Herman Hover booked Lili St. Cyr, the novelty of an ecdysiast within the swanky confines of Sunset Strip brought both customers and the sheriff to Ciro's, Divena, who peels under water, doesn't stand much chance of drawing either. There wasn't even much of an opening-night splash.

Act—one of several under the Divena tag—is a novelty that soon wears thin and the latter half of the seven-minute stint in a 500-gallon tank on stage seems repetitious. Gal, a comely blonde, arouses some interest by the length of time she stays under water. The bubbles she generates just before she rises to the top to gulp more air provide an interesting effect, enhanced by judicious use of colored spotlights. Despite the underwater ballet billing, it's nothing but a strip and the routining doesn't seem particularly effective.

Current layout, as a whole, hardly seems the thing to combat the Holy Week letdown. Comic Jackie Kannon, though highly touted from the east, fails to generate the expected salvos and only Los Gatos, a fast acro team, earn real response. Kannon's material is overly familiar, by all definitions, and the few good bits he shows aren't enough to overcome the generally mild impression. Even a dressmaking bit with a bolt of cloth and a curvaceous blonde foil he introes as his wife fails to lift the level.

Los Gatos provide a whirlwind opener with a five-minute series of stunt stuff that evokes continuous applause. It's shrewdly handled and merits better spotting.

Dick Stabile orch continues to back the show and alternate for dancing with the Bobby Ramos rhumband. Kap.

El Rancho, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, April 2.

Samia Gamal, Tony Bennett, Lord Buckley, Jerry Pedersen, Joy Walker, El Rancho Dancers (9), Gene DiNovi, Billy Exiner, Ted Fio Rito Orch (10); no cover or minimum.

Cresting the wave of a potent publicity splash, coochy Samia Gamal is attracting the curious into El Rancho Vegas. Also present and accounting for some draw is warbler Tony Bennett, another of the current emotional breast-thumpers from Columbia's disk stable.

Miss Gamal gives a brief yet compelling ramble about the floor in what is described as the "dance of the King's"—meaning for one, King Farouk of Egypt. Propelled from the midst of Oriental terps by line setup, her entrance is heralded by sepulchral tones of Jerry Pederson, in sophisticated barker fashion. Ensuing wriggles and undulations show off the anatomical display for which she has been well touted. Figure is pleasantly rounded and gal is easy on the orbs. At close of number—which times at around four minutes—Miss Gamal thanks her audience first in Arabic, then English translation. Although expectations are geared for a sexier display, Miss Gamal wins with her agreeable personality and aura of authenticity surrounding her terps.

Tony Bennett's youthful charm and sense of vitality are in his favor at outset when he rips into "Taking a Chance on Love." Gets into some pash bleating with "Since My Love Has Gone" with currently popular overtones of emotional upheaval. Sequel is neat change of pace presenting pseudo-spiritual chant, "Sing You Sinners." Good response is gathered when he measures off for "Because of You." Dishes up plenty hokum during narration, slicing choruses of "That Old Gang of Mine." Reception above par all the way.

Lord Buckley, with his mad mouthings and British peerage posturing, takes off in impresh of Louis Armstrong grunting "Can't Give You Anything But Love." Then howls begin as he gathers four people from audience for his very funny hitch of Amos 'n' Andy. Uses four males, one femme to panto mouthings while he vocalizes all characters from A & A sketch. Winds up by retaining one participator for yockworthy hat-exchange bit and retires well ahead.

Jerry Pedersen and Joy Walker team neatly during line's curtain-raiser, "Salute to April." Ted Fio Rito orch capable, with assists from Bennett's accompers, Gene DiNovi at the keys and Billy Exiner at the tubs. Will.

Los Angeles, April 1.

Wideler Bros. (3), Anthony, Allyn & Hodges, Gali Gali, Dorothy Dorben Adorables (10), with Jane Fischer and Wilson Morelli; George Milan, Hal Derwin Orch (13); $1, $1.50 cover.

The transients and conventioneers who'll be turning up in increasing numbers in the next few weeks should find the current layout palatable, though not standout, entertainment. Highspot is the familiar but ever welcome prestidigitation of Gali Gali.

Egyptian magico trots out his usual bag of tricks with just enough of a switch here and there to add interest even for those who've seen it. The multiplying chickens and the plight of audience stooges still serve to spice the mysticism with mirth and it's all well sold. As usual, the napkin-waving finale gets him off solidly.

In deuce, the team of Anthony, Allyn & Hodges scores strongly with a comidance routine that's effectively handled. They segue into the buffoonery from a straight start, early "mishaps" keeping the audience guessing. Wisely, they let their audience know that the kidding disguises some deft ballroomology and earn a solid response.

Wideler Bros., the opener, are a hard-working trio with songs, patter and instrumental novelties to sell. Close harmony is okay and there's some effective sax stuff including some substitute fingering work that rates attention. Finale, a "Hopalong" takeoff, is weak and overlong.

Dorothy Dorben dolls peddle three okay routines, although opening show looked like it could stand a little more rehearsal. Featured dancers Jane Fischer and Wilson Morelli occasionally seem uncomfortable in the Spring, Balinese and Carmen routines and production bleater George Milan has a few uncertain moments with the special tunes. Hal Derwin orch does its usual good job of showbacking and terplaying. Kap.

Hotel Radisson, Mpls.

(FLAME ROOM)

Minneapolis, April 2.

"What's New!", with Elise Rhodes, Hal Hackett, Jack Marlin, Richard Goltra, Doris Schmitt, Billie Hayes & Wilson Stone, Arthur Ravel Orch (8); $2.50-$3.50 minimum.

"What's New!", a lively succession of original song and dance numbers by a sextet of hard working young people, packs diversion for this plush spot.

Hardly measuring up to its self-designated "intimate revue" classification it bypasses skits entirely. Unpretentious offering nevertheless gets far away enough from even nitery group presentations to afford at least a slight touch of novelty for cafe society. And its songs and dances lend themselves nicely to this spot of class bistro. Unit runs mostly to ensemble numbers, but there also are several duets and a single by Jack Marlin who clicks with impressions of Laine, Eckstine and Vallee. The Wilson Stone songs are for the most part tuneful if not especially distinguished, and the lyrics, which he also authored, frequently have clever comedy overtones in a satirical vein. Incidentally, Wilson, at the piano, conducted the performance caught.

In Elise Rhodes and Hal Hackett, the show has a particularly attractive and winning pair of youthful performers. Billie Hayes gets in a few clowning licks and Doris Schmitt and Richard Goltra come through well as dancers. "Giddy Over Video," utilizing four members of the cast, amusingly lampoons the present TV rage via song. Another of the eight numbers, "This Love Is a Sure Thing," with five performers, also is along production lines. The costuming in all instances passes muster.

including the theatres or Radio City and, in Radio City, incidentally, there is a night club. The Empire Room is as important to the Waldorf as is any other of its service-giving functions.

The New York Central, Pennsylvania Railroad and all other railroad companies coming into New York recommend night clubs as do the airlines and other transportation companies. No Tourist Bureau anywhere in the United States plans a New York tour without including a night club in its itinerary. The Latin Quarter, during the past 10 years, has grossed over $25,000,000 and played to over 5,000,000 customers. Evidently many people find as much enjoyment in night clubs as they do in theatres. The biggest hit on Broadway is just finishing its third year while the Latin Quarter is finishing its tenth. The Latin Quarter outgrosses "South Pacific" week after week.

In Mr. Kaufman's revival of "Of Thee I Sing," incidentally, one of the leading stars, Paul Hartman, got his start in night clubs and cabarets. Mr. Kaufman directed "Guys and Dolls." Its stars Vivian Blaine, Martha Stewart, Robert Alda, Pat Rooney, B. S. Pully, Stubby Kaye, all appeared regularly in night clubs. What that show would be without these artists is beyond my comprehension. Where would "Top Banana" be without Phil Silvers? Tony Bavaar, the romantic lead of "Paint Your Wagon" is working in a night club, Celeste Holm and Alfred Drake, stars of the original "Oklahoma" company, worked regularly in night clubs.

People have a good time in a night club. Mr. Kaufman's TV show's sponsor, Lucky Strike, is happy to have its products sold in night clubs. Where CBS or NBC would be without night club entertainers on their programs is pitiful of reflection.

Derby Wilson has played night clubs for years. I doubt if he has ever lost one cent through any defection of a night club owner. The American Guild of Variety Artists looks after its members and sees that they get paid. Usually they require a cash bond. Equity, the dramatic artists' union, also requires a bond, so that, evidently, the dramatic union has as many problems as the night club union. It happens that, with my payroll of $20,000 a week, I do not have to put up a bond with AGVA because they trust me and know that my artists get paid. Most night club operators, when they open or operate a night club, do so with their own money and the money they lose is their own. How long is it since a legit producer has spent his own money to produce a show? I just wonder. Performers and chorus girls in night clubs are better paid than they are in Mr. Kaufman's branch of the entertainment world, and night clubs certainly give more for their money to the customers than do many legit shows. At least, if you do see a bad show in a night club, you at least get a meal and a couple of drinks for your money.

Lou Walters.

Durante has been concentrating on NBC video. Next show is April 19 when he'll have Bette Davis as his guest.

Retirement from New York nightclubs doesn't mean that Durante will leave cafes completely. He'll continue with occasional cafes in other cities. There are other Manhattan clubs which will permit Durante to do two shows maximum nightly, but Durante will not play away from the Copa, which was instrumental in sparking his "comeback" a little more than 10 years ago.

N. J. Riviera's Name Splurge

Riviera, Ft. Lee, N. J., will again go heavy on names this year. Boniface Bill Miller already has signed as headliners Jane Froman for the opening show April 22; Jean Carroll and Redcaps, May 6; Ritz Bros., May 20; Tony Martin, June 3, and Will Mastin Trio, July 3.

Opening parlay will have, in addition to Miss Froman, Phil Foster, Fecundo Rivero Quintet and the Cabots. Walter Nye orch and Pupi Campo will supply the music. Donn Arden is again staging the show and Miles White is doing the costumes.

'Glory' Opens 6th Season At Williamsburg July 1

Richmond, April 8.

"The Common Glory," Paul Green's symphonic drama, will open its sixth season at Lake Matoaka Amphitheatre, Williamsburg, July 1. Play is to run through Aug. 31, with performances each night except Monday.

Howard Scammon will direct. Myra Kinch is set as dance director and choreographer. Auditions for all speaking roles are now taking place and rehearsals are scheduled to start on June 12.

Nikolaidi's Odyssey

Elena Nikolaidi, Greek Met Opera contralto, is leaving May 20 for Australia, where she will sing in 40 concerts, booked (and also to be aired) by the Australian Broadcasting Co.

From Australia, singer flies to Athens to sing the title role in "Carmen," and from there to Israel, where she will give two benefit concerts.

Larry Adler's U.S. Comeback

Harmonica player Larry Adler will make his first U. S. appearance in several years at an all-classical matinee concert at Town Hall, N. Y., May 3. He's also been signed for Orchestra Hall, Chicago, May 10, and is attempting to get other stands.

Adler has been touring Europe for the past couple of years and recently returned to the U. S. He has played several dates in Canada. While overseas, he toured for UN troops in Korea under British auspices.

Adler, together with Paul Draper, left the U. S. more than two years ago after a widely publicized libel trial in which they sued a Greenwich, Conn., housewife who linked them to Communists. Case ended in a hung jury.

Show Biz N.J.'s No. 1 Industry; A.C., $786,000,000

Atlantic City, April 8.

Some 16,000,000 visitors here in 1951 left $786,000,000, or more than half of the business done by all the resorts in the state combined, according to statistics gathered by the N. J. Dept. of Conservation & Development.

The survey reported a statewide gain of 15 to 20% in New Jersey resort business last year, and showed that the entertainment industry tops the statewide list, with the $900,000,000 chemical industry second.

Survey was prepared at the request of the N. J. Resort Assn. The state will spend $75,000 on resort advertising this year, an increase of $25,000 over last.

New Haven.

Editor, VARIETY:

As a member of the American Guild of Variety Artists and a reader of VARIETY, I wish to thank you for the April 2 story, "AGVA to Mull Defense of Connors vs. Suit by Insurance "Originator." If this had not appeared in VARIETY it is doubtful if the AGVA membership would have been informed of this issue.

I base this on the fact that I attended a recent meeting of AGVA in which the membership was informed by interested AGVA members (not union elected members) that the National Board of AGVA had voted to pay all expenses of ex-president Gus Van in a personal lawsuit of George Ross vs. Gus Van. It is purely a private suit. Why must AGVA assume responsibility for an act of an individual since the union is not being sued?

Lotsa Girls, Spec, Glamor Make Up This Year's Nifty Ringling Circus

By LEONARD TRAUBE

There is no less accent in 1952 on girls-girls-girls, super spectacles and theatrically rigged glamor than John Ringling North has been accustomed to pitch into his circus in its pre- and postwar dress. It's a cinch that N. Y. customers will pay the $6.50 top for Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus, because the gen-u-wine, non-celluloid "Greatest Show on Earth" happens to be an amalgam of musicomedy, revue, vaudeville, medicine show, vignettes from the music-hall and liberal doses of Circus Maximus. At its fancy scale it's still cheap for the product, regardless of its qualitative complexion from season to season.

This year's excursion into the tall-figure brackets preemed at Madison Square Garden last Friday (4), again for the benefit of the N. Y. Heart Assn. and necessitating some tangents which, aside from the traditional impediments occurring at an RB-B&B opening night, pulled the show to a 12:15 a.m. finale from an 8:40 teeoff. Allowing about 15 minutes for intermission, this spanned about three hours and 20 minutes of show and immediately set up post-preem tailoring via the eagle eyes of North and general factotum Pat Valdo, who've been through this surgical operation so many times that it's now a seventh-sense routine. Before the first week is out in the 38-day (75 performances) run ending May 11, a good 30 minutes will have been chopped from the show proper, aside from the absence of the Heart Assn. trimmings.

This year's edition, the 82d in the "combined shows" series, as per the billing, has a gorgeous Sunday punch in half a dozen femme-filled specs, about as many full-blown aerial displays, five concoctions from the harlequinade sector and another half-dozen in animal and miscellaneous spottings.

Spark Missing

While there are a number of standout individual performances that drew appropriate salvos from a packed Garden, there is nothing of the smash quality in any turn; certainly nothing that supplies the old shock. Just the same, there is an electric fascination attached to the spec-processionals, which have been hypoed considerably with schmaltzy music by North to the lyrics of E. Ray Goetz, this being the team that supplied some of the tunes in the Cecil B. DeMille-Paramount "Greatest Show On Earth." The cleffings are given thunderous treatment by baritone Harold Ronk, who, it may be said parenthetically, succeeds to the mantle of Bill Tabbert; it was the latter's Big Show hitch that catapulted him to recognition in a somewhat wider sphere via his spotting in "South Pacific."

The North-Goetz pairing has produced some catchy if not distinguished tunes that set off the productions brightly. Among them are "Butterfly Lullaby," "The Good Old Times," "New Orleans, the Mardi Gras and You" and "Gold Dollar Moon." Each is worked as the theme in exercises on ground and aloft that fill the arena with an aura of almost dreamlike splendor. High up in the visual sweepstakes are the costumes designed by Miles White, whose colors and fabrics represent audacious notions that arrest the eye. That most of his costumic efforts are filled by the torsos of some five dozen damsels in aerial ballet and track terping tends to make his draughtsmanship come alive with picturesque execution.

Even the elephants bear their volume of chichi maidens, but in this instance it's a parade for which the habiliments have been fashioned by a dozen of the country's top designers, via a Look mag hookup. With White directing the promenade, the girls appear on their ponderous mounts in the garb devised by such names as John Frederics, Hattie Carnegie, Adrian, Mr. John, Clare Potter, Adele Simpson, Omar Kiam of Ben Reig, Tina Leser, Nettie Rosenstein, Ceil Chapman, Monte-Sano, Pruzan and Claire McCardell. Their names and the descriptions of the gowns are emblazoned on the caparisons of the bulls, trained by Eugene Stott.

The opening gun is in the usual wild animal key, centre-ringed by imported Oscar, Koyoot, with a trainer, Czeslan Mroczkowski, in snappy cageful of lions in some tricky leaps and formations. In the flanking rings are performing bears worked by Albert Rix and Robert Laydar. The complicated equipment and shifting chutes for the middle ring necessitate putting this display on in the teeoff spot, since it would cut into time as a later grooving.

Koyot is one of a score of acts with "first time in America" labelling which, together with last year's intros, give the unfolding a truly United Nations aspect. There are fewer than half a dozen full-season troupes holding over from the wartime years. Of these, the most easily recognizable are the three flying-return acts — Concellos, Comets and Artonys—whose personnel have changed over the span. As per tradition, they constitute the most graceful set in the show, earning the highest rewards for their didos in the ozone, including leg and arm catches, pirouettes and passing leaps. Their mentors are incomparable Antoinette Concello, aerial ballet director, and her husband, Arthur, general manager of the circus.

Tasso's Demi Tasse

Of the imports, the most novel is Dieter Tasso, a slack wire juggler flanked in the outer rings by Helmuth Gunther (new) and the Bakers. After the latter conclude their manipulating, Tasso is provided a solo that gives him star rating in a unique buildup of 16 cups and saucers, piece by piece, as he teeters on the thread. Tasso employs his free limb to toss the objects upon his noggin, and for a humorous fillip tops his effort with a cube of sugar and a spoon. It's about as extraordinary in the tease department as the show has offered in years.

The early trapeze display lines up with imports Greta Frisk, Nina Karpowa and Miss Luigina; and

Ringling Bros.-B&B

Miss Tamrov and Miss Mara. Latter sets the pace over centre ring with balancing on the hocks of her heels and ankle drops.

Stellar trapeze artist positioned later is Pinito Del Oro, an extremely graceful looker with a free wheeling series of conceptions on the swing topped by head balancing. She is over the centre in the "Butterfly Lullaby" aerial spec in which the 60 gals are garbed in extravagant "Mme. Butterfly" inventions, and they work rhythmically on ladders with winged tops. Harold Ronk vocals the theme song with nostalgic delicacy.

A mixed aerial and ground number centres the imported Renis-Ferroni man and woman duo on a rolling cylinder in hand-to-hand and other stunts that take more technical virtuosity than appears on the surface. In the other spots are the Riggettis (new) in juggling on unsupported ladders, the Bisbinis (new), in matching display, and Kareff Manus on a low trap. Other skeddel act, the Similis, didn't work, a girl of the troupe having been injured at dress rehearsal during their perch tuneup last Thursday afternoon (3) and taken to Polyclinic Hospital.

Another import, the Great Linares, occupies centre on tight wire, with a forward somersault as piece de resistance that is too long in the making for best results. The supporting offerings are the roller-skating Heirolls (new), balancing Matrans and Chata Sisters, with slack wire performer Senor Tonito billed but not put on. Instead, there is a clever top-spinning senor culled from the sideshow in the Garden's underground.

The Liberty horse stanza with a dozen steeds in each ring has cynosure and Marion Seifert and Gena Lipkowska on the ends, plus a mounted equine. Aside from the errorless drills and formations, the big work here is in the rear-ups.

In the absence of seals this year, the animal humor is provided by Hammerschmidt's Wonder Apes, working on an elevated stage over centre in dining room setting to draw attention exclusively from the 50th St. side of the arena which they face. They are a good vaude-TV act, as are Nana Woolford's uninhibited dachshunds in their barrels and other props. Third ring has a pony drill.

A billed solo display of the Great Romba, touted somersaulting automobile import, was not shown, reportedly because they could not put his equipment into proper position against the entanglement of hangings and guy wires.

Pre-intermission spec, "The Good Old Times," will probably be the most remembered pageantry for this year. There are such floats as Helen of Troy, Trojan Horse, Cleopatra and Anthony, Ponce De Leon's Fountain of Youth, plus elephants and a Hannibal midget, a revolving fountain, Robin Hood, Columbus and his caravels, and Lady Godiva. Tumblers and dancers make the promenade, and the theme song, "Some Day, Today Will Be the Good Old Times," is but one of several vocals by Ronk. For finale, thousands of bubbles are released from the top of the arena, floating daintily down to pewholders who make the grab. The effects were devised by Nat Fisher.

Working on a lampost affair, the imported Rassos, man and woman, show good tricks on bikes. Also from European sod in this display are the bicycling Ricoris and cycling Frielanis, and in the other spots, the Cycling Chaludis come through with neat pyramids and the Haslevs with fine trampoline work.

The Rodry Bros., introed last season, are soloed in hand-to-hand gymnastics on a high bar. It's a real thriller, particularly in the somersaults to hands. Necessary times gaps between their tricks impairs continuity, however. Aerial Montons (new) and the Platos were billed, but absent at opening.

Educated Nags

Richly adorned is the "Mardi Gras" spectacle, starring the veteran Portuguese horesman, Roberto de Vasconcellos in his authoritative, multi-gaited haute ecole, with flankings by equestriennes Luciana & Friedel, and Franz Ackerl. Arena is dressed gorgeously via masked femmes bearing glittering scimitars. The North-Goetz song aids the gay atmosphere buildup.

On the bareback riding end and rewarded with the biggest mitt is the veteran Loyal Troupe, with Justino Loyal rating the loudest applause for his somersaulting and vaulting, plus razzle-dazzle clowning, aided by an octet of femmes. The other rings have two girls billed as the Parents Troupe and another gal in spot reserved for imported Erzop Family.

A ground display brings on acro acts in Gimmas Troupe (new), Lilly Kohler & Abbott Girls (new), the Freddie and Bokara teeterboard troupes and Fredonia Family, risley performers. Some of these appear to be doubling acts.

Next-to-closing spots the solo Camillo Mayer Troupe (6) on the high wire, an importation in a sterling performance that, while it's orthodox thrillery on the cable, is pushed to eminence via the speed and flapjack-making of Mayer. Latter is an amply proportioned man whose grace and agility are amazing. The entire routine is done to soft mood music that contrasts sharply with the other scorings of Merle Evans and his hard-working musicians. There are the usual pyramids and chair work, plus scary walks sans balancing pole.

The closer is "Gold Dollar Moon," carrying out the gilt theme in huge rotating gold pieces and appropriate costuming of the femmes and pachyderms. Even Evans' brass banders get into the act, with the entire contingent moving into the arena. Daredevil Connely, as the "Man in the Moon," works on high in his brilliant crescent rigging, to punctuate the overall theme. Nate Eagle is the overall announcer.

Among the operators in clown alley are Felix Adler, Emmett Kelly, Otto Griebling, Lou Jacobs, Paul Jerome, Paul Wenzel, Charlie Bell, Jack Le Clair and Paul Jung. The joeys get their innings in the various walkarounds, runarounds and spotted numbers. Some of these are Jung's "misfit army" ending in a cannon catapult; Paull's Musical Clowns; Lou Jacobs, in supersonic tomfoolery; and "Africa Squeaks," with jungle trappings and an oversized cauldron, the best of the productions.

After the opening wild animal display, NBC's Ben Grauer took over on the mike for the Heart Assn. proceedings. Last year some big marquee names were presented, but for this trip the American Guild of Variety Artists put a ban on such appearances. As a result, the big play went to cartoonists and illustrators, who accompanied the sketches with which they are associated. These were done on large placards. Involved in the parade down the 49th St. side of the track and ending in the centre ring were Russell Patterson, Rube Goldberg, Al Posen, Otto Soglow, Phil Berube, Martin Branner, Ken Kling, Tom Gale, Ham Fisher, Paul Frehm, C. D. Russell, Joe Archibald, Chad, Lee Elias, Hilda Terry, Gus Edson, Eric Ericson, Paul Terry, George Wunder, McGowan Miller, Walt Kelly, Alfred Andriola, Charles Biro, Bob Dunn and John Pierotti. Harry Hershfield resuscitated his oldtime Abe Kabibble character. The drawings will be offered to help swell the fund. Grauer did an expert job on the intros and continuity gab.

Following intermission, John Ringling North made a brief speech, and then Grauer ringmastered a drawing for prizes from a large drum. He did a double take when the name of legit theatre owner Louis Lotito was announced as winner of an intermediate prize. The top prize was a Packard.

Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri was present as were a number of other notables, in behalf of the fund. The mayor's wife, Elizabeth, was chairman of the circus committee handling the preem night. She is also honorary campaign chairman for the year.

The circus figures to enjoy smash boxoffice in being dated so as to get in the Easter period, unlike last year when Easter occurred in March.

Roxy, N. Y.

Bill Hayes, Clifford Guest, Nanci Crompton, Divena, Roxyettes, H. Leopold Spitalny Choral Ensemble; "With a Song in My Heart" (20th), reviewed in VARIETY Feb. 20, '52.

The stage accompaniment to the showing of "With a Song in My Heart" is necessarily brief because of the long running time of the film, but the entertainment values are compact and well routined. Booker Sammy Rauch and Arthur Knorr have dressed this display handsomely. The Easter theme is carried out in a manner that will get the school holiday trade and to provide the appropriate pastel motif to the proceedings.

There is sufficient novelty character in this show to please all age segments, a necessary item to trap the holiday trade. The novelty is a replacement for name value, although Bill Hayes (New Acts) is w.k. because of his regularity on tele's "Your Show of Shows."

Probably the highlights of the current layout are Nanci Crompton and Clifford Guest. Miss Crompton is a refreshing ballerina. She spent the major part of last season as the pirouette specialist at the Riviera, Ft. Lee, N. J., and has since done some TV shots. She's a lithe and graceful specimen and has a pair of charming routines that do extremely well. She chimes in with production, such as mouthing a nursery rhyme to offstage singing, and appears in the line numbers. She registers in every department.

Guest, an Australian import, who has made good in previous trips to this country, has an excellent line of ventriloquy. He handles the dummy masterfully and has a set of effects such as echoes, dummy yelling from a suitcase, and approaching sounds which show his technical excellence as well as entertaining abilities.

An added novelty is Divena, an underwater act in a glass tank. Actually, the marine maid is one of several doing this act. For the family fare the strip aspects have been minimized. The gal sheds a gown underwater and then performs most of her stuff in a one-piece bathing suit. The ballet is well done and comes off smoothly. The applause returns are okay.

The line numbers are well staged and costumed. The bouncing ball routine, a fave at this spot, is fitting for the holiday and the fan number surrounding the Divena stanza is picturesque. Paul Ash's orch showbacks well.

Warner, N. Y.

Louis Jordan Tympany Five (8), Harvey Stone, Gene Nelson, Ella Mae Morse, Les Diagoras (3), Bob Connelly orch; "Jack and the Beanstalk" (WB) reviewed in current VARIETY.

The Warner Theatre, which dropped stage shows about a year and a half ago, is giving live fodder another try. Here's a case where a theatre can't do with 'em or without 'em. Apparently, there is an audience for variety shows and the Warner (nee Strand) is attempting to buttress the weak takes of the straight film policy with live talent.

The Warner, during the past two weeks, housed the Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet and did a whopping business. Object lesson, in this case, has been known for some time. It's attractions that enliven the boxoffice — without them, no policy can hold on for any length of time. Should booker Harry Mayer et al. be able to get top-notch headliners, then the house will draw.

The Warner's return to variety is marked by a peculiar bill. It's a layout that will most likely get stronger matinee than evening trade. The picture, "Jack and the Beanstalk," will entice the juves who can't stay out too late. What evening trade goes into the house will be credited to the stager. The opening day's show was underlighted because of the fact that the ballet didn't get out until a few hours before the doors opened. The kleigs couldn't be set up completely by the time the show went on.

The house has collected a prime batch of talent. Gene Nelson, from films; Ella Mae Morse, who's riding on "Blacksmith Blues," Louis Jordan and Harvey Stone, along with Les Diagoras, make up an entertaining layout.

There are many interesting items on view here. Foremost among them is Nelson, the Warner filmster, who has impressed with his song and dance work. It's considerable at this showing. He is a smooth and ingratiating terper, shows much charm and skill and has some applause-winning routines, particularly the one in which he does some spectacular leaps. However, the net effect isn't all that he can get out of the turn. He talks too much and overworks the gag of changing shoes. All this slows up his act to the point where interest is diminished. Granted that some gab is necessary in order to permit him to catch his breath, and the shoe changes help toward the same end, but it seems that Nelson spends more time fooling around with inconsequentials than he does in terping. But no matter what faults are inherent in this turn, it's still an applause winner on the strength of superior dancing.

Ella Mae Morse has been around for many years and retired about five years ago for a fling at domesticity. With her recent comeback, which was given terrific impetus by her Capitol recording of "Blacksmith Blues," she fills the public's requirements of a "new sound." Not having been heard for some years, she's an auricular stranger to many. There's tremendous interest in her voice, which has a bluesy, bouncy overtone. However, there's too much concentration on style at this point. It seems like a conscious overlay upon an essentially good voice and frequently the stylistic endeavors have little relationship with the song. However, she gets jogging along nicely in some of her numbers and the net effect is very good.

Louis Jordan and his Tympany Five, with the assistance of two lookers, seem to have a good time on stage. Jordan gives the effect of enjoying his work and bats out a variety of tunes which hit maximum response. In closing the show, he makes the customers walk out feeling they've gotten their money's worth. Jordan's singing, crew's musical backing and the girl's incidental stepping give a good overall effect.

Harvey Stone started as a GI comic and hasn't been able to lose that characterization. Everytime he adds a new routine, the booker or nitery owner asks that he return to the khaki stuff. The customers are used to it and like it. It's a bit of type-casting that's working out to his advantage. The routine goes smoothly and the laughs go over as always. His GI meanderings are on their way to becoming classics, and when mixed with new writing, it makes for a fine bit of entertainment.

Completing the lineup is Les Diagoras, two boys and a girl to take care of props. The lads are expert hand-to-handers and make some picturesque acrobatic and juggling formations. Go over handsomely.

The Warner is also attempting years ago influenced WB to insert a TV reservation clause in all contracts, a proviso which has become a standard in the trade, excepting, of course, where equally alert writers, agents and others fought for and were able to reserve video rights unto themselves.

Some of the biggest WB grossers and story, idea and play deals were consummated by Wilk, including Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army," George M. Cohan's "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "The Watch on Rhine," "Fugitive From a Chain Gang," "Where's Charley?," "Anthony Adverse," "Life With Father," et al.

Incidentally, his son, Max Wilk, is a successful TV-radio and general show biz scripter.

to build up a personality as it did previously in the case of Florian ZaBach. Bob Connelly, a singer, fronts the band, emcees and does a song turn. He makes a good appearance, although he still has to learn much of stage mores.

The Holy Week biz is a bit discouraging at this point, but there's the lush holiday trade coming up. Jose.

Capitol, Wash.

Washington, April 5.

Connee Boswell, Three Kanazawas, Sis & Sonny Arthur, Norman Evans; "Steel Town" (U).

Despite lift given by chantoosey Connee Boswell, this is a slipshod show, lacking general format and style. With biz generally dull at the Capitol current session, reaction is indifferent and spotty.

Headliner Boswell, appearing in final slot, manages to lift sagging galleries with her unique style and warm voice. Her infectious personality catches on early in act, and customers respond with affection, but sans the all-out enthusiasm this fine showwoman deserves. Tees off with a catchy medley of "Smile" tunes, then goes on to the sentimental "I'm Not Afraid" from "King and I." Her new version of "Begin the Beguine" impresses as highspot of routine. This is an unusually appealing treatment of a surefire tune. Switches to her portable spinet for her new Decca hit, "Somebody Stole My Darling From Me," and winds up with heftiest mitt action of evening.

Other three acts are okay of their type, but seem to fit together poorly. The Kanazawa trio of Oriental across twirl barrels and each other with amazing dexterity, for which they receive fine response. However, placed in No. 2, there's little they can do to pace show.

Norman Evans, import from the British music-halls, has a novel comedy act that garners spotty laughs. His British accent slows him up, so far as this crowd is concerned, and it takes about five minutes for customers and comic to get together. Subject of comedy skit, a session in a dentist's chair, seems worn and not up the alley of American audiences. Starting slowly, newcomer does manage to work pewholders up to some enthusiasm before bowing off. Not much more can be said for act.

Comedy terpers Sis & Sonny Arthur spoil a pert routine with too much patter. They bounce around to fair results, winding up with a fast jitterbug routine. Lowe.

Casino, Toronto

Toronto, April 4.

Les Paul & Mary Ford, Garry Morton, Vinni De Campo, Clark Bros., Wallace & Gayle, Jimmie Cameron, Archie Stone House Orch; "Sellout" (M-G).

Les Paul & Mary Ford, with both on electric guitars for sophisticated hillbilly and modern folksong arrangements plus Wally Kamin on bass, are packing the customers in for requests of "How High the Moon," "Mockingbird Hill" and other disk clicks. Bouncy tempo also includes "Just One More Chance" and terrific speed finale of their "World Is Waiting For the Sunrise," with Carol Kamin (Mary Ford's sister and wife of Wally Kamin) offstage at separate mike for dual echo effects, but receiving no billing or even appearing onstage for final bow. (Thought is this would otherwise spoil the audience illusion, though known to the trade.) Group earned enthusiastic beg off when caught.

Clark Bros. over nicely on their fast and furious tap challenges, full-stage glides and splits; Vinni DeCampo for his song package; Wallace & Gayle for their adagio acrobatics in waltz time, complete with shoulder spins; Garry Morton for his patter and trumpet finish. Neat and fast-paced bill, with everyone over to nice returns, but the Paul-Ford duo the topper marquee lure via those lineups.

Jimmie Cameron, as m.c., competently skippers, with Archie Stone's pit orch contributing ditto support. McStay.

Olympia, Miami

Miami, April 6.

Bill Lawrence, Skeets Minton, Ben Wrigley Co., Ciro Rimac (4), Rudenko Bros., Les Rhode House Orch., "Whispering Smith Vs. Scotland Yard" (RKO).

There's an offish show on tap here this week, despite a balanced lineup of acts. In top spot, Bill Lawrence offers up the run of pops and standards that most of the current crop of recording and TV upcomers essay. Working with a bad throat, he still managed to garner a fair amount of mitts. Lad needs instruction in delivery on the showmanship angle. Has the personality and the looks to make him a bet.

Skeets Minton sets up a novel idea in ventro acts, via his dummy-impreshes. Utilizes a well versed technique and gets them with his vis-a-vis taking off Vaughn Monroe and other record clickers, to make for novelty.

Ciro Rimac & Co. are familiars here. They project their Latino hip and frenetic dances and songology, plussed by the kicked around "American yitterbug" idea, to mark up heavy reaction from stubholders.

Rudenkos set in fair fashion with their ball balancing and juggling. Comedy ideas and eccentric hoofery of the Ben Wrigley group is on the negative side for aud reaction. Les Rhode house orch backgrounds capably. Lary.

LES FRERES JACQUES (4)
Songs
20 Mins.
Blue Angel, N. Y.

Les Freres Jacques, a four-man team which has been clicking in Parisian niteries, make a dubious debut in the U. S. with their current stand at the Blue Angel. Essentially, this combo is handicapped mostly by the language barrier, and a completely revised repertory, designed for English-speaking audiences, is needed for them to register in the U. S.

Garbed in a Gallic version of a barbershop quartet, with handlebar mustaches and nylon sweatshirts, this crew is formatted as a comedy-singing turn. That's pointed up by the unison gesturing and incidental antics within the group, but the pantomime aspects are definitely not strong enough to hit with non-French speaking customers. In fact, the audience's failure to understand what they are singing tends to make their panto seem somewhat repetitious and monotonous.

Their best number, done with some prelim explanatory notes, is a number about a short Mexican general. Another, supposed to be pure nonsense, registers as the others. One serious item, "Barbara," is delivered in okay choral style but straight singing is apparently not their forte. Herm.

QUEENIE LEONARD
Comedy Songs
15 Mins.
Blue Angel, N. Y.

Queenie Leonard, British songstress who has come to this N. Y. spot by the way of Hollywood niteries, has a repertory of special material numbers rendered in English music hall style. Miss Leonard has an okay delivery for smart songs but, unfortunately, her material is spotty, some of it being witty but most of it rather heavy-handed.

Miss Leonard seems to be on the verge of being a satirist but she never quite crosses the threshold. On such tunes as "Be My Guest" and "I Do It Myself," there's an obvious comedy potential but the numbers fail to fulfill the promise. With considerable sharpening of her repertory, Miss Leonard could click in the class spots. At present, she has an esoteric appeal for special British-oriented audiences. Herm.

BILL HAYES
Songs
9 Mins.
Roxy, N. Y.

Bill Hayes, a regular on NBC's TV "Your Show of Shows," has throughout these appearances provided ample proof that he knows his way around the scales. His pipes are well developed, and techniques and projection are good. He's got a boyish charm that sits well with the crowd.

However, Hayes fails to get the maximum out of his personal appearance here. Stage deportment is virtually devoid of color. His gestures seem mechanical and song selection isn't of the best.

Chalk it up to lack of in-person experience. He doesn't have to work hard to project before camera closeups. Trying to get the same effect in a large theatre is somewhat different. Jose.

'Camera,' 'Joey,' 'Venus' Crix Choices; 'Don Juan' Gets Special Citation

"I Am a Camera" is the best play of the season, according to the N. Y. Drama Critics Circle, "Pal Joey" is the best musical, "Venus Observed" the best foreign play and "Don Juan in Hell" is "a distinguished and original contribution to the theatre." The selections were voted by the critics at a meeting yesterday (Tues.) at the Algonquin Hotel, N. Y.

"Camera," the John van Druten dramatization of Christopher Isherwood's series of "Berlin Stories," received 10 votes as the best play of the 1951-52 semester. It thus topped "Mrs. McThing," the Mary Chase fantasy for "children of all ages," which received five votes. Others mentioned in the balloting were Joseph Kramm's "The Shrike," with three; "Point of No Return," Paul Osborn's dramatization of the John P. Marquand novel, three; "Barefoot in Athens," by Maxwell Anderson, and "Grass Harp," by Truman Capote, one.

There was no real competition for best musical. After the members decided that "Pal Joey," originally produced 11 years ago, was eligible this season as a revival, the musical version of John O'Hara's mag sketches, with book by O'Hara, score by Richard Rodgers and lyrics by the late Lorenz Hart, walked off with 20 votes. "Three Wishes for Jamie," with book by James O'Neal and Abe Burrows and songs by Ralph Blane, got one vote, as did "Paint Your Wagon," which has book and lyrics by Alan Jan Lerner and music by Frederick Loewe. No other musicals were mentioned.

"Venus Observed," by Christopher Fry, received 15 votes as the best foreign play, while "Fourposter," by Jan de Hartog, drew eight, the only other import men-

Is This Heresy?

During the voting yesterday (Tues.) for the N. Y. Drama Critics Circle awards for the season's best shows, there was some discussion about whether the revival of the 11-year-old "Pal Joey" was eligible for the best musical and the 50-year-old "Don Juan in Hell" as the best foreign play.

George Jean Nathan, of the N. Y. Journal-American, opposed the idea. "It will make us look silly," he suggested, "if that's not redundant."

Sadler's Winds Two-Week N.Y. Stay with Sock 153G; Ballet Exodus to Europe

Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet, winding up a two-week stay at the Warner, N. Y., Sunday (6), racked up a sock $72,900 for eight performances for the stanza. Previous week, the troupe had garnered $80,200 on nine shows, for a socko $153,100 on the fortnight.

Troupe of young dancers, finishing a 27-week tour of the U. S. and Canada, flew back to London yesterday (Tues.). This week saw an unusual exodus of dancers from N. Y. to Europe. In addition to the Sadler's company of 49 that went home yesterday, a unit of 68 people representing the N. Y. City Ballet Co. flew to London on Monday (6). From there they planed to Barcelona, for a three-week engagement that opens a five-month European trek for the Gotham dancers.

Jerome Robbins, associate artistic director of the N. Y. troupe, stayed in N. Y. to finish dance rehearsals for "Call Me Madam," which is set to tour next month. Then he joins the ballet troupe in Spain. Artistic director George Balanchine, who was in Italy creating a ballet for La Scala Opera, in Milan, is already in Barcelona. Janet Reed, N. Y. City Ballet lead dancer who injured her leg several weeks ago, has recovered sufficiently, and flew to Europe with the troupe.

Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet finished off strongly at the Warner last week, with some new ballets and some sterling performances in evidence. The company, on its first U. S. visit, and tired from 26 weeks of steady, uninterrupted trouping, didn't show any of this fatigue, with Elaine Fifield, Svetlana Beriosova, David Blair, David Poole and Donald Britton as standouts, and supporting dancers also shining.

Director Ninette de Valois' choreography on "Haunted Ballroom" was intriguing, but her "Prospect Before Us" was a little too extended and colloquial to be altogether effective. John Cranko's "Pastorale" was a very engaging work. Celia Franca's "Khadra" was a pleasant fairy-tale confection, and Andree Howard's "Assembly Ball" an attractive work made particularly memorable by Blair's terrific twirls. Bron.

ATPAM Wants Pay for Benefits

Assn. of Theatrical Press Agents & Managers has waived for this season its claim for pressagent pay for Equity Welfare Fund Benefit performances of Broadway shows. However, the union has notified Equity and the League of N. Y. Theatres that it expects the matter to be rectified in the next production contract, which comes up for negotiation this summer.

Since the Welfare benefits became part of the Equity-League agreement, ATPAM has been agitating for pay for the pressagents, who were specifically excluded. The union has noted that company managers and house managers are paid for the extra shows, and argues that pressagents actually do a comparable amount of extra work for the dates. Equity has taken the stand that the added coin should be paid by the management of the show in question, rather than by the Welfare Fund.

Pending settlement of the dispute, the approximately $400 involved has been held in escrow.

L'ville Amphi Axes Chorus on Wage Hike

Louisville, April 8.

Slash of chorus personnel for the Iroquois Amphitheatre season was announced last week by George E. Gans, prez of the Louisville Park Theatrical Assn. Gans stated that Chorus Equity demands for $10 hike in weekly salary was responsible for the lopping off of four singers and four dancers.

Denis DuFor, managing director, readying his seventh season in Louisville, announced Edward Clarke Lilley will return to stage the productions, and Edward Hunt has been reengaged to conduct the orch and chorus. William Holbrook will be choreographer for the 1952 summer season.

Opening July 7, and running through Aug. 17, season will consist of "Where's Charley?" "Finian's Rainbow," "Great Waltz," "Up In Central Park," "Carousel" and "Brigadoon."

De Vries Disappoints In One-Woman Show

Beppy de Vries, a performer from The Netherlands, made her N. Y. debut in a one-woman show at Carnegie Recital Hall last Thursday (3). The stunt nature of the one-woman show is not a fair test of an actress' ability, but Miss de Vries clearly lacks the showmanship and potent personality that has won audiences for Cornelia Otis Skinner and Ruth Draper in this medium.

She is further hampered by the mediocrity of her material in sketches by Ryerson & Clements, Clary Franklin, and longer pieces by Sydney Thompson and Maria M. Coxe. The comedy is often obvious and tasteless and the characterizations amateurish, with the single exception of Dorothy Parker's poignant, "Just a Little One," in which a girl in a bar with a man grows increasingly maudlin with each drink. Even with the variety of accents employed, the net effect is of monotony and dullness. Gale.

Freedom Award to Green For 'Fathers' Pageant

Washington, April 8.

Paul Green, North Carolina playwright, won a Freedom Foundation Award here last week for "Faith of Our Fathers," his pageant with music which has been a feature of Washington's Sesquicentennial celebration.

Also honored with an award was Herbert T. Edwards, chief of the motion picture division of the State Dept.'s "Voice of America" program.

Bard Gets Superior Try At Hofstra College Fest On Special Globe Stage

Featuring what is probably the most authentic full-size replica of Shakespeare's Globe Theatre stage, the Hofstra College (Hempstead, L.I.) Third Annual Shakespeare Festival (2-6) drew over 6,000 viewers, including the Theatre Guild's Lawrence Langner, who plans to utilize a similar Elizabethan stage for the presentation of the Bard's plays at a Shakespeare Festival at Westport, Conn.

Superior for a college production, the offering, "Twelfth Night," starred British actress Stella Andrew, and Bernard Beckerman directed. The wooden, solidly constructed three-story stage structure, finished off with wooden "returns," is set up each year at one end of the school gymnasium, with wall drapes and a $2,000 back curtain aiding acoustically. Seating capacity is 1,200, with bleachers lining the side walls.

Designed by John Cranford Adams, the Hofstra Shakespearean stage was built by students from the college and nearby schools for some $3,000; commercial estimate was $30,000. The wooden stage provides five acting areas: the large forestage, the curtained inner alcove upstage, a curtained upper (or balcony) stage directly above it, with two window stages at either side of this upper stage. On the third level is the gallery where musicians are seated, and two colored columns on the forestage support a roof which protected the Elizabethan actor from the element in the open-air theatre of that day.

Utilizing these columns, the large forestage and the other "stages," director Beckerman kept the action fluid and well-paced, but locating successive scenes always in a different acting area wore the novelty a bit thin. Miss Andrew gave a sensitive, well-modulated interpretation of the wistful pageboy in disguise, Viola. Rest of the roles were played by students.

Of a cast generally competent for a college production, the most acceptable were William Schoope as the roistering Sir Toby Belch; Edward Hingers as the imitative bumpkin Sir Andrew Aguecheek; and Walter Thomson as the disapproving, ambitious Malvolio. Director Beckerman compensated for the shortcomings of his actors with ingenious bits of business, and while the comedy was broad, it was at the same time inventive. Composed by Gerald Humel, the music in the Elizabethan manner was a definite assist.

Regarding Elizabethan stages for modern Shakespearean productions, audience consensus was the same as at Stratford-upon-Avon this summer, where five plays were mounted on the Globe-style stage: okay for an occasional novelty but not for a steady diet. Vene.

Chagrin Valley, O., Barn Maps 10-Week Schedule

Chagrin Falls, O., April 8.

Second season for the Chagrin Valley Little Theatre here will start June 24, according to William Van Sleet, co-producer of the venture last year, who has arrived from New York to work on the season. His partner is Paul Marlin, of Canton, O. A new play will be tried as the first production, he said. Herbert Patterson, leading man in last summer's plays, has been engaged in direct the new troupe in 10 plays. Each show will run one week, from Tuesdays through Sundays, without matinees.

"Personal Appearance" will be the second play, and "Come Back, Little Sheba," the third. Also planned are "Olivier, Olivier," by Paul Osborne, "Blithe Spirit," "The Heiress," "Candlelight," "Papa Is All," and either "Dark of the Moon" or "Laura."

Met's 67th Season Ending on Upbeat; Bing Looks Set; Deficit a Mere 200G

By ARTHUR BRONSON

The Metropolitan Opera will close its 67th season in New York this Saturday (12) on an upbeat note, financially as artistically. Rudolf Bing, ending his second season as general manager, now seems solid in his spot after two years of storm, change and streamlining.

And as the Met preps for a spring tour of seven weeks, one of the most extensive in its history (likely to gross $1,185,000), Bing can look back on a '51-'52 season that ran the gamut—from picketing of the house, because of "Don Carlo," to packed houses for a terrific "Carmen"; from the shenanigans of a Welitch in "La Boheme" to the glories of a Flagstad in "Alcestis."

The Met, which ran up the biggest deficit in its history last season ('50-'51) with a 462G net loss, was headed for an even bigger nick this season, due to increased costs all around and no cutback on expenditures or new productions. A probable 500G or even 600G deficit loomed for the home organization, plus an additional setback of about $70,000 from the special touring company of "Die Fledermaus," which was a resounding financial flop, instead of an auxiliary moneygainer, as anticipated. (Troupe folded to about 140G in the red, with 70G for operational losses, which the Met is standing, and 70G additional for the production cost, which Columbia Records advanced and is absorbing.)

But due to two windfalls at beginning of the season—(1) remission of the Federal 20% admission tax, which ran last season to

Indiana Legit Group Makes Deal for House

Indianapolis, April 8.

Richmond, Ind., Civic Theatre has completed arrangements with Hudson Theatres, Inc., to use the 700-seat Indiana Theatre there for its productions during the next two years.

House, built originally for vaudeville and known as the Murray, will be made available to the community group a week at a time for seven plays a year. Otherwise it will operate with a film policy.

Richmond Civic, one of the strongest organizations of its kind in the state, has a membership topping 2,000, with a waiting list of 700, in a town of 40,000 population. It has operated the past several years in McGuire Hall at Richmond High School, which has 500 seats.

Equity Pushing Barn Fee Tilts

Actors Equity is going ahead with its proposed increased salary minimum for stock and its new $5 registration fee for locally-hired local players. However, the union has dropped its demand for hospitalization by the management for all players. That was decided at a meeting last week between Equity officials and representatives of the Stock Managers Assn.

Despite managerial predictions that the minimum salary increase from $50 to $55 a week, which it's claimed won't affect the established spots, may force some of the smaller barns to close or go non-Equity, the union refused to budge on the matter. It also declined to modify its regulation, applicable this summer for the first time, that actors recruited locally for bit parts be assessed a $5 registration fee. In this case, the strawhatters argue that relatively few places use such walk-ons and that a negligible amount of salary is involved, but assert that the setup has local promotional value for such spots.

After SMA reps pointed out some of the complications and questionable legal aspects of the proposed hospitalization payment rule, Equity agreed to drop it, at least for this season. According to the strawhatters, the suggested $1 per week payment by the management for each cast member would be at a higher rate than the hospitalization fee. It was also argued that in most cases the coin would be thrown away, or would have to be included in the union's overall welfare pool.

In its campaign against "abuses" of the touring package setup, SMA last week issued a letter listing the various "subterfuges" being used by agents to get around the organization's new stand. These were said to be substitution of a fourth actor in place of the advance man, offers by the stars to pay for additional actors in the unit, and attempts to classify straight plays as musicals (which are exempt from the SMA policy) by having the star sing a few songs.

SMA awards for the most cooperative stars of last season and the most promising new players this season will be announced at a luncheon to be held next Monday (14) at the Astor Hotel, N. Y.

2 Yiddish Plays to Debut

Two new Yiddish plays debut in the New York area this week, both to run through the Passover holidays.

Miriam Kressyn will be costarred with Leon Liebgold, Muni Serebrov and Max Bozhyk in "Sisters," comedy-drama with music by Louis Freiman, which opens Friday (11) at the Second Ave. Theatre, Manhattan.

Leo Fuchs will be starred in the title role of "Mendel Der Continental," musical by Harry Kalmanovitz, which opens at the Parkway, Brooklyn, with a matinee tomorrow (Thurs.). New production marks Goldberg & Jacobs' return as operator-managers of the Parkway.

Stormy 'Wozzek' in Sock N.Y. City Opera Preem, Grim But Impressive

The N. Y. City Opera Co. preemed its production of Alban Berg's controversial modern opera, "Wozzek," at City Center, N. Y., last Thursday (3) to an overflow house that included a fine crosssection of show biz. Work, composed 26 years ago, had had only one previous showing in N. Y., when Leopold Stokowski brought a Philadelphia troupe over to do it in a single some years ago, and was heard in concert version at N. Y. Philharmonic concerts last season. This is first time for its inclusion in regular repertoire of a N. Y. operatic organization.

Opus, a grim story of a downtrodden soldier, abused by officers and fellows alike, and finally betrayed by his woman, the mother of his child, in an impressive work. Music is atonal, with spoken dialog and sprechgesang in place of set arias and melodies, in a score as grim as the libretto. But the work packs power in ascending crescendo, and though one may not like it, one is impressed and even absorbed by it.

Joseph Rosenstock manfully conducted an enlarged orchestra through the difficult score, while Patricia Neway, Marko Rothmuller, Howard Vandenburg, Luigi Vellucci and Ralph Herbert han led the demanding lead parts skillfully. Work has undeniable stature, and adds strength to the N. Y. City Opera Co.'s list. Bron.

Two Operas Due on Spring Little Orch Society Sked

The Little Orchestra Society will present two post-season programs, featuring operas in concert form, this spring in N. Y. Vivaldi's "Judith Triumphant" will have its New York premiere April 21, and "The Pearl Fishers," by Bizet, not heard in N. Y. since 1916, will be given April 30. Thomas Scherman will conduct.

Janice Moudry and Mack Harrell head cast of the Vilvaldi work; David Poleri, Martial Singher, Jean Bartl and Kenneth Smith will sing "Pearl Fishers." Chorus in both performances will be the Westminster Choir, John Finlay Williamson, director.

'Wife' Closes on B'way to 24G Gain; 'Aisle' Loss Hits 230G for N.Y. Run

"Constant Wife," Katharine Cornell's revival of the Somerset Maugham comedy which closed Saturday night (5) after 139 performances at the National, N. Y., earned a profit of $24,000 on its $40,000 investment. That included about $6,500 profit on its pre-Broadway tour.

The show, co-starring Miss Cornell, Brian Aherne and Grace George and staged by Guthrie McClintic, cost approximately $30,000 to produce. It received generally favorable notices and played to near-capacity houses for about two months, but tapered off during the recent boxoffice slump. The backers have been repaid their original investment and $14,000 profit has been distributed.

After laying off this week, the production will play engagements in Philadelphia, Washington and Boston, after which it will shutter until fall, when it goes on a nationwide tour.

"Two on the Aisle," the Arthur Lesser revue which is currently on tour after its recent closing in New York, represented a loss of about $230,000 when it ended its 276-performance run at the Hellinger, N. Y. The production, capitalized at $175,000, plus 20% overcall, ran into terrific losses during its Philly tryout, necessitating an additional loan of $105,000 by Anthony B. Farrell, a major backer who had already put up the $38,000 bond money.

Farrell is understood to have been repaid about $85,000 of the extra coin, but the operation did not succeed in earning back any of the original investment or overcall, so the backers have received nothing. Despite a six-to-two favorable break in the notices (including a couple of raves), the musical never quite sold out, although it drew big grosses and operated comfortably in the black for many weeks.

Despite Farrell's loss on his original investment and his additional loan, he's figured to have actually made out fairly satisfactorily on the deal as a whole, since the show kept his Hellinger Theatre lighted over the summer, and for much of the time paid a sizeable rental.

Doolittle Plans 'Civic' Venture at Coast Ozoner With G&S, Opera & Ballet

Los Angeles, April 8.

James A. Doolittle heads the combine which has taken over the 4,400-seat, city-owned open-air Greek Theatre in Griffith Park for a season of ballet, opera and Gilbert & Sullivan presentations. Group expects to get started around July 15.

Doolittle reported that the Greek will be operated more on a civic basis, with emphasis on local talent wherever possible. Arrangements now are being made for productions.

Lease with the city provides for a guarantee and percentage deal, understood to be around $15,000 for the season, plus 5% of the gross.

Ozone legiter had been operated for the last six years by Gene Mann, who had inaugurated the outdoor musicomedy policy at the theatre. Greek operated in the red the first year, but made a profit in 1948, '49 and '50. Last year, Mann's interest was purchased in a corporate reshuffle that found a group of non-show biz people running the theatre. Mann remained as producer. Group's policy errors, including a decision to stage season's shows in San Francisco as well as Los Angeles, resulted in a seasonal loss of around $250,000.

Mann had maintained an option on the Greek, finally dropping it when he decided to concentrate on television packaging. He reported that the downbeat in Coast legit, and the rising cost of production, made it a difficult venture with a weekly operating nut of around $40,000 on regular shows.

Doolittle hopes to shave the production costs and is aiming at a $25,000 weekly budget for each of the four Gilbert & Sullivan operettas he plans. Spot will be operated on a $3.60 top basis, and civic groups are being approached to get behind a subscription deal.

ATPAM Nominations Set for This Month

Nominations for the election of officers and board members of the Assn. of Theatrical Press Agents & Managers will be made April 17. Prior to that, the manager and pressagent chapters will make their own nominations for chapter officers and board representatives.

There's been no indication yet whether Frank Smith, house manager of the Lyceum, N. Y., will be a candidate for re-election as president or whether Wolfe Kaufman will run again for vice-president. It's assumed, however, that Milton Weintraub will be renamed secretary-treasurer of the union, and that Oliver Sayler will be opposed as usual for re-election as business agent.

Barns Co-op To Woo Coast Names

Cooperative setup has been formed by a group of strawhat operators to persuade Hollywood stars to make appearances in stock this summer. Barn managers specifically note that the arrangement is not a move to bypass agents, but is intended merely to lineup additional film names for stock dates. If these latter players want to be booked by agents it's entirely up to them, the strawhatters explain. Elsa Finlay has been engaged as the Coast contact for the stock group.

Members of the producer setup (and their respective spots) are Lee Falk (Boston, and a new barn to be located near Framingham, Mass.); Theron Bamberger (New Hope, Pa., and the new musical tent in Philly); Charlotte and Lewis Harmon (Clinton, Conn.); Guy Palmerton (Fitchburg and Worcester, Mass.); Sara Stamm (Newport); John Lane (Ogunquit, Me.); Rowena Stevens (Mountainhome, Pa.); Marshall Migatz (Hinsdale, Ill.); Thomas Ratcliffe (Sea Cliff, L. I.) and John Huntington (Saratoga, N. Y.). Alternates who may take bookings the other members don't want or can't handle, are Donald Wolin and Harold Schiff (Matunuck, R. I.) and Gail Hillson (who expects to operate a new spot at Binghamton, N. Y.).

SPRINGFIELD LEGITER HAS FRENZIED OPENER

Springfield, Mass., April 8.

The Springfield Playgoers, Inc., almost saw hopes of opening and part of their house go down the drain last Tuesday (1), but despite a series of lawsuits and a burst of water pipe, they brought "Candida" in at curtain time before a near-capacity house.

The suits, which stemmed from a claim by the property's former lessee, Elias M. Loew, of Boston, brought a restraining order against the Springfield Playgoers, Inc., and the Gilmore Associates, who own the theatre, which threatened, even up to opening night, to prevent their using some of the theatre properties necessary for the production.

Among these items are listed the candy stands, light fixtures, balcony spotlights, velvet and canvas curtains, marquee ceiling, and curtains, marquee ceiling and floodlights. Loew says the properties listed in the complaint belong to him.

However, the restraining order was lifted to permit "Candida" to go on. Four hours before curtain time, a water pipe burst in an unused restroom in the gallery, sending hundreds of gallons of water cascading through to the main floor before it was discovered. The weight of the water collapsed the ceiling of the ladies' restroom on the main floor, damaging fixtures, new carpets, paint and other accessories.

By dint of extraordinary effort, the mess was cleaned up in time for the curtain.

COAST BOW FOR MARKS' 'LAND SAKE' MUSICAL

Hollywood, April 8.

Manley Marks has written book, music and lyrics for "For Land Sake," a new musical slated for an April 22 bow at Las Palmas Theatre here. Leon Gordon will direct.

Musical deals with a songwriter and his Broadway producer pal who are stranded in the Ozarks, and take refuge with a mountain family. It will be presented by Spotlight Productions.

'Dolls' Dishes Out 718G In Profits

Another dividend of $80,000 was paid last week by "Guys and Dolls," bringing the total distributed profit on the two-company operation to $718,191.81 thus far. The Cy Feuer-Ernest H. Martin production was originally financed at $200,000, plus $50,000 (however, the latter was returned to the backers without being used).

For the four weeks ended March 1, the period covered by the last accountant's statement, the operating profit on the venture was $84,719.52. That included $35,905.40 after deducting $109.64 N. Y. State unincorporated business tax) on the Broadway production and $48,814.12 on the touring edition. It brought the total net profit on both companies to $986,560.64 as of March 1. Show is in its 73d week on Broadway.

More Pointers, Brickbats For Show Outdoor Ads; N.Y. Museum Defended

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

Ned Alvord has an excellent point when he contends that there's nothing wrong with outdoor paper that elimination of superfluous copy couldn't improve. Another point which I believe is making paper not as effective as possible, is the standardization to the present-day three-sheet. Bastard-size paper, as is often used abroad today, gives wider scope to the layout artist for eye-catching design.

I believe Alvord was offbase, though, when he took a crack at the Museum of Modern Art. It is one institution that has always promoted exhibits of graphic art, American as well as European, especially theatrical paper. And its film research library and rental service to community and school groups should be applauded. Show business has no stronger ally for fostering an appreciation, both historical and contemporary, than the Museum of Modern Art. I'm happy to be a member.

Sol Jacobson.

More Schooling

Dallas.

Editor, VARIETY:

Have read with interest your several letters published from various writers concerning show outdoor advertising. Everything has been covered but the remedy. The medium was, and is, to "exclaim," not "explain."

I am told there isn't a single school that teaches anything about outdoor advertising; so, until then, the bills will continue to be with self-imposed inefficient selling quality. The boy who graduates from a school of journalism, therefore, is as unfitted to write copy for an outdoor poster, as I am to perform a thrombosis operation.

Only about four of the largest advertising agencies employ specialists in this field. In show business, they usually tear out the Sunday ad, caption it "A Smash Hit," and call the sign company.

Ashley's '10%-er'

Vet talent agency exec Arthur Ashley, onetime stage and film star, has optioned "The 10%-er," a farce about the talent agency biz by Bud Spence.

Ashley plans to produce it in the fall with a $50,000 budget. It's a one-set three-acter.

'Fourposter' Subs to Tune Up in Texas; Lone-Staters Plan Own N.Y. Hit Tours

Hylton to Stage London 'Blondes'; Seeks Channing

Deal has been concluded by the Kenneth Later agency for the British production of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," which will be done in London by Jack Hylton. Negotiations have been going on for two years.

British edition will start at the close of the show's current U. S. tour. Carol Channing, the lead, has been offered the role in the English edition if she'll agree to stay on for a full year. Herman Levin, producer of the original show now on tour, is in Europe, having just concluded confabs with Hylton in London.

Evans Aids Equity, Brit. Swap Talks

London, April 8.

Maurice Evans, who returned to England after 17 years to play the part of Arthur Sullivan in the film production of "Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Sullivan," is acting as ambassador on behalf of American Equity to open negotiations with British Equity for free exchange of players between England and the U. S.

The actor who contacted British Equity on his arrival, is hoping to arrange an early conference on the subject. He said there was an urgent need to liberalize regulations and establish free trade in the theatre, but the problem is difficult for both parties.

In the U. S., approximately 70% of the thespers are unemployed, and the figure in Britain is on a comparable level. It was hoped, however, that a formula could be worked out which would give a fair deal to both sides.

In last month's Equity News Letter, it was reported that an attempt to reach a reciprocal agreement with American Equity to abolish fees and recognize each others cards, had failed. The British union had therefore agreed to charge similar to those which British artists have to pay when they work in the U. S. This amounts to 5% of the salary, plus entrance fee.

SECOND BALLET TROUPE TAKING TO STRAWHATS

Growing popularity of ballet, as evidenced by its invasion of films, stageshows and TV, is being evidenced in another direction, in ballet's wooing by the strawhats. Ballet Theatre, due at the Warner, N. Y., April 23, as complete stage bill, along with a film feature, is being offered for four to six weeks on the silo circuit. Now another troupe is in line for barn dates, despite strawhat managers' professed dislike for touring package attractions (as against resident stock troupes).

Second troupe is a new group headed by Mia Slavanska and Frederic Franklin, with Alexandra Danilova as guest star, and a corps of eight dancers in support. Trio of leads are top names in the dance world. Under name of Slavenska-Franklin Co., troupe is currently in negotiation with Richard Aldrich for the week of July 28 at either his Cape Playhouse, Dennis, or Falmouth Playhouse, Coonamesset, Mass.

Troupe will likely play six barn dates in all, in a repertoire of two programs alternating during each week. Alfred Katz and Kurt Neumann (Mme Slavenska's husband) are the summer impresarios. In the fall, Naumann will send the troupe out on regular tour, while Mme. Danilova returns to her school in Dallas.

A joint recital by Merce Cunningham, Jean Erdman, Erick Hawkins and Donald McKayle, with assisting companies and orchestra, will be given, April 22 at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, as first venture of Theatre For Dance.

The replacement edition of "Fourposter," co-starring Betty Field and Burgess Meredith, is set for a tuneup tour in Texas before moving into the Barrymore, N. Y., to replace the original stars, Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn. The tour will also serve as a test run for a proposed production-booking setup in Texas.

Plan is for the Field-Meredith company to play four weeks of split-weeks and one-nighters in Texas and Louisiana, opening May 5 in Fort Worth. It will then return to New York for a week's final checkup rehearsal before taking over for the Cronyns, who plan a vacation and then a national tour, opening late June on the Coast.

Besides playing the tuneup tour in Texas, the replacement edition of "Fourposter" will be built in the shops at the State Fair Auditorium, Dallas, which constructs the productions of the summer operettas given there. Actual boking of the four weeks of tour dates in Texas and Louisiana is being handled by Bob O'Donnell, Interstate Circuit head, who has just returned from an extended vacation abroad.

With "Fourposter" as a test, it's reported that Interstate and the State Fair organizations have worked out a joint setup to produce and tour their own editions of Broadway hits next season, besides offering guaranteed tours for other productions. Of the four weeks available, 21 dates are said to be Interstate, with the balance independent spots.

La Jolla-Texas Tie

Idea is understood to be that managements would lease touring rights for the Texas-Louisiana territory while the shows were still current on Broadway, rather than wait until they could send the productions out themselves. This would enable the Interstate-State

New Orleans Community Drive Hits Record 45G; 9 Top Concert Events Set

New Orleans, April 8.

The New Orleans Community Concert Series concluded a drive last weekend for subscriptions to next year's concert series, amassing a total of $45,000. Drive was biggest in city's history, with total receipts setting a record for this town or any in the Community list, and helping to disprove the theory that the country is in the music doldrums.

Community, organized by Columbia Artists Mgt. to bring concert series to towns on an organized audience plan, comprises over 1,000 cities, about 500 of which raise under $3,000 for a season's series (of four or five events). New Orleans is one of 10 large cities included in Community.

Local drive was conducted under sponsorship of the new Orleans Opera Guild, an affiliate of the Metropolitan Opera Guild, with Mrs. Edward B. Ludwig as chairman. Community assigned Herbert O. Fox from N. Y. as field director on the drive.

With the coin raised, New Orleans will get a concert series of nine top-priced events, comprising the Danish State Symphony, Boston Pops Orchestra, St. Louis Symphony Ballet Theatre, Robert Shaw Chorale, Lily Pons, James Melton, Yehudi Menuhin and Rudolf Serkin. Prices of subscriptions ran from $5 to $14.

VET DANCER SHAWN SET FOR BARN LEGIT DEBUT

Ted Shawn, famed dancer-choreographer who's been in the longhair terp field 40 years, will make his first legit appearance this summer, at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, Mass. He'll play the title role in "Death Takes a Holiday," which opens the 11-week summer season at the Playhouse June 16.

Shawn is a neighbor of the Playhouse, being founder-director of the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, which has a 10-week season of its own every summer at Lee, Mass. Its season begins June 27.

Plays Out of Town

Of Thee I Sing

New Haven, April 8.

Chandler Cowles & Ben Segal presentation of musical revival in two acts (11 scenes), with book by George S. Kaufman, Morrie Ryskind; music, George Gershwin; lyrics, Ira Gershwin. Stars Jack Carson, Paul Hartman; featured: Jack Whiting, Lenore Lonergan, Florenz Ames, Betty Oakes, Howard Freeman, J. Pat O'Malley, Donald Foster, Robert F. Dancers: Vicki Barrett, Betty Buday, Georgine Darcy, Peggy Merber, Miriam Pandor, Pat Stanley, Cordelia Ware, Tommy Andrews, Crandall Diehl, J. Corky Gell, Skeet Guenther, Sheldon Ossosky, Harry Rogers, Frank Seabolt; Bob Tucker, Parker Wilson.

Showgirls: Arlene Anderson, Jean Bartel, Gregg Evans, Charlotte Foley, Dorothy Richards, Siri, Jeanne Tyler, Charlotte Van Lein.

This being a season of revivals, Chandler Cowles and Ben Segal figured they might as well join the crowd and disinter a certain Pulitzer prize-winning musical tagged "Of Thee I Sing." Whether their hunch was good or bad will be determined in the next three weeks after polishing has been completed for its Broadway bow.

As the show now stands, it rates a classification of fair entertainment. This rating can be upped by smart simonizing, and the know-how is there to do it.

It goes without saying that the score will carry appeal in this reborn version just as it did in the original. Lyrics have been somewhat topicalized and same goes for dialog, but there are certain sequences that give an impression of everybody waiting for somebody to do something. This situation is a matter of editing, a task that should not be too difficult in this particular respect.

While ensemble singing is good, show's major weakness is lack of quality individual vocalizing to sell some of the numbers.

They've assembled a generally competent cast for this one. It is inevitable that old-timers will compare the work of Jack Carson and Paul Hartman with the creators of their respective roles in the original, William Gaxton and Victor Moore. Such a comparison, however, will mean nothing to a newer generation of playgoers ogling this musical for the first time.

Of sufficient interest is the fact that both Carson and Hartman turn in creditable jobs. There is a feeling that Carson could be funnier with some choicer material, but he handles himself well and should register okay on his Broadway debut in this one. Hartman has brought his individualized type of humor to the Throttlebottom characterization and he, too, should find good acceptance in the finished product. The two are a solid click in a song-and-dance routine.

Betty Oakes, especially in the upper register, contributes the show's best solo vocalizing. Lenore Lonergan is a striking beauty contestant and a good comedienne, but her Andy Devine pipes leave something to be desired in the singing department.

Jack Whiting triples competently in support; Florenz Ames makes the French ambassador amusing; Howard Freeman, J. Pat O'Malley, Donald Foster, Robert F. Simon are appropriately cast as machine politicians, and Loring Smith fits nicely as a bigwig newspaper publisher.

Visually, they've lined up a bunch of pips to show off effectively some standout apparel that ranges from eye-filling bathing outfits to chic formals. Color of costumes combines with color of settings to steal a little thunder from the rainbow.

Dances provide an entertaining portion of the overall setup, and are sagely not overemphasized in relation to balance of show's content. Jonathan Lucas and Joan Mann are the toppers of the terpers.

Comedy highlights are a very funny film interlude carrying election returns, also a scene with Hartman presiding over the Senate.

Kaufman's staging has blended the ingredients skillfully on the overall production end, and conducting of Maurice Levine has kept pace from musical directing standpoint. Bone.

I Am Laughing

Dallas, April 2.

Theatre '52 production of comedy in three acts (four scenes) by Edwin Justus Mayer. Features Norma Winters, Edwin Whitner, Ramsey Burch, Charles Braswell. Directed by Margo Jones; set and costumes, Tony Deeds. Art Theatre '52, Dallas, March 31, '52; $2.50 top.

Grace Darling ..... Norma Winters
Peter Poindexter ..... Edwin Whitner
Jack Trowbridge ..... Ramsey Burch
Nicolo ..... John Munson
Roger Adams ..... Charles Braswell

Theatre '52, in presenting Edwin Justus Mayer's sophisticated comedy as a new script, injects a subtitle, "A comedy for those who think; a tragedy for those who feel." Play is also vexing to those who hear and see. First, this isn't a premiere, as announced; VARIETY files reveal "I Am Laughing" was presented in Pasadena, Sept. 4, '35. Second, script is extremely verbose, and plotwise it adds up to nothing. Since the opening, however, Margo Jones has edited it, cutting 28 minutes' playing time, largely from the overlong first act.

First act reveals a fading 39-year-old actress, at liberty, working on a new love, a disappointed playwright. After necessary asides to the audience, and numerous poses, she seduces him. The ex-husband appears later with an offer of remarriage to the talkative nymph, who plans to wed the new love. Barroom meetings with the playwright intros his friend, a painter, who accuses her of playing around.

Closing scene finds actress dejected and contemplating suicide for the second time, after rejecting her males. She turns to find the artist seated in the room, and resumes her wiles by dropping her handkerchief before him at the curtain.

Implausible, excess dialog is mastered by Norma Winters, who gives a fine performance in a difficult role as the actress. Four males in the cast are adequate and necessary, though the sole femme role carries the burden. Scene change in the second act disrupts the play, while payees see the living room furniture removed and the arena converted into a barroom.

What the author intended is never conveyed in three acts of padded dialog. Perhaps the whole is contained in the artist's remark, "I am intoxicated with the effulgence of my own verbosity."

Settings are richly fitted with antique furniture and accessories, while Tony Deeds' costuming is tastefully modern. Bark.

Off-B'way Show

Bed of Neuroses

(Originals Only, N.Y.)

Originals Only, a group that doesn't charge admission, but depends upon the goodwill of its audience in the form of voluntary contributions, has been presenting something described as a farce-comedy and called "Bed of Neuroses." Title couldn't possibly give an inkling of the dreariness of this occasion.

A. P. Mollison's play concerns a con-man who exploits the juvenile, a young man who seemed feebleminded, by posing as a psychoanalyst, and attempting to break up his affair with the ingenue which menaces his plans for continued exploitation. The characters bear no resemblance to human beings, living or dead, and the author's attempts to induce laughter through a quack's use of psychoanalytic jargon are vulgar and humorless. Any actors playing this opus would presumably deserve sympathy, but this particular company seems on a par with the material.

The purpose of Originals Only, which has its own home on Seventh Ave. near Sheridan Square, is to encourage untried playwrights and actors. It will discourage audiences unless it "encourages" with more discrimination. Gale.

Price's Utah Guest

Salt Lake City, April 8.

Vincent Price has been inked as guest lead of T. S. Eliot's "Cocktail Party" to be given at Kingsbury Hall May 7-10 by the University Theatre.

Production will be under direction of C. Lowell Lees, with local performers for balance of cast.

Legit Bits

Bonnie Arden resigned last week from the Baum-Newborn talent agency . . . David Warfield, who died last June, left an initial $134,176 to the N. Y. Community Trust, it was revealed this week. Additional payments from the late star's estate will enlarge the gift, the proceeds of which will be used in public health work . . . Robinson Stone, production assistant to Jose Ferrer, returned this week to his original role in "Stalag 17," having completed the same part in the film edition . . . Brian Aherne, co-star with Katharine Cornell and Grace George in "Constant Wife," will not tour with the show next season, but will wind up with it next month in Boston . . . Otis Bigelow's "Lion and the Unicorn" will be given a workshop presentation April 16-17 by the New Dramatists Committee at the Palm Garden, N. Y. George Bellak's "Troublemakers" will be similarly processed April 29-30 . . . Stanley Young, managing director of Farrar, Straus & Young, has gone to London for the production there of his play, "Mr. Pickwick," based on Dickens' "Pickwick Papers." The show will be presented by Broadway producer Roger L. Stevens and Thane Parker, of the London Mask Theatre.

The citations didn't mention it, but John van Druten was the director involved in the case of four players who won "Tony" awards last week for best performances of the season. Actors were Gertrude Lawrence and Yul Brynner, in "King and I," and Julie Harris and Marian Winters in Druten's own play, "I Am a Camera." He staged both plays . . . Herman Levin's production of "Temptation of Maggie Haggerty" is now set for early-September rehearsal. Incidentally, author James McGee sailed last week for a European vacation, during which he'll confab with Levin, who's already there . . . Willie Harris, boxoffice man at the National, N. Y., has switched to a similar stint at various racetracks until the legit season gets going again next fall . . . Theron Bamberger will reopen his Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa., June 6 with Kitty Carlisle in "Lady in the Dark" . . . Joe De Santis has succeeded Joseph Wiseman in "Golden Boy" . . . Cornelia Otis Skinner will receive this year's Barter Theatre Award for the best performance of the season by an American-born player . . . Bob Corris, manager of the Auditorium, Rochester, in town last week to see the shows and scout for bookings for next season.

Charlotte and Lewis Harmon will reopen their Clinton (Conn.) Playhouse June 30 for a nine-week season . . . Nola Fairbanks has taken over the femme lead in "Paint Your Wagon," succeeding Olga San Juan, who was released by the management so she could plane to the Coast to be with her young daughter, who is ill . . . Stephanie Augustine is now regularly singing the role of Tuptim in "King and I," succeeding Doretta Morrow, who was released from her contract when doctors declared her voice would not permit her to resume the part. Miss Morrow is thus not required to pay the additional $2,000 penalty assessed by Actors Equity for contract violation, but the $500 rap she already paid still stands. She will take an extended rest . . . Charles A. B. Heinze will again be producer and Richard North Gage director of the Allenberry Playhouse, which reopens May 28 for a 17-week season at Boiling Springs, Pa.

Al Dalzell, former VARIETY mugg for Newark, and advance agent for "Oklahoma" last season, will be the drum-beater for the Maplewood, N. J., barn this summer. He did the publicity for the house when it last presented legits under Frank McCoy and Cheryl Crawford.

Gerald O'Connell has replaced Leonard Field as company manager of "Bell, Book and Candle" at the Great Northern Chicago . . . Bobby Barry has replaced Sidney Grant in the Chicago company of "Guys and Dolls" . . . Patricia Wilks took over for Pam Britton for three days, when star was bedded with flu in national company of "Guys and Dolls." Also, Ray Shaw took Allan Jones' place for a performance when latter got a touch of virus.

Kay Francis will tour strawhats this season in Somerset Maugham's "Theatre." She'll include John Huntington's Spa Theatre, Saratoga Springs, in her itinerary. She recently appeared in "Theatre" at Huntington's winter operation, the Auditorium Theatre, Winter Park, Fla. It will be the fourth consecutive year Miss Francis has played Saratoga.

Malcolm Atterbury and his wife, Ellen Hardies, of the Albany (N.Y.) Playhouse, due in N. Y. today (Wed.) to see the "Cleopatras" productions. Jean Seamon, of the Playhouse boxoffice, and Florence Dunlap, character actress there, also show-shopping in Gotham.

The Maplewood (N. J.) Theatre, to be operated as a strawhat by Albert H. Rosen and Al Lewis, will have a capacity of $22,000 a week. Judy Holliday, in "Dream Girl," will open the spot May 3 . . . Joshua Logan will direct and co-produce with the Playwrights Co. the new Robert E. Sherwood play, "Better Angels," dealing with the Mormons in Salt Lake City in 1860-61. The production is set for next season. Meanwhile, Logan has co-authored the book of, and will stage the musical, "Wish You Were Here," after which he will direct and co-produce with Leland Hayward and the Theatre Guild the new William Inge play, "Picnic." Logan is also planning to sponsor a U. S. engagement next season of the Kabuki troupe from Japan . . . Cheryl Crawford planed to Europe last weekend for a vacation . . . Paula Stone and Mike Sloane plan a fall production of a musical version of "Carnival in Flanders," with book by George Oppenheimer and score by Johnny Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen. Franklin Gilbert, who formerly held the rights to the property, is now mulling a musical edition of James M. Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows." Meanwhile, the Sloanes are planning a musical treatment of "Room Service."

Helen Gahagan, who as Helen Gahagan (Mrs. Melvyn) Douglas was formerly a Congresswoman from southern California, will return to the stage in the Jane Cowl part in the N. Y. City Center revival of "First Lady," of the George S. Kaufman-Katharine Dayton comedy about political intrigue in femme society of Washington . . . Howard Newman is returning this summer as pressagent of the Pittsburgh Civic Light Opera, not succeeding Sam Weller with the Chicago company of "Guys and Dolls," as reported. Gertrude Bromberg is shifting from the Chi company of "Moon Is Blue" for the "G & D" assignment . . . Joe Magee, in the William Morris agency television department, is doubling in legit casting . . . Milton Bender announces plans for an early fall production of "Saddle and Go," musical with book by Leonard Gershe and score by Harry Revel.

Betty Field and Burgess Meredith will take over as co-stars of the two-character "Fourposter," effective June 9, succeeding Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn, when the latter couple leave to appear in the Jan de Hartog comedy-drama on the road . . . "Circus of Dr. Lao" has been dropped from the ANTA Play Series schedule, at least for this season . . . Rodney Millington, managing director of Spotlight, the British casting directory, is in New York on his annual show-catching visit . . . Max Eisen, whose application for membership in the Assn. of Theatrical Press Agents & Managers aroused a ruckus in the pressagent chapter board recently, has been notified he'll be admitted next Labor Day . . . Milton Lyon and Gus Schirmer are packaging touring productions of "Kiss Me, Kate" to play the strawhat circuit this summer.

Bertram Yarborough, producer-director of Richmond (Va.,) Playgoers Guild series, which recently wound up a six-week series of guest-star stock engagements at WRVA Theatre there, has been signed as stage director for the Music Circus arena season in Toronto. Music-Circus is produced by Leighton K. Brill. This is Yarborough's second year as director of dramatic portions of the musical attractions.

Ted Cappy, who served as dance and ensemble director for the St. Louis Municipal Theatre Assn.'s 1949 season, will be brought back for a similar stint for the 34th consecutive season that tees off June 5 with an 11-night stand of "Show Boat."

Inside Stuff—Legit

Presence on Broadway currently of "Three Wishes for Jamie," recalls a situation of about a year ago involving that show and the long-since-closed "Make a Wish." Matter actually originated several years ago, when Hugh Martin and Ralph Blane were partnered as respective composer and lyricist of "Best Foot Forward," some of the songs from "Meet Me in St. Louis," etc. Pair differed and broke up their association, each branching out as both composer and lyricist. Both came up with legit musicals about the same time, both shows being optioned and going into production almost simultaneously. Martin's was "Make a Wish" and Blane's was "Three Wishes for Jamie." Albert and Arthur Lewis, producers of the latter, tried to persuade producers Jule Styne, Harry Rigby and Alexander H. Cohen to change the title of the former so as to avoid confusion. When they failed, they called their own show simply "Jamie" for a while, but later reverted to "Three Wishes for Jamie" after "Make a Wish" folded on Broadway. Both shows were financed at $175,000 plus 20% overcall. "Make a Wish" played the Winter Garden and "Three Wishes for Jamie" is at the Mark Hellinger, also on Broadway, almost directly across the street. "Make a Wish" drew generally unfavorable notices and had a brief run, winding up with a loss of about $350,000. After a disappointing tryout on the Coast last summer, "Three Wishes for Jamie" was taken off, extensively revised and recast, and finally reached New York three weeks ago, getting generally unfavorable reviews.

Community Plays of the American Theatre Wing is now preparing its first hour-long play, written and produced in collaboration with the National Assn. for Mental Health, which will sponsor performances by Wing casts in the N. Y. metropolitan area and then distribute it for performances across the country. Titled, "My Name Is Legion," the play, written by Nora Stirling, Wing playwright, and Dr. Nina Ridenour, mental hygienist, is based on "A Mind That Found Itself," autobiography of Clifford Beers, pioneer in the mental health movement. It will be premiered April 20 at the Park Sheraton Hotel, N. Y. Vera Allen has directed the all-male cast of five, made up of actors in the Wing's Professional Training Program.

"I Am Laughing," Edwin Justus Mayer play currently being tested by Margo Jones at her Theatre '52, Dallas, is apparently a revised version of the same script originally tried out during the summer of 1935 at the Pasadena Playhouse. VARIETY review of that production described the piece as a backstage triangle farce about a playwright, his actress-mistress and the latter's former lover. Victor Jory and Jean Inness (Mrs. Jory) co-staged the play, which was rated as promising Broadway material, though inadequately played.

Joe Grossman, company manager of the touring "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," carries around a photostat of an old "Ziegfeld Follies" payroll list for 1915 or year or two later. Salaries of some of the stars were: Will Rogers, tops with $750 a week; Fannie Brice, $500; W. C. Fields, Bert Williams and Eddie Cantor, $400 each; Don Barclay, $200, and Fairbanks Twins, $80. Pay for the glorified Ziegfeld Girls of that day ranged from $25 to $50, and for members of the male chorus, from $20 to $35.

Recent commuter survey conducted by Transportation Displays, Inc., and the N. Y. Central, revealed nearly 10-to-one sentiment in favor of a once-a-week early curtain for Broadway shows. The survey, completed last week, involved circulation of more than 10,000 questionnaires among N. Y. Central commuters, with nearly 2,000 replies received. When the results of the survey have been analyzed, F. LeMoyne Page, TDI president, will present them to the League of N. Y. Theatres and the Committee of Theatrical Producers.

New Haven Legit Revives With Week-Long 'Sing'

New Haven, April 8.

After several dark weeks, Shubert again has the incandescents glowing currently with a full-week stand of break-in revival of "Of Thee I Sing" (7-12).

Next week gets preem of "For Crying Out Loud" (17-19) and new version of "Shuffle Along" has its baptism here April 23-26.

"Member of the Wedding" is set for May 1-3.

Chi Spotty in Bad-Weather Lent; 'Dolls' Wow $56,500; 'Bell' $18,200

Chicago, April 8.

Stormy weather and the Lenten slump, coupled with strike talks, isn't helping the local boxoffice much. However, all seem to have strong mail orders for the future.

"Remains to Be Seen" opened last night (Mon.) at the Erlanger and until May 6, when "Two on the Aisle" rolls in, there isn't much else doing. "Remains" drew two favorable notices: Marsters (Herald-American), Kogan (Sun-Times) and two so-so Cassidy (Tribune) and Harris (Daily News).

else doing. "Bagels and Yox" comes into the Blackstone May 11.

Estimates for Last Week

"Bell, Book and Candle," Great Northern (6th wk) ($4.80; 1,500). Buffeted by the elements, only $18,200.

"Guys and Dolls," Shubert (6th wk) ($6; 2,100). Despite all the usual seasonal hazards, a sock $56,500.

"Moon Is Blue," Harris (49th wk) ($4.80; 1,000). Holding in the stretch for the year mark, with $12,100.

'Aisle' $29,100, 'Affairs' 14G, Hub

Boston, April 8.

Only newcomer this stanza is "To Be Continued," which preems at the Wilbur tonight (Tues). Continuing at fairly strong pace are "Two on the Aisle," currently in its fourth week at the Shubert, and "Affairs of State," in its fifth stanza at the Plymouth. "Cocktail Party" bows into the Colonial Monday (14).

Estimates for Last Week

"Affairs of State," Plymouth (4th wk) (1,200; $3.60). Beginning to sag, but still okay; nearly $14,000.

"Two on the Aisle," Shubert (3d wk) (1,700; $4.80-$6). Hit $29,100 for third frame with two weeks to go.

"Right You Are," Brattle (2d wk) (454; $1.20-$3). Wound second week with okay $2,800. "Billy Budd" bows in for a three-week return engagement tomorrow (Wed.).

'ROBERTS' NEAT $23,800 IN SEVEN-SHOW SPLIT

Kansas City, April 8.

"Mister Roberts," here for the third time, came off with a healthy take for three performances. Playing Friday and Saturday (4-5) in the Music Hall, the seaworthy yarn drew $7,700 at $3.66 top.

The first part of the week, the Leland Hayward production drew $8,900 in two performances Monday-Tuesday (31-1) at the Forum, Wichita; added $3,100 in a single showing Wednesday night (2) at the Auditorium, Salina, Kans., and picked up $4,100 more in a one-nighter Thursday (3) at the Auditorium, Topeka. That gave the Thomas Heggen-Joshua Logan play a total of almost $23,800 for the seven-performance week.

'Cocktail' Okay $18,200 In First D.C. Stanza

Washington, April 8.

Gayety Theatre, after five weeks of being dark because of lack of available plays, reopened last week for a fortnight's stand of T. S. Eliot's "Cocktail Party."

In its first stanza, the opus brought in $18,200, despite mixed reception from the critics.

'Blondes' Fine $37,900 In Pittsburgh Windup

Pittsburgh, April 8.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" picked up in its second and final week at the Nixon, doing $37,900. Final three performances were SRO. Top was $5.85 ($4.50 plus taxes).

"South Pacific" is just around the corner, coming in April 21 for four weeks. Nixon will be dark until then. "Pacific" already has banked pretty close to $100,000 on mail orders alone.

'Remains' 16G, Detroit

Detroit, April 8.

"Remains to Be Seen" grossed $16,000 for a week at the Cass.

Both the Cass and Shubert are dark this week. The Cass reopens April 22 for two weeks of "Two On The Aisle."

'Tattoo' $16,800, Frisco; 'Happy Time' Low $10,000

San Francisco, April 8.

Both the Curran and Geary went dark Saturday (5), with the sudden shuttering of "Rose Tattoo" and "Happy Time." "The Consul" opens at the Curran Monday (14).

"Rose Tattoo," closing its tour here, slipped to $16,800 for its third and final frame at the 1,775-seat Curran. Top was $3.60.

"Happy Time" with Reginald Gardiner and Irene Hervey, never did manage to make the grade, winding up its second and final week at the 1,550-seat Geary to only $10,000, also at $3.60 top.

'Darkness' $19,400, Seattle

Seattle, April 8.

Edward G. Robinson in "Darkness at Noon" filled his dates here last week, his illness the previous week causing the cancellation of a three-day Portland booking. Gross here topped $19,400 at $4.50 top for eight shows.

Show is splitting this week between St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Ballet Russe $48,000 For 12 in Montreal

Montreal, April 8.

Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo did $48,000 in 12 performances at His Majesty's last week, with the 1,700-seater scaled to $4 top.

Met Opera general manager Rudolf Bing is in Montreal today (Tues.) for a conference with Canadian Concerts & Artists Corp. regarding the Met's three operas at the forum May 30-31.

'Wedding' $18,100, 'Brass' 7G, Philly

Philadelphia, April 8.

Lenten doldrums becalmed the stage here, although "The Member of the Wedding" made a profitable one-week return visit to the Forrest. William Goldman and Lawrence Shubert Lawrence relighted their Erlanger Theatre last night (Mon.) for the first time this season, with touring company of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

Estimates for Last Week

"Member of the Wedding," Forrest (1st wk) ($3.90; 1,760). Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society subscription, plus Ethel Waters pull, brought in a tasty $18,100.

"The Chase," Locust (1st wk) ($3.90; 1,580). Lame start slowed this one, although Jose Ferrer magic may save it. Play is in process of rewriting and casting, with boxoffice suffering. So-so $10,900.

"The Brass Ring," Walnut (1st wk) ($3.90; 1,340). Second-stringers slammed this offering, and higher-touted competition hurt. Dull $7,200.

'CANDIDA' OVER $18.300 IN FIVE-STAND SPLIT

Hartford, April 8.

Although she had played eight weeks of strawhat appearances in the Shaw comedy, "Candida" in the area last summer, Olivia de Havilland pulled more than $18,300 in eight preformances in five New England stands last week. Leaving here Sunday (6) for Toronto, where she opened last night (Mon.) for a week's stand, the star was delayed several hours when her train had to be rerouted because of washouts from the heavy rains.

The Thomas Hammond revival opened the week with $2,100 for a on-nighter Monday (31) at Klein Auditorium, Bridgeport; added $8,000 for two evenings and a matinee Tuesday-Wednesday (1-2) at the Court Square, Springfield; $2,300 for a one-nighter Thursday (3) at the Metropolitan, Providence; $2,200 for another Friday (4) at the Memorial Auditorium, Worcester, and wound up with $3,700 for a matinee and evening Saturday (5) at the Bushnell Auditorium here.

'Pacific' Rocks Columbus With Sock $74.280 Take

Columbus, O., April 8.

The touring "South Pacific," with Janet Blair and Webb Tilton co-starred, turned this town on its head last week with what's believed to be the biggest gross ever drawn locally by a legit show. Playing the 2,875-seat Palace, downtown RKO house, the Rodgers-Hammerstein-Logan musical registered a whopping $74,280 at a $5 top for the eight-performance stand. It was a stampede all the way. Robert F. Boda, manager of the Hartman, regular legit spot, arranged the Palace booking.

Production is at the Taft Auditorium, Cincinnati, this week and next, then goes to Pittsburgh.

'Assembly' in L.A. Foldo; Only $2,700 for 2 Weeks

Hollywood, April 8.

The town was left legit-less, save for the intimate theatre groups, when "Assembly Call" folded Sunday after a pale two weeks at the 334-seat Ivar Theatre. Tally for the fortnight barely hit $2,700 and represented a loss of around $3,400 to producer William Jarvis.

Heavenly fantasy had been scheduled for a minimum of four weeks, but was unable to attract more than 30% capacity at any time. There's nothing in the offing now until the Philharmonic relights April 21 with the Judy Garland International Variety show, which is a special prelude to the Civic Light Opera season. Following night (22) a new musical, "For Land Sake," bows at the Ivar.

B'way Still Slipping, But 'Joey' 40G, 'Jamie' $41,100, 'Fourposter' $20,600, 'Egypt' $16,100, Julie Harris $15,000

For the third stanza in a row, business skidded last week on Broadway. Attendance was down all week, with the cold and rain Saturday (5) crimping the hoped-for weekend pickup. Receipts were a bit better Monday night (7), but indications are that there will be no substantial improvement until the weekend, when the official end of Lent and the normal Saturday spurt should help. The usual boxoffice upturn is due next week (Easter Week).

The total gross for all 26 shows last week was $663,000, or 70% of capacity. Week before last the total for all 26 current shows was $700,500, or 79% of capacity, a drop of 2% from the preceding week.

A year ago last week the total for all 23 current shows was $603,465, or 80% of capacity, a 6% drop from the week before.

Of the recent entries, "Grass Harp" and "Flight Into Egypt" still rate as uncertain prospects, while "Three Wishes for Jamie" had another profitable week, but isn't yet a clearly indicated boxoffice bet. The returned "Don Juan in Hell" made a fast start on its limited engagement. "Constant Wife" closed last week, "One Bright Day" and the limited-run "Cleopatras" shutter this week, and several other productions are uncertain stayers. This week's sole opening is "Brass Ring," due tomorrow (Thurs.).

Principal conventions, meetings and shows (with respective dates and expected attendance) that may provide theatre patronage this week and next are Knights of Columbus National Bowling Assn. (weekends, until May 20; 500); Antonio Tremblay Tours (2-9; 65); American Management Assn., production division (7-8; 500); Histo Chemical Society (7-8; 300); National Conference of Gas & Electric Utility Accountants (7-9; 1,200); Eastern Claims Conference (9-10; 75); American Assn. of Pathologists & Bacteriologists (9-12; 800).

Also, International Assn. of Medical Museums (9-12; 200); American Assn. for Cancer Research (10-13; 500); Van Zile Tours (11-16; 200); Empire Travel Club (11-18; 200); Hanover Fire Insurance Co. (12-16; 200); Mortgage Bankers of America (14-15; 400); Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology (14-18; 5,000); Modern Network Synthesis Symposium (15-18; 500); North Atlantic Regional Conference for Agricultural Education (15-18; 50); Van Zile Tours (16-17; 200), and American Society for Testing Materials (16-18; 100).

Estimates for Last Week

Keys: C (Comedy), D (Drama), CD (Comedy-Drama), R (Revue), MC (Musical Comedy), MD (Musical Drama), O (Operetta).

*Other parenthetic designations refer, respectively, to top price; (indicates using two-for-ones), number of seats, capacity gross and stars. Price includes 20% amusement tax, but grosses are net: i.e., exclusive of tax.

"Call Me Madam," Imperial (77th wk) (MC-$7.20; 1,400; $51,847) (Ethel Merman). Topped $41,000 (previous week, $45,400); closing May 3, to tour.

"Cleopatras," Ziegfeld (16th wk) (D-$7.20; 1,628; $59,536) (Lawrence Olivier, Vivien Leigh). Shaw-Shakespeare repertory drew nearly $53,400 (previous week, $54,700); closing Saturday night (12).

"Constant Wife," National (18th wk) (C-$4.80; 1,172; $29,534) (Katharine Cornell, Brian Aherne, Grace George). Almost $13,800 (previous week, $15,000); closed Saturday night (5) after 139 performances; will tour after laying off this week.

"Don Juan in Hell." Plymouth (1st wk) (CD-$4.80; 1,063; $31,000) (Charles Boyer, Charles Laughton, Cedric Hardwicke, Agnes Moorehead). Return stand got away to nearly $30,800 for the opener, with party commissions limiting the take; engagement limited to eight weeks, as the stars have film assignments this summer.

"Flight Into Egypt." Music Box (3d wk) (D-$4.80; 1,012; $27,000). Almost $16,100 (previous week, $20,500).

"Fourposter," Barrymore (24th wk) (C-$4.80; 1,012; $27,000) (Jessica Tandy, Hume Cronyn). Bettered $20,600 (previous week, $22,500; week before was under quoted —figure should have read $23,600).

"Girl," Fulton (20th wk). (C-$4.80; 1,063; $23,228) (Audrey Hepburn). Nearly $14,100 (previous week, $17,800).

"Golden Boy," ANTA Playhouse (4th wk) (D-$4.80; 925; $23,000) (John Garfield, Lee J. Cobb). Almost $12,000 (previous week, $17,500); gross has been sharply reduced the last two weeks by the Revenue Dept.'s tax ruling, which has required the management to pay an upped rate on the advance sale.

"Grass Harp," Beck (1st wk) (D-$4.80; 1,214; $28,000). Nearly $11,700 (previous week, first four performances grossed $10,400, plus $2,800 for a preview).

"Guys and Dolls," 46th St. (72d wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,319; $43,904). As usual, $44,400.

"I Am a Camera," Empire (19th wk) (CD-$4.80-$6; 1,082; $24,908) (Julie Harris). Over $15,000 (previous week, $18,200).

"Jane," Coronet (10th wk) (C-$4.80-$5.40; 1,027; $31,000) (Edna Best, Basil Rathbone). Almost $7,800 (previous week, $14,500); management announces 7:30 starting curtain Monday nights, effective April 21.

"King and I," St. James (54th wk) (MD-$7.20; 1,571; $51,717) (Gertrude Lawrence). Capacity again, over $51,700.

"Moon Is Blue," Miller (57th wk) (C-$4.80; 920; $21,586) (Barbara Bel Geddes, Donald Cook, Barry Nelson). Over $15,300 (previous week, $16,900).

"Mrs. McThing," Morosco (7th wk) (CD-$4.80; 912; $26,800) (Helen Hayes). Bettered $22,000 (previous week, $22,000); this ANTA production also affected by the Government tax ruling, which required upped tax payments on the advance sale, thereby reducing the gross.

"One Bright Day," Royale (3d wk) (D-$4.80; 1,035; $27,000). Nearly $11,400 (previous week, $15,200); closing Saturday night (12).

"Paint Your Wagon," Shubert (21st wk) (MC-$7.20; 1,361; $46,000) (James Barton). Almost $26,500 (previous week, $37,000).

"Pal Joey," Broadhurst (14th wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,160; $39,602). Topped $40,000 (previous week, over $40,000).

"Paris '90," Booth (5th wk) (MC-$4.80; 900; $20,235) (Cornelia Otis Skinner). About $8,400 (previous week, $8,400); moves April 21 to the Golden.

"Point of No Return," Alvin (17th wk) (D-$4.80-$6; 1,331; $37,924) (Henry Fonda). Almost $35,100 (previous week, $37,500).

"Shrike," Cort (12th wk) (D-$4.80; 1,056; $27,700) (Jose Ferrer, Judith Evelyn). Approached $20,000 (previous week, $23,300).

"South Pacific," Majestic (155th wk) (MD-$6; 1,659; $50,186) (Martha Wright, George Britton). Reached $40,000 (previous week, $44,400).

"Stalag 17," 48th St. (48th wk) (C-$4.80; 912; $21,547). Nearly $12,400 (previous week, $14,700).

"Top Banana," Winter Garden (23d wk) (MC-$6.60-$7.20; 1,519; $51,881) (Phil Silvers). Almost $34,400 (previous week, $41,500).

"Three Wishes for Jamie," Hellinger (3d wk) (MC-$6.60; 1,527; $51,300) (Anne Jeffreys, John Raitt). Nearly $41,100 (previous week, $45,600).

"Venus Observed," Century (8th wk) (CD-$4.80-$6; 1,645; $45,000) (Rex Harrison, Lilli Palmer). Almost $21,600 (previous week, $23,500); has announced "last weeks."

OPENING THIS WEEK

"Brass Ring," Lyceum (D-$4.80; 995; $22,845). Donald Wolin, in association with Donald Flamm, production of play by Irving Elman; venture financed at $50,000, production cost an estimated $25,000 (plus $9,000 tryout loss and $9,000 in bonds and deposits), can break even at around $14,000; reviewed in VARIETY, April 2, '52; opens tomorrow night (Thurs.).

'HEIRESS' OKAY $10,000 AT $2 TOP IN ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, April 8.

For the second straight week, the Empress had the legit field to itself, and "The Heiress," with Miriam Hopkins as visiting star, wound up a one-frame stand Sunday (6) with a neat $10,000 for eight performances at the usual $2 top.

John Ireland and Joanne Dru, in "John Loves Mary," tee off a one-week stand at the Empress tonight (Tues.).

Plays Abroad

Winter Journey

London, April 4.

Henry Sherek & Sam Wanamaker presentation of drama in two acts (eight scenes) by Clifford Odets. Directed by Wanamaker. At St. James, London, April 3, '52; $2.25 top.

One of the most intelligent, intense importations from America has come to London in the shape of "Winter Journey," which was presented on Broadway as "Country Girl." Clifford Odets' backstage drama with a top starring trio is a surefire proposition.

The shrewd, incisive direction of Sam Wanamaker, who himself intelligently plays the part of the director in the play, has brought out all the vitality, meaning and characterization of Odets' writing. And a conventional idea has been transformed into engrossing theatre by the combined teamwork of the company.

Michael Redgrave's performance as the has-been actor, desperately trying to make a comeback, is as memorable as it is poignant. His is a contribution of real intensity, a perfect achievement.

Production brings Wanamaker to the fore in a twofold capacity, and he is equally distinguished as actor and director. His interpretation has sincerity and uncanny skill.

To complete the starring trio, Googie Withers comes across with a performance of surprising skill. An accomplished actress with a distinguished list of credits, she has, nevertheless, a tough assignment in matching her portrayal with her two co-stars. The role of the actor's harassed, long-suffering wife is by no means an easy one, and the character is cunningly obscured by the author's skillful play with situations. To the actor, she is a character in one of his plays; to the producer, she is a menace who is hindering her husband's career. In actual fact, both are wrong.

With almost all the stage time taken up by the principals, the play gives little opportunity to other members of the cast. The supporting roles, however, are competently etched, with Hazel Penwarden particularly displaying a pleasing charm.

Anthony Holland has done an impressive job with the sets. Four sets are employed, which faithfully capture the backstage atmosphere of the theatre. Myro.

The Young Elizabeth

London, April 3.

George & Alfred Black, Ltd., and Linnit & Dunfee, Ltd., presentation of drama in two acts (12 scenes) by Jennette Dowling and Francis Letton. Directed by Charles Hickman. At New Theatre, London, April 2, '52; $2 top.

The 16th century is a rich field for writers to delve in, providing colorful intrigue, plot and counterplot. Many plays and books have been written around Good Queen Bess, each contributing some vibrant, new slant on this dynamic personality. The American authors here need feel no trepidation about treading on hallowed ground in their treatment of this always fascinating era. Their delineation of the fiery-tempered, ill-used orphan makes absorbing entertainment and is deserving of the highest praise. Costume plays fill a special place in theatregoers' hearts, and this latest one should add credit to authors and cast in equal measure, and prove a profitable addition to the London stage.

Action opens with the death of the much-married Henry VIII and the almost indecent haste with which his widow Katherine consoles herself with Sir Thomas Seymour, an adventurer to whom she was once betrothed. On her marriage she makes a home for Bess, her younger step-daughter, until tattling tongues and her own perception reveal too close an intimacy between the girl and her husband.

Katherine dies following childbirth, but before Elizabeth can develop the affair, Sir Thomas is beheaded by his brother, who has made himself Protector of the sickly boy king, who dies shortly thereafter. Mary Tudor, whose ruthless purging of suspected traitors earns her the name of "Bloody Mary," imprisons her sister on attaining the throne.

With the Queen's marriage to Philip of Spain, Bess is restored to freedom, but her courtiers are sent to the block. Mary's false pregnancy robs her of the chance of cheating her sister out of the succession, and just when Bess expects to be arrested again, word comes of Mary's death. The young Elizabeth is left with a clear field, supremely confident of her ability to serve her country with wholehearted vigor.

Mary Morris gives one of the best performances of her career as the indomitable young princess, torn between the prestige of her position and the conflicting personalities of her parents. Rising above slander and persecution, she reveals the courageous spirit that would one day crown her hazardous youth with the glory of her older years. A close second is the impeccable characterization of Mary Tudor by Peggy Thorpe-Bates. Margaretta Scott makes a statuesque Katherine Parr and Joseph O'Conor is a bluff, kindly Seymour, affectionate to his wife but enslaved by the youthful Bess. All supporting roles enrich the main players, and Charles Hickman's direction is in his usual painstaking style. Clem.

La Tete Des Autres

This is a scathing denunciation of the alleged scandals of the French bench. It already has raised a howl from the offended bar and bench. That the drama is timely for exploitation can be seen from a glance at current French dailies denouncing cases of miscarriage of justice. All the griping magistrates were asked to see the play free, which naturally brought more free publicity and a heavy advance sale.

A public prosecutor is being congratulated on his arrival home after a criminal session where he convicted a jazz musician on a murder charge although the evidence was somewhat indefinite. After his friends go, his mistress arrives. They are interrupted in a clinch by the arrival of the man he has just sentenced. Latter has escaped, from the police wagon. He identifies the mistress as the one who could have established his alibi, but did not. He proves by knowledge of marks on her body that he tells the truth. The magistrate is torn between his fear of a scandal, his desire to avoid a miscarriage of justice and his professional greed. Finally he agrees to hide the man. After two more acts, the convicted man finally is cleared of the murder rap, through a politico's influence while the actually guilty man is erased.

This Marcel Ayme play offers two vastly different types of story and treatment. The first two acts are high-class character comedy. The last two, however, which become sort of a political denunciation, are melodramatic. The play is well written and has many lines carrying heavy impact.

The whole thing has been nicely done, both in casting and the excellent sets. Direction by Andre Barsacq is tops.

Monique Melinand, who graduated from the Louis Jouvet school, is the sexy femme, the prosecutor's mistress and friend of the musician. She will appeal to the male audience. The way she handles her role makes her one of the top current French actresses. She is supported by Yves Robert, who is convincing as intended victim of the miscarriage of justice. Jean Martinelli does well as the prosecuting attorney whose ideals are blurred by his love for the woman. The other roles are well done by Juliette Faber, as the prosecutor's wife, and by Henri Cremieux, a natural in the role of a silly colleague. The two cops, Marcel Peres and Maurice Meric are suitably tough, and laugh-getters. Raymond Souplex, a popular Paris comedian, is excellent in the part of the political crook. Gisele Touret is pretty enough but only makes a brief appearance.

A must for Russia, a sure bet for the Continent, the play will require some adapting for the U. S., because of the difference in legal routine and perhaps on account of the censorable material. But it is to be considered as a likely source of material for both Broadway and Hollywood. Maxi.

Stately Homes

London, April 1.

Peter Haddon, Ltd., production of new drama in three acts by Warwick Charlton and John Audley. Directed by Jack Hulbert. At Embassy Theatre, London, $1.50 top.

Sir John Henson ..... Ivan Brandt
Lady Roma Henson ..... Adele Dixon
Billy Miller ..... Patrick Westwood
Philip Hudson ..... D. A. Clarke-Smith
Colonel Sam Betteridge.... Peter Haddon
Peter Jennings ..... Ivan Craig
David Gold ..... Martin Miller
Joan Morrison ..... Peggy Simpson
Det. Inspector Jackson. Humphrey Morton

There is no mystery about this so-called thriller, which hovers precariously between the plausible and the ridiculous. It involves robbery and murder, and results in the triumphant evasion of the law by those concerned. In its present form, the play is unlikely to break fresh ground outside this try-out house.

Locale is one of the showplace country homes thrown open for public inspection to help maintain its upkeep. A gang of thieves have wormed their way into the household as antique experts, a lecturer for the British Council and a butler. This provides the assembly point to pull off a big haul of world famous jewels from a neighboring estate.

The lady of the manor is an ex-girl friend of one of the crooks whose attempts at blackmail and double-crossing culminate in his croaking by the pugilistic butler. Wildly attempting to conceal the body and evade a murder rap, the criminals stage a fake fight within earshot of the investigating

Metropolitan Opera Season

about $550,000, and which coin the Met now retains, and (2) about $750,000 collected in a public drive by the Metropolitan Opera Fund—the Met's financial picture will be relatively rosier this season's end, with prospects of about $200,000 deficit on home operations (plus, of course, the 70G touring "Fledermaus" nick). (The Met offered a half-dozen productions this season at upped prices, usually at $25 top, to get in some extra revenue for its production fund.)

Tariffs Upped

For next season, the Met is raising its prices (for all except the $1.50 family circle seats), going up from 10c to 50c per seat, depending on location, with the old $7.50 top now to be $8. The Met's biz administrator, Reginald Allen, claims that in the last 10 years, production costs have gone up from 50% to 100%, while the price rise runs only from 4% to 8%. In those 10 years, Allen points out, Broadway prices have soared, musicals going from a $4.80 top to $7.20.

As for the season just ending, which stretched 22 weeks, it ran from the ridiculous to the sublime, with some terrific moments, some historic ones, and a few duds in between. There were no sensations comparable to those in Bing's first year—which started with the dropping of Lauritz Melchior and James Melton and the lopping off of six of the eight conductors and half the ballet company; continued with such controversial matters as the rehiring of Kirsten Flagstad and production of such works as a "sacrilegious," streamlined "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," and ended on a harsh note with the firing of Robert Merrill.

New Hits

But the season had interest a-plenty. There was nothing like the previous year's "Fledermaus" smash, which was given a record-breaking number of 19 times, but a fresh-revised "Carmen," starring Rise Stevens, was a resounding hit, and was done 11 times. Bing, who had brought in two directors from legit his first year, "imported" four this season, in Margaret Webster and Garson Kanin (repeating from his first year) and Alfred Lunt and Tyrone Guthrie. All contributed substantially, Guthrie staging the "Carmen" hit, and Lunt putting on a "Cosi fan Tutte" that was an artistic lulu. Miss Stevens' vivid acting and singing rated her Carmen the best for many a season.

Of the season's four newly-staged, costumed and designed productions, "Carmen," "Cosi," "Aida" and "Rigoletto," only "Aida" was artistically so-so (though boxoffice-wise a success), being pretentious and ornate instead of regal. "Otello" and "Elektra" had strong revivals, with Astrid Varnay's standout performance in "Elektra" helping to give that work new stature, and Ramon Vinay in the title role making the "Otello" revival great. The ill-fated touring "Fledermaus" did have the virtue of adding a fine singer to the regular Met. roster in Brenda Lewis.

There was a brilliant revival of "Alcestis," with Kirsten Flagstad's superb singing helping to make it so. The diva's farewell to the opera world in this work added to its poignancy and interest, her departure also removing from the scene one of the most controversial of post-war appointments.

Bing struck another fresh note this season with his hiring of the Met's first Negro principal, dancer Janet Collins, for the ballet corps lead. He also mended some musical fences by forgiving Robert Merrill for alleged contract-jumping the previous year, and reinstating the baritone on the Met roster.

There were low notes as well as high ones, with Ljuba Welitch bringing the whole N. Y. music critics circle pounding down on her for her rambunctious performance in "La Boheme," and Mario del Monaco souring the reviewers similarly for his exaggerated hamming and grimacing in "Aida" and various other operas.

A somewhat startling incident was the picketing of "Don Carlo" on the grounds that it offended Catholic tastes (libretto concerns the Inquisition), although the 100-year-old opera has always been performed without trouble in Catholic Rome and Vienna. Amusing sidelight is that the picketing started through error a week early, against the wrong opera, the picketers parading their protests in front of the Met the night of a "Fledermaus" performance. When the picket line paraded for the "Don Carlo" performance, a priest joined in.

Fair group to mop up with the plays while interest was still active (with the New York managements sharing in the profits, of course). Also, because of the State Fair Auditorium's ability to build productions on relatively small budgets (six musicals were produced for $30,000 last summer) it would make possible greater return.

An important phase of the Texas-Louisiana setup may be a deal with the La Jolla (Cal.) Playhouse, under which the latter's shows would play four-week tours of the circuit. It's understood that Mel Ferrer, co-director with Dorothy McGuire and Gregory Peck of the La Jolla spot, is due in Dallas soon to huddle with Interstate and State Fair Auditorium execs on the proposition. If deals with the La Jolla outfit and a few key Broadway producers can be arranged, the idea would be to build a subscription setup for the 32-date Texas-Louisiana route.

Meanwhile, as an indication of what it can do, the Texas group will finance and produce the "Fourposter" replacement and share with the Playwrights Co. in the profits from the four-week pre-Broadway tour. With the original stager, Jose Ferrer, occupied this week with the tryout of his new "Chase" production in Philly, besides his co-starring appearances on Broadway in "The Shrike," directing of Miss Field and Meredith is being handled by Cronyn.

tioned. The "Venus" win was a repeat for Fry, whose "Lady's Not for Burning" also copped the honors in the same category last season. The special citation for "Don Juan in Hell," an excerpt presented in lecture platform style from Shaw's "Man and Superman," was unanimously voted. The meeting also voted unanimously to make Robert Garland, until recently critic of the N. Y. Journal-American, an honorary member.

Breakdown of the balloting was as follows:

Best plays: "Camera," 10 votes: Mark Baron (Associated Press), John Mason Brown (Saturday Review), Thomas Dash (Women's Wear), Whitney Bolton (Morning Telegraph), John Gassner (Current History), Walter F. Kerr (Herald Tribune), Ward Morehouse (World-Telegram & Sun), George Jean Nathan (Journal-American), Louis Schaeffer (Brooklyn Eagle), and Richard Watts, Jr. (Post).

"McThing," five votes: John Chapman (News), Harold Clurman (New Republic), Gilbert Gabriel (Cue), Jack Gaver (United Press) and William Hawkins (World-Telegram & Sun).

"Shrike," three votes: Ethel Colby (Journal of Commerce), John McClain (Journal-American) and Arthur Pollock (Compass).

"Point of No Return," three votes: Richard T. Cook (Wall Street Journal), Lawrence Perry (American Newspaper Alliance) and Tom Wenning (Newsweek).

"Barefoot in Athens," two votes: Robert Coleman (Mirror) and Joseph T. Shipley (New Leader).

"Grass Harp," one vote: Brooks Atkinson (Times).

Best musical: "Joey" received all the votes except for Perry, who picked "Jamie;" Dash, who liked "Wagon," and Nathan and Shipley, who abstained.

Best foreign play: "Venus," 15 votes: Brown, Clurman, Coleman, Gaver, Gabriel, Dash, Pollock, Schaeffer, Morehouse, Nathan, Cook, Shipley, Wenning, Watts and Gassner.

"Fourposter," eight: Barron, Colby, Atkinson, Bolton, Hawkins, Chapman, McClain and Perry.

Abstaining, Kerr.

Not present or voting by proxy were Joseph Wood Krutch (Nation) and Wolcott Gibbs (New Yorker).

Paris, April 4.

Mitty Goldin production of revue in two acts by Pierre Dac, Francis Blanche and Roger Pierre. Directed by Gilles Margaritis. Stars Henri Salvador; features Cynda Glenn, Annette Poivre, Taymond Bussiere, Pierre Dac, Francis Blanche, Fortunia, Eddy Rasimi, Joan Danniell, Michele Marconi. At ABC, Paris.

Producer Mitty Goldin fell very sick during rehearsals on this, and was barely able to come back for the opening. He had to leave it to others and work by remote control. Result is that the authors of the show, who act themselves, hog it all they can. They've crammed this revue with nonsensical, corny, material that may go with Boulevard transients who are ABC habitues, but hep audiences will ankle fast.

The opening is remindful of a carnival parade, with everyone in the cast making a short bow, followed by an act the boys have fixed to try to sell themselves to the audience. Shortly after Cynda Glenn does her arm-waggling routine, with heavy impact on the audience. Then come some swashbuckling sequences with musketeers, dueling and the French court, so skeletonized you can see through it. The finale of the first act, in which Miss Glenn makes a second appearance as Colonel Cody (Buffalo Bill is very popular with the French), is a so-so circus scene. The second stanza is hardly better.

The gals are nice looking but unfortunately they do nothing. The sets are flimsy and there is no music to speak of.

The production is very inexpensive, and the only talent worth mentioning is Henri Salvador, a colored entertainer who has a big draw with French audiences and is an all-round, excellent actor. Miss Glenn, who left the Folies Bergere, where she was to star, because she couldn't be supplied with the right material, is wasted in this show. Maxi.

Er Ging an Meiner Seite
(Home of the Brave)

Vienna, March 25.

Kleines Theater in Konzerthaus presentation of drama by Arthur Laurents in three acts (eight scenes), translated into German by Carl Merz. Directed by Michael Kehlmann. Sets by Harry Gluck. With Merz, Peter Brand, Kurt Jaggberg, Ernst Meister, Enrich Margo, Alexander Kerszt. At Kleines Theater, Vienna.

Some war plays have a lot more durability than others, no matter how strong they may seem on first presentation. "What Price Glory" and "Journey's End," for instance, seem a lot more valid today than "Home of the Brave." The Kleines Theater, which has been showing notable drive in presenting what the hackneyed big houses disregard in favor of tired French farce and dusty classics, has given the Arthur Laurents play a distinguished first production in German. But the small stage room available, and the intangible unreality of the theme and background seven years after GIs ceased to fight Japs in the dark terror of Southwest Pacific jungles, left audiences and crix here cold.

"Brave" is recreated here in its original stage framework, with the chief protagonist, Coney, a Jew afraid that he really is different from his fellow men. A reappraisal convinced this viewer that Stanley Kramer was nearer the right track when he converted the representative of the downtrodden minority to a Negro in his pic version. The other faults of the portrayal of Coney as a hysterical rather than pitiful figure, are the director's choice. Director Michael Kehlmann chose to subdue the anti-semitic angle beneath a noisy facade of gall-flavored bitterness that made Coney's personality neutral at best, in the estimation of the audience. Most Viennese were searching hard for deeper significance in this version of "Home of the Brave" and failed to find it. Nor does it deliver any believable or effective preachment for tolerance.

Other performances are excellently done by a young, talented cast whose whole playing and direction are refreshing on a local theatre front where acting methods are mostly 50 years behind the States. Kleines Theater, underplaying in the realistic 20th century, is showing the more ancient state subsidized houses the way to living rather than embalmed theatre.

Alexander Kerszt reinforces the impression that this young actor, a stringy, German-speaking Gary Cooper who plays from the heart, should have a great future on the stage. If he'll learn English he'll have something for the U. S. Isra.

Ninotchka

Dublin, April 1.

Dublin Gate Theatre production of comedy by Melchior Langley in 3 acts. Stars Micheal MacLiammoir and Sally Travers. Production by Peter Letts. Setting, Michael O'Herlihy. At Gaiety Theatre, Dublin.

Leon Dagout	Micheal MacLiammoir
Ivanov	George Roberts
Brankov	Erwin Goldwater
Bibinski	Christopher Casson
Ninotchka	Sally Travers
Madame Coppelia	Evelyn Bowe
Princess Stephanie	Peggy Marshall
Krasnov	Denis Brennan

Presentation of the first English language stage production of this French comedy of a Russian emissary in Paris, which Ernst Lubitsch lensed as a successful film some years ago, was an effort that did not quite succeed. The idea of the serious commissar leading a delegation to Paris, upholding the dignity of the Proletariat in the unregenerate West, but getting lost in the business of making love, is admirable. But the piece here lacked the necessary pace in production.

The players seemed unhappy, with the exception of Michael MacLiammoir as the Paris lawyer who knew about love as well as law. Sally Travers had not quite the strength for female commissar Ninotchka who turned out to be more female than commissar. Her three fellow-delegates, George Roberts, Erwin Goldwater and Christopher Casson, missed a great deal of the satiric fun that existed in their roles. The only member of the cast who might conceivably have come out of modern Russia was Denis Brennan as the man who came to straighten out the delegates who had fallen prey to the atmosphere of Paris.

The smaller femme roles, the Paris coutourier and White Russian princess, were neatly done by Evelyn Bowe and Peggy Marshall, but the weight of the show was against any small part being able to liven up the proceedings.

A rather dull dream-sequence in the second act, with Ninotchka tangling things in a gabby Moscow trial, slowed things down to a standstill, and they never picked up again. Mac.

Quarante et Quatre
(40 and 4)

Paris, March 25.

Mlle. Parisys production of a comedy in three acts by Jean Davray. Directed by Raymond Rouleau. Set and costumes by Lili de Nobili. At Theatre Michel, Paris.

M. Adrien Marcellin	Paul Oettly
The Director, The Postman, The Doctor, Minister Foreign Affairs	Maurice Teynac
Philippe	Daniel Crouet
Georges, Pierrot	Jacques Ciron
Maurice	Claude Joseph
Georgos	Bernard Laury
A Clown	Robert Gautier
Alice	Claude Genia
Therese Marcelin	Jeanne Provost
Nicole	Nicole Ladmiral
Young Therese Marcelin, Young girl	Gisele Mart
Little Georges	Christian Fourcade
Little Nicole	Francoise Nef
An acrobatic dancer	Rose Wang
The three Siamese: Zoura, Amina and Nadena Ilami.

Jean Davray has written one of the most refreshing and original comedies to be seen on the Paris stage this season. Davray has completely ignored the standards of the typical French farce, creating instead a delightfully ridiculous semi-fantasy which is based on the feverish imagination of a sick boy, who wants to go on the stage.

The plot, such as there is, revolves around a tyrannically bourgeois father, his too-subservient wife, her mad sister and two children. The first act, done largely in pantomime with Maurice Teynac acting as narrator-director, presents this family group. The second act, and the most important one of the play, takes place 10 years later during the illness of the son, Bernard Laury. His imaginings about his family, past and present, based on snatches of conversation which he has overheard over a period of years form this part of the play.

During this second act, the real and imaginary are beautifully blended so that the presence of a trapeze on the stage, the pantomime dances of the Siamese sisters, the antics of the acrobatic dancer do not seem out of place. And it does not seem unlikely that the family are all aware of the dreams of this boy and able to participate in scenes from their own youths.

Teynac, in his various roles from narrator to world traveler, riding around the living room on a bicycle, has a wonderful time holding the play together. Paul Oettly and Jeanne Provost as the father and mother respectively do excellent jobs although Oettly has a tendency to overact in the first act. Claude Genia makes the mad aunt a genuinely amusing and sympathetic character, and her love affair with her imaginary trapeze artist is one of the high spots. Special mention should go to Nicole Ladmiral, as the daughter, creates a charming picture of a French schoolgirl in the throes of her first romance.

Lila de Nobili has done extraordinarily well in her sets and costumes and manages to keep the technical feats from overpowering the action. Raymond Rouleau's direction is admirable.

Although the play would need a certain amount of tightening to suit the tastes of American audiences, it would be a natural for New York with its charm, humor and fantasy. Till.

Les Caprices de Vichnou
(The Whims of Vichnou)

Paris, March 25.

Andre Cherrier production of musical comedy in two acts (four scenes). Directed by Max Revol. Book by Alfred Machard; lyrics, Max Francois; score, Marc Fontenoy; set by Luska. Choreography by Paul Lambert. Starring Irene Hilda and Rudy Hirigoyen. At Theatre de l'Etoile, Paris.

Leutenant Sebastien	Rudy Hirigoyen
Rhadar	Felix Paquet
Sultan Asmallah	Gabriello
Baptistin	Lucien Frebert
Capt. Bourgrelat	Jo Charrier
Grand Visier	Numes Fils
1st servant	Johnny Bert
2nd servant	Alain Vanzo
Fatouma	Alice Tissot
Yasmina	Simone Marius
Miss Tegree	Irene Hilda
Djemma	Mona Slivy
Melika	Suzanne Gabriello

With the sultan's harem: Simone Evrard, Lydie Calmels, Jacqueline Lecoeur, Claire Billetti, Dany Middleton, Tina Maria, Yvette Fleurian.

This little musical has little music in it excepting for one catchy tune, "A Sailor Fears Nothing." It is conservatively produced as befits the Etoile. Because having one set, with different drapes, it should be easily handled on tour.

Alfred Machard's book opens 100 years ago in the palace of the sultan of a mythical Arabian state who holds three French sailors and an English miss as prisoners for trespassing on his land. With the help of the harem's aging first lady, the sailors manage to impersonate three Arabian medicos and administer to the sultan. The sailor junior officer (Rudy Hirigoyen) finally weds Simone Marius. Meanwhile, Irene Hilda, the English gal, who narrowly escapes becoming eligible for the harem, makes her getaway. Irene Hilda, back from the Pigall's in London, and currently doubling at the Villa d'Este, is the life of the show. She brings so much comedy to the show that she easily steals it.

Apart from the singers, she is well supported by Felix Paquet, as the eunuch Gabriello, as the fat sultan, Lucien Frebert, as the funny French tar, and Jo Charrier, as the old sea captain. Alice Tissot, French comedienne, is good as the harem's madam.

The Arabian costumes are colorful, with those of the sultan's wives, suitably abbreviated. Maxi.

Double-Blanc ou Les Audacieuses
(Double Blank or the Daring Girls)

Paris, March 18.

Jacques Truchot production of Albert Willemetz comedy in two acts (five scenes) by Jean Le Marois. Directed by Christian Gerard. Set by Francine Gaillard Risler; dresses, Jacques Helm. At Bouffes Parisens, Paris.

Josephat	Gabaroche
The Countess	Jeanne Lion
Henri	Dominique Nohain
Marion	Pierrette Bruno
Claude	Genevieve Berney
Eleonore	Odile Berney

Mistakes that can arise due to the likeness of twins is a rusty dramatic theme, yet writer Jean Le Marois has seen fit to polish it off once again in "Double-Blanc Ou Les Audacieuses." In preeming at the scarcely half-filled Bouffes Parisens, the Albert Willemetz production merely adds up to an abundance of nonsense instead of genuine laughter. Script does little, if anything, to improve upon the basic plot and this entry appears to have limited prospects at best.

Yarn concerns a shy, young man in love with twin sisters. Hungry for romance, they are reared on an isolated estate by a cranky, aging aristocratic aunt. Gals share the suitor until one accepts his proposal of marriage. Sharing, of course, then ceases. However, a second groom is soon found and the finale depicts the aunt's 84th birthday party when both couples each bring in twins of their own.

Author Le Marois imported the twin Berney sisters from Normandy for the roles of the twins. Of identical looks, they are well dressed by Jacques Helm and manage to handle their lines without appearing lost on the stage. Dominique Nohain, as the male end of the trio, has a silly part and is not given a chance. Jeanne Lion is wasted in a minor bit.

Pierrette Bruno, as the love-craving chambermaid, steals the show. She makes sense and at the same time provides alluring looks. Gabaroche, as a trusted old major domo, also contribs a believable portrayal. Willemetz's production values are adequate. Cost is modest since there's only one set, a drawing room in a chateau. Christian Gerard's direction did everything to get something out of nothing. Maxi.

Pix-Shops Team

developed still remains to be determined.

Idea originally was conceived by producers Jerry Wald and Norman Krasna, who had planned to use it as an exploitation stunt for one of their forthcoming films. They realized, however, that it would be worthless if localized to that extent and might serve as a business booster if tried universally. They broached the scheme first to department store executives in Los Angeles, and met an immediate and enthusiastic response. Subsequently, store execs in Dallas and New York were queried and initial plans laid for a test in New York City. However, Spear & Co., which was to have participated in New York, suggested the switch to Pittsburgh, where it operates on a different basis and where the test might be more feasible. Arrangements now are being made with exhibs there to get the tieup underway with an appropriate ballyhoo.

Mutual Problem

Both pic and store execs feel that the cooperative venture can have far-reaching results. Both industries are faced with the same problem as far as television is concerned. Pic biz has, of course, been trying to come up for some time with a solid campaign that will get potential filmgoers out of the easy chairs and into the theatres. Similarly, department stores have been harassed by a shopping decline.

"Television," one store exec pointed out, "has cut sharply into shopping as such. Women are doing more and more of their buying by telephone. Consequently, they only buy specifics and we can no longer figure on additional sales as a result of their browsing around the store. On top of that, we have to deliver items that are telephoned for, where merchandise they buy in person they frequently carry home. Nowadays, they call and say, 'send me a spool of green thread.' We have to wrap it and deliver it. Next day they're liable to call back and say, 'that was the wrong shade. When your man is in the neighborhood, have him stop in and pick it up'."

Wald and Krasna feel that they have started something which might be the key to more substantial grosses around the country. At the very least, it's a move in the direction of getting potential customers out of their homes. Neither pix nor stores can sell 'em if they never see 'em.

. . . They wanted divorcement, and they have it. If TV proves a better market for producers, they (the exhibs) can sell popcorn, not movies—and the best of luck to them."

Sidney, who recently completed "Scaramouche" at Metro, is in N.Y. for a couple of weeks to look over Broadway plays, musicals as well as concerts and art galleries. It's his first trip to Gotham in two years.

A Stewart Granger-Eleanor Parker starrer, "Scaramouche," will likely preem at the Radio City Music Hall, N. Y., in late May or June. Next on Sidney's film-making agenda is "Young Bess." Long on the Metro production schedule, it's now due to roll at the studio in July. Jean Simmons, Granger and Charles Laughton will have the top roles.

7 B'way Shows

perial, N. Y. Added possibilities to stick it out are "Fourposter," "Moon Is Blue" and "Three Wishes for Jamie."

"Guys and Dolls," "King and I" (with Celeste Holm subbing for the vacationing Gertrude Lawrence) and "Pal Joey" are rated virtually sure things to get through the summer satisfactorily. Not only are they rolling along to capacity trade, but all three have advance-sale backlogs to carry them over lean periods. Although "Fourposter" would be figured more or less a cinch if Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn were to stay as co-stars, it remains to be seen whether the public will find the presumably bigger-name Betty Field and Burgess Meredith equally acceptable successors in the two-character hit.

Subs Question-Marks

Similarly, Maggie McNamara is a moot quantity as summer sub for Barbara Bel Geddes in "Moon Is Blue." While "Three Wishes for Jamie" hasn't clearly established itself one way or the other, it has done hefty business so far.

"Point of No Return," "Don Juan in Hell," "I Am a Camera" and perhaps "The Shrike" might be included in the list of likely summer spanners, but in each case the scheduled departure of the star or stars will force at least a temporary closing. Henry Fonda's vacation will require a six-week hiatus for "Point." Julie Harris' commitment to appear in the screen edition of "Member of the Wedding" will mean shuttering of "Camera" over the summer, while "Don Juan" will have to lay off while all four stars fill picture stints. Jose Ferrer's departure from "The Shrike" may or may not close the show, depending on who succeeds him.

"Call Me Madam" closes May 3 to tour, with Ethel Merman withdrawing after the four-week Washington stand, to be succeeded by Elaine Stritch. "Gigi," which has done well at the b.o., is not slated to lose any cast members, but business has tapered off lately, so it's a doubtful summer stayer. Fate of ANTA's revival of "Golden Boy," co-starring John Garfield and Lee J. Cobb, probably depends on whether it recovers from the tough situation created by the recent tax ruling, which required payment of upped levies on advance-sold tickets. Such current entries as "Flight Into Egypt," "Grass Harp," "Jane," "Paint Your Wagon," "Paris '90" and "Stalag 17" apparently haven't enough stamina to rate as summer bets.

'Songs for Sale'

of the calls and wires received after each show. Even publishers affiliated with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, which initially resented the show's tieup with Broadcast Music, Inc., have been vying with each other for the tunes showcased on the program.

Early last month, "Honeysuckle Vine" received bids from such firms as Regent, Mills, Lee, Feinberg, Fernman and Supreme, with the latter winning the bid. Decca is cutting the tune. Another song, "I'm Teaching My Dolly to Pray," was picked up by Perry Como's firm, Roncom Music, with Victor expected to slice it with Como. Still another tune, "One Love," is being published by Mark Warnow Music.

Marlo Lewis, CBS exec producer in charge of TV musical and variety shows, is enlisting cooperation of the disk jockeys in putting over the program's songs. Several top deejays have been acting as judges on the panel. Diskers are also latching onto the show with numbers either waxed or scheduled by Columbia, Decca, Coral and M-G-M Records.

The show gets an average of 1,500 entries every week from the amateur songwriters for whom the program was designed, out of which six tunes are selected weekly by a board composed of Ervin Drake, Jimmy Shirl, Al Span (who is the show's producer) and Ray Bloch, with the tunes done by different name singer each week.

OBITUARIES

REV. JOSEPH P. CONNOR

Rev. Joseph P. Connor, 56, leader of West New York, N. J., parish and composer of church songs and pop tunes, died in Teaneck, N. J., March 31. Father Connor used the pseudonyms Pierre Norman and John Openshaw on his published compositions.

Among his pop songs are "By A Waterfall," "When I Take My Sugar To Tea," "The Golden Dawn," "Lillies of Lorraine," "The Far Green Hills of Home," "Little Black Dog," "I Shall Return," "Love Sends A Little Gift of Roses," "Miracle of the Bells" and "Honeymoon Lane." He also wrote the music for many Broadway and religious plays, including, "Big Pond," "Young Man From Manhattan," "I Shall Return," "The Perfect Fool," "Footlights on Parade" and Forty-second Street." Among the musical scores for pix, which he penned, are "Blood and Sand," "With Byrd at the South Pole," "Black Door to Heaven" and "Footlights on Parade."

FOSTER MAY

Foster May, leading radio figure in Omaha for a decade in the '30s, died of throat cancer in a hospital in San Diego, Cal., March 30. Before working for WOW in Omaha as chief announcer and commentator, he was a newspaperman. He ran unsuccessfully for Congress in 1936 and in 1942 he was Democratic candidate for senator.

During World War II, May joined the National Broadcasting Co. and later became a radio producer in Los Angeles.

Surviving are his wife, two daughters and parents.

MRS. JEANETTE S. WALKER

Mrs. Jeanette S. Walker, 87, oldest of the six singing Smith Sisters, who made an appearance on "We the People" four years ago, died March 31 in Columbus. Known as the Ariel Ladies Sextet from 1892 to 1902, the span of their professional life, the sisters were most noted for singing campaign songs from the steps of the home of William McKinley in Canton, O., when he was running for President and in the midst of his famous "front porch campaign."

Five sisters, only one younger than 80, survive.

BOB SHEBLE

Robert Sheble, 29, bandleader known professionally as Bob Shebley, and his wife, Martha, 23, were killed instantly in an auto accident near Falson, N. C., April 6. Sheble was on his way to Palm Beach, driving a station wagon, and collided with a big bus. Jay Raymond Sharp, Philadelphia Bulletin feature writer, was seriously injured in the crash.

Sheble, formerly a drummer with Benny Goodman's band, lived at White Marsh, a suburb of Philadelphia. His outfit played many society functions in the east.

RUSSELL OWEN

Russell Owen, 63, former New York Times reporter, died of a heart attack in Cleveland April 3. Owen won the Pulitzer Prize in reporting for his 1929-30 articles on Admiral Richard E. Byrd's first Antarctic Expedition. In 1934, he penned a tome, "South of the Sun," and in 1941 he published a volume called "The Antarctic Ocean." He was a contributor in 1938 to "We Saw It Happen," a book written by 13 Times correspondents.

A daughter survives.

ROBERT VAN GELDER

Robert van Gelder, 47, editor-in-chief of Crown Publishers and former book critic of the N. Y. Times, died in New York April 3. He was editor of the Times' Book Review from 1943 to 1946. He joined Crown in 1950. He was editorial supervisor of Ezio Pinza's autobiography, which will be published by Doubleday.

Surviving are his wife and a stepson.

T. K. WOOD

T. K. Wood, 57, film editor for Cagney Productions, died April 1 in Los Angeles.

He was a charter member of Film Editors Local 776, and at one time was head of the sound effects department at RKO.

HERMAN J. DATTLER

Herman J. Dattler, 67, popular Syracuse, N. Y., bartender who once operated a spot next to the Wietling Opera House, died in Syracuse recently. When the Weitling was running as a vaude and legit tryout house, show biz personalities made Dattler's bar a fave hangout.

Surviving are his wife, a son, two daughters and a brother.

PAUL GUERIN

Paul Guerin, 65, chief of Republic's electrical department, died March 29 in San Fernando Valley after a long illness. Guerin moved to Hollywood from New Orleans in 1913 and was associated with Mack Sennett, who then operated what is now the Republic studio.

His wife, Alma, former film actress, survives.

HUNTER WATKINS

Hunter Watkins, 56, investment broker and Alabama commercial radio pioneer, died in Birmingham April 4. Watkins and Gordon Persons, now governor, built the state's first radio station at Montgomery and Mobile simultaneously. He began his career as an acrobat.

Surviving are his wife, two sons, three brothers and a sister.

JAMES A. WILLARD

James A. Willard, 63, veteran radio personality, died April 3 in Philadelphia. Willard acted as "Uncle Wip" from 1932 to 1936, the third broadcaster to take over the station WIP kiddie show.

At the time of his death, he was employed in the visual education department of an animal welfare organization. His wife survives.

CAROL SNELL

Carol Snell, 39, publicist of the Sombrero Playhouse, Phoenix, died in Scottsdale, Ariz., April 5, from injuries sustained in a two-car crash. Survived by son, mother and brother.

RAYMOND ROSEN

where the exhibitor is coerced into eventually buying the picture in an effort to regain the goodwill of his local merchant.

"Third, creating a new system of clearances that had not existed before by withholding the picture 'Quo Vadis' from smaller situations."

According to Dan Terrell, Metro's promotion topper, the complaint from the Allied group has been the only one the company has received on the sale of the "Quo Vadis" merchandise. "Stores all over the country have been running ads and selling the items far in advance of the openings," he declared. "Only correspondence we've received on the matter has been from stores which sold out and couldn't get more items when the picture played their town."

Terrell also explained that some of the merchandise tieups had been made on a longtime basis, with arrangements being made for spring and summer items, since M-G figured that the picture would take more than a year to play off.

Inflation Hikes Lecture Fees

trated lecturers will lead two to one on the platform. The 16m color films dominate five to one at California's state-sponsored adult education forums. Headliners are Stan Midgley, on Montana; Adam Shaffer, on Guatemala, and Deane Dickason, presenting Egypt's "Pageant of the Nile" and "Crucial Singapore."

Oldtimers like Julien Bryan have not lost popularity; W. Emerson Scott shows flick adventures in "To the Arctic by Canoe," and Russell Barnett Aitken offers new "safari" color reels in a documentary which is outstanding.

Russell Wright, who was about the first to present color pix on Scandinavia, dishes out a new smorgasbord series on the good life in Denmark. Since Lowell Thomas, Jr., cleaned up on his Tibet picture-talk, everyone wants to lecture on Tibet. Young Thomas went to study at Princeton, so Nichol Smith now shows "Caravan to Tibet." Illustrated lectures bring from $100 to $350, or 50% of the take.

Indonesia is well represented on the 16m colors. Ava Hamilton's expedition brought back superb color celluloids on Sumatra, Java, Borneo-Celebes and Bali. Press-attache Soedarpo Sastrosatomo helped her cut local red tape. He also imported an Indonesian dance, singing and lecture group which gave 250 performances in the northwest under U. of Minnesota auspices.

Travel adventure series are organized in all big towns now. Leading adventure travelogs are given in Detroit, Toronto, Wilkinsburg, Pa., Toledo, Reading, Pa., Dayton, Battle Creek, Rochester, N. Y., Jackson, Mich., San Antonio, Malden, Mass., and about 50 California towns. They are giving hot competition, especially to music series.

Big Name Billing

No doubt that TV-minded and audio-visual educated audiences have cut into the straight lecture business. There are fewer dates for the straight talkers, but more business for monologists, dramatists, humorists and one-woman theatres. But billing is for big names only. Still the managers have their meal tickets in Columbia's Phil Baker, Eric Sevareid, Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., Maria Osmena, daughter of the Philippine president, and Clare Boothe Luce. All get good coin and are popular with conservative groups. They're in the $250-$500 bracket.

In the midwest George Bailey is still the top humorist. He memorizes 500 names in no time and clowns fabulous tricks which even Houdini would have smiled at.

Midwest's own Pierre van Paasen is Cleveland Plain Dealer's associate editor, Spencer D. Irwin, who gave 200 talks on Israel this year on three trips to the Holy Land. Cleveland's Dorothy Fuldheim, award-winning TV commentator, is still much in demand. Lucile La Chapelle, Chicago's leading woman speaker, is going strong in her analysis of the speeches of the biggies from FDR to John L. Lewis, from Taft to Churchill. California's W. Ballentine Henley fills platform halls with a remarkable talk on Albert Schweitzer. Henley is president of a medical college.

Drew Pearson still gives 20 talks a year, at $1,000 per lecture. He's under the wing of Washington's John Metcalf, who now handles about 50 congressmen and senators. John Morley, of Los Angeles, returned from a five months' around-the-world tour, is now trouping for the Executive Clubs, the dinner clubs organized by Ben Franklin, out of Topeka, Kans.

Gerhart Seeger, former German Reichstag member, hikes the same Ben Franklin circuit about eight months of the year. Seeger, who was a witness at the Nuremberg trials and first Reichstag member to be put into a concentration camp, goes over big. Franklin pays highest weekly fees, $300 to $1,000.

Competition Tough

Managers still scratch hard in tough competition. Even literary agents like Max Pfeffer, in business for 37 years, put their writers on the platform. Pfeffer sold Leon Lania for 20 weeks to the U.'s of Wisconsin and Minnesota. Lania is associate editor of UN World and looks like Quentin Reynolds. He authored "Nine Lives of Europe" and wrote the screenplay for "The Beggar's Opera."

Colston Leigh and Clark Getts still get plenty of gravy, having most of the celebrities. Getts now has Ernest Gruening, Governor of Alaska, "Confidential" Lee Mortimer (both at $500 per lecture); William Bradford Huie, who gets daily TV publicity, and new Sen. George Smathers, of Florida. Rickie Boasberg of Cleveland leads in Ohio as 30 percenter. Lee Keedick is growing fast in the east with Bennett Cerf, Norman Cousins, the Met's Herbert Graf and 50 more celebrities.

Leigh is cashing in on Robert Vogeler ($1,000 per date), who is giving a fine talk before sold-out houses. His wife Lucile is also on the platform and gives a good heart-throb spiel (at $250 per talk).

California's half dozen successful lecture managers include Mae Norton, Grace Humphrey, the Gause Sisters and Mrs. Samuel Horton Brown. Mrs. Brown just imported Victor Riesel (at $2,000 per week) and Dr. (I'm not "Mr. Anthony") Crane.

Mike Turner, of the Dallas Dixie Bureau, filled his 50th year as manager and his take remains good. Dissension is strong within the school assembly field, as commercial managers are jittery about the growth of university off-campus activities. The university lecture and concert bureaus are non-profit organizations. But the two leading school assembly bureaus have not been touched by this trend at all. Philadelphia's Antrim Bureau is serving 12 states with 24 companies and programs at thousands of schools. Los Angeles' own National School Assemblies are leading with 36 companies on the road during the season.

All lecture platforms are out hunting for new faces and exciting programs to offset the educational non-profit outfits.

TV'S NEW FREEZE—VAUDE TALENT

Legit-Pix Tie Pays Off for Met Opera; Mankiewicz, Dietz Team on 'Boheme'

Following his bent for leaning on legit and pix for an assist in opera, Rudolph Bing, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera, has signed film director Joseph Mankiewicz to stage "La Boheme" at the Met next season. It will mark Mankiewicz's first Met or opera stint.

Event will also be unusual in that the Puccini opera will be sung in English, in a new version by Metro ad-pub veepee Howard Dietz, who did the libretto for the new version of Strauss' "Die Fledermaus" which was a huge hit at the Met last season. Bing plans to present "Boheme" during the season in both its traditional Italian version and the new Dietz English libretto, the alternate presentations also marking an innovation at the Met.

The Mankiewicz pacting follows Bing's unorthodox moves of the past two seasons, when he brought in Margaret Webster, Garson Kanin, Alfred Lunt and Britisher Tyrone Guthrie, from legit, to stage Met operas. Miss Webster is set for a couple of assignments next season.

(Bing's borrowings from the Broadway-Hollywood axis the past two seasons admittedly have paid

Femmes With 250G Gems, Jeweled Pups, Cuffo Plugs Mar TV's Easter Parade

Video's coverage of the Easter Parade, which in recent years has been a field day for publicity-seekers worshipping before the iconoscopes, was marked last Sunday (13) by an even more unashamed display of plugging and planting—and conspicuous consumption, too.

Vivian Blaine, caught on at least two of the networks, was wearing gems worth $250,000, a handbag costing $50,000 and a pearl priced at $35,000. Ethel Thorsen, who with Herb Polesie emceed DuMont's stanza, was togged in a $15,000 mink jacket and diamonds and emeralds tagged at $200,000, while her pooch was decked with pearls valued at $25,000—and that ain't dog-biscuits. Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public, who might have shelled out a week's salary for their Easter finery, were hardly to be seen.

At one point in CBS-TV's pickup there was a production fluff that pointed up an ironic juxtaposition. Steve Allen was quizzing June Havoc at the same time that Ed Sullivan was interviewing an Air Force captain, and the mikes and camera caught the pilot talking about jet fighters in Korea as Miss Havoc chatted gaily about a costly gold-heeled Parisian shoe.

Such slip-ups stemmed from the frantic quality of the producing. There was so much switching from hostels near Central Park, such as

Ray's Roaring $75,000, N. Y. Copacabana Record

Singer Johnnie Ray, who opened at the Copacabana, N. Y., Thursday (10), is slated to break the record there. Indications point to a whopping $75,000 for his first week—which is all the more amazing since Ray opened during Holy Week, when grosses are by tradition offish. Ray's take beats the mark set by Dean Martin & Jerry Lewis on their last visit with $73,000.

Copa expects to follow up with Tony Bennett, coming in May 1, and Billy Eckstine on May 29.

Ray will be at the Copa for three weeks only and will open at the N. Y. Paramount May 28 with Billy May's orch in support.

FCC's TV Thaw Won't Hit Exhibs, Goldenson Feels

Federal Communications Commission's action lifting the freeze on new television stations is short of any backbreaking competitive factor for theatremen to reckon with, in the opinion of Leonard Goldenson, president of United Paramount Theatres.

The exhib topper has it figured that TV already blankets two-thirds of the buying public, and the balance, now to be reached via the FCC order, largely represents only relatively small communities. The Commission's order provides for 2,053 new stations in 1,291 towns.

In the big cities which have had tele rights along, the public has been returning to theatres, and good pictures continue to draw

Films as Dope Tempter For Kids Draws PCA Rap

Hollywood, April 15.

Film industry's Production Code Authority took exception to charge that motion picture scenes are tempting children to use narcotics. These claims, recently attributed to Ernest M. Gentry, of the Federal Narcotics Bureau, were denied by Jack Vizzard, PCA spokesman, who said:

"The Federal agent must obviously refer to the occasional freelance producer and the outlaw companies which produce this type of film. He cannot mean the films produced by the large bulk of major Hollywood studios, because there is not even the slightest mention of dope addiction or dope smuggling in their product."

AGVA WOULD BAN NETWORK VAUDEO

Chicago, April 15.

The future of network television shows has been threatened by an American Guild of Variety Artists' proposal to ban appearances of variety performers on such programs. Union's national administrative secretary, Jack Irving, speaking in Chicago, told VARIETY that a "no guesting" rule on web shows is being drafted and will be taken up at the June convention of the union in Los Angeles.

Irving declared that frequent guesting by acts has caused a slump in vaude and cafe playing time. The public, he stated, is unwilling to pay to see in person an act that appears free on home tele.

Union's strategy, according to Irving, is to build up the 2,000-odd TV outlets that will be opened because of the lifting of the freeze on new station construction by the Federal Communications Commission. Desire is to encourage production on a local scale so that acts will perform frequently and for long runs.

Model for the plan is apparently the new series which opened this week on WOR-TV, N. Y., in

Bar Variety Acts On Cafe-Spotted Disk Jock Spiels

The American Guild of Variety Artists' national board last week obtained a majority vote on the resolution banning AGVA performers from making gratis appearances on disk-jockey shows emanating from cafes. Deciding votes came in over the weekend and the total now stands at 24 for the ban, seven against and one abstention. Voting strength is now at 44. There is one board vacancy caused by the resignation of Don Francisco for which Willie Bryant and Bud Harris are competing. Votes on this issue are still coming in by registered mail.

Buy-Buy Job

Indications of the lengths many job-seekers go to in their efforts to land a post in radio and television was the gimmick used by a salesman looking for a berth at WNBC, N. Y.

He sent in a $100 check with an order for a one-minute announcement. Copy for the spot was a request for an interview with general manager Ted Cott.

Pathe's Co-op Plan Gives TV Stations Vidpix at Cost, Share in Future Profits

New plan to provide quality television film product at cost to local TV stations throughout the country and also to permit them a share of the residual income of such films was unveiled yesterday (Tues.) by Pathe TV Corp., subsidiary of Pathe Industries. Termed the Cooperative Film Syndication Plan, it will work basically the same as the old First National Films, a production-distribution outfit in which exhibitors participated in the profits.

As outlined by Pathe TV prexy Bruce Eells, each subscriber station to the plan will be charged its pro-rata share on film costs, in return for which they will be entitled to three runs of each film show over a period of two years. Thereafter, income derived from lease of the vidpix to a potential of 2,000 new stations, which are expected to be hungry for product, will total "far in excess" of the original costs, Eells declared.

Subscriptions will be confined to stations in presently existing markets and the share of the residual profits accruing to those sta-

Betty Hutton May Set $60,000 Palace Record

Betty Hutton may do a record-breaking $60,000 for the first week of her run at the Palace, N. Y., two-a-day. Highest gross would come as result of 14 performances, also the highest number to be done under the revived two-a-day. Judy Garland's peak mark was $51,000 for 12 shows.

Bill has been selling out and advance is extremely strong. School holiday is helping considerably toward racking up the b.o. topper.

Miss Hutton opened Saturday (12) to a $6 top, $4.80 thereafter.

Minority Groups Hit TV Revival Of 'Hate Films'

Chicago, April 15.

Television networks and stations have run into a new and unexpected sore point with minority groups in the country who are aroused over TV screenings of feature film oldies made during or prior to the war which might hold the groups up to ridicule. Chief squawk has come from the Japanese American Citizens League, which has asked all webs and local stations to screen carefully all pix before showing them via video.

League has requested broadcasters to be on the lookout for "hate movies" produced during World War II depicting the "Japanese enemy as a villainous one and Japanese Americans in this country as spies and traitors." It also urged that wrestling matches fea-

Kazan Testimony Reveals How Reds Tried to Control Equity, Group Theatre

Washington, April 15.

In the mid-1930s the Communist Party tried unsuccessfully to seize control of both Actors Equity and the Group Theatre, Elia Kazan told the House Un-American Activities Committee last week. Kazan said he was a member of the party at the time, having joined in the summer of 1934. He said he quit in disgust in either the late winter or early spring of 1936.

Kazan, then a young actor, said that others in the Group Theatre cell to which he belonged included: Clifford Odets, Art Smith, Lewis Leverett and the late J. Edward Bromberg, co-leaders of the unit; Morris Carnovsky and Phoebe Brand, who later became his wife; Tony Kraber and Paula Miller, who later married Lee Strasberg, one of the directors controlling the Group Theatre. He said Odets told him he also quit about 1936, and that Paula Miller, too, got out early.

Kazan's information was given to the committee in a sworn affidavit which supplemented testimony he gave in executive session last Jan. 14. In January, Kazan admitted he had been a Commie but declined to name any others. In his affidavit, Kazan explained to the committee:

"I have come to the conclusion that I did wrong to withhold these names before, because secrecy serves the Communists, and it is exactly what they want. It is my obligation as a citizen to tell everything I know."

The Kazan affidavit explained that V. J. Jerome, cultural Commissar of the Communist Party in the U. S., and Andrew Overgaard, described as head of the Trade Union Unity League at the time, "were assigned to hand out the party line to us new recruits." He said a third party functionary, "obviously stagestruck," undertook to advise us. That was Ted Wellman, also known as Sid Benson.

Kazan had listed Michael Gordon as a fellow Red in the Group Theatre during his January testimony. However, in the affidavit, the Hollywood and Broadway director comments: "In searching my recollection, I find that I do not recall his having attended any meeting with me."

The unit was given a four-fold duty—"To educate ourselves in Marxist and party doctrine. To help the party get a foothold in the Actors Equity Assn. To support various front organizations of the party. To try and capture the Group Theatre and make it a Communist mouthpiece." The affidavit continues:

"The attempt to get a foothold in Actors Equity was guided by an actor, Robert or Bob Caille. He was also known as Bob Reed. I have been told that he died some years ago.

'Raise a Demand'

"The tactic—and the sincere effort of many individuals—was to 'raise a demand' that actors receive pay during the weeks when they rehearsed for shows. The long-range plan was, by leading a fight for a reasonable gain for actors, to gain prestige for individual Communists and sympathizers who, the Party hoped, would then run the union.

"Pay for the rehearsal period was obtained but at no time that I saw, either then or after I left,

BRITISH LIFT BAN ON ALL BEN HECHT FILMS

London, April 15.

Ban on the showing in British cinemas of any film in which Ben Hecht has been connected has finally been lifted following a petition by the Kinematograph Renters Assn. to the Cinematograph Exhibitors Assn.

They contended that prohibition had been in force long enough and since Hecht has written the script for a United Artists pic, any continuation of this boycott would only harm an innocent party.

Boycott had come about due to Hecht's violent anti-British stand in the events leading up to the establishment of Israel as an independent nation. Hecht consistently denounced England for "excessive abuses" against the Israelis.

Tom Sawyer's Adventures Via Clown Capers in Bid For N.C. Post in Congress

Greensboro, N. C., April 15.

Tom Sawyer of Durham, N. C., candidate for congressman from North Carolina's sixth district, is barnstorming Piedmont area of state with "Buzzie" Potts, former circus clown.

Potts, recently ill, works in full bulb-nose, catcher's-mitt-shoe regalia with trained dog, Daisy. At large gatherings, candidate and clown put on a variety show alternating between speeches and comedy. At small ones, Potts entertains kiddies while Sawyer talks to parents.

Sawyer, unlike his opponent, Rep. Carl Durham, is also using television on Greensboro's WFMY-TV in his campaign.

Coast Sheet Apologizes To Kanin After Libel Suit

Hollywood, April 15.

Director-writer Garson Kanin last week brought a $1,000,000 libel suit against The Hollywood Reporter in Superior Court, and almost immediately won a retraction.

Suit was filed as result of an item which appeared in column written by Mike Connolly, in which latter stated Kanin had admitted membership in the Communist Party during an appearance before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The item, which appeared on Tuesday (8), was followed two days later by a page one apology by The Reporter for its "error." The Reporter admitted that it "had no fact of truth, was printed through a mistake in names . . ."

Status Quo on Suits

Kanin stated in N. Y. yesterday (Tues.) that the status quo on his two libel suits versus the Hollywood Reporter will be maintained, at least for the time being. He explained that it's "impossible to tell at this moment the extent of damages caused" by the Reporter's

SAG, Vidpixites In Residuals Tiff

Hollywood, April 18.

Residuals, which many vidpix producers have come to regard as the difference between continuance in biz or being snuffed out altogether, have come to be chief point of argument in negotiations now being conducted by Screen Actors Guild and Alliance of Television Film Producers. Alliance is holding out against giving bite of their residuals, while SAG contends there can't be any agreement until the actor's right to residual coin is recognized by the producers.

Producers bitterly contend it's a narrow hold-the-line operation for them now, and many will be driven out of business if they have to yield on residuals, but SAG's adamant position is that TV cuts an actor's life considerably through reissues and over-use and consequently the actors are entitled to added payment. Producers' position is a precarious one because many have been granting hefty residuals to name stars and directors. Ben Hecht has 50% of negative on his upcoming series, and Ethel Barrymore about the same. So what's left after actors—and writers—get their bite? producers ask.

U.S. Ct. of Appeals Hears Case of Act (Gautier's) 'Televised Against Its Will'

The American Guild of Variety Artists last week entered into the Gautier case against American Broadcasting Co., Liggett & Myers, and the Newell-Emmett ad agency.

Case, heard last week in the U. S. Court of Appeals, is based on the televising of Gautier's Steeplechase between halves of a pro football game of the Washington Redskins and the Los Angeles Rams in 1948 at Griffith Stadium, Washington.

Act claims it was put on the air against its will and in violation of the terms of a contract issued by AGVA. Gautier won a $500 award in City Court, N. Y., and later in the Appellate Term. The Appellate Division of the N. Y. Supreme Court subsequently reversed both lower courts.

Case is regarded as important to all acts inasmuch as it involves televising without a performer's consent. Newell-Emmett and Chesterfield Cigarets contended that in the handling of the news event, cameras had the right to pick up anything that occurred within view. Act declared that the telecast constituted an invasion of its privacy and a violation of civil rights which makes it necessary for the advertiser to get permission from the act if the latter is to be part of an advertising scheme.

The particular game was sponsored by Liggett & Myers (Chesterfield). AGVA attorneys, Silverstone & Rosenthal, filed an amicus curiae (friend of the court) brief for the union. Court reserved decision.

Jack Lait's All in the Family

THEATRE-OWNERS, as a rule, are the solid men of show business. They do not always win, but the record proves that in the main they end up with fortunes.

I mean proprietors of houses during normal conditions, "Legit" has dwindled so that over the course of time many have had to sell or lease out to radio and television; but they still had something of which to dispose, whereas producers who had no theatres mainly finished busted.

The big men who all but control the industry now are the Shuberts, who held title to more houses than any other entity and still do. They put on many shows and plays, but their bedrock was always sunk into the ground.

What strikes me forcibly is this:

Men who named theatres after themselves often lost them.

New York was peppered with such, including the Belasco, the Ziegfeld, the Cohan, the Sam H. Harris, the Morosco, the Selwyn, George White's Apollo, the Erlanger, the Martin Beck, the Cort, the Earl Carroll, and, in vaudeville, the many Proctor's, Keith's, Keith-Albee's, Albee's, Loew's (which converted to films and did fine) and the Roxy (nickname of Sam Rothafel).

Morosco died shabby and penniless after wife-trouble that broke his phenomenal streak of hits. Belasco's last play was awful and after his death his house had a succession of flops. Flo Ziegfeld could not repeat his sensational hits in his own house, which is now making Billy Rose rich. Cohan and Harris broke up over their attitudes toward Actors Equity, and gave up their theatres. The Selwyns, after coining money, went down the chute. A. L. Erlanger's influence and holdings declined and the theatre named for him became the St. James. Maxine Elliott's is a TV base. The Henry Miller, an exception, is in its second prosperous generation.

CARROLL WENT BANKRUPT here but cleaned up in Hollywood until he was killed in a plane crash. Martin Beck saw his vaudeville chain in 77-B, and left his playhouse, still operating, to his widow.

John Cort's monument did and still does well, though he is long dead. George White had to give up the house over which he had put his name and he has been jinxed in show business ever since. Al H. Woods, who built a theatre in Chicago and named it for himself, hit the skids and died a charity case after he had wallowed in riches.

E. F. Albee, when he inherited control of the Keith chain, began suffixing his own name to several established ones and built a few which he called the Albee. They went with the rest of vaudeville.

The Roxy case was unique. Rothafel had made a flamboyant reputation. He capitalized on it to set up the Roxy, then the largest theatre in America. It went broke before he opened it. It was reorganized and became profitable after he left. Rothafel induced the Rockefellers to build the Music Hall, which he called Roxy's Music Hall, and the twin house, which he labeled the New Roxy. That name was taken from him by law. His management of both was a terrible disappointment. He was soon out and died of a heart attack.

Roxy, an ex-ballplayer, had an enormous ego. Two weeks before the premiere of the Music Hall, in which he had built an office with gold-plated ceilings for himself, I interviewed him, asked him what his first show would be.

"Oh," he replied, "it doesn't make much difference. With my name on it the people will flock in. I haven't yet made up my mind what I'll play."

THE FIRST NIGHT was one of the most tragic messes New York has ever encountered, with a melange of operatics, "dumb" acts and whatnot, and it ran two hours overtime.

Morosco had a Morosco Theatre in Los Angeles as well as the one in New York; he monopolized the L.A. field at times. He produced such world-beaters as "Peg o' My Heart," "The Bird of Paradise," "So Long Letty," and two of my comedies, "Help Wanted," which broke all records until that time in Chicago, and "One of Us," to which he paid no attention, as his slide downward had begun. He also owned the Morosco Film Company, one of the earliest. He lost everything and died a broken, prematurely old man, when he was struck by a streetcar.

Belasco, the greatest of them all, put on "Mima," with Lenore Ulric, and its smash failure wrecked him financially, spiritually and physically. He had converted his lovely house for the thing at great pains and expense. And when it folded he was changed. Though he was 77, until then he had been active and almost vigorous. But "Mima" was a deathblow.

George M. Cohan renamed the Grand Opera House, in Chicago, the Four Cohans, in memory of the original family act. Somehow, it was never again the money-maker it had been under Harry Hamlin. The Cort, in Chicago, had been razed for a parking lot the last time I looked there. Carroll's wonderful cafe-theatre in Hollywood never got over his passing. William Fox, who put his name over several theatres, lost his picture company and his houses.

Of them all, only Marcus Loew left the long string bearing his name successful and under management wise enough to continue them through changes of policy, strong and sound as ever.

Eddie Cantor's Red Cross Blood Campaign Tour Set

Washington, April 15.

American Red Cross gave its official imprimatur to the one-man drive by comic Eddie Cantor to stimulate blood donations. ARC headquarters here announced Cantor's tour will begin in Boston, April 29, and follow with Baltimore, April 30; Pittsburgh, May 1; Cincinnati, May 2; Cleveland, May 3, Buffalo, May 4 and Chicago, the following day.

Cantor will give his one-man show for donors of blood to the Red Cross. Comic will be supported by a two-piano team and Sgt. Joseph C. Rodriguez, a Korean vet, winner of the Medal of Honor.

Cantor is paying all his own expenses for the tour.

Femme Fashions Get Exclusive Unveiling Via Wald-Krasna Film

Hollywood, April 15.

The struggle between Italian and French couturiers for the world market will be told via Wald-Krasna's "Exclusive Model", which goes into production at RKO later this year and will, at the same time, unveil for the first time anywhere femme fashions for the coming year.

Professional models will be brought here from Europe for the picture. They will wear the exclusive designs of Europe's famed name designers. Gowns will be shipped to Hollywood under special guard, and during filming of key modeling scenes, the set will be closed to all outsiders to preserve the secrecy to the designers.

Deal worked out by Wald-Krasna gives the indie unit at RKO an entree into every newspaper and magazine, and assures liberal radio and television plugs, since details of the fashions displayed, and stills of the individual gowns, must be credited to "Exclusive Model." In the past, fashion magazines have

EXHIBS' CLAMP ON 'RED-RAP' PIX

Majors Balk at Ultra-High Costs Of TV as Ad Medium in 1,200 Towns

Major film companies, still unconvinced that ballyhooing films on television is worth the hefty costs involved, do not plan to take advantage of the fact that video will soon be operating in more than 1,200 cities across the country. Expansion of TV is made possible by the Federal Communications Commission's action last week in lifting the freeze on new TV station construction.

While the new video markets slated to take the air within the next two years will give the film companies near-saturation coverage for their TV activities for the first time, the general reaction is that TV has never been proved as a good ad-publicity medium for films. Those few majors which had been producing TV trailers have abandoned them almost entirely during the last few months and, while some stars have been guesting on video shows to plug their latest releases, major company execs are not yet certain that this is beneficial to biz.

Chief factor in the downbeat reaction to TV's expansion is the fact that none of the companies any longer sets a national release date on its new product. As a result, ad-pub toppers pointed out, it's extremely unwise to attempt plugging films on a national network TV show, even though such shows may soon reach 2,000 cities. By the time the new films reach most of those cities, they said, the value of the TV plug is completely dissipated.
